Emil Velazco ORGANIST

Dallas, Texas. Jan.15, 1924.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Co.
Cincinnati, Ohio.

Gentlemen:-

Just a few lines to tell you of the great pleasure and satisfaction I have experienced in playing your INCOMPARABLE UNIT ORGAN during the last 5 years.

Only such an instrument as the Wurlitzer Unit Organ could have influenced my decision to resign my directorship of the Chicago Ziegfeld Musical College and enter the New Field created by your Unit Organ in the Motion Picture Industry.

It is a never ending delight to me the almost unlimited beautiful effects of Piano, ations procurable with one or more sets of Pipes, It dwarfs in comparison with its limited Coupler System. the Old Style

In my opinion your Unit Organ with its remarkable Simplicity of Control, wonderful Responsiveness and Tonal beauty, is magnificent and I may say truly amazing.

In closing I will say, your Unit Organ has been a very real and constant inspiration to me in my Composition work, and I look forward to very many more glorious hours at its Console.

Very Truly Yours,
Emil Velazco
Solo Organist,

GLIMPSES of "TRIUMPH"

Having produced the world's greatest spectacle, "The Ten Commandments," Cecil B. De Mille returns in "Triumph" to the same type of picture as "Male and Female" and "Manslaughter." An ultra-modern love story, gorgeous gowns and gorgeous women, lavish settings, thrilling love scenes - all the unique touches that make DeMille the screen's greatest showman.

Jeanie Macpherson adapted "Triumph" from the Saturday Evening Post serial and novel by May Edginton, author of "Secrets." Look at the cast below.

"Triumph" will be released direct to exhibitors on April 28.

FACTS

"Three Weeks" has sold more than fifteen million copies.

It has been translated into every language of the world except Spanish!

There is never a year that "Three Weeks" isn't a contemporary best seller in America. Last year it sold 100,000 copies.

It has been read by forty million people. Twenty-five million are women.

With the exception of the Bible it is the best-seller of all time.

The HUNCHBACK OF

"THE PICTURE BEFORE IT came to Santa Cruz was in demand by the public who showed their welcome by a phenomenal attendance during the opening performance and who showed their appreciation of the great artistic worth and entertainment value by a tremendous business done throughout the engagement. 'The Hunchback of Notre Dame' is an example of a big picture properly exploited."—W. J. Citron, Louis R. Greenfield Theatres, San Francisco, Cal.

"'I HAVE JUST CONCLUDED a successful week's engagement of 'The Hunchback of Notre Dame,' a week in which new records, both attendance and receipts, were established. This is all the more remarkable when one realizes that I am operating a suburban theatre, a theatre with an established admission price of 35 cents. I was very sceptical about raising my prices, especially to 55 cents—83 cents—$1.10 and $1.65. But results proved that this was what helped put the picture over. Our net business for the week was $5034.25. Oh, Boy, what a week! Sure could stand a few more like it."—Jack H. Roth, Isis Theatre, Kansas city, Mo.

Which of These Wives is the Happier?

TWO girl friends marry at about the same time. One loves the office—and independence. She disdains the broom and dishcloth. Her salary, combined with her husband's enables her to have servants. She gets no allowance—asks no man for pin money. She hasn't time—or the desire—for motherhood.

THE other is a home-body. She is grieved when the steak is tough—rejoices when her husband eats the burned biscuits as if he really relished them. She is forever "tidying up" the modest parlor—there's no one to do it for her. Above all, her heart is wrapped up in baby.

"Why Get Married?" shows both young couples in that crucial first year of wedded life.

"Why don't you divorce that husband of yours and marry me?"

"Why Get Married?"

Can the girl who has spent months or years at a desk adapt herself to the drudgery of simple home life? Does marriage rob her of her freedom? Is it worth the sacrifice of independence? Does the dole meted out by the husband of modest means compensate for the loss of her pay envelope? For answer every girl will go to see this photoplay—with its romance—heart-interest—suspense—jealousies—thrills.

Besides the romance, the swelling heart-throbs, the many comedy splashes, "Why Get Married?" carries also a terrific wallop. A scheming cad, eager for one of the young matrons to divorce her husband and wed him, makes trouble for both households. No ground for divorce exists so he tries to create one.

A conscienceless gossip and scandal-monger, he is coward enough to resort to anonymous letters — which breed suspicion — jealousy — distrust. Finally one of the young benedicts traces the poison of deceit and false accusations to its source. He exposes the blackguard and gives him a sound thrashing.

And when you remember "Why Get Married?" is a picture every girl will want to see you may be certain it's a sure-fire box-office bet!

Make Your Desk Phone Private as a Booth

free trial offer

makes Hush-A-Phone available to all business men

HUNDREDS of business men have told us of losses of contracts, customers and even friends that they could trace directly to "leaks" of valuable information through unguarded telephone conversations. Such leaks with their resulting losses are inevitable unless some safeguard is provided that will insure the privacy of telephone conversation.

There are two ways to get telephone privacy when there are persons in the same room or office with you. One is to make an embarrassing apology while you run around looking for an isolated 'phone, or shut yourself in a stuffy booth. The other way is to sit right at your desk and talk in your natural tone of voice into the Hush-A-Phone—a voice silencer that slips on or off your 'phone at will and renders your conversation inaudible to persons only a few feet from you.

THOUSANDS of bankers and prominent business men have adopted the Hush-A-Phone as a protection against "leaks." It assures absolute voice privacy at your own 'phone. It spares you the embarrassment of sidestepping important calls when there are visitors at your desk. It insures you against the danger of careless gossip of friends as well as against the intentional eavesdropping of the malicious. At the same time, it makes for a clearer wire by keeping outside noises out of the transmitter and promotes office quiet by making the speaker's voice inaudible to other workers.

In ticket offices, and small theatre offices, where privacy is impossible, the Hush-A-Phone safeguards confidential conversations, and prevents business "leaks."

We invite you to try the Hush-A-Phone—without cost —on your own 'phone. Read our offer.

FREE TRIAL OFFER

We have received so many orders from bankers and business men who are now enthusiastic users and endorsers of the Hush-A-Phone that we are convinced that thousands of others would become "sold" if they had an opportunity to try the Hush-A-Phone out for themselves and see what a real necessity it is in modern business. We will send you the Hush-A-Phone for five days' free trial. At the end of that time you can send us your check or return the instrument to us postpaid. All that you need do now is to fill in the coupon below and mail it to us attached to your letterhead. We will ship you the Hush-A-Phone by return mail.

SHOWMEN know they can always get people to see real melodrama, well produced.

Just now, the demand is for pictures with Oriental atmosphere.

"Pagan Passions" is, therefore, both a timely and a staple box-office attraction—a real melodrama against an Oriental background—a powerful story of white men and women in the grip of the glamorous, mysterious East.

One of the most beautiful performances of recent times in the films is Jack Pickford's in "The Hill Billy," now at B. S. Moss's Broadway. We are going even farther than that and say that Mr. Pickford's work here is so finely timed and so wistfully appealing that we have decided there isn't another young man in pictures who has surpassed him this season in emotional pantomime. We think we never had seen Mary's brother in films before. Now the question arises as to why some one like Mr. Griffith doesn't take this lad and make another "Tol'ble David."
It seems rather improbable that a boy whose whole life has been so far removed from clod-hopping could step into the part of a long-haired mountain hick and act precisely like one. It is interesting to see a young man step out of a Stutz bear-cat and straddle a plow horse.
In story, "The Hill Billy" follows conventional lines, the hill billy, himself, developing rapidly into the abused hero early in the picture and rising gradually to grand acts of courage and sacrifice in the end. Still, suspense and gallantry are extremely well carried out. At the moment when Mr. Pickford picks up his shotgun and defends the pretty neighbor girl from the evil intent of her depraved cousin, everything in the world seems at stake. It is a picture which holds you and carries you away. This is due largely to expert continuity and, as we have said, a very genuine piece of acting by the star.
This is a picture play which we recommend.

Dear Mr. Lesser:

I am delighted to advise you that "When a Man's a Man" is being exceptionally well received at the Madison Theatre where it is playing this week. I am frank to state that our business will be beyond our expectations. The picture is proving very popular with our patrons, judging from the comments we have overheard.

It is a pleasure, indeed, to recommend this attraction as excellent entertainment for any class of an audience.

VOL. XXIX NEW YORK, MARCH 29, 1924 NO. 13

Radio and Pictures

IN Buffalo, the other evening, Frieda Hempel was prevailed upon to sing over the radio; just one song was given and this after much hesitation and misgiving. In common with the musical world, she felt that radio was seriously encroaching, that it made somewhat hazardous the commercial future of concert entertainment. But, on the following night, her concert performance was sold out, very nearly, before the doors opened.

The popular musical comedy, "Mr. Battling Butler," was about to go to the storehouse shortly after it opened in New York when a radio man had the happy thought that its good dialogue would make ideal radio entertainment. Part of the second act was broadcast from a New York station and immediately thereafter the show jumped into black figures.

Both of which incidents, it seems to us, ought to set picture people thinking—thinking seriously, and, we trust, cleverly.

* * * *

Is radio a menace to picture theatre attendance? Reports come to us that it is; recently some prominent exhibitors have said so. We doubt if it is so much an evil as overseating, agricultural depression, bad roads and other such causes; and the recent lively jump in admission tax figures is certainly proof enough that in general the picture theatre business is healthy.

But it is just as well to measure radio entertainment as a force with untold future possibilities and to go forth right now and meet it according to its true measure.

* * * *

There are just two ways, it seems to us, to regard radio.

First, as a competitor; if radio entertainment is made better than picture entertainment, why, people will prefer radio as a friend and helper, a means to the further poputure entertainment—and exploit it more.

Secondly, as a coadjutor; in other words to look upon radio as a friend and helper, a means to the further popularity of pictures. Radio helped, greatly helped, a concert in Buffalo; and radio saved a Broadway show. Why should radio not be made a spur to picture theatre attendance? Why not a coadjutor instead of a competitor? And this, it seems to us, is the true way to regard radio.

But—and a big "but"—it is to be borne in mind that in the two instances cited radio not merely helped two other entertainments but in return radio got mighty good entertainment for itself.

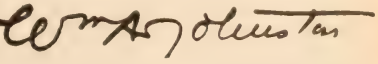
And right there is the answer: if radio is to help pictures, pictures must give radio the best entertainment that pictures are capable of devising.

* * * *

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks spoke over the radio last week in New York. But the newspaper radio critics—they exist already—pointed out that the two addresses didn't constitute good radio entertainment, that stars' voices are quite different from personal appearances, that in fact, since each spoke largely of the other's forthcoming picture, the talks were little more than cut and dried advertising.

* * * *



Producers, stars, directors, writers have a curious slant upon this all important matter of picture publicity.

They work hard enough to make their pictures entertaining; they are all absorbed in that effort. They know well enough that their picture must entertain the public. But they don't seem to think that the very same thing applies to newspapers and magazines. The latter's job is also to entertain and they have no room for unentertaining matter from another entertainment business. In particular they want to safeguard their readers from drivel, misinformation and especially from downright commercial advertising slightly sugar-coated.

And now comes the radio—the greatest of all publicity mediums—but demanding service, entertainment—demanding from pictures, if it is to deal with pictures at all, the same cleverness that makes good picture entertainment. The public won't tolerate anything else. It is just as easy to switch to another station as it is to skip a newspaper article or a magazine page.

* * * *

For the silent drama to provide radio entertainment is not a simple problem. But we have an idea that some of our exhibitor showmen—men who have been so successful with presentation—will hit upon some ingenious ways. It can be done. And some producers, too, will do it.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

HODKINSON gave a special showing at the Cameo this week of a new kind of feature titled, "Which Shall It Be?" with the idea of asking the critics whether or not the picture should go forth to exhibitors. For our part, we vote: yes.

It is just a sweet, tearful "home sweet home" picture. It started out as a short subject but just couldn't stop making itself into a feature length. No villain, no tense action, no hokum—but it will give about everyone that sure-fire pleasure of some tears. Most all of us come from homes where if poverty didn't rule pretty harshly at least economy prevailed to the point of pathos and the little touches here and there will pierce the most stolid heart and even a flapper's superficiality. It's different. If every exhibitor will advertise it as such and tell why we can easily figure a good house and a pleased audience.

NOT brickbats, but bouquets must be handed the Quebec Board of Censors for enlivening the duties of a juror. They have relieved the tedium of the courtroom—and the idea might be adopted in American courts—with the result that jurymen would not be so eager to hand out alibis to the judge.

During a day's lapse in a Montreal murder trial, the jurymen in the case were given a good time as guests of the Quebec Board of Censors whose offices are in Montreal, where they were permitted to watch the various pictures as they were being examined by the officials of the department. The jurymen were taken under police escort to the offices and private theatre occupied by the censors and they enjoyed the diversion immensely.

THE weekly report of the National Board of Review is distinguished this week by the total absence of the little asterisks denoting "a picture particularly interesting or well done." Something is wrong with the industry.

SHOWING that comedy "gags" can be worked over the radio, as well as on the screen, Alfred J. McCocker, who recently wrote an article for the NEWS on this subject, tells an amusing anecdote regarding Chaplin's wireless "appearance," according to the New York American. The incident is as follows:

When Chaplin was in New York for the opening of "A Woman of Paris," he broadcasted from WOR, the Newark, N. J., station. A complete jazz orchestra was assembled for the stunt, and Chaplin began:

"You know only one of my abilities—a mediocre one—my screen acting. But did you know that I also play beautifully every instrument in the orchestra?"

Then, one by one, the various members of the orchestra performed on their assorted instruments, while the hearers presumably listened in astonishment at the comedian's versatility. Then Chaplin added:

"Now I'll play them all at once!" and the orchestra went into the latest dance tune.

There is no way of telling, but it seems likely that there was more simultaneous laughter at this point than had ever occurred at any one time when Mr. Chaplin was performing in his more familiar medium.

SOMETHING new under the sun appeared last week at the Rivoli theatre. Dr. Riesenfeld's well known New York picture emporium, when the row of lights under the marquee carried the line: "Chauncey Depew in DeForest Phonofilm." The occasion was the showing of "Memories of Abraham Lincoln," in which Depew was photographed delivering his famous Lincoln speech, recorded in talking pictures.

Here is an interesting angle on the talking films that no one seems to have thought of—their historical value in preserving the voices as well as the lineaments of great men. While it is interesting, for instance, to see motion pictures of Theodore Roosevelt delivering one of his great addresses, how much more fascination there would be in listening to an exact reproduction, word for word, of the speech as he gave it.

Think, however, of the terrible possibilities if the news reels should develop vocal cords as well! During the time-honored shots of the baby show, we should be forced to listen to the deafening cries from a thousand lusty young throats. When the explosion of the powder mills was screened, the walls of the theatre would rock with the concussion. As the Aquitania or the Berangeria steamed in, we would be deafened by the shriek of sirens and the blowing of whistles. A horrible thought, this! We can only hope that the silent drama will remain silent in some respects, at least.

Seriously, however, this film of Chauncey M. Depew opens up interesting possibilities. It provides a new name for the front of the theatre, and one in which there should be considerable interest. The exhibitor may yet be able to put up a banner: "Lloyd George Here Tonight."

IN recognition of his work in making "America" David Wark Griffith has been made an honorary member of the Minute Men of Lexington, the oldest military organization in the country. The New York members of the Minute Men were on hand at the premiere of the picture to pass on the general historical accuracy of the production.

After seeing the picture, the organization voted the honorary membership for Mr. Griffith, and the famous bronze button, worn only by descendants of the men who fought on Boston Common, was presented to him.

NOW that Ben Hur has been selected, the two burning questions agitating the film and fan worlds are: Who will play Peter Pan? and who will play Luana?

For the first named role, everyone from Jackie Coogan to Mary Pickford has been suggested, although no one has been heard nominating Bull Montana.

For the second, Luana in "' The Bird of Paradise," there has been an equally wide diversity of suggestions. Recently, Richard Walton Tully invited the public to help him choose the actress for the name part, and he has been deluged by the response.

The list of actresses proposed includes such diverse players as Pola Negri, Virginia Brown Faire, Julanne Johnston, Betty Compson, Nazimova, Bebe Daniels, Carmel Myers, Lenore Ulrich, Renee Adoree and Bessie Barriscale.

Curiously enough, the stage play established the fame of nearly every young lady who portrayed the role, and it would be interesting to see if the film would have the same magic power for another newcomer.

ONE of those curious coincidences that occur now and then in connection with filming activities happened recently with the "Warrens of Virginia" company. The gallant Seventh Cavalry, stationed at Fort Bliss, Texas, was to take an important part in the battle scenes. One of the most spectacular of these was to be the attack and capture of the supply train going to the aid of General Robert E. Lee by Union troops.

By a curious twist of fate, the man chosen to don the blue and lead this attack was Col. Fitzhugh Lee, a grand-nephew of the great Southern general. As Colonel Lee remarked, "If my grand-uncle could see me now!"

ALICE JOYCE announces her permanent re-entry into motion pictures. It will be interesting to note how the former devotees of this star again gather around her standard, and how her work is received by the newer generation of film goers. Still very beautiful, and with a matured art, there is no reason, apparently, why she should not again become a reigning belle of the silver screen.

FRESH honors came to the film industry this week, and to Robert T. Kane in particular. Kane, who is general production manager of Famous Players-Lasky, was notified by the War Department that he has been decorated by the Belgian Government with the Croix de Guerre, as of January 22, 1919.

The accompanying citation reads: "He particularly distinguished himself by his courage during the victorious offensive in Flanders." He was with the A. E. F. in the 316th Train Headquarters and the Military Police.

JUST what does the public want? That question has been agitating those in show business since the days of Aeschylus and Euripides, who wrote jolly little skits for the Greeks in which men murdered their mothers, and other like censorable actions.

In this issue will be found an article in which a number of distinguished men, such as David Belasco, give their views on the wants of the well known Public. As an important addition and supplement to that article, there is here presented the genuine and authentic opinion on the same subject by one of the most unusual characters in America—Jeff Davis, the famous hobo.

Davis recently visited the Goldwyn studios on the West Coast. While there he was questioned as to the conclusions he had arrived at on the subject of public taste. His reply was meaty and to the point:

"The public doesn't know what it wants. After they've got it they don't know they've got it. When they have it they don't know what to do with it. And if they miss it, they don't know it's gone. In fact, the majority of the public is nutty."

Which seems to be just about the last word on the subject. Quod Erat Demonstrandum.

NO longer is the slogan, "Join the Army and See the World," but "Join the Army and Get Into the Movies." This as a result of the fact that the famous 26th Infantry, quartered at Plattsburg barracks, New York, will appear in "Janice Meredith" in the buff and blue of Washington's army. The 26th, whose record goes back to the Mexican war, is reinforced by 400 additional men from Fort Ethan Allen.

The principal scenes in which these men will appear are the battle of Trenton, Valley Forge and the crossing of the Delaware. The entire facilities of the post have been placed at the disposal of the producing company. The territory surrounding the barracks is said to be exceptionally suited to the purpose. The village of Trenton is to be built on the rifle range. Valley Forge will be pictured on another part of the property, and the Saranac River will double for the Delaware.

The company is now on location, headed by Marion Davies, who plays the title role, that of a girl whose sympathies are with the Revolution, but whose father, Squire Meredith, is a rabid Tory.

It is reported that the prospect of appearing in support of Miss Davies is bringing the recruits into the post in droves. Here is a brand new recruiting idea for Uncle Sam.

THE Great White Way will be without the genial face of Thomas Meighan for the next three weeks. He has gone to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for a short vacation.

HAROLD BELL WRIGHT'S "When a Man's a Man" was shown in the Elks Theatre, Prescott, Arizona, a few days ago. Which occasioned more than ordinary interest in view of the fact that Prescott is the scene of the story, and it was in the vicinity of this town that the picture was filmed. According to the Prescott Journal Miner, the crowds were so great on the opening night that only one-fifth of those in the street were able to get into the theatre.

CAST as the Duchess de Luynes in the Valentino production, "Monsieur Beaucaire," is Elsie Kirby who played the same part on the stage years ago with James K. Hackett when the latter toured the country playing the title role.

THAT ancient bromide—Don't Believe All You Read In The Newspapers—may be swallowed hook, line and sinker insofar as a film advertisement of recent date in the Medford Sun, Oregon, is concerned. The ad of the F. & E. Theatre, Central Point, Oregon, features Cecil B. De Mille in "Adam's Rib"—a two reel comedy.

ROBERT EDMUND JONES, well and justly known scenic artist, suggests Strauss the famous composer as the right sort of director for the better kind of picture. Which will probably get the following ready response from production circles: "Who is Strauss and what has he directed?" He has only directed music, but music expression in like all other forms of art expression and its commanding quality is tempo which is but another name for continuity in pictures or style in writing. "The Marriage Circle" has tempo; so has "The Woman of Paris." And they are exceptional pictures, vastly above the ordinary in all respects and above all pictures in certain respects.

Censorship Repeal Battle is Near

Indications Are It Will Be Staged In New York Assembly Last Week In March

IT has been definitely decided by leaders of both houses to wind up the present session of the New York State Legislature on April 10. This means that some action one way or another on the question of repealing the present motion picture censorship law must take place within the next three weeks. It is generally thought that the battle will be staged the last week in March. It will be the biggest fight of the present session and one that will be witnssed by a crowd that will pack every available inch of space in the Assembly Chamber, which can accommodate about a thousand persons.

As it now looks, the Walker bill calling for the repeal of the censorship law will be reported out of the Senate finance committee, of which Bernard Downing, of New York city, is chairman, within the next few days. Its passage in the upper house is absolutely assured, as the bill is a Democratic administration measure, and the Senate has a Democratic majority of one. There will no doubt be plenty of speechmaking against the bill by Minority Leader Lusk and his lieutenants, but it will avail nothing.

After the Walker bill passes the Senate, it will be sent immediately to the Assembly, where a vote will be taken.

The fact that the ways and means committee of the Assembly, by a vote of 10 to 4 refused to report out of committee last week the Hackenburg censorship repeal bill, means but little. In the first place the committee consists of 11 Republicans and 4 Democrats, and with Hackenburg a Democrat, and with the bill a Democratic administration measure, it is only to be expected that such action would be taken by the committee. Assemblyman Walter F. Clayton, of Brooklyn, who introduced the censorship bill that became a law a few years ago, and who is a Republican, was not present at the committee meeting.

The Steinberg bills relating to miniature motion picture apparatus, the Whitley bills relating to the use of nitro-cellulose film, and the bills relating to the admission of unaccompanied children to the motion picture theatres in the cities of the state, are all in committee.

Yielding to the demands of Republican Assemblymen who want to vote for repeal, Speaker Machold has called a conference for Tuesday, March 25. The subject will then be discussed.

If the measure sent over from the Senate, which is sure to vote for repeal, comes up on the floor of the Assembly, repeal advocates insist that it will pass.

There are eighty-six Republican votes in the Assembly. If the censorship advocates lose eleven of these, the bill will be passed.

Censorship Appropriation In N. Y. Cut Down

Two reviewers receiving an annual salary of $1,600 each will continue to do the work on the New York State Motion Picture Commission, a request for four reviewers having been refused by the budget committee making up the annual appropriation. The Commission will also receive no telephone operator, as was requested.

Furthermore, there will be two deputy commissioners at $4,000 a year each, although the Motion Picture Commission had requested three on the grounds that another was needed to take charge of inspection work and prosecutions. The budget committee granted the sum of $3,000 for one new deputy.

Buffalo Newspapers Strongly Urge Complete Abolition of Admission Taxes

BUFFALO newspapers have come to the aid of the exhibitors in their fight for elimination of admission taxes. Said the Buffalo Courier editorially: "A tax on amusement may not be so bad a tax as a tax on bread, but it probably is safe to say that it is, in these days of strenuosity that makes amusement increasingly necessary, just as unpopular a tax. When we were in the war the people accepted the admission taxes along with other discomforts. In the early post-war years they were conceded to be a war burden from which relief could not at once be given. But now, more than five years after the armistice, popular opinion is that the country should be rid of them. They are a daily irritation to a large part of the public and it is reasonable to believe that the cost of the war and the running expenses of the government ought now to be met by taxes which are not so open to the charge of being a nuisance.

"The public has been pretty patient and it deserves the best effort Congress possibly can exert to remove taxes which, though endurable in wartime, are unbearable in peace time. The provision in the compromise tax bill of the House in respect to admission taxes is simply a half-way measure. It would eliminate only theater and other admissions costing 50 cents or less. That is not sufficient. The provision should be for the abolition of all admission taxes. Popular sentiment is in favor of such action. The Senate, where the tax bill now is, would do a good stroke by making abolition of these taxes complete. It is not likely that the House would go against public sentiment by refusing to concur."

"Nuisance Taxes" is the title of an editorial in the Buffalo Enquirer, part of which says: "The provision in the tax bill now headed toward the President in one respect falls short of going far enough. It would eliminate the tax on admissions costing 50 cents or less. It should abolish all admission taxes."

Studio Murder Mystery at Warner Brothers

NEWSPAPERS are filled with accounts of the mysterious murder of R. Jansson, watchman of Warner Brothers West Coast studios, but the home office has not been able to secure any additional information.

Jansson died in the receiving hospital, where he had been rushed, after running from the studio shouting for help, collapsing in the arms of a passerby, and saying he had been shot.

The authorities are baffled by the murderer's identity and motives, though it is believed that Janssen had surprised some persons in the carpenter shop and grappled with them. The torn condition of his clothing led to this surmise, as did two empty shells found on the scene.

It is believed the prowlers had broken Jansson's grasp and fired two shots at him through the doorway as they fled. While preparations for an operation were being made, he died without having told anything that might clear up the murder.

Selecting Members for M. P. T. O. of Western Missouri

Of the exhibitors of Western Missouri selected by the M. P. T. O. Western Missouri committee as prospective members of the newly organized body, twenty already have responded favorably and money has accompanied the responses, according to A. F. Baker, acting secretary-treasurer. Only the most progressive exhibitors out in the territory have been chosen to form the skeleton of the new body.

A meeting will be held, probably in Kansas City, as soon as fifty members outside Kansas City are within the fold. A permanent organization then will be formed.

Buffalo Tightens Rules On Child Admissions

As a result of the hearing in Albany recently at which it was declared Buffalo was the worst offender in the state in regard to the admission of children under 16 years of age unaccompanied to motion picture shows, Police Chief Zimmerman of Buffalo has issued an order, which has been distributed to every picture house in the city, calling on precinct captains to put a stop at once to such juvenile admissions.

Fait Manager of Loew State, Cleveland

William Fait has joined the Loew organization as manager of the State theatre, Cleveland. Fait was previously manager of the Eastman theatre, Rochester.

He has already introduced a novelty in the long foyer of the theatre. This he has converted into a writing room, putting the horse at the disposal of the public—offering a small service that creates good feeling, and is reflected at the box office.

Theodore Roberts Recovering From Long Illness

Theodore Roberts, who has been ill in Pittsburgh since December, left that city March 17 for his home on the Coast. Although convalescent, Mr. Roberts was carried to the train on a stretcher.

First National to Increase Prints; News Campaign Brings Action in Penn.

By William A. Johnston

NOT MERELY because of the recent reduction in the price of raw stock, but for the all important reason of good pictures to the public, First National will increase the average number of prints per picture by a very substantial margin. This announcement to MOTION PICTURE NEWS is made by E. A. Eschmann, general sales manager, upon his return to New York after a visit to nineteen of the First National exchange centers.

Mr. Eschmann gives this as his big, conclusive thought of his trip, namely: The growing importance of the neighborhood house or, in sales parlance, the subsequent run and therefore the necessity of not only giving this widespread class of theatres as early a release as possible, but also and most importantly, a print that is in the best possible condition, a condition in fact, quite as good, if possible, as that shown by the first run theatre. A very material addition to the number of prints will be made, according to Mr. Eschmann.

This will apply particularly to the more popular pictures. The trouble today, of course, is that the greater the play a picture has, the poorer the condition of the print is apt to be in the subsequent run house. This is particularly what First National proposes to remedy.

George Kleine, speaking for Ritz Carlton Pictures on the subject of prints, says: "Of course, the answer is — more prints. There is little argument about it. We have already stated that with the Ritz Carlton Valentino pictures we will break all precedents in the number of prints issued. I am not stating just how many will be made, but the number will be larger by a considerable degree. Our object, of course, is two-fold; to give a greater number of simultaneous release dates and also to give to all theatres as new and good prints as possible. A Valentino picture, of course, is in a category of a few pictures for which the first run demand is exceptionally large, and such a kind of picture demands, naturally, more prints; but the subject of prints in good condition applies to all pictures. The problem, I know by long experience dating back to the General Film days, is of the utmost and practical importance, and I greatly commend MOTION PICTURE NEWS for its support in an educational campaign to this end. Somehow and in a business way this matter can be greatly helped. It involves the exhibitor and the exchanges, film inspection and, of course, primarily the laboratory. All must help and with the very latest run and lowest rentals the price for the better prints must be paid upon some fair adjustment of increase."

The Film Club of Eastern Pennsylvania has launched a movement as a result of the campaign of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, that promises to help solve the print problem if similar organizations will blossom and function in the same direction.

Tom Evans of Evans Laboratories brings the information regarding the Eastern Pennsylvania movement and enthusiastically urges the formation of similar organizations all over the United States.

"The Film Club of Eastern Pennsylvania," says Mr. Evans, "to my way of thinking is on the right track to better print conditions. Exchange men have organized there and have employed a man to inspect the projection machines of every exhibitor in the territory. To more effectively function they have gone outside of the territory for their inspector and have secured the services of a Chicagoan who is not known personally to any exhibitor [illegible] Pennsylvania.

"This inspector's duty is to thoroughly inspect every machine and to report to the exhibitor just what is wrong with it, if anything, and to suggest the cost of replacing parts that might be needed. The inspector then reports in detail to the Film Club just what the condition of the machine might be and the suggestions he has made to the exhibitor.

"If necessary repairs advised are not made by the exhibitor at once service from the exchanges to him is stopped. There can be no passing the buck. There can be no claim that the fault is with the exchange. The exchanges are checking up on their prints before delivery and the reports of the inspector definitely fix the blame where it lies. It is undoubtedly better to cancel the account entirely than to have a continuance from a negligent exhibitor on this print trouble.

"This Film Club of Pennsylvania was organized only a month ago and already it is functioning perfectly. The inspector is an expert and he has brought the exhibitor to a realization of the fact that he must co-operate with the club or be cut off from service.

"The movement already promises to extend all over the United States. New York is considering the organization of such a club and a meeting on the proposition is to be held next week. Other sections are asking the Pennsylvania organization for particulars. I predict that within a comparatively short time much of the complaint now charged against laboratories will be eliminated as inspectors are appointed and the real trouble is fixed where it belongs.

"There are probably five laboratories within the United States which have carrier conditioning machines for the proper drying of prints. Where these prints are properly dried and conditioned there is no reason why they should not stand up for a considerable longer period than they now do, if they are properly handled in exchanges and by exhibitors. It is not a case of poor raw stock, but rough treatment and lack of interest by those handling the prints that needs remedying."

Barthelmess Would Cancel Inspiration Contract

NOTICE of cancellation of contract has been served on Inspiration Pictures by Richard Barthelmess, according to a statement this week by Dennis F. O'Brien, the actor's counsel.

Breaches of contract are alleged. It is known that Mr. Barthlemess has been dissatisfied for some time and the filing of the cancellation notice was not unexpected. Charles H. Duell, president of Inspiration, sailed for Italy this week, after discharging most of his office force.

Mr. Barthelmess is reported to be negotiating with Metro for a contract that will call for fewer pictures a year.

On account of the difficulties which have arisen between Barthelmess and the Inspiration organization, resulting in a hiatus as far as production plans are concerned, John S. Robertson has been approached by two producers who have asked him to make a picture for them during the period while a settlement is being effected.

While Mr. Robertson has not yet decided to accept either of these offers, still it is thought that Inspiration would loan the well known director under compatible conditions as the Barthelmess-Inspiration situation has apparently resulted in a deadlock for the present.

Equip Harrisburg Church for Motion Pictures

ANOTHER big church in Harrisburg, Pa., is going in for motion pictures as an added attraction in its social service department. An announcement made March 15 by the building committee of the Pine Street Presbyterian Church, which is perhaps the strongest church, numerically and financially, in the capital city of Pennsylvania, tells of plans for a large new building for parish house and Sunday school purposes. It is stated that a feature of the structure will be an absolutely fireproof room for motion picture exhibitions.

The Pine Street Church is the second large Harrisburg congregation to make provision for motion picture exhibitions. The Grace Methodist Church has given weekly motion picture shows throughout the present winter in an auditorium owned by the church and specially equipped for the purpose. The attendance at these shows has been so great that extra seats were recently introduced to take care of the crowds.

Griffith Accepts Bankers' Invitation to Rome

D. W. GRIFFITH has accepted an invitation from an Italian syndicate of bankers to go to Rome for the purpose of conferring on the production of a series of pictures to be made there. The syndicate is headed by Comm. Andrea Serzo, member of the Mayor's Cabinet of Rome. The action on the part of the bankers has the consent and approval of the Italian government.

In a statement issued by representatives of the syndicate, it says: "We feel the activity of Mr. Griffith in Italy will do much toward restoring the picture making industry of Italy to its full health and prosperity."

Mr. Griffith may visit Russia to confer regarding possibilities of making a picture there, before he returns.

Plans Complete for "Naked Truth"

Fourth Annual Gridiron Revel of A. M. P. A. at Hotel Astor on Saturday, March 29

ALL the indications are that the fourth annual gridiron revel of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., to take place at the Hotel Astor, New York, on Saturday night, March 29, will see the most brilliant distinguished and representative assemblage of picture folk ever brought together for a function of this kind.

Cartridges containing T. N. T. tickets of admission are, according to A. M. Botsford, chairman of the A. M. P. A. entertainment committee, going fast to leaders of the industry.

Among those who are going to face the music of two Paul Whiteman bands and hear the unvarnished facts about the movies in a short series of five-minute Bedtime Stories told without fear or favor are:

Adolph Zukor, J. D. Williams, H. O. Schwalbe, Louis B. Mayer, Rodolph Valentien, Bebe Daniels, Richard Barthelmess, Mary Hay, Ramon Navarro, Rex Ingram, Alice Terry, William Fox, William A. Brady, Gloria Swanson, Thomas Meighan, Bert Lytell, Edwin Carewe, John Emerson, Irving Lesser and a host of others.

Besides these film celebrities, who will appear in person, all the big motion picture companies have made reservations for tables. There will be special tables for the representatives of the trade papers and the fan magazines, and a press table will be provided for representatives of the New York newspapers.

The illustrious guests who will tell the Bedtime Stories, the same to be broadcast by radio via Station WEAF, are Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Will Hays, D. W. Griffith, Samuel Rothafel, Rupert Hughes, A. M. Botsford and the Big National Personality, whose name is being withheld as a surprise. The affair will start promptly at 7. p. m.

At 9 p. m. the A. M. P. A. will "give the nation the air," when the Bedtime Stories will be told and wirelessed. Roxy, it is announced, will be master of the waves.

Following this will come the presentation of the winning comedy sketch on the movies to be enacted by a big Broadway cast. The author will be introduced and awarded the $100 prize.

Next in order on the program will be the unreeling of what is described as a "Sinsational Sinema Production," especially filmed for the occasion. After that there will be what the film press agents call "Our Own Popularity Contest," with "the crowning of the King and Queen of Flimdumb" as a feature. From then on there will be dancing until dawn.

Paul Whiteman will be there in person to lead his two jazz bands, one playing where the other leaves off, assuring continuous music during the dinner and dancing and in the interim between the other entertainment numbers.

The tickets are to be limited to one thousand persons (or 500 couples), but, according to S. Charles Einfeld, who has the handling of them, all the indications are that it will be the biggest "thousand" that ever turned out for such an affair. He expects to be sold out hourly. Tickets at $15 for doubles and $10 for singles may still be obtained from Mr. Einfeld, care First National Pictures, 383 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Former Exhibitor Jailed on Tax Charge

David Schayer, formerly manager of the State theatre in Salt Lake City, was arrested last week on an indictment returned last week by the Federal grand jury charging him with the embezzlement of money collected as taxes on admission to the theatre.

Would Have Exhibitors Send Complaints on Prints to Trade Papers

A SUGGESTION that exhibitors forward to Motion Picture News and other publications complaints about bad prints, thus giving distributors an opportunity to check up on their exchanges, is made by Maurice J. Walsh, manager of the film department of the Selznick Distributing Corporation.

Commenting on the article by E. V. Richards, Jr., of the Saenger Amusement Co., New Orleans, Mr. Walsh declares: "We are very much interested in matters of this kind and have thoroughly instructed our branch managers to see that their film departments at all times see to it that the inspection of prints and splices are made properly.

"As to the condition in reference to rain and short scenes or titles, this is entirely up to an exchange as they are the ones handling the product and know just what condition their prints are in. We, of course, have to consider where features have been in the market a considerable length of time it often does not warrant the purchasing of new prints as the amount of money obtained from bookings is so small it does not cover the cost of same and in my opinion it is necessary for an exchange to obtain a price whereby they at least cover 50 per cent over the cost of the print.

"It has also been my experience in watching prints throughout our exchanges that very often when you give an exchange a new print, through careless handling of the operator same is ruined after it is in use only a short time. I am of the opinion that if exhibitors receiving prints from various exchanges from time to time when they are shown at their theaters will compile data and send it forward direct to a medium such as yours or any other publication, it would not take long to check up just where these faults are to be placed. If one exhibitor receives a certain print and sends the information forward noting the print's reel bands, which are marked by letter or number, and the same print is sent to another exhibitor or several exhibitors and if they make the same notation, you can readily see that the exchange is to blame, as they do not give the proper attention when examining prints returned from their various exhibitors."

Loew's Toronto Theatres Wipe Out Deficit

NOT ONLY did Loew's Toronto Theatres, Limited, wipe out a deficit balance from the previous year and liquidate a fairly large bank obligation, but showed a substantial net profit during the fiscal year ending January 5 last, according to the annual statement, details of which were announced on March 14 at Toronto, Ontario, where the company has two houses, Loew's Yonge Street theater and Loew's Uptown.

Revenues from the two theaters during $80,587, as compared with a deficit of the Yonge Street theater, which is the downtown house under the management of J. Bernstein, contributed $237,111. After making the deductions for interest, taxation and depreciation, etc., the net balance or profit for the year 1923 is 8$0,587, as compared with a deficit of $6,192 at the end of the previous year.

After accounting for the 1922 deficit and a balance of taxes, there is a balance of $63,629, which has been carried forward to the 1924 account.

There are other Loew theaters at Ottawa and London, Ontario, which are owned locally, and at Montreal, where the house was acquired last year by Famous Players Canadian Corp. as a subsidiary company.

Maryland Sunday Bill Is Introduced

Delegate Dimarco of Baltimore, introduced last week in the Maryland Assembly, the bill to permit motion picture theatres in Baltimore city, only, to run Sunday bills.

The bill expressly permits performances only after 2 P. M. on Sundays. Although limited to Baltimore, the bill has met its keenest opposition during the session, from the smaller cities, and rural districts, where no movies can operate Sundays, owing to local sentiment, or where no movies are seen, excepting in church and school auditoriums, which are of course, un-taxed property.

Deluged by opposing petitions from the remotest parishes, in the outlying rural hamlets, the legislature up to the present has received only one large petition from Baltimore, favoring the bill. Western Maryland exhibitors have taken a straw vote of those favorable which may be presented to the legislature later.

That a fight along city vs. country lines faces the bill in the dying days of the General Assembly is a foregone conclusion.

Classic Pictures Men Are Arrested

Mrs. M. Tait of Hollywood charged that R. B. Wilcox, president, C. A. Keller and B. F. Kleinie, officials of Classic Pictures Corporation, had obtained $600 from her and they were arrested on charges of larceny and deviee.

Several hundred complaints have been lodged against Wilcox, according to Commissioner Walter T. Mathewson, among them the charge of conducting bogus motion picture schools.

Mrs. Tait alleges that in return for the investment the 60-year-old woman was to be made a film star and her son and daughter were each to get stellar roles in the productions made by the company.

Experts Discuss What Public Wants

N. Y. Times Gathers Opinions

WHAT does the public want? This question, perennial in stage and screen history, was given an interesting airing in an article by George MacAdam in last Sunday's Magazine Section of The New York Times. The Times consulted a group of eight experts, and submitted the question to them, with the result that the jury disagreed.

The experts were: David Belasco; D. W. Griffith; George M. Cohan; John Golden; Morris Gest; Harry Lauder; Fannie Hurst and Irving Berlin.

"If I wanted to treat the theatre as a commercial enterprise, if I wanted to be a tradesman offering for sale only such goods as I know the public will buy, I could make more than a million a year," declared Mr. Belasco . . . "But if the producer treats the theatre as though it were on a somewhat different plane from the delicatessen shop, then the problem becomes more difficult.

"My experience has been that the public will accept anything if it is interesting, appealing. That is a general statement. When the problem narrows down to a specific play, it is very difficult to prophesy whether or not it will hit the popular fancy. Before a play is submitted to the public the best producer can only make a guess. Success is only a matter of conjecture. No producer intentionally risks a play he thinks will be a failure.

Belasco's Test of a Play

"My test of a play is: Does this strike my fancy? Then came the practical questions: Has it acting possibilities? Does it suit one of my stars, or can I bring together a group of actors that it will suit? Let a play meet these conditions; it may be on any subject, the scene laid in any land, I'll produce it."

An interesting viewpoint is contributed by D. W. Griffith. "No one knows what the public wants, for the public's desire for entertainment is like a man's desire for food — one time he takes fish, another time meat — it's all a question of mood.

"But while I do not think any one can be specific in answering the question, 'What does the public want?' I think there is a basic desire (if I may use so formal a phrase in giving my very informal thoughts). People want to have their dreams visualized. It is simply to get an ideal projection of themselves that people read a book or go to the theatre or to the movies.

"It's a workaday world, and few, if any, are able to play the part in it they would like to, or think they would like to. We are all dreamers; if the world doesn't give us our dream, then we want to find it in the world that the book, the stage or the screen gives us. There we want to have pictured for us the romances, the adventures, that life has denied us.

"I think that all normal people have the same dreams, the same ideals. I don't think there is a human being who, dimly, hasn't thought the same things that Shakespeare did. That's why he has his universal appeal. A writer is great in the ratio that, with his stronger mind, he makes the average man see what otherwise he sees dimly.

"Despite the cynics, the underlying thing that makes for enduring success is wholesomeness. The reason for this was well put by a poet. He said that though our feet are in the mud, our eyes are on the stars. Take the plays and the books that have won enduring popularity, or what we call 'fame'—their drift is wholesome

"There is more contentment in doing right than in doing wrong. That may sound like a phrase from a copybook; but don't blame the copybook; it has been said over and over again, from time immemorial, by men whom the world regards as its greatest. Confucius and Dickens said the same thing. All of which means that humanity recognizes it as a truth.

"And so, when we turn to our ideal world, whether we seek it in a book or on the stage or screen, we find a satisfaction in seeing the decent thing. The book or play that presents something else may have a flash success, but it will never find a place among the books or the plays that humanity refuses to let die.

"To my way of thinking 'Lightnin'' is one of the greatest plays ever written. You laugh and you cry with 'Lighnin'.' He brings your fellow-humans closer to you, makes you feel somehow that the world, after all, isn't such a hard, cold world.

Griffith Gives Views

"No, I have no formula—at least, I've never been conscious of having one. If I read or hear or see something that interests me as a story, it may make a good theme for me. I just have the feel, 'That's a good story.'

"I think that 'Old Bill' is one of the best movies ever made. No love interest in it; no mystery; no suspense; nothing of what is ordinarily called 'plot.' It's just the story of an old cab driver who is arrested for delaying traffic, and who is sentenced to jail, and when he gets there finds that he rather likes it, for he's never before lived in such comfort. Anatole France wrote the story.

"It's just the feel, the touch of it, that I like. You love Old Bill from the beginning—a harmless, kindly old fellow.

"Of course," added Mr. Griffith quickly, "the screen version is beautifully done, beautifully acted."

"If you have no formula, Mr. Griffith, if the only thing that guides you is the 'feel' of a story then a man to be a successful producer must be a synthesis of popular emotions?"

"I haven't succeeded yet. When I have, come back and ask me that question again."

George M. Cohan agreed with Mr. Griffith that the "public has a mixed appetite." "The only secret I know about the theatre," he commented, "is that there isn't any secret. It's just plain horse sense. Don't waste the audience's time. Make it say: 'This fellow is a good story teller; he gossips well.' You know how it is in a club, how the crowd will audience's time. Make it say: 'This fellow and then the other fellow comes in, and they say 'Oh, gosh, look who's coming now', and there's a general fade-away. Well, it's just the same with an audience—there's no mystery about it."

Tough on the Re-hash

Asked whether he had noticed any change in the taste of audiences, Mr. Cohan replied: "The present-day audience is tough on the re-hash. I think the movies have had a lot to do with this. The people have seen so much of the obvious in the movies that they're fed up. But give them any little subtlety, anything that you don't pour out like molasses, and they'll ask for more."

John Golden gave a crisp answer to the question "What does the public want?" He answered: "To forget their troubles."

"People have plenty of dullness, plenty of problems in their lives," he explained. "They don't want more of the same thing when they go to the theatre. No; what they want is something that will change their mental attitude, something that will give them contentment. . . . . What the American people want is clean laughter, clean love and something that's right to root for.

"The rooting impulse is elemental; we're all natural-born rooters—we take sides and shout for the side we want to see win. A play ought to make the audience feel that urge; there ought to be some character in it that will make the audience say: 'I want to see that fellow get his.'

"A play or a movie succeeds because it has a story to tell. The story, whether it is presented on the stage or the screen, ought to begin that its beginning, and travel straight to its end.

"Many movie directors do not seem to have appreciated that fact. The 'Party'—sometimes a dinner party, more often a dance—is the greatest offender. Occasionally the party adjourns to the swimming pool—that's what makes the movie a 'super picture.' The party is all right if it is an essential cog in the development of the story; but, as a rule, you sit and watch the party for fifteen minutes, your mind trying to figure out just where the thread of the story comes in and then you discover that it doesn't come in at all.

Censorship Bill Before Oklahoma Senate

A BILL providing a state board for censoring motion pictures was introduced in the Oklahoma State Senate, at Oklahoma City, March 5.

The board would be composed of three members to be appointed by the Governor. The chairman would receive $2,100 a year and the other members $1,800. A secretary would be paid $1,500. Members would serve three years with terms overlapping.

Row Over T.O.D.C. in Full Swing

Cohen and True Issue Statements on Developments in Distributing Corporation Situation

DISSENSION [illegible] in the ranks of the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation, and the withdrawal of W. A. True, were aired in a series of statements issued this week by Sydney S. Cohen, Harry Davis, of Pittsburgh; R. F. Woodhull of New Jersey, and Glen Harper of Los Angeles, on one hand; and Mr. True on the other.

The Cohen-Davis-Woodhull-Harper statement says in part:

"We were amazed to learn that Mr. W. A. True and Mr. Carl Anderson had formed the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation, incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, in spite of the fact that the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corp. organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, has been in existence for over 15 months.

"The action is the more surprising when we learn that Mr. True and Mr. Anderson formed this new company unbeknown to the remaining stockholders and directors and officers of the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation and while Mr. True and Mr. Anderson were both officers and Directors of the company.

"It is our purpose to use every means to protect the interests of the stockholders of the Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation of Delaware and to see that the moneys due this company from the Anderson Pictures Corp. on account of distribution of the Theatre Owners Distributing Corp. picture 'After the Ball' will be paid to the Theatre Owners Distributing Corp. (of Delaware) which has a contract with the Anderson Pictures Corp. regarding same.

"We have been advised by some of the theatre owners who were mentioned as members of the Advisory Board of the new company that Mr. True and Mr. Anderson have formed, that their names were used without a full knowledge of the facts surrounding the formation of this company by them and particularly that the remaining stockholders and officers of the Theatre Owners Distributing Corp. (of Delaware) were not appraised of the move nor were they in sympathy with it or included in same, and they have requested that their names be withheld from further use in connection with the new company."

Mr. Cohen made public a personal statement in which he said:

"I have just returned from Washington where I have been during the week in behalf of the legislative interests of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America affecting the admission and Seat Taxes and Music License matter, and my attention is called to the activities of the last week in the incorporation by Mr. [illegible] Anderson of a new Theatre Owners Distributing Corp. organized under the laws of the State of New York.

"I personally wish that any business enterprise of Mr. True's turns out to be successful and I feel his purpose and ours and the industry would be better served if he and Mr. Anderson were to use some other name for their corporate business purposes than Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation."

W. A. True declared: "In the interest of progress and results and for the entire removal of obstructionists it may be necessary to stage a Teapot Dome Investigation of politics in the exhibitor ranks of the picture industry." He further states that "mysterious influences were blocking every constructive move made by the theatre owners in their attempt to promote co-operative picture distribution and that these influences suddenly became bold and daring when the first picture put out by the Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation was ready for release and that further mysteries enshrouded and handicapped progress immediately preceding and following the Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation; that the wielders of mystery were content to mark time and prevent results for what purpose and to what end the theatre owner public has not yet learned."

Mr. True gave out "extracts of a letter" he wrote to Sydney S. Cohen under date of March 15th, 1924: "I have at no time sought to dodge any of the responsibilities which I assumed, but quite to the contrary I have contributed liberally of my money and my time to protect and safeguard the interests of the Company and the investments of the minority stockholders who had no vote and no voice in the operation of the business. While I was President of the Corporation, as you very well know, I repeatedly attempted to clear the way toward obtaining pictures for distribution. That was the purpose for which we organized, but invariably I was blocked by my fellow members on the Board, and at no time did any one of them offer any substitute plan that could in any wise effectuate the purpose of the corporation.

"Apparently you and my other associates on the Board were going to let the ship sink; that is why I got out. I want no part in that sort of thing.

"As I have told you before and as I told them, I intend to take care of the exhibitor stockholders of the Delaware corporation who were not on the Board and I have no fear that my conduct in this matter will be misunderstood by any fairminded man."

Tom Kennedy Joins Staff of Motion Picture News

THOMAS C. KENNEDY, well known trade paper man, has been appointed a member of the staff of Motion Picture News, effective March 24.

Mr. Kennedy was for several years asociated with Exhibitors Trade Review as a reviewer and later Exploitation Editor. He has had extensive experience in other branches of the industry—in publicity work for Pathe and at the Hal Roach studios in Hollywood.

M. P. T. O. A. Convention on May 27-28-29

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week by President Sydney S. Cohen that the fifth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 27-28-29, in Boston.

The annual meeting of the National Officers, Board of Directors and Executive Committee will take place on the day preceding the opening of the convention proper.

A meeting of the Convention Committee, comprising M. E. Comerford of Pennsylvania, Joseph W. Walsh of Connecticut, Ernest Horstman of Massachusetts, R. F. Woodhull of New Jersey, M. J. O'Toole and Mr. Cohen, was held March 19.

Full arrangements for the National convention are being made. Sub-committees on Transportation, Convention Hotels, Program, Entertainment, etc., have been designated.

It was also announced this week that the M. P. T. O. A. has moved its national headquarters from 132 West 43rd Street, to 25 West 43rd Street, the National Association Building, New York city.

get West and, except for necessary delays, they never stop traveling west until they get there."

"The biggest sensation and the greatest novelty—that's what the public wants" in the opinion of Morris Gest. "You've got to educate the American people to what you want to give them. Our forefathers used to have ballyhoos in front of the theatre to get the public in. Today methods have changed, but the principle is the same. If you're going to give it anything that is out of the narrow path of everyday life, you must 'sell' it to the American public before you can produce it. This is true of humanity, but its truest of the American public, for the American public is the busiest on earth, and it takes more ballyhooing to attract their attention.

"Everything must have a kick. The audience may get it from a girl's limb, it may get it from a man's voice; but the kick must be there. By that I mean that if a show is to succeed it must have something in it that gives the audience a sensation—tears, laughter, gooseflesh—I don't care what it is—the audience must feel a sensation.

"I study the theatre as news. I say to myself: 'The public has had a thrill of this, a thrill of that; now what can the next thrill be?' If you don't give them the latest thrill, you give them yesterday's newspaper."

Price and Powers Buy Triangle Assets

P. A. Powers verified the report that he and Oscar Price had purchased all the assets of Triangle Film Corporation including its hundreds of stories and about two thousand negatives of noted players' former pictures.

Many expect that Messrs. Powers and Price will entirely re-organize the old company which in former times almost dominated the film producing and distributing field.

The Thief of Bagdad—A Fantasy

Reviewed by Laurence Reid

BEFORE an audience that packed the Liberty theatre to the doors with a huge crowd that must have surpassed 5,000 surging about the sidewalk and packing the lobby so that the fortunate guests had tremendous difficulty in reaching the doorman, Douglas Fairbanks' new picture, "The Thief of Bagdad," had its premiere Tuesday night.

Brawny policemen cleared a path to admit the chief celebrities of the evening, Mr. Fairbanks and Miss Pickford — though Doug had to carry Mary to save her from the frenzied crowd.

Those who were fortunate enough to reach their seats before the onslaught of the mob were given an atmospheric treat — which was a part of Morris Gest's scheme to provide a perfect harmonious setting for Fairbanks' opulent Oriental canvas. In the lobby squatted three genuine sons of Arabia, playing weird music while from the theatre came the penetrating odor of Oriental incense. Oriental carpets were draped from the balcony and the boxes — and Willy Pogany's panels of the star in bizarre attire were painted on the orchestra walls. Ushers in Arabian attire escorted us to our seats.

This was entertainment indeed — a prelude to a greater entertainment about to begin. These colorfully-robed ushers seated the most ultra-fashionable audience. It was like a night at the opera. Celebrities from the social whirl, the world of letters, the world of finance, the amusement world, had come to pay homage to a man inspired with an ambition to place the screen on the highest plane.

Many Notables Present

Among these guests were the Duchess of Rutland, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Lady Diana Duff Cooper, Lord and Lady Paul Duke, Ogden Goelet, Clarence Mackay, Mayor and Mrs. Hylan, Mr. and Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, Conde Nast, Neysa McNein, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth O'Brien, Charles D. Wetmore, Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Warren, Mrs. James Alexander, Elsie de Wolfe, Hartley Manners, Laurette Taylor, Gatti-Casazza, David Belasco, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bayard Swope, Dr. Rowland Rogers, John Emerson, Cyril Hatch, Gaston Liebert, Willy Pogany, Adolph Zukor, Jesse Lasky, D. W. Griffith, Bebe Daniels, Robert Kane, Holbrook Blinn, Sidney Olcott, Senator Cobb, George Kleine, Rodolph Valentino, Ernest Torrence, Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson, Mrs. Lotta Woods, Joseph Hergesheimer, Allan Dwan, Raoul Walsh, Hugo Riesenfeld, George Jean Nathan, Joseph Plunkett, Paul Dickey, Josephine Crowell, Mr. and Mrs Sam Harris, Hiram Abrams — and dozens of others whose names are in the social register or on the business or amusement rosters. This premiere was also attended by the dramatic critics of the dailies — which is significant as most of them are bound to the spoken drama.

The theatre became darkened, the curtains parted and from the balcony of a mosque an Arabian chanted a prayer. The atmosphere had provided a perfect harmony for the enjoyment of the picture.

18 Chicago Theatres Closed by Health Dept.

EIGHTEEN of the sixty Chicago theatres warned by the Health Department that they were violating health ordinances, were closed this week, and several more are expected to be dark. The drastic action of the Health Department came after two previous warnings to these houses, a third inspection by the department disclosing, according to health officials, that eighteen theatres had not remedied defects in their ventilating systems or were not operating them according to department regulations.

These houses will remain closed according to orders until another inspection shows that they are equipped and can be operated according to regulations. Business Manager Jack Miller of the Exhibitors' Association of Chicago has been actively engaged for the past two weeks, advising and aiding the sixty theatres warned, in fulfilling the demands of the Health Department and most of the houses were allowed to remain open.

A touch of allegory embroidered with sound Oriental philosophy introduced this finely spun fantasy. Emblazoned across the sky through the medium of brilliant stars were the words: Happiness Must Be Earned. This expression was the keynote of this colossal spectacle which for sheer imagery, sheer opulence of background which for incomparable beauty in the composition of scenes which for its rich enchantment in the gossamer quality of its story, stands unique in the annals of the screen.

Fourteen months the Fairbanks organization has worked to accomplish this tapestry. It took tremendous painstaking labor — backed by tremendous nerve to conceive and execute such an idea. For it is different from anything ever shown on a silversheet. The [illegible] ner of its treatment sets it aside so that no [illegible] magnificence in the composition of settings, the decorations, the photography and tinting. And yet as colossal as its sets are these are marked by utter simplicity and [illegible] Bagdad. Its towers and minarets, its mosques, its market places, its palaces, its [illegible] of its streets and the eye [illegible]

Compares With Parrish Drawings

Imagine a rich compilation of Maxfield Parrish drawings, profusely colored — these inviting the spectator on a cruise into a dream world — and you have some conception of this picture's quality and appeal.

The miraculous feats of the photographer and the art director give us a visual treat, but the mind is feasting on a dream and finds inspiration from it. As an indication of how deftly this story is constructed let us state that the characters never become subordinate to the plot or the backgrounds. Indeed the story never varies from its theme — and its theme is to project a character who serves it. There is a majesty about this conquest of happiness when the agile, dexterous thief overcomes insurmountable obstacles — objects of fancy made real because we immediately compare them to the things which make happiness so difficult to attain.

The thief is a gross materialist in his early adventures. His philosophy is "What I want I take." Then when he would take a fair princess he suddenly finds his soul. She has looked kindly upon this gay masquerader, posing as a prince. Feeling humility for the first time, he appreciates that to win her he must prove himself worthy. Through all this transition the story weaves a fantastic pattern — one cleverly satirizing an "Arabian Nights" tale. There is an illusive charm about it — and a genuine story interest tempered with sympathy for its colorful figure and suspense for his amazing adventures.

The skein of plot is varied and we follow him with rapt attention when he gains entrance to the pavilion of the princess and through a display of wit eludes capture. There is broad humor when he rides through the palace gates with his evil associates. He will rank with the other suitors in his courtship. Then he is exposed as a trickster. Pathos comes with his humility and the thief gives up his evil ways.

Picture Divided In Two Parts

The first half of the picture presents Fairbanks in the role of an Oriental Robin Hood — a gay, reckless, courageous adventurer. And he employs medium shots to draw the spectator into the story and assume the identity of the character. These scenes generate [illegible] philosophy until the [illegible] der romance becomes embroidered in the plot.

The hero, a bronze-skinned, muscular romantic figure guides us into a fantastic world. And so vital is the character that we identify ourselves in the role.

The picture is not confined to climaxes in the dramatic sense. There seems to be a climax for every leap and bound he makes. Fairbanks accomplishes a few feats through [illegible] and double [illegible] but these are a part of the scheme in weaving the fantasy and making it consistent. And while we are following him, the magnificent sets compel our admiration, though they never cause us to lose contact with the plot and characterization. This is because there is an economy of detail. We see these fine mountings — the work of skilled artisans so complete are they with convincing atmosphere — but dominating them all is the subject.

When the picture plunges into the second half — telling its tale of the quest for happiness, it becomes even more fantastic. You

Exhibitors Should Work Harder in Lent

By E. L. Hyman, Brooklyn Strand

Editor's Note.—The effect of Lent on the theatre box-office is a subject of vital interest to all exhibitors. MOTION PICTURE NEWS asked Edward L. Hyman, Managing Director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre to give his views on the best method to be followed in meeting the so-called Lenten slump.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has asked me what effect Lent has on business. The answer to that is that it depends a great deal on the community, the theatre, the management, and the policy under which the house is operated. Therefore, conditions may be found different in various sections.

We have found in Brooklyn that although Lent presents a problem that must be met with renewed effort, the period does not have a reverse effect on the theatre it formerly had. We have tried to overcome it, and have done so in a great measure, and then the change in modern living may have had something to do with it. Regardless, our performances during Lent are now attended by many more patrons than was the case some years ago, with the result that the period is not felt so keenly as it was. I believe that an attractive, and appropriate show, will do good business any time, and it is upon this theory that we have worked at the Brooklyn Mark Strand, not only for the period covering Lent but for any condition when business shows signs of being below what it should be.

Naturally, if we were to sit back and say to ourselves that it would not do any good to plug hard during Lent "because the people will not come anyway," then it is to be expected that bad business would result. Indeed, it is that way any time. No thought, or no work—no business. I have never been able to understand the psychology of sitting down during dull times "on the theory that "they won't come anyway." If, on the other hand, efforts are made to get together a show which contains incidents that will draw the interest, and then let everyone know you have it and how good it is, dull business will give way to average business and in many cases better than average business. That is one reason why Lent or any other alleged dull period does not especially scare us. We know it is coming and make preparations for it.

Although our shows during big times may be good, you may be sure that the ones during dull times will be computed with the thought in mind that something unusual must be done to overcome the handicap. Patronage is elastic, depending upon what you give the patrons and how you tell them of it. There are enough people to fill the theatre, regardless of creed or scruples, any week of the year, if we do not sit back and talk pessimism and say "what's the use."

Holy Week is generally accepted as the poorest week of the year, under normal conditions. My way of looking at it, however, is that it is no seasonal, and must be dealt with accordingly. If nothing else about it and you expect it to be a poor week, the chances are it will turn out just as you expected. On the other hand, if it is met with renewed energy, and if care is taken to put together an especially attractive program, with incidents that mean something at the box office, there will always be enough customers to fill the seats and chase away that pessimistic feeling.

Of course, each individual theatre must work out its own problem. How it is worked out depends upon the management. Some may work on the idea that "as things are, let them continue," or because it has been the custom to have dull business during a certain period, it will always remain the custom. Also, some houses which have not the facilities for putting on attractions other than the motion picture itself will naturally find themselves handicapped in the way of combatting Lent and dull seasons.

Biggest Features Necessary

My method of meeting such a situation would be to arrange the booking schedule so that some of the biggest features would fall during the bad times and then proceed to send out a campaign that would make the people feel they must not miss the show, regardless of anything. Those who find ballyhoo methods on the street useful might find business strengthened by putting their attention to that end, while houses which are more fortunate, and have lights and music, could turn their efforts to creating unusual lighting harmonies and unusual music incidents and publicize the fact extensively. Handled properly, the handicap of dull periods fades into the distance.

When the feature booked happens to be a "weak sister" I would find it a good method to fill in with shorts that carry some box office weight—shorts of some star who means money, or some subject people desire to see. Properly chosen shorts in many cases mean as much at the box office as some so-called features.

Thus, our motto is: Work hard all the time to present a good show, but in dull seasons work harder and leave no stone unturned to give them a performance they just can't miss.

State Admission Tax Stands In South Carolina

THROUGH almost complete lack of any concerted co-operation on the part of exhibitors of the state, South Carolina theater owners will continue to labor under the additional burden imposed by the state revenue bill, which levies an additional ten per cent on all admissions throughout the state.

The General Assembly, because the matter was not properly brought before them to show just how critically the life of the theatre owners hang in the balance, did not feel disposed to take off the tax as affecting admissions. Twice during the past year since the law was passed a year ago, the Special Tax Commission abated its enforcement, having intimate knowledge of its discriminatory features and the hardship it imposed on the theaters and theater patrons of the state, but even with this support, only a handful of exhibitors rallied to the fight—including Max Bryant, of Rock Hill; Warren Irvin, of Columbia, and Montgomery Hill, Carolina supervisor for Southern Enterprises.

They were not able to have a substitute bill, which proposed a seating tax in lieu of on admissions, accepted by the legislative body. Theatergoers in South Carolina pay 20 per cent tax instead of the usual ten per cent in other states, and business, of course, suffers thereby.

Anti-Flirt Campaign In Cleveland

The Cleveland Federation of Women's Clubs has joined the city in a clean-up campaign to rid the community of the movie flirt. The first arrest in connection with the movement was made in an East Side picture theatre. Mike N. Drammin, 38, was arrested by Policewomen Gratz and Schuler, after Drammin nudged Miss Gratz' knee. He was taken before Police Judge Moylan and sentenced to five days in the work house.

The Federation of Women's Clubs last Thursday passed resolutions, giving the campaign its entire support. In addition to joining the war actively, the Federation authorized letters to be sent to Safety Director Barry, to the Cinema Club, to the Women's Protective Association, to the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, to Loew's Ohio Theatres and to the Cleveland Press. These letters advised the various officers that the Federation is supporting the campaign to exterminate the motion picture lizard.

Akron Theatre Owners Re-Elect Officers

The Akron, Ohio, Theatre Owners' Association, in annual meeting, re-elected its entire list of officials. Officers are: Ike Friedman, Akron Theatres Company, president; Charles Menches, Liberty theatre, vice-president; F. C. Buben, Palace theatre, treasurer; Albert Plesenes, Orpheum theatre, secretary; and L. J. Callinan, assistant treasurer.

Trustees, also re-elected are James P. Dunlevy, Strand theatre; C. W. Belden, Thornton theatre, and Allen Simmons, Allen theatre.

Syracuse Exhibitor Fined For "Bicycling"

The first fine under the new campaign against "bicyclers" and "switchers" in the western New York territory was soaked on a Syracuse exhibitor the past week by the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo. The Syracuse manager was fined $140.

The board has instructed salesmen of the various exchanges to check up each evening on the shows presented in the territory.

Bucyrus Theatres Again Open on Sunday

The motion picture houses of Bucyrus, Ohio, are again open for Sunday shows. They were closed about a year ago by the vigorous and repeated action of former Mayor Charles F. Picking, after many suits had been tried in court.

Arthur T. Schuler, the present mayor, declines to say what his attitude will be regarding the reopening of the Sunday shows.

Planning the Campaign on Paper

Discussion by O. D. Cloakey

IN planning exploitation campaigns, week after week, I have found the most successful medium for the greatest results to be the detailed chart system. By that, I mean simply this: After you have decided on the amount of money you are going to spend on the advertising and exploitation of a certain picture, make up a chart, putting down all the ideas that you can think of to put that picture over, whether they are original or otherwise.

After you have made up your rough chart of 30 or 40 different stunts, or whatever the figure may be, then arrange them in order, starting at the beginning of your campaign, after eliminating the ideas that are not practical or in keeping with the picture you are putting over. Now you have your campaign in systematic order; this is the completed chart to be followed out in detail.

How Ideas Are Gotten

Stunts are arrived at simply by careful thought and study of the possibilities of the picture (at screening), picking out the angles of appeal that will suit your particular public, by digging up all the material in the reviews and advertisements in the trade journals, by taking advantage of the stunts used by other exhibitors and enlarging or improving on them, by reading the suggestions in the Press Books and injecting a little originality into some of the ideas, by screening the picture and carefully analyzing it for the exploitation possibilities.

Judgment must be used in exploitation, as you cannot 'ballyhoo' every picture. Floats, sandwichmen, etc., have their place, and are only effective when properly used.

Never pass up the opportunity of large gatherings or conventions if you have a picture to sell. Prepare some stunt that can be grasped in a flash and arrange to get it before them in some manner. It is sure-fire and gets the mob talking. Keep tab on what meetings, etc., are coming off, and when the time arrives put your idea across.

Yes, if you are careful of whom you are inviting to attend, but not too many. A few prominent citizens, ministers, etc., will do wonders in "mouth to mouth" advertising, but you must first be sure that what you are going to screen will appeal to them. In other words invite the classes that you know the picture you are screening is going to please.

Strive to make every campaign different so that it will attract attention. The occasional use of floats is effective if they are original and attractive. Tie-ups with merchants has been used to some extent, and still good when used once in a while. Club co-operation is an angle that will promote interest in your theatre.

Window Display

Every showman realizes the pulling power of good window displays, but it is getting more common every day, and people who used to stop and look at a card or photographs are getting accustomed to them. If you want to attraction attention, give them animation in a window display, something that has not been done to death. If you cannot devise some mechanical display, sell the mthe idea of an attractive setting with special lighting effects and decorative ideas. You will find a merchant ready to grasp an idea that is going to make them stop and look in his window, and a few good windows will sell a lot of seats that might otherwise be vacant.

A few good stunts are better than a lot of them that do not mean anything, and you can save money by applying good common sense in advertising.

What About Children?

To the exhibitor operating suburban theatres or houses in the smaller cities, you cannot underestimate the pulling power of the children's "mouth to mouth" advertising, but when you get a picture that will appeal to the children give them an advance showing on a Saturday morning, at a special price, go after them at the schools, Boys' and Girls' clubs, etc., get them in your theatre, give them a good entertainment, during which you make your announcement of the playing dates, and when you turn them loose you have hundreds of kiddies telling the world what a good show is coming to your theatre.

You will find in planning Chart campaigns that one idea will suggest another and many original ideas will be worked out while preparing your exploitation, and if you see a good stunt in the trade journal used by some exhibitor don't be backward in using it in your town; it will be new there. A clipping file for stunts will prove invaluable to you. Clip out any ideas you run across and put them in the "moth ball file" and when you have something you want to step out on pick out a few stunts that will work in with the picture you are going to present.

Exploitation can be overdone and spoil many presentations. Don't over-advertise or "bunk" the public, they are "show-wise" these days and shop for amusement, and if you do put over a big campaign be sure that you have the stuff to back it up when they come to your theatre.

Manager Tells Methods of Planning Stunts

IN THE accompanying article, O. D. Cloakey outlines the methods used with such remarkable success by him in planning extensive exploitation campaigns. He has been for some time past the manager of the Regent theatre, Ottawa, and has just accepted an offer to go to the West Coast with Universal, where he will continue the same type of work.

Manager Cloakey has distinguished himself through the unusually comprehensive exploitation campaigns which he staged in Ottawa in connection with pictures at the Regent, many of which have been recounted at length in the Exhibitors' Service Bureau of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

His campaigns have embraced an average of from forty to sixty separate and complete stunts, taking in every sort of exploitation. At the same time, they have not been especially expensive, since he has availed himself of all types of civic and community tie-ups, utilizing local clubs and associations, making a strong play for the children, and showing rare showmanship on every occasion.

He is therefore well qualified to write on the subject of the accompanying article. "Planning the Campaign on Paper," and his ideas should be read with interest by every exhibitor, since his methods are applicable in some measure at least, in every community.

West Coast Independents Join Organization

INDEPENDENT producers of Los Angeles warmly welcomed Joe Brandt, vice president of Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, at a luncheon in the Montmartre Cafe and voiced themselves as being heartily in accord with the aims of the organization as outlined by Mr. Brandt in his address.

As a result of the meeting the following four new members were added: Eddie Lyons Comedies, Sanford Productions, Sunset Productions and Mission Films.

As a result of the organization campaign planned it is expected that many more independents will be secured during Mr. Brandt's stay on the West Coast.

Union Operators Appear at Albany Hearing

A. J. McCosker of New York city, representing Moving Picture Machine Operators Union, Local 386, and Arabain Horowitz, secretary of the same organization, appeared before the judiciary committee of the New York State Legislature at Albany and opposed the Murphy bill, which pertains to nitro-cellulose film.

Frank H. Richardson, of New York city, unable to be present, filed a brief with the committee and opposed the bill. Observers do not expect that the bill will ever be reported out of committee.

The operators declare that the repeal of "Any and all provisions of law restricting the purchase lease, use, sale or simular disposition of motion picture film of an acetate of cellulose, or similarly non-hazardous base," is particularly iniquitous, because it removes the present safeguards on so-called slowburning-film, making it unnecessary for a person to be licensed before he can operate a machine to project such film.

William Fox Sells His St. Louis Theatre

OSCAR DANE, burlesque show exhibitor, has purchased from William Fox the lease of the William Fox Liberty theatre in St. Louis, and beginning April 1 the house will show a combination girl show with motion pictures.

The price paid was not mentioned, but it is said to have been an attractive one for Fox, who has been using the theatre for the almost exclusive presentation of Fox features, short subjects and comedies.

Under the new arrangement it is said that the Fox films will have sufficient outlet in St. Louis, especially on the bigger pictures, and that the eventual result over a period of years will be highly more satisfactory than the old plan.

might be reading Gulliver's Travels or Hans Andersen again. Here are revealed spectacular scenes of eerie atmosphere. Here is shown a kaleidoscopic pattern of weird imaginings and happenings. The now thoroughly-humbled thief must find the magic chest and return to the princess by the seventh moon. The other suitors, the Persian, the Indian and the Mongol are all in quest of the rarest treasure — but the thief is searching for happiness and he must earn it. So we follow him to grotesque grottos — and leap with him across fiery chasms. We accompany him to the depths of the ocean (a scene amazingly done). He has many obstacles to overcome. Monstrous beasts are always at hand to beset his path, but he slays them all. Then comes his visit to a crystal city — and finally his climb to a heavenly estate to gain the magic chest. The spectator becomes overawed with these marvelous shots — and while trick photography isn't new, it is accomplished on a scale never approached before.

The second half is fanciful all the way except for brief interludes in showing the princess at the palace. Director Walsh and his coworkers have not sacrificed important episodes in concentration upon the thief's quest for the magic box. We have colorful glimpses of the Mongol gaining the magic apple which restores life to the dead, the Persian finding the magic carpet which will transport him back to Bagdad, and the Indian stealing the magic crystal, through which he sees the princess. The Mongol is the villain — a true Oriental stoic and the role is played with suave cunning by So-Jin. A deft study of pantomime.

The picture builds to colorful heights as the thief, riding through the skies on a white horse, reaches the outposts of Bagdad. The Mongol, having built an army within the city's walls, captures it. But the thief, opening [illegible] and men, thousands of them, arise from the ground — and recapture the city. When he is confronted by the Mongol, as cornered as it were, he resorts to his invisible cloak. And re-couing the princess he takes her away on the Persian's magic carpet.

The trick photography is at its best in the scenes employing the carpet. It flies down staircases, through windows and out into the sky. The magic rope is deftly executed. In fact there isn't a scene in which tricks are introduced that is not effective.

The picture is a perfect excursion into the realm of fancy. It doesn't pretend to be anything else but a romantic fantasy. And it is at times magnificent and carries such a kaleidoscopic color scheme such an intricate pattern, which is perfectly intelligible to anyone old enough to attend a picture theatre, that its appeal is undeniably sound.

Mr. Fairbanks has made his role a vital, magnetic study. The same enthusiasm which has marked his performances in the past is manifested here. His supporting company has been well selected as to types and ability. The role of the princess well becomes Julanne Johnston's brunette charm. Her langour is truly suggestive of the daughter of the East. Snitz Edwards flashes a subtle characterization as the thief's evil associate and partner in crime—and his make-up is excellent. Noble Johnson as the Indian prince looks and acts like an Oriental stoic—and Anna May Wong impersonates the Mongol slave with good feeling.

No critical shafts can be hurled against the picture for its story and production values. It has no standard of comparison. It is unique and different. Certainly it carries exceptionally rich qualities of appeal. Color and movement, exquisite photography, a grandeur of settings, vital characters—and a sound theme—these are all in place. It carries imagination and inspiration.

To us "The Thief of Bagdad" is beautifully expressed. It is motion picture art at its highest. It was made by a man who has ideals who has the freedom and the courage to attempt something out of the ordinary. And we'll say that Fairbanks has something to be proud of here—something which everyone who has the screen at heart who is not eternally yelling from the housetops "Will it make any money?"—will point to as a magnificent achievement.

Schertzinger Writes The Music and Directs

Fred Niblo's Metro-Louis B. Mayer picture, "Thy Name Is Woman," playing the Lyric in New York, will have a special music score written by Victor Schertzinger, who has also just been selected to direct Metro's screen version of Charles G. Norris' novel, "Bread."

When Schertzinger directed Jackie Coogan's first Metro picture, "Long Live The King," he also was versatile enough to write the music score for the presentation.

Warners Completing Last Eight of Schedule

WARNER BROTHERS are rapidly whipping into shape the remaining eight of the "big eighteen" productions which make up their 1923-24 program. One of these eight is about finished, two are in work and the other five shaping up. Jack L. Warner, production manager, hopes to have the eighteen completed before summer, so that the twenty productions constituting the 1924-25 schedule can proceed without delay.

"Broadway After Dark" will be released following the premiere of "Beau Brummel" at the New York Strand. "How to Educate a Wife" and "Babbitt" are in production. Following them will be "Lovers' Lane," "Cornered," "The Tenth Woman," "The Age of Innocence" and "Being Respectable."

Political Slides Restricted by Kansas City M. P. T. O. A.

At a meeting of the Kansas City Division of the M. P. T. O. A. in Kansas City at the organization's headquarters, it was decided to place a restriction upon the use of political sides in theatres of the association.

Before a candidate for office can enter into contract for the showing of a slide he, or she, first must fill out a questionnaire, to be supplied by the exhibitor and printed by the organization.

"We believe such action is nothing more than fair," A. M. Eisner, president, said. "If a candidate favors legislation which is detrimental to the motion picture industry, or opposes just and fair legislation in behalf of the screen, why should we use our screens in his behalf, even though we do receive remuneration for it? The amount of remuneration for the running of slides is small in comparison to the damage a prejudiced or unfair office holder can do."

These exhibitors were appointed to serve on the joint board of arbitration of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade: A. M. Eisner, Broadmour theatre, three months; J. H. Blender, New Centre treatre, six months, and Jay Means, Murray theatre, one year. In three months a new member will be appointed on the board, also at the end of six months and a year. It also was decided at the meeting to aid a city-wide drive of the Girls' Hotel, a civic institution, for $50,000 by using slides on the screens of member theatres.

Innovations Promised in "Cytherea"

Color Photography Will Figure Prominently in Samuel Goldwyn Production

COLOR photography will play an important part in "Cytherea," the Samuel Goldwyn production which George Fitzmaurice is directing for First National release. It is said that three distinct innovations will be introduced.

The first novelty will be a prologue showing "Cytherea" as the mythical Goddess of Love of the ancient Ionians emerging from her shell in a storm-lashed sea. A new technical discovery permits a soft color, misty focus effect which gives full play to the vari-colored tints caused by the sunshine in hitting the water, and reflecting the full figure of "Cytherea."

The second effect, synchronizing with the dramatic climax of the film, will be in full sharp color. This departure harmonizes with the theme and action of "Cytherea," revealing to audiences the full impact of the glowing and colorful romance the lovers conjure up in their own imaginations when they arrive in Cuba. The succeeding shots are in dull grays and full blacks.

The third effect showing the death of "Cytherea," will be done in an entirely new manner, to make its appeal beautiful rather than sorrowful. The color scheme to be used in this scene has not been divulged.

This production will carry the title "Cytherea," with the added sub-title, "Goddess of Love."

The idea back of this move is to acquaint the photoplay public with the fact that like Venus of Rome, and Aphrodite of Greece, "Cytherea" represented in symbolic form the highest and noblest expression of love of the ancient Ionians.

"Cytherea," which is an adaptation of Joseph Hergesheimer's famous novel, is a drama of high society, reflecting the theme that the spirit of these three love goddesses still lives in the hearts of the modern society women.

First National will release this photoplay in the spring when, it is generally supposed, the Love Goddesses have their open season.

"Sundown" Cast Journeys to Mexico Soil

Bessie Love, Mary Carr and Hobart Bosworth of the "Sundown" cast, have started for Mexico to picture outdoor scenes for Earl Hudson's drama for First National.

Laurence Trimble is director and Sylvia Breamer is featured. Besides the three visiting Mexico the cast also includes Roy Stewart, Tully Marshall and Charles Murray.

One of the big scenes in preparation is said to be the actual emigration of 250,000 cattle across the Rio Grande.

Extensive Plans For Beau Brummel

Warner Brothers Organize Touring Companies For Presentation on Road

EXTENSIVE plans are being made by Warner Brothers for sending out several touring companies with "Beau Brummel" in which John Barrymore is starred. The New York premiere is scheduled for the Mark Strand on March 30.

Preliminary to this program Sam E. Morris, general sales manager of Warners left last week on a transcontinental tour of the company distributing centers to discuss details for the presentation of "Beau Brummel" and "The Marriage Circle."

The initial company of "Beau Brummel" opens at the Lyceum Theatre, Baltimore, Md. on Mar. 24th. at a scale of prices running up to $1.65. This unit which is complete in every detail and carries an advance man, company manager, scenic equipment, performers for an atmospheric prologue and orchestral score for twenty-two musicians is being handled by L. Berman of the Independent Film Co. of Philadelphia, and a second company will be sent by Mr. Berman to open simultaneously at the Lyric Theatre, Allentown Pa.

Mr. Morris will make arrangements for other "Beau Brummel" companies to radiate out from various points and it is probable that thirty or more companies may be presenting "Beau Brummel" within the next few weeks.

It is planned to have the companies operate under the immediate jurisdiction of the various Warner franchise holders and under the general supervision of the Warner Bros.

In addition to the openings already announced the fact was made known that "Beau Brummel" will have a pre-release extended run at Orchestra Hall, Chicago, with other important Illinois towns to follow.

According to the present schedule, Mr. Morris plans to make his first stop in Chicago, after which he will go to Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St.Paul and Seattle, thus completing the first half of his itinerary. On the trip home, Mr. Morris will visit the Portland, Denver and Kansas City exchanges.

Hodkinson Western Chief Honored By Drive

The week ending March 15th was celebrated as "Vogel Week" by the Western Division of the Hodkinson Corporation in honor of the third anniversary of Sol Volge's association with the company as Western division manager.

Instead of showering him with flowers and telegrams of congratulations in the stereotyped custom the sales force instituted a sales collection drive as an honor that he would appreciate more than words and tokens.

Woods Makes Additions To Hodkinson Cast

The cast supporting Dorothy MacKaill, as the star of the first Frank E. Woods' production for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, has been enlarged by the addition of Joan Standing, Tom O'Brien and Danny Hoy.

William M. Vogel, who is handling the foreign distribution of the Hodkinson releases.

Smith Starts Work On New Hoxie Production

Clifford Smith has begun the filming of his second Universal feature starring Jack Hoxie, "The Back Trail," from a western by Walter J. Coburn.

The continuity was written from Coburn's story by Isadore Bernstein.

The company will spend several days in the studio filming interior scenes and then go to Lone Pine in the Sierra Nevada mountains of Southern California for exteriors.

The supporting cast includes Eugenia Gilbert, Claude Payton, William Lester, Alton Stone, William McCall, Pat Harmon and Art Manning.

Doug, Mary See Premiere Of Jack's "Hill Billy"

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks took sufficient time last Monday evening from arranging for New York showings of their own pictures to attend the premiere at the Broadway of Jack Pickford's new photoplay, "The Hill Billy", being released by Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation, a United Artists subsidiary.

While Miss Pickford aided her brother in the selection of the story for the film, neither she nor Doug had ever seen "The Hill Billy" as a finished product.

Playing opposite Jack Pickford is Lucille Ricksen. Others in the cast are Frank Leigh, Ralph Yearsley, Jane Keckley, Snitz Edwards, Malcolm Waite and Maine Geary.

De Mille Completes Work On "Triumph"

Cecil B. DeMille has concluded production on "Triumph," Jeanie Macpherson's screen play founded on May Edginton's Saturday Evening Post story with Leatrice Joy and Rod La Rocque in the featured roles.

"Down To Sea In Ships" Pays Third Dividend

The chests of the Hodkinson salesmen expanded with permissible pride this week when the financial statement of the Whaling Film Corporation, producers of "Down to the Sea in Ships," was made public disclosing declaration of the third dividend to its stockholders

According to mathematical sharks this third dividend makes a total of profit equal to the price originally paid for the stock

Hoot Gibson Starts Work On New Comedy

Hoot Gibson has just started work in a new comedy feature at Universal City under the direction of Edward Sedgwick. The picture, tentatively titled, "Broadway or Bust," will be filmed from an original story by Sedgwick and Raymond L. Schrock.

Ruth Dwyer will play the lead opposite Hoot in the picture. King Zany is the only other member of the supporting cast so far selected.

Virgil Miller, veteran cameraman of the Gibson-Sedgwick unit, will photograph the production. Roy Greiner will handle the Akeley camera for the troupe.

Epic Signs Contract For Hepworth Product

Contracts were signed this week by Edward Grossman of Epic Film Attractions, Chicago, and Hepworth Productions, Inc., whereby the former obtain the rights for the entire Hepworth product to be released this year for Northern Illinois and the State of Indiana.

The seven productions secured by Epic for release before August 1924, are: "Lily Of The Alley," "Mrs. Erricker's Reputation," "The Pipes of Pan," "John Forrest Finds Himself," "The Amazing Quest," "Mist In The Valley" and "Justice Raffles."

Shirley Mason Feature Is Started by Fox

"The Strange Woman," is the working title of the latest Star series attraction featuring Shirley Mason which was started this week at the William Fox West Coast studios. It is an original story by W. J. Hulburt, the author of several Broadway stage successes. Edmund Mortimer is directing the production from a scenario by Charles Kenyon.

Theodore Von Eltz, will be seen as the leading man for the star. Harold Goodwin and Charles Coleman are the only other principals selected. The remainder of this cast will be announced next week.

Warners In Roundup For New Story Material

Warner Brothers are concentrating their energies in an intensive round-up of meritorious story material.

To date they have announced the purchase of two books, "The Dark Swan," by Ernest Pascal and "A Lost Lady," by Willa Cather. Several other popular stories are under consideration.

ALL THE BIG STARS WILL BE THERE. T. N. T. MARCH 29.

Associated Gets Rights to "Chechakos"

J. S. WOODY, general manager of Associated Exhibitors, announces the purchase by the concern of all rights to "The Chechakos," which is said to have been two years in the making in Alaska. It is declared to be a history of the great Northwestern country. Captain Austin E. Lathrop and Lewis E. Moomaw concluded the negotiations with Associated.

Curran Is Foreign Sales Chief For Arrow

Dr. Shallenberger, President of Arrow Film Corporation has appointed Thomas A. Curran foreign sales manager.

Curran has been identified with the motion picture industry since 1915, when he joined the Thanhauser forces in the production end.

After going through various branches, he joined the sales force of Arrow Film Corporation about three years ago as Special Representative, in which capacity he covered a vast amount of territory.

Mr. Curran has been around the world several times as manager of Road Companies and is, therefore, fully conversant with theatrical conditions in all countries.

"That Man From Arizona" Now Being Filmed

Production work has started on "That Man from Arizona," the first of a series of eight pictures produced by F. B. O. at its studios, co-starring Dorothy Revier and William Fairbanks.

The series is under the direction of Alvin J. Neitz. The second production of the series will be "Down by the Rio Grande." According to announcement "That Man from Arizona" will be ready for release on April 15th.

Trade Showing Arranged on "Girl Shy"

A special trade showing of Harold Lloyd's latest comedy for Pathe, titled "Girl Shy," will be given at Loews New York Roof on Friday, March 28th, at 2 p. m. A special program has been arranged for the occasion, including music by Ernest Luc's orchestra. The Pathe office advises there will be no other trade showing of the Lloyd comedy in the New York territory.

He will visit a number of the key cities between Chicago and New York, to confer with members of the branch organizations and with leading exhibitors.

C. B. C. Will Present Eight Columbia Pictures

THE C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation will present eight Columbia pictures during the coming season. These will be their own feature productions. Joe Brandt has been in Hollywood for some time conferring with Harry Cohn on the plans for C. B. C. production expansion.

Most of the scenarios have already been prepared, some of them from books of famous authors. Titles, casts and directors will be announced shortly.

Geraghty to Produce Jack Pickford Series

Tom J. Geraghty, scenarist and film supervisor, is to enter the ranks of producers at the Pickford-Fairbanks studios with Jack Piekford starring in his first picture. Piekford and his wife, Marilyn Miller, have returned to Hollywood after an absence of six months and work on the production is to start in the near future.

The first of the Piekford productions has not yet been titled, but it will be a comedy drama along the lines of those first produced by Douglas Fairbanks for United Artists release. Geraghty has been author and supervisor of many of the leading productions of recent years.

Close Essay Contest On David Copperfield

Manuscripts are said to be fairly swamping the home office of Associated Exhibitors on the best essay contest anent "David Copperfield," closing March 31.

It was to interest pupils, teachers and parents in the better type of motion picture that this organization months ago announced an offer of $3,000 in cash for the best essays of 500 words or less, with any boy or girl, in any school, public or private, eligible to compete.

YOUR IDEA

HERMAN LORENCE, manager of the Bellevue theatre at Niagara Falls, N. Y., has been stepping to the front lately with aggressive advertising and exploitation. One of his recent ads is headed: A Few Facts for Those Who Attend the Theatres of Niagara Falls. The copy goes on to state that the Bellevue is right up in the front rank when it comes to showing them the "big ones" as picked by the trade journals, and cites the perfect ventilation, projection, comfortable seats, music, and so on, to show that the Bellevue is the dominating theatre. The ad attracted considerable attention.

On "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "Little Old New York," half page newspaper space was used to good effect.

In presenting "The Hunchback," Lorence engaged a quartette from Toronto, the members of which sang "Ave Maria" at opening and intermission, as well as "The Song of Peace" at the close.

When showing "Little Old New York" he had two men and two women in the costume of the period dance the minuet, then sing old familiar songs. Toward the close of the picture, a tenor, off stage, sang "Mother in Ireland I Hear You Calling." Both prologues were enthusiastically received.

Nearly every picture carries a particular appeal to some certain class. Aim at that class as the nucleus of your campaign.

PUTTING a ladies' barber shop in the lobby of the theatre sounds like a new one in the exploitation line. It was done by the Vendome theatre, Nashville, Tenn., and the occasion was the showing of "Ponjola."

Lobby stunt at the Vendome, Nashville, Tenn., on "Ponjola" (First Nat'l).

There was a particularly appropriate angle in this case, since one of the outstanding publicity points of the picture was the so-called "$10,000 haircut" which Anna Q. Nilsson was supposed to have had in order to play the leading part.

As shown in the accompanying photo, a young lady barber was installed in the lobby, with the necessary equipment, and a free bob was offered to local girls. Attention was then directed to the fact that Anna Q. Nilsson's haircut in "Ponjola" cost $10,000, but here was a chance to get the same thing free.

Just how many Nashville misses availed themselves of the opportunity is not stated, but the novelty of the idea made it a good one time stunt. The expense was naturally not great, and it could not fail to attract its due share of attention.

Remember that your theatre is judged as much by its advertising as by the pictures it shows.

WHEN an exhibitor can obtain active and permanent co-operation from the local schools he has accomplished something, yet that is what has been done by the Rialto theatre, Hillyard, Wash., with the assistance of H. C. Eagles, Paramount exploiteer in the Pacific Coast territory.

In his campaign of assistance Eagles worked on the theory that the school children of today are the supporting audiences of tomorrow. So he sought and received the sanction of the school board to a standing offer from the Rialto management to reward scholarship with theatre passes. According to the plan approved, the division of awards gives to each senior and junior in the High School reaching the highest average in deportment, attendance and citizenship a season pass to the Rialto. A season pass is also given to each senior and junior achieving the highest scholastic honors during the year.

In the grades, a single performance pass is offered to the pupil in each room who has the highest general standing at the issuance of each monthly report card. Then, the room, all grades competing, getting the highest rating each month in attendance, deportment and citizenship will accompany its teacher in a body to a chosen night performance at the Rialto.

The plan has already resulted in the complete eradication of any feeling of hostility toward motion pictures on the part of the school authorities and is proving of tremendous advertising value to the Rialto through the keen rivalry of the pupils.

Keep the theatre staff pepped up as much as possible. Their enthusiasm inside the theatre and out is an asset.

SHOWING what can be done with type and rules in small space, through originality of layout, we reproduce here, actual size, an advance ad on "Through the Dark" used in Chicago newspapers by the Randolph theatre, that city.

It is a clean piece of typography, set up in one type face, Cheltenham, throughout, yet the box-like arrangement in 2-point rule results in a unique spacing that virtually commands attention. This type of thing is not suitable for every day use, but as an occasional attention getter, novelty pays.

Effective two-column ad on "Through the Dark" (Cosmopolitan) at the Randolph theatre, Chicago.

Some small print shops might have difficulty in getting the rule to join neatly, as has been done here, but a little judicious use of plaster of Paris will fix this up without special equipment.

Pick your audiences carefully for special screenings—or there may be an unexpected kick-back.

NOT long since, in this department, the stunt of providing garage space for motorists attending the show was described. A somewhat different angle on this same idea was employed recently by the Broadway-Strand theatre, Detroit, during the showing of "Name the Man."

In this case, a nearby vacant lot was rented for the occasion, and parking space arranged. A conspicuous banner was put up reading:

AND OURS

Reserved parking space for Broadway-Strand Theatre during showing of "Name the Man!" Many local autoists availed themselves of this opportunity to park the car in a convenient place while attending the Broadway-Strand. The idea is one that can usually be carried out at little expense for the week, and might be especially appropriate on a picture with an automobile angle.

Do you keep a clipping file of suitable ideas found in the NEWS? It saves many a headache when mapping out campaigns.

REPRESENTING a new departure in magazine practice, as well as something new in motion picture advertising, an interesting tie-up has been made between the Argosy All-Story Weekly and Paramount on "The Confidence Man."

Novel herald on "The Confidence Man" (Paramount), described in the accompanying article.

This story is now in production with Thomas Meighan as the star, and in the issue of March 15th, Argosy All-Story commences publication of it as a serial. The March 15th issue will bear the cover here reproduced, including a portrait of the star, the name of the story and the announcement that it will be Meighan's next picture.

The picture will be released during the publication of the serial in the Munsey periodical, instead of following months or years later, as is usually the case.

In addition to this tie-up on the cover of the magazine itself, a herald has been made up from the same plates, which is simply a reproduction of the cover. This affords all manner of tie-up possibilities with newsstands and bookstores, which might be persuaded to display them, wrap them in packages, insert them in magazines, and the like. At the same time, properly imprinted, it would provide an interesting and novel herald for general use, being in full color.

This is probably the first instance in which a story has been run serially in a national magazine at the same time it is available for showing as a picture, with the attendant exploitation possibilities.

Ballyhoo street stunts are all right in their place ,but too frequent use of them destroys their value.

THREE competitors who won prizes in the amateur ad-writers contest which was held by The Citizen, newspaper, of Ottawa, wrote the copy for special advertisements of local houses, including Loew's Franklin and Regent theatres, according to the published list of prize-winners on March 1. Contestants chose any firm or enterprise in the city on which to write advertisements and three of those which were chosen as best among hundreds of offerings were for the theatres noted. The ads as written were used in the paper.

In the same issue of The Citizen, Manager Don Stapleton of the Centre theatre had a special combination page on "Fashion Row" which was the attraction for six days starting Saturday, March 1. Many milliners, modistes, shoe merchants and others used space on the page.

Don't overlook your local clubs and organizations when planning your exploitation campaigns.

WITH high advertising rates and a large number of daily papers in which copy must be placed, New York theatrical and motion picture advertising usually tends toward the stereotyped announcement style. Now and then, however, a special Broadway showing results in a campaign with originality and interest.

Such a case is the recent advertising campaign on "Thy Name is Woman," showing at the Lyric theatre, New York. Marc Lachmann, who put over the campaign on the picture, made every effort to strike an original note in the newspaper advertising.

Set into this article is a reproduction of the one-column advance teaser ad used. Unfortunately the depth of the other advertisements prevents their reproduction here, but a brief description will give some idea of the copy used.

Teaser ad for "Thy Name is Woman" (Metro) at the Lyric Theatre, New York City.

A plain type ad, grading down in size from top to bottom, and with a plain border, carried this message: A beautiful woman has more power than a dozen kings and money magnates. Beautiful women control every industry and every effort in the world. Since the days of Eve she has dangled the destinies of a world at her finger tips. Beauty! Love! Hope! Vanity! Frailty! Temptation! Thy Name is Woman. (Then followed the billing).

Another type ad read: If there were no women in the world—There would be no Broadway cafes. Men could get seats in the subway. The daily newspapers would run tobacco ads on page 1. There would be no Ziegfeld Follies. Paris would be nothing but a sleepy village. A. H. Woods would never produce a bedroom farce. Tex Rickard might buy all the fashion magazines and utilize them as house organs for Madison Square Garden. And you would not have the chance to see "Thy Name is Woman." (Followed by billing).

Still another ad carried thumbnail cuts of the two principal players just above center. The billing was below, and above the cuts was this copy: The World's Greatest Lovers—Antony and Cleopatra. Queen Elizabeth and Sir Walter Raleigh. Romeo and Juliet. Napoleon and Josephine. Ramon Novarro and Barbara La Marr.

Another similar ad carried the same cuts and above them: Women crave love—Men demand love—Boys and girls dream of love—Old people look back on love—As the one thing which mattered in their lives—So drink to love with—The world's perfect lovers—etc.

These ads ranged from seven and one-half to ten inches over one column.

Exhibitors Box-Office Reports

FIRST NATIONAL

Eternal City—
A spectacular production with good acting. Good box office attraction. (Middle West.).

Flowing Gold—
Regular melodrama, and our patrons don't like it. Quite a flop. Would have flopped harder if it hadn't been for good exploitation. (Middle West).

Fair picture only, considered commonplace. Receipts helped by weather and advertising were very good. (West).

Her Temporary Husband—
The title of the picture and mouth-to-mouth advertising, in addition to the usual advertising methods, attracted an unusualy large weekly attendance. (Middle West).

Song of Love—
Generally conceded to be below Norma Talmadge's standard, and rather disappointing for that reason. Did only a week here, when all other previous Talmadge pictures have been good for ten days or two weeks in larger houses. That one week was good. (West).

Why Men Leave Home
This picture is full of genuine entertainment. Pleased our audiences greatly. Business big. (Middle West).

UNIVERSAL

Fool's Highway—
We thought it good average picture but business was poor. (Middle West).

An average drawing card which held up good for the week. (Middle West).

Mary Philbin is quite popular, and the picture seemed to please most of the audiences. Business on the second week of the run fell off, however, being only fair, after a good first week. (West).

Hunchback of Notre Dame—
Wonderful picture—Biggest special played here this season. Seats selling two weeks in advance. (Middle West).

Phantom Horseman—
Just the average. Business average. (Middle West).

Pure Grit—
They wouldn't sit through this one. (Middle West).

Ride for Your Life—
Only fair picture. Not good enough to draw big crowds but receipts were helped by publicity stunts and advertising. (West).

Sporting Youth—
This will go good anywhere that Reid's racing pictures used to pull. Well cast and directed with pep. Funny too. It went over big for a week's run. (Middle West).

SELZNICK

Cause for Divorce—
A real audience picture. Wonderful comments from patrons. Worthy of the best houses. Wish we could get more like it. (West).

Defying Destiny—
Got by in pretty good shape with average drawing power. (Middle West).

UNITED ARTISTS

A Woman of Paris—
A good picture with poor business. (Middle West).

PARAMOUNT

Don't Call It Love—
Nothing new, but the old stuff was well done. It didn't do much for us. (Middle West.)

Enemies of Women—
On second run at popular prices this went fine with matinees as big as evenings. (Middle West.)

Flaming Barriers—
The attendance with this one was about up to the usual average. (Middle West.)

Next Corner—
Attempts to advertise the cast and use another title in addition seemed to fail, and the picture was taken off after the first four days of the week's engagement. The picture isn't bad, but just didn't seem to draw. (West.)

A missfire. Fair picture at best.

Business good. (Middle West.)

Pied Piper Malone—
Good picture, considered odd. Box office receipts helped by weather were good. (West.)

Another Meighan success. Business excellent. (Middle West.)

Shadows of Paris—
This picture made money for a week, playing to good crowds. (Middle West.)

Singer Jim McKee—
One of stars very best. Did wonderfully with it against strongest kind of opposition. (Middle West.)

Stranger—
This picture is excellently done. It made a very good week's run. (Middle West.)

Better than the average entertainment—But it didn't go over very well. (Middle West.)

Considered good picture as standing for a moral and a principle. Box office receipts very good. (West.)

To the Last Man—
On second run this picture packed them in. (Middle West.)

West of the Water Tower—
An entertaining picture, with an adequate cast. Not a strong box office picture here, however; business was not quite up to the standard. (West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Greatest Love of All—
Turned them away at every performance. Broke all house records. Wish I could hold this feature over indefinitely. (Middle West).

Luck—
A very satisfactory attraction. (Middle West).

You Are Guilty—
Fair picture that pulled fairly well. (Middle West).

PREFERRED

Mothers-in-Law—

Virginian—
One of the best films ever screened. Patrons and press loud in praise. (Middle West).

WARNER BROS.

Tiger Rose—
They liked it. It was a pretty good week though the first week of Lent had some effect. Good week. (Middle West).

GOLDWYN-COSMO.

Little Old New York—
Did a very nice business on a week's return engagement at popular prices, after having broken all records in a four week run only three months ago. As good as the best of them. (West).

F. B. O.

Judgment of the Storm—
This one is fair and drew normal attendance. (Middle West).

METRO

Fool's Awakening—
A very good film. Receipts were satisfactory. (Middle West).

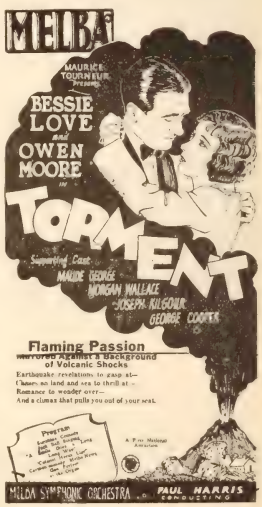
Our Hospitality—
Original and clever comedy which went big with Buster Keaton as the star. (Middle West).

Social Code—
Just an ordinary picture which played to the usual attendance for a week. (Middle West).

FOX

Ladies to Board—
Mix went well in his feature. Good half week. (Middle West).

This Freedom—
Excellent picture but we didn't do as much as the picture should have done. Our patrons want more action. (Middle West).



Three Jumps Ahead—
Good entertainment of its type. Not strong, but sufficiently good to do a nice business here. (West).

HODKINSON

Hoosier Schoolmaster—
Proved a record-breaking attraction. Wonderful film in every respect. (Middle West).

ASSO. EXHIBITORS

Courtship of Myles Standish—
Average picture that pleased. (Middle West).

A. J. Kennedy of the Melba theatre, Dallas, used this art ad on "Torment" (First Nat'l).

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see Motion Picture News —first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

HARRY LANGDON

in Two Reel Comedies

Ask any vaudeville patron who Harry Langdon is.

They'll tell you!

Langdon not long ago was making 'em lie down and roll over, on the big time.

They'd start laughing as soon as his name went up.

"Picking Peaches" showed he brought from vaudeville into pictures two big assets: Personality and Popularity.

Beat 'em if you can!

P. S.—"Smile, Please," is the next laugh-gusher.

TRADE MARK

Guarantee Is Given Out On "Little Old New York"

When the New theatre, Fort Smith, Ark., played "Little Old New York," manager C. A. Lick, Jr., had a guarantee of the picture printed on postcards and sent them out to his mailing list.

The copy, which was gotten up in legal style, read as follows: Guarantee. The management of the New theatre fully guarantees the motion picture triumph, Marion Davies in "Little Old New York," which will be shown the entire week of February 11th, to be a superlative entertainment. If the holder whose name appears on the back hereof, after seeing said picture, is not thoroughly satisfied, or feels he has not received his money's worth; then present this card at box office and money will be promptly refunded. C. A. Lick, Jr., New theatre.

In addition, the greater part of that issue of The Spotlight, the theatre's house organ, was devoted to interesting publicity material and cuts on "Little Old New York."

Striking Exploitation Aids "Where North Begins"

One of the most original campaigns yet reported on "Where the North Begins" was put over by Captain Alfred Davis of the Marble Arch Pavilion in London.

He effected a tie-up with a breeders' dog show, engineered a clever stunt that brought a dozen police dogs to the theatre, and staged a unique lecture presentation. As a result, newspapers devoted generous space to this picture, in which the trained police dog, Rin-tin-tin, has the featured part. The interest in the dog show was transferred in no small degree to the picture showing at the Marble Arch Pavilion.

Auto used as street ballyhoo and lobby display on "Sporting Youth" (Universal) at the California theatre, Los Angeles.

A splendid throwaway was distributed at Cruft's Dog Show at the Agricultural Hall, London, held simultaneously with the showing. This is the greatest event in the calendar of British dog breeders. More police dogs were exhibited this year than any other breed of dog.

A special showing of "Where the North Begins" tendered high officials in the police force and army, attracted favorable publicity. The exploitation did not stop here. Choice specimens of police dogs were brought to the theatre and given seats, while the cameramen photographed them, thus providing more human interest stories and publicity. The manner in which the film was presented was also unique. It was introduced by Major Beddoes, one of England's most distinguished dog trainers; he introduced "Lightning," the highly intelligent wolfdog, who gave a demonstration of the obedience and intelligence characteristic of the breed.

Contest Adds Interest to "Black Oxen" Serial

Manager Jack Kennedy of the Capitol theatre, Peterborough, Ont., has worked out a new way of tying up with a newspaper serialization. The Peterborough Examiner had been running the serialization of "Black Oxen" for several weeks when the Capitol's play day approached.

Through the columns of the Examiner, Manager Kennedy offered passes to the first twenty who could calculate the day on which the final installment would appear in the paper. The newspaper in its announcement of the offer stated that it was a straight mathematical problem and called for experts at figures. Data was furnished so that any ingenious person could arrive at the solution.

The advertising done by the theatre featured a further tie-up with the emphasized line: "See the story you have been reading in the Examiner."

Costumed Girls Ballyhoo On "Little Old New York"

When "Little Old New York" was shown at the Palace theatre, Little Rock, Ark., the management devised a very attractive street ballyhoo.

Five girls were engaged and dressed in the masculine evening clothes worn by Marion Davies as the masquerading Patricia in the photoplay and sent through the streets, with a very tall man who was also dressed in the garb of a century ago. The girls wore high silk hats, and each of them carried a cane.

The group of girls and the man attracted the curiosity of passers-by whenever they appeared on the street.

Winning "Going Up" Fronts Shown

Five Prize-Winning Displays Chosen; Come From All Sections of Continent

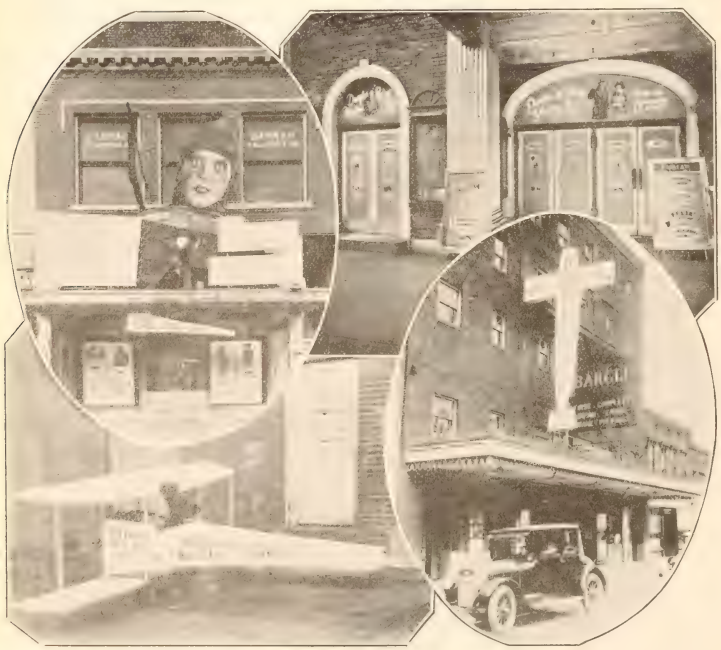
WITH the announcement, last week, of the winners in the "Going Up" theatre front contest staged by Associated Exhibitors, a valuable and stimulating competition came to a close. Many and diverse ideas were submitted, and the winners represent a wide assortment of ingenious material.

First prize was taken by the Strand, Altoona, Pa.; second prize, Strand, Independence, Kan.; third, Bareli, Schenectady, N. Y.; fourth, Capitol, Oklahoma City, Okla.; fifth, Colonial, Tacoma, Wash.

The contest was for the "best decorated theatre front" arranged in connection with "Going Up" showings. The display winning first prize was reproduced in MOTION PICTURE NEWS on Page 544 of the February 2 issue. The fourth prize winner was shown on Page 2887 in the issue of December 22nd, 1923. The other displays are reproduced in the lay-out on this page.

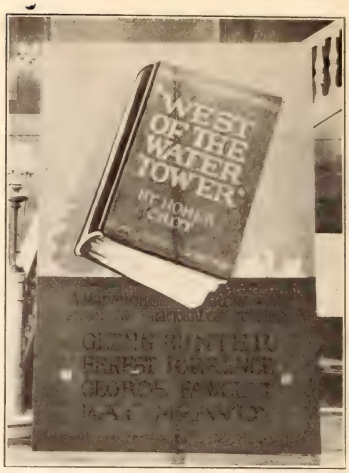
At the Strand Theatre, Altoona, which won the first prize, Manager F. K. O'Kelly arranged a canopy the width of the lobby, painted to give a cloud effect, and with nearly a dozen airplanes seeming to be flying about. At the extreme sides were heads of Douglas MacLean, cutouts from the 24 sheet. Lobby displays and one-sheets were arranged artistically in frames, and other cutouts were used in panels throughout the lobby front.

Much ingenuity was used in arranging the decorations of the Strand, Independence, Kan., winner of the second prize, for there an ingenious mechanical lobby display was used. Let H. L. Davidson, the resident manager, describe the arrangements:



"On the canopy we used a 24-sheet cutout of Mr. MacLean's head, mounted on beaver board and placed on a frame, which allowed the head to rock both sideways and forward. This was done by an eccentric, connected with a large wheel, the wheel being run by an electric motor. We warped the wheel, so that it would give the head a forward motion in addition to the side motion, making a forward and side-rolling motion like an airplane out of control.

"You will note an airplane suspended from the top of the lobby. This was 10 feet long and 10 wide, of white sign cloth. We had a motor turning a propeller on the airplane and kept the airplane moving by a fan placed on the canopy. The small airplane flew in a circle 20 feet wide, and just cleared the heads of people passing along the street."



The central feature of the decoration of the Bareli Theatre, Schenectady, N. Y., third prize winner, was an imitation airplane, placed on end above the marquee, and reaching from the second almost to the fifth floor windows of the building. The name of the star, the title of the picture, and the date of the picture's run were painted on the "machine." Frank X. Breymaier is manager of the Bareli.

H. A. Brownlee's Capitol, Oklahoma City, took fourth prize. The whole canopy above the entrance was made to represent fleecy clouds. An airplane appeared in the clouds, and, at the bottom of a painted panel, were figures standing in front of a hangar and gazing upward. Mr. Brownlee wrote: "The miniature airplane was equipped with an electric motor which operated the propeller, and was secured in the art panel by means of wires from the back, making it appear as though the plane was actually flying. You will note that each person in the 'crowd' is a separate cutout figure."

In decorating his Colonial, Tacoma, Wash., which won the fifth award, Manager Charles F. McManus utilized the entire front, which is 125 feet wide. There were cutouts above each of the entrances and exits, and stills placed in panels in the front of each of the sixteen doors and in frames. Inscriptions above the entrances told the world that "Going Up" is "Funnier Than '23 1-2 Hours Leave'" and "Faster than 'The Hottentot.'"

Free Taxi Rides Are Given As "Reno" Exploitation

For the showing of "Reno," at the Bellevue theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y., the management issued 8,000 tickets good for a ride in a Yellow Taxi and two admissions to the theatre while "Reno" was showing provided the number on the ticket corresponded with one of the winning numbers posted on the front of the theatre.

The winning numbers were posted on Sunday, March 16, the tickets being good for transportation and admission on the afternoon and evening of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Fifty winning numbers were selected and posted in front of the theatre. The crowd around the bulletin board was dense all day Sunday and Monday.

The stunt was a great attention-getter in Niagara Falls. It was taken from a suggestion made by W. R. Ferguson in his Yellow Sheet Exploitation supplement on "Reno."

Circus Angle in Lobby for "Boy of Mine" Showing

Because of the success that attended the circus exploitation of "Circus Days," Manager Frank Steffy of the Coliseum theatre, Seattle, Wash., seized upon the circus episode of "Boy of Mine" to decorate the lobby of his theatre on that picture.

The 24-sheet cutout of the circus display was used in the shell space directly above the lobby.

The selection of the elephant cut-out for this display was an extremely happy selection. It lent atmosphere to the shell space and fitted in with the general staining of the surrounding decorations. Encircled by a glass border, illuminated by several hundred lights at night it was one of the most effective bits of lobby dressing that the Coliseum theatre has had for months.

Front Page Space Given to "When a Man's a Man"

Manager Tod Browning of Gordon's Olympia theatre broke one of his own records when he persuaded the New Haven Union to use front page space in advertising a co-operative competition between paper and theatre. "When a Man's a Man" was the picture at issue and the Union was asking its readers to submit essays on when a man was a man.

While a complete announcement of the competition was given on page 17 of the paper, a front page display advertising box rehearsed the general idea.

Browning has been doing so much in an exploitation way during the last five months that a new idea from him is coming to be a customary thing. His latest triumph, however, marks a step that may induce other newspapers to see the value of using front page space to advertise their theatre tie-ups.

Harry Royster of First National's exploitation staff assisted in the campaign.

Harlem "When a Man's a Man" Ideas

Strong Community Hook-ups Are Made; Local Celebrities Worked Into Drive

ONE of the most pretentious exploitation campaigns projected in the Harlem section of New York is that which was started this week for the engagement of "When A Man's A Man" at Loew's Victoria theatre.

In addition to the many tie-ups which were used so effectively during the engagement at the B. S. Moss Cameo theatre recently, numerous other hook-ups have been devised for the Victoria run of the production.

As a first step a series of short articles has been arranged with the Harlem Home News, the leading community newspaper. These articles are titled, "Men Who Are Men In Harlem," with an introduction denoting that it was suggested by the picture "When a Man's A Man." Another newspaper tie-up has been effected with the monthly magazine published by the Harlem Board of Commerce as to the community spirit of Harlem's prominent citizens. Personal letters are also being sent to members of the Board of Commerce, which organization as a whole is displaying a keen interest in the forthcoming presentation of the picture.

Many of the leading merchants, including Koch & Co., along thriving West 125th street, are using elaborate window displays and the billboard displays have been strongly played up. The "animated books" will be another prominent feature of the campaign, as will the colorful Texas Ranger and the huge book on horseback which evoked interest during the Cameo run.

Calling Card Stunt Boosts "A Woman of Paris Run"

Atlanta awoke one morning last week and found that "A Woman of Paris" had called during the night and left her visiting card without waiting to ring the doorbell.

Howard Price Kingsmore had five thousand cards printed with "A Woman of Paris" across the center where the name usually goes, while in the upper corner was the line "Introduced by Charles Chaplin." In the lower corner of the card it read "Called. Meet me at the Howard."

Novel Review Wins Space for "Black Oxen"

A novel idea for the legitimate acquisition of newspaper space was suggested by Manager Lever of the Isis theatre, Houston, Tex., and acted upon by the Houston Chronicle, when the theatre showed "Black Oxen." A newspaper character, Dr. B. U. L. Conner in the role of censor, wrote the paper's review.

His comments bristled with paragraphs like:

"The next scene shows a woman standing up in a theatre filled with people and turning her opera glasses on the assembled audience. This struck me as being very impolite so I marked this down to be eliminated.

"After she smiles he gets into a taxicab and follows her limousine. The taxicab ought to be eliminated because it is liable to put extravagant ideas into the heads of our young people."

The headline "Doc. Acts as Censor for Black Oxen," two columns wide, immediately caught the eyes of the reading public. The burlesque idea of a doctor acting as censor on the picture, the clever, subtle irony of the review and the complete detailing of the picture's merits at the same time, made it much more readable than a straightaway review would have been.

Newspaper Contest Boosts "Common Law" Showing

The Rialto theatre, of Casper, Wyoming, ran a successful newspaper guessing contest recently in connection with the showing of "The Common Law."

The contest was conducted in cooperation with the Casper Herald. For a number of days before the picture opened, the newspaper printed the picture of the stars in the production, without identifying them. The Herald's readers were invited to make their guesses, and send them to the newspaper. Prizes were offered for the most correct guesses, the first a money prize, and the second and third of long-term passes to the Rialto. The newspaper received thousands of guesses, and the stunt aroused unusual in-

Window display of alarm clocks, tying up with "Sporting Youth" (Universal), arranged by Joe Weil in advance of its New York showing.

Filling Stations Tied Up on "Flowing Gold Run"

M. A. Malaney, publicity manager for Loew's Ohio theatres, and Charles Archbold, in charge of publicity for the National Refining Company in Cleveland, put their heads together and evolved a clever exploitation stunt on "Flowing Gold."

All of the National Refining Company's blackboards in Greater Cleveland were requisitioned for the week and used to link up "Flowing Gold" playing at Loew's State theatre with Enarco, the product sold by the National Refining Company. Four slogans were used during the week, changing them every day. Here they are:

Gold Diggers are not all Miners. See "Flowing Gold" at the State Theatre.

All Oil Wells Are Not Gushers. See "Flowing Gold" at the State Theatre.

"Flowing Gold" is Oil Right. So is Enarco.

See "Flowing Gold" at the State Theatre. Save it here!

And to make honors even, a short reel of a hundred feet, weaving En-Ar-Co slogans into a short comedy, was inserted in the news reel shown daily at the State.

Knee Pants At Premium As "Penrod" Is Shown

A stunt that brought a shortage of knee pants was used when "Penrod" played the Grand theatre, Paris, Texas. Manager Fred Caddel of the boys' department of the Burton-Peel store persuaded the store to give a free showing and then had the school superintendents, both of Paris and Lamar counties, announce it at all the schools. Boys in knee pants were admitted free as the store's guests and there were 756 who lined up the morning of the showing.

The stunt was another outgrowth of the Penrod Clothes, tie-up arranged with Wiener Brothers, the manufacturers, by First National's New York office.

In addition to the newspaper and word of mouth advertising that the picture got for the store, it also furnished the boys' department with a valuable mailing list.

Vials of Oil Given Out as "Flowing Gold" Stunt

An appropriate and interesting street stunt was used by Manager G. R. Stewart of the America theatre, Casper, Wyo., recently, when playing "Flowing Gold" at that house.

Manager Stewart put a man on the street in full dress, silk hat and all, who carried a satchel full of small homeopathic vials filled with crude oil. The oil was real, and came from the Salt Creek field in Wyoming. Many kept them as souvenirs, permanently reminding them of the America. As oil was also the theme of the picture, the tie-up was apt.

Governor's Endorsement Is Aid to "Scaramouche"

Getting the endorsement of the governor of the state on a picture is something not done every day, but it was accomplished recently by J. H. Stelling.

Stelling is manager of the Rex theatre, Spartanburg, S. C., and when "Scaramouche" came to his house he obtained an endorsement of the film from the Governor of South Carolina. Needless to say, he played it up prominently in all of his advertising.

When the Imperial theatre, San Francisco, played "Under the Red Robe (Cosmopolitan) a local store was induced to give this lavish window display.

Studio Briefs

"Between Friends" Finished

J. Stuart Blackton has finished the filming of the Robert W. Chambers' novel, "Between Friends" with Lou Tellegen, Norman Kerry, Anna O. Nilsson and Alice Calhoun, and the print is now at the Brooklyn laboratory of Vitagraph.

Vitagraph's second Charles E. Blaney production, "The Law Forbids," "The Woman," is now being sent to the branch offices for release. Cullen Landis and Mildred Harris are featured.

May McAvoy, Who will Appear in "Tarnish," Samuel Goldwyn Production for First National Release

Hunt Stromberg has notified the Hodkinson organization that "Desert Rose," the second picture in the Harry Carey series will be completed by April 1st.

Mae Murray and Robert Z. Leonard left for Coronado after completing "Mademoiselle Midnight" for Metro and will later go abroad to film "Circe."

The first print of Dick Hatton's Arrow-Great Western, "Two-Fisted Justice," has arrived in the Arrow home office.

Claire Windsor Is Back

Claire Windsor is back in Hollywood. She left about six months ago to play the leading role in Edwin Carewe's "Son of the Desert."

Anita Loos is back in Hollywood, and working on a scenario for Constance Talmadge.

Ruth Clifford has returned to Hollywood from New York.

John Rolfs arrived from New York to begin his work as business manager for the Hunt-Stromberg Productions.

Lew Cody was principal speaker at the Kiwanis Club Luncheon given last week at the Hollywood Athletic Club.

Bess Meredyth has completed the script "Judgment," a story which is to be the next Fred Niblo production for Louis B. Mayer for Metro release.

Aileen Pringle is in San Francisco with her father, George W. Bishee, who is seriously ill.

Edward J. Montagne, scenarist, has opened offices in the Levinson Building, Hollywood and is preparing the script for the coming Fox Special "The Last of the Duanes."

New Producing Company

At the Goldwyn Studios Robert Bradbury is directing a feature picture for Sunset Productions, a new producing company. The picture has not yet been titled.

Film rights to "The Tree of the Garden," a novel by Edward C. Booth, English author, have been purchased by the Goldwyn Company. The story will be filmed by Victor Seastrom.

Marshall Neilan has resumed production of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" at the Goldwyn Studio after an attack of appendicitis which confined him to his bed for four days.

Sol Lesser, President of Principal Pictures Corporation, is contemplating the filming of an educational super-production, to be made on the same elaborate scale as any of the big photoplays and to be roadshowed like "The Covered Wagon," "The Birth of a Nation," etc.

Lloyd Hamilton is resting following the completion of his latest production, "Good Morning."

"Lady Fuzzie" one of the two trained cats in the movies is playing the "feline lead" in Jack White's current juvenile comedy, featuring Johnnie Fox, Jr.

Sunshine Hart, is appearing with Lige Conley in his current Jack White comedy.

"Wandering Husbands" directed by Wm. Beaudine and featuring James Kirkwood and Lila Lee was previewed at Bards, Hollywood Theatre.

Director Victor Fleming and cast are in San Francisco for the filming of the "Code of the Sea."

Irvin Willat to Boston

Upon the completion of the filming of "Wanderer of the Wasteland," a Zane Grey novel, Irvin Willat will leave for Boston, where he will cut and edit the picture at the laboratories of the Technicolor Process.

Estelle Taylor is looking forward to a long vacation at her home in Wilmington, Del., with her mother when she finishes "The Wise Sap" which she is now making in San Francisco for Max Graf and "The Wildcat" the George Melford production, awaiting her return to Hollywood.

Josie Sedgwick, playing the part of Ninon in the Tourneur-Lever production of "The White Moth" for First National, is rounded to her home with an attack of influenza.

Esther Ralston, appearing with William Duncan in Universal Serial, "The Free Trader."

Virginia Valli, Universal star who has just returned to Universal City.

Edward J. Montagne, who wrote the screen version of "Painted People," First National production featuring Colleen Moore, recently celebrated the twelfth anniversary of his entrance into the motion picture business. Montagne started in 1912 with the old Vitagraph company in the days when Norma Talmadge, Maurice Costello, Clara Kimball Young, Earle Williams and many other favorites were making one and two reelers.

Lloyd Hughes has returned to the cast of Frank Lloyd's First National epic "The Sea Hawk," following fifteen days of severe illness caused by a cold.

James C. Davis, who succeeded William G. McAdoo as government railway supervisor, visited Frank Lloyd Producer of the "The Sea Hawk" as a guest of Milton Sills.

Four hundred and seventy-seven members of Los Angeles French colony turned out in evening attire for a scene in Maurice Tourneur's "The White Moth" at the request of Mr. Tourneur in order that the American public might get an exact and accurate notion of the conduct and manners of French people.

Comedy scenes from Educational's short subject "Family Life"

Buddy Messinger stars in "The Young Tenderfoot," the third March Century Comedy released through Universal.

Short Subjects Commanding Space

Now Vying With Feature Pictures for Comment By Newspaper Reviewers

NEWSPAPER critics are taking the short subject more seriously than they did a year or two ago. Where they were previously overlooked entirely they seem now to be vieing with features in many instances, and frequently are getting even more space than the longer pictures.

An example is contained in the March 12 issue of the Cleveland Press, written by the editor of the Sunday motion picture page. Under a six column head Mr. Davis, who conducts the page, devotes almost a full column to a write-up on Dorothy Devore, of the Educational-Christie Comedy forces, and her latest picture, "Getting Gertie's Goat." Davis writes:

"It is with relief that one encounters Dorothy Devore in 'Getting Gertie's Goat' at the Allen this week.

"Dorothy Devore is that rare creature of the comic movies, a merely good looking girl who spends no time trying to look beautiful and resorts little to any denial of good looks for comic effect."

In the March 10th issue of the Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune the following criticism appeared:

"The lowly Ant steals the honors on the week's bill at the Strand. And what's an ant got to do with the films, you ask. Just this. Some enterprising scientist thought that a series on insect life would prove of interest if shown on the screen under a powerful magnifying glass. Accordingly Tolhurst decided to produce these pictures as a screen novelty. We got the first of the series at the Strand this week.

"'The Ant' is its title and it shows the complete life of the familiar pests of picnic parties. The insects have been magnified thousands of times and one is enabled to become thoroughly acquainted with them and their habits during the showing of the film. Yesterday's audiences thought so much of the picture they applauded it."

W. Ward Marsh, critic of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, devotes a half column of his space to his comments on "Plastigrams," the new "Third Dimension Movie" produced by the Ives-Leventhal process and distributed by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. Mr. Marsh hails the third dimension effect as the forerunner of new developments in the screen art and devotes the balance of his article to a description of the picture.

"Plastigrams" also won a long article under a two column head in the Dallas Dispatch. The writer predicts that in time all motion pictures will be made to include the third dimension effect.

Rogers, Langdon Comedies For Pathe Release

Pathe will release a number of short subjects on March 30th. Principal among them will be a Will Rogers comedy titled "Big Moments From Little Pictures," in which Rogers will burlesque Doug Fairbanks and Valentino in scenes from their pictures, and Harry Langdon in "Shanghaied Lovers."

In addition there will be the fifth number of the Indian Frontier Series, titled "The Dirty Little Half-Breed," a single reel Charles Chase comedy, "The Fraidy Cat," and the second chapter of the serial "Leatherstocking."

Pathe review No. 13 offers Cathedrals of the World, Bird Millman walking the wire, views of Denver Mountain Park, and a color study of the shores of Brittany.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Shanghaied Lovers"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

AFTER being married at the church the young bride and groom miss their honeymoon ship and while on the dock they are shanghied by a vicious old sea captain, portrayed by Kalla Pasha.

Mack Sennett cast Harry Langdon as the groom and Alice Day as the bride and this comedy is well mounted. Most of the action takes place on shipboard and slapstick is resorted to continuously.

Some people may be able to see comedy in a row of apparently sea-sick men leaning over a rail but such a scene is revolting to many and should not be too prolonged, as in this picture.

The bride escapes the captain and disguises herself as a male stowaway. A squall and a bunch of rocks finally wrecks the ship and the hero and heroine are discovered in the single floating cabin at the fadeout.

This will get by where they like their comedy rough but will never make a hit with the too fastidious audiences.—TOMHAM.

"Big Moments from Little Pictures"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

WILL ROGERS shows that he is a real travesty artist when he burlesques several big scenes from successful feature pictures.

Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood" is one of the oustanding impersonations and a great deal of comedy is derived from the bull fight when the star appears as Rudolph Valentino in "Blood and Sand."

He then introduces a little pathos when he portrays the return of the son to find his mother scrubbing in the poor house. This is from "Over The Hill." The comedy burlesque on comedy affords the most laughs and fast action. Here is where Rogers portrays Ford Sterling with a gang of "Keystone Cops" in support.

The trick stuff is shown and many glimpses are pictured of the cameramen at work taking the scenes. Mr. Rogers introduces each scene as if he were appearing in the Follies, and intersperses his announcements with clever rope jumping. This one should register pleasantly anywhere.—TOMHAM.

"Fraidy Cat"
(Pathe—One Reel)

CHARLES CHASE is ably supported by the kids from Our Gang in this Hal Roach comedy and it gets by in fairly good shape.

He is the village coward and even the kids have him scared to death. But when his fiancee's father, a doctor, tells him that he will die in a week he determines to pass his few remaining days as a courageous man.

He whips the town bully and chases the kids until he inspires fear in their hearts. Then he learns that the doctor meant that he should "diet" a week instead of "die."

But not before he had redeemed himself and won the girl. A breezy light comedy.—TOMHAM.

"That's Rich"
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

ARTHUR TRIMBLE, foster child of an ill-bred family is forced to do all the dirty work around the house and in the work shop and is hardly given enough food to sustain him. One day a stranger imparts the news to the foster father that the boy is to inherit a million dollars.

Cliff Bowes, Virginia Vance and Sid Smith in "Bargain Day," an Educational-Cameo Comedy.

Immediately the youngster is showered with attentions, is given the best of food and is no longer permitted to do any of the chores. A week later, upon looking out the window the foster-father discovers the stranger in the hands of several keepers. The tough times start again for the boy. He runs away, is pursued by the foster-father and escapes when the latter is blown up in a blast. There are a few comedy situations, but altogether the story is rather a poor one.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Family Life"
(Educational—Two Reels)

ONE of those California bungalows built overnight and apparently to last overnight provides most of the fun in this Mermaid comedy. One half is occupied by the Duffs and the other by a police sergeant and his wife. Attempting to hang a picture, the wall gives way and Duff falls into the next apartment, thus arousing the jealousy of the police official.

The Duffs are compelled to retire from the bungalow by an irate landlord. They erect a tent on the beach where Duff is again unwittingly thrown with the sergeant's wife. Duff later is in the line of fire between the police sergeant's squad and the desperado, Gypsy Joe. Compelled to retreat one way or the other he surprises Gypsy Joe and his band and captures them, for which he is decorated by the police sergeant. This good story abounds in humorous situations. —CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Barnum Junior"
(Educational—Two Reels)

THIS is another of that good series of juvenile comedies with Johnnie Fox, Jr., in the principal role. It has to do with the new boys troop and the first meeting called at Johnnie's home. His father is the victim of the pranks of the members. The real action comes, however, when the youngsters decide to put on a charity circus, for which they commandeer all of the dogs in the neighborhood. Johnnie is the ringmaster and some of the stunts pulled are real humorous. It is a picture that will get laughs most anywhere.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"The Dirty Little Half-Breed"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

AN Indian squaw who married a Spaniard tells this current story of Indian Frontier Series, and the action takes place around her son, a half-breed.

The half-breed is abused and hazed unmercifully by the ranchers and a white girl befriends him. One of the youth's tormentors leads her to believe that he will help the half-breed in order to get into her good graces but kicks him out instead.

When this renegade white man leaves after a successful wooing of the girl he finally writes that he must prolong their engagement as he is going to Australia.

The girl is prevented from committing suicide by the half-breed who vows to find the man. As the girl faints the man returns with several ranchers and thinking the half-breed has attacked the girl they all start firing.

Here is where the big dramatic scene of the picture takes place. In the face of all the gunfire the gritty half-breed bears in against his attackers until he is able to throw a knife into the renegade white man.

This one holds its own and is about on a par with the preceding releases in the series.—TOMHAM.

Pathe Review No. 13
(One Reel)

BIRD MILLMAN introduces her famous wire walking act in this issue of the Review, both in normal and slow motion, and it is very entertaining. "Cathedrals Of the World" show some picturesque scenes around Cologne.

Many wild animals are shown, including buffalo, and elk in "Mountains of Refuge." The scenes are taken in Denver Mountain Park, Colorado.

The Pathecolor shows views of the shores of Brittany and the subject is entitled "The Harbor."

This number should be a completely satisfying filler on any program.—TOMHAM.

"Bargain Day"
(Educational—Two Reels)

MUCH of the comedy in this one takes place in an elevator in a department store where a bargain sale is in progress. Sid Smith, Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance supply the fun. Geoffrey in his efforts to pursue his suit with Hazel, in the silk department becomes the victim of the masses in one elevator after another. Always the last one out, the incoming mob invariably jams him back in. His antics provoke many a laugh. Bowes and Smith both do some lofty tumbling stunts and keep the action at high speed throughout.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Ship Ahoy"
(Universal—One Reel)

SLIM SUMMERVILLE and Bobby Dunn, jealous of the attention the sailor boys receive from the fair sex conceive the idea of renting uniforms for themselves. Slim gets one stolen from an officer and finds himself in difficulty when the officer appears at the house where he is calling. Slim swaps suits with Bobby and the latter is imprisoned for impersonating an officer. Slim gets tangled up with the guard and is also taken in, while the fair damsel reposes in the arms of the real officer. The comedy and story are both below the standard.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Release Reviews of Features

The Blizzard

(Fox—5890 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

CHARACTERISTIC of the Swedish importations, this picture borders upon tragedy. It is a morbid story — an adaptation of a story by Dr. Selma Lagerlof, winner of the Nobel Prize for Literature. With those who have followed American photodramas for several years, they will see in this a feature reminiscent of the early days of the screen when it was in a state of experimentation. There is no question that Dr. Lagerlof's story is much better entertainment in its original state.

As a picture its value rests chiefly upon the pictorial side, though there is presented a forceful climax when a herd of reindeer stampede over the white wastes of the Northland. This scene is truly spectacular — one which will leave a definite impression in the mind of every patron who sees it. This herd is shot in immense numbers — and as they dash panic-stricken through a furious snowstorm and plunge into a turbulent stream, with the helpless hero being dragged at the heels of the leader, one is afforded a scene which thrills with its realism.

There is a romantic issue in the story developed between the hero and a girl who is a member of a band of strolling players. He refuses to follow his mother's advice and strikes out for himself as a driver of reindeer. The tragic experience which he lives through makes him insane though he recovers his sanity eventually. The moments of the youth's madness are rather unpleasant, but then we must consider the Swedes as realists. They present stark realism with this episode. The tender ministrations of the girl in making him balanced again bring in a sentimental finish.

"The Blizzard" is vivid in a majority of its scenes — and its theme is forcefully presented, though toward the conclusion it becomes quite ordinary. The outstanding points are the picturesque exteriors filmed against the frozen wastes of the Scandinavian peninsula, and the wild stampede of the reindeer.

THEME. Drama of broken romance which nearly culminates in tragedy when youth drives herd of reindeer across the white wastes. The frightened animals stampede and the hero suffers a severe mental shock. The romance is renewed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The unusual plot. The realistic touches. The spectacular shots of the stampeding reindeer. The thrills accompanying the stampede. The vivid action. The fine direction and acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. By all means play up the reindeer stampede. It is your biggest selling point. It presents something novel in thrills. Mention the exteriors. Play up the author and emphasize the production and the acting.

DRAWING POWER. Needs heavy exploitation. Will satisfy action lovers everywhere. Good for the average house.

SUMMARY. Here is a story which sticks to its theme and tells a heavy drama of broken romance. It is rather gruesome in places, but it unfolds a most spectacular and thriling climax which puts it above the ordinary release. The finish is quite conventional. But it is realistic, finely produced and capably acted.

THE CAST.

Gunnar Hede	Einar Hansson
Ingrid	Mary Johnson
Madame Hede	Pauline Brunius
The Old Nurse	Teckla Ahlander
Blomgren	Adolf Olachansky
His Wife	Stina Berg

By Dr. Selma Lagerlof. Directed by Mauritz Stiller.

SYNOPSIS. Young Swedish violinist has domineering mother who objects to his musical tastes. He joins a band of strolling players and falls in love with a girl of the troupe. Disheartened over the turn of events he secures a herd of reindeer for the purpose of marketing them in the South. The animals stampede during violent storm and the youth suffers a severe mental shock. The girl eventually restores his sanity by playing to him. Romance triumphs.

The King of Wild Horses

(Hal Roach Production-Pathe—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

A REAL novelty has reached the screen. Exhibitors in search of the "different" and "unusual" can feel perfectly safe in booking this feature which is screen entertainment—plus. The entrance of Hal E. Roach into the ranks of feature producers can be hailed with delight — if this is a sample of what to expect from him in the future. The feature has a horse as its star and you've got to admit that this is a novelty to begin with. And such a horse! Lovers of horseflesh will revel in looking at the work of this animal.

In the first reel there is one of the most thrilling fights imaginable, a battle with The Black, as the animal hero is known, and The White, another wild horse that seeks to lead away the former's "harem" of mares. Realism is added to this struggle in that it is enacted many feet from the camera and far from director or trainer.

Then comes a thrilling series of scenes in which Leon Barry, who has the leading male role of a cow-puncher lover, is shown furiously riding through some wild western ravine and mountain country in an attempt to capture The Black. Just as the wild animal is seemingly caught because of his being on the edge of a deep canyon, the horse stages another supreme thrill by leaping over the divide and evading his pursuer.

Follows then another fine bit of screen craft as the animal plunges into a forest fire — something that really strikes terror to the heart of a horse. The cowboy, at the risk of his own life, is seen leading the horse out of the flames to safety and later, after paying his debt by jumping into a raging river from a high bluff and riding to shore with the cowboy who has been wounded, The Black decides to desert his wild life and serve his rescuer. He assists in bringing a cattle-stealing foreman to justice.

THEME. A western drama in which a wild horse has the principal role. Idea one of service and sacrifice between horse and man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scenes in which the horse leaps the divide over a deep canyon. The rescue of The Black from the forest fire which is also realistically staged. The jump of the horse into a raging mountain torrent from a high bluff. The fight between The Black and The White in the first reel.

DIRECTION. A real directorial masterpiece in which the man behind the megaphone has accomplished things with a horse that would be a credit to a human being. Has packed a wallop with each of the five reels.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Have a man lead a large black horse through the streets, setting forth that this is The Black on his way to the Strand where he is appearing in "The King of Wild Horses." Enlist the aid of local riding clubs. Play up the scenes in which the wild horses fight, in which The Black leaps the canyons and jumps into the river, etc. Tell the folks of the originality of the theme.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for a diversified program or would be an ideal added attraction in the larger theatres. Its originality will appeal to all audiences.

SUMMARY. A feature that should get money anywhere if given a little real exploitation. It is something new under the sun in film offerings. It his thrill romance and adventure. It has a good cast of players. The forest fire is the real thing.

THE PLAYERS

Leon Barry	Frank Butler
Edna Murphy	Sidney D'Albrook
Pat Hartigan	Sidney De Grey
Charles Parrott

By Hal Roach. Directed by Fred Jackman. Scenario by Carl Himm. Photographed by Floyd Jackman.

SYNOPSIS. Shows how a cowboy wins the love of The Black, a wild horse, by leading him out of a fierce forest fire and how in return the horse aids in running to cover a villainous foreman who has been instrumental in much cattle-stealing activity. The Black also plays an important part in bringing the ranchowner's daughter and the cowboy together.

Women Who Give

(Metro—7500 Feet)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

HERE is a homespun drama of a New England fishing village which strikes its customary note of pathos in the blighting of a romance — which strives to point humanities, and most of the time, succeeds — which carries the tang of the deep sea in some authentic shots of men who endanger their lives while their wives and sweethearts weep — which carries a good heart interest and some first rate atmosphere. It is a sentimental pattern, carrying a rather slight plot — which of course makes it dependent upon local color and incident and character drawing for its appealing moments.

The drama that one expects does not materialize — and the director has not developed his dramatic sequences so that they grip. But he has turned out a splendid atmospheric picture — one pointing some exceptionally fine marine shots showing fishing smacks at sea during fogs and storms. One sequence in particular is unusually realistic. It shows a fishing schooner in pursuit of swordfish — and it is said the action was taken off the Grand Banks. Mr. Barker has not overlooked anything to dress this simple plot with colorful backgrounds.

On the other hand he doesn't build his plot in a progressive manner. Come to think of it there isn't much to build. It merely concerns a wealthy fishpacker who refuses to countenance his children's love affairs. His daughter, possessing more spirit than the son, gets away with her romance, but the boy is "shanghaied" by his stern parent to prevent him seeing the lighthouse keeper's daughter. The conspicuous dramatic scene shows this boat reaching shelter when the keeper burns his home — thus furnishing a beacon light.

Meanwhile we look upon a deal of minor incident featuring the taming of the haughty heroine by the rude skipper to whom she is attracted — and some character by-play put over in eloquent style by Frank Keenan as the harsh father and Joseph J. Dowling as an "old salt."

THEME. Heart interest drama spun with romance revolving around sea-faring folks. Idea features conflict when wealthy cod-packer refuses to contenance his children's love affairs with humble villagers.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The realistic atmosphere. The marine shots. The character work of Joseph J. Dowling and Frank Keenan. The appeal of Barbara Bedford and Renee Adoree. The vigorous acting by Robert Fraser. The homspun touches. The climax when boat is wrecked.

DIRECTION. Provides excellent atmosphere and gets fine results from cast. Takes too long in reaching climax—and interest isn't always sustained because plot is perfectly obvious. Has injected interesting incident.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as a sea-faring story, vital and vivid. Explain the title of the wives of sailor-men who give up their men that thousands may be fed. Put on a marine atmosphere for lobby display—and use a prologue featuring sea chanties and dances, etc.

DRAWING POWER. Good for average house anywhere.

SUMMARY. This picture of sailor-folk is cut from familiar design—but it carries appealing homespun touches. Incident is good and acting is excellent. It takes too long, however, in reaching its climax. Is staged with picturesque detail and atmosphere. Free from melodramatic hokum—but situations are over-stressed.

THE CAST

Emily Swift	Barbara Bedford
Jonathan Swift	Frank Keenan
Becky Keeler	Renee Adoree
Capt. Joe Cradlebow	Robert Frazer
Capt. Bijonah Keeler	Joseph Dowling
Ma Keeler	Margaret Seddon
Sophie Higginbottom	Joan Standing
Ephriam Doolitte	Victor Potel
Noah Swift	Eddie Phillips
Ezra Keeler	William Eugene

By Sarah P. McLean Greene. Scenario and adaptation by A. P. Younger, Bernard McConville and J. G. Hawks. Directed by Reginald Barker.

SYNOPSIS. Wealthy fish-packer of fishing village does not countenance his children's love affairs. The daughter loves a youthful skipper, while a weakling son has romance with lighthouse keeper's daughter. When the son is ordered "shanghaied"—the boat is wrecked. The boy is saved and the father sees the light of understanding—and consents to the romances.

Pagan Passions

(Rellimeo Co. Production-Selznick—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

AGAINST the exotic background of the Malay Peninsula, China and other Oriental settings with a shift ever and anon to our own Pacific coast, Grace Sanderson Medine, who gave the screen, "Defying Destiny," has written in "Pagan Passions," a colorful story depicting what life in the tropics sometimes does to white men and women. In this case the hero and heroine go down to the depths after they have let passion get the best of them. Of course, we have seen this theme developed before on the screen, but to the credit of the producers of this feature be it said that they have worked it out in a thoroughly entertaining manner.

The Chinese atmosphere has been realistically built into the picture, especially the interiors of the homes, the monastery as such real Chinese are used and the honky-tonks. Even the roadside shots and shrines are unusually correct in detail.

The picture opens with some dramatic scenes between Frank Langley and his wife which end in the former taking his life. This shooting is well handled. There is more drama when Dangerfield is caught by his wife embracing Dreka, who has picked the former out for her own. Still more comes when Dreka, finding that Dangerfield is about to leave her, stabs him and then sets their place on fire. There are an unusually large number of moments dramatic in this picture and audiences will be kept on the edge of their seats most of the time.

The cast is one of uniform excellence. Wyndham Standing is the successful business man who falls but wins his way back to happiness with the family he deserted. Rosemary Theby does some very good character work in the role of Dreka, especially in the latter reels in the scenes with her grown-up son whom she deserted as a baby. Raymond McKee as the son, Barbara Bedford as his sweetheart, June Elvidge as the divorced wife of Dangerfield, Tully Marshall and Sam De Grasse are all satisfactory in their parts. The picture has been artistically photographed and lighted.

THEME. A romantic society drama laid against Chinese and American backgrounds and dealing with the terrible results which followed the decision of a man and woman to allow their passions to become master of them.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting. The Chinese atmosphere. The scenes in the honky-tonks and the fight between the boy and gang of human wrecks. The heart appeal injected into the story.

DIRECTION. An able piece of work on the part of Colin Campbell, who has succeeded in holding the interest by original development of an not overly original plot. Has his story to a powerful climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of the cast. Dress your lobby in Chinese fashion. Might also dress your girl ushers as Geisha girls. Put on a Chinese dance as a prologue.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for program houses downtown, community theatres and towns.

SUMMARY. A very creditable portrait of life in the Malay Peninsula and other parts of China with white persons enacting a dramatic theme before a background of ever changing Mongolian settings. A picture possessing much in heart appeal. The characters are well acted by a carefully selected cast.

THE CAST

John Dangerfield	Wyndham Standing
Mrs. Dangerfield	June Elvidge
Shirley Dangerfield	Barbara Becford
Billy Dangerfield	Raymond McKee
Frank Langley	Sam DeGrasse
Dreka Langley	Rosemary Theby
Dr. Trask	Tully Marshall

By Grace Sanderson Michie. Directed by Colin Campbell. Photographed by Joseph Brotherton.

SYNOPSIS. Shooting himself following an argument with his wife, Frank Langley leaves her alone in the Malay Peninsular except for a brother, Dr. Trask. On her way to join her brother, the stork overtakes Dreka, but she leaves the baby with a Chinese family and proceeds on her journey later, deciding to keep her motherhood a secret. At her brother's home she falls in love with a married man. They sink to the depths in China's underworld. Later helped back to health, he goes to a Chinese monastery for peace and there adopts a child. The child is Dreka's. The boy is sent to college in America where he meets and falls in love with Dangerfield's daughter. However when told he is a Chinese he goes back to China. There he finds his mother who tells him he is white. All ends happily.

The Night Message

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE feud story comes back for expression here — but Perley Poore Sheehan who concocted it has gotten away from the traditional plot showing the fuedists in a gun battle — with the daughter of one faction bringing peace and tranquility through her love for the youth of the opposite faction. This touch is suggested here but it is never developed because the author handles his story in quite a different way. He builds up to a suspensive climax by showing the hero sentenced to death for a crime of which he is innocent. The scenes involved in this climax are obvious and no originality is expressed in conceiving them. The finish brings a last-minute rescue — when the real assassin confesses.

Leading up to this climax we have a group of characters well planted. The heroine's father still nourishes hatred toward the hero's relatives. And when he catches his gal in a clandestine engagement the boy is horsewhipped. Here comes a novel twist which might have been ridiculous had it been treated carelessly. A telegraph operator while hunting for wild turkeys accidentally kills the girl's brother — a youth gifted in imitating a turkey call — and the hero is accused of the crime. His case appears hopeless even when his mother interviews the governor. But when returning home she dashes into the station for shelter — and the telegraph operator sends a wire confessing his guilt. This scene is melodramatic to the core — and the suspense is piled on when the wires break in a terrific storm. The assassin sacrifices his life in saving the innocent hero.

The picture does not digress from its plot — and it features a different angle from the usual formula. It is an idea which is reasonably life-like until its climax — and Mr. Sheehan in his first directorial effort has demonstrated that his talent is not confined to stories and scenarios. He errs only in allowing his players to overstress their emotions, particularly Edgar Kennedy as the telegrapher who fosses restraint to the winds. Gladys Hulette and Margaret Seddon contribute the most convincing performances.

A first rate melodrama this — one above the usual program offering.

THEME. Melodrama of feudists, revolving around son of one faction being falsely accused and condemned to die for assassination of youth of opposite faction. He gains his liberty when real assassin confesses.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The progressive plot. The first rate atmosphere. The twist in story when hero is arrested for accidental murder. The suspense when hero is condemned to die. The storm scene and the sending of the message.

DIRECTION. Has shown good sense of dramatic values with first picture. Directed his own story—so knew what to do with it. Builds up suspense all the way, even though the conclusion is anticipated. Allows a few players to overact. Gets away from old-fashioned feud hokum.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Might exploit author who directs his first picture. Tell them it is an action melodrama which is logically developed. Play up the climax. Exploit the picture with display lines. Tie up with telegraph stations, etc.

DRAWING POWER. For second run downtown houses. Good for any community theatre.

SUMMARY. This feud melodrama gets away from the orthodox and is developed so that events appear logical. Carries a twist which leads to climax. And this climax is strong with suspense. Rhyme and reason to it—except for theatric ending.

THE CAST.

"Old Man Lefferts"	Howard Truesdell
Elsie Lefferts	Gladys Hulette
Lee Longstreet	Charles Cruz
Mrs. Longstreet	Margaret Seddon
Harney Lefferts	Norman N. Rankow
Hank Lefferts	Robert Gordon
Lem Beeman	Edgar Kennedy
Governor Pringle	Joseph W. Girard

Story and Direction by Perley Poore Sheehan. Scenario by Raymond L. Schrock.

SYNOPSIS. Daughter of feudist loves youth of opposite faction. Her brother is accidentally killed by telegrapher while hunting wild turkeys. Suspicion points to hero and he is arrested and condemned to die. A last-minute confession by telegrapher, who sends message over the wire, saves the hapless youth. The romance is developed and feud ends.

Second Youth

(Distinctive-Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

A RATHER diverting romantic comedy which will not require anyone to exercise his or her grey matter, but which, we are sure, will entertain and give birth to much merriment in any audience. The theme, the making over of a soft boiled silk salesman of distinguished ancestry into a regular, honest-to-goodness assistant buyer, is rich in comedy and the cast develops each humorous opportunity to it limit. The picture is artistically and faithfully mounted, the spectator being taken into the throes of boarding house activities, department store life, dear old Greenwich Village, Long Island hoi-polloi existence and Broadway cabaret jollification. With this wide and varied background, there is used much elaborate scenery as well as natural mountings.

It seems to us that most anyone will find fun in the antics of Mrs. Benson, "who has already wasted three husbands and is not yet discouraged," and who goes after Roland Farwell Francis as her fourth victim. There is also amusement in the situation depicting the decision of Ann Winton to accept the dare of her brother-in-law and invite a man out to supper and for a good time. She picks the silk salesman and shows him a bit of Broadway life, much to his embarrassment at times.

The cast of "Second Youth," is one of uniform excellence, the personnel including a number of well known stage and screen stars. Alfred Lunt as the effeminate salesman does very well. Jobyna Howland is a "wow" as the boarding house mistress. Mimi Palmeri is the heroine and she wears some striking gowns. Walter Catlett is a real comedian. Mickey Bennett of "Big Brother" fame has a minor role. Faire Binney, Lumsden Hare, Hugh Huntley and others of note all do justice to their roles. "Second Youth" is a bit different. Therein lies its appeal.

THEME. A comedy of feature length dealing with the attempts of a chicken hearted, but "beautiful" silk salesman to escape matrimony, until he meets "the" girl who makes a regular fellah out of him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scenes in the boarding house. The department store scenes. The "night out" given the salesman by "the" girl. The Greenwich Village party. The fine cast. The work of Alfred Lunt.

DIRECTION. Has succeeded in carrying out the purpose of the film—to make patrons laugh. Has developed much humor in several of the reels. Has accomplished splendid results with the unusually fine cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of the many stars in the cast. Try and put over a silk window display in your local department store using the photos showing Lunt as a silk salesman and your theatre advertising. Play up the comedy situations. Tell the folks of Mimi Palmeri's beauty.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for first run houses. Will entertain most folks. A picture that makes them laugh.

SUMMARY. A picture that answers the demand for entertainment. There is good comedy here, a splendid cast, a well mounted production and intelligent direction.

THE CAST.

Roland Farwell Francis	Alfred Lunt
Polly, a maid	Dorothy Allen
Mrs. Benson	Jobyna Howland
Rose Raynor	Lynn Fontanne
John McNab	Walter Catlett
George Whiggam	Herbert Corthell
Mrs. Twombly	Margaret Dale
Ann Winton	Mimi Palmeri
Phoebe Barney	Winifred Allen
Weeks Twombly	Charles Lane
James Remmick	Lumsden Hare
Willie, Mrs. Benson's son	Mickey Bennett
Lucy Remmick	Faire Binney
Harley Forbes	Hugh Huntley

By Allen Updegraph. Directed by Albert Parker. Scenario by John Lynch. Photographed by J. Roy Hunt.

SYNOPSIS. Deals with the metamorphosis of a "shrinking violet" sort of silk salesman into a regular he-man assistant buyer. His boarding house mistress and his stenographer try to capture him for a husband but he weds the girl of his choice, also a type who wouldn't flirt until she was dared—and then she went the limit and even invited a man out to supper with her. The man is the silk salesman.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Hill Billy"—Allied Producers, Broadway, New York

World:—One of the most beautiful performances of recent times in the films is Jack Pickford's 'The Hill Billy.' Mr. Pickford's work is so finely timed and so wistfully appealing that we have decided there isn't another young man in pictures who has surpassed him this season in emotional pantomime. This is a picture play which we recommend."

American:—"'The Hill Billy,' is very good entertainment and we might say better than some of the pictures which are heralded as 'super-extra-specials.' It is about the best thing Jack Pickford has made for the screen."

Telegraph:—"'The Hill Billy' is thoroughly delightful and refreshing; polished, well done and intelligent. It is a picture above the average. The photography is exceptionally fine. Its characterizations are apt and interesting, and they all keep you guessing. Jack Pickford is very much at home in his role, and is natural and unaffected."

Herald:—"'The Hill Billy,' starring Jack Pickford, is a good picture, and one of which Mr. Pickford and all engaged in its production should be proud."

Times:—"There is much that is interesting in 'The Hill Billy.' It is the best picture in which Jack Pickford has appeared, and he is sincere in his role of the boy who suddenly finds himself a man."

News:—"One of the prettiest love scenes of the movie season may be observed in 'The Hill Billy,' in which Jack Pickford's characterization is new and fresh and very good."

"Love's Whirlpool"—Hodkinson, Cameo, New York

Times:—"It is to a certain extent mindful of 'The Miracle Man.'"

Herald:—"At times it is especially exciting and at others highly entertaining."

Telegram and Mail:—"An excellent 'crook drama,' held together by a fine cast. Well filmed and the thrills were all there."

Tribune:—"The photography was excellent, the play was well directed and the continuous melodrama afforded many thrills."

American:—"There is much plot, much action and much that is diverting."

Telegraph:—"There is no doubt about the popularity of the combination of Lila Lee and James Kirkwood as co-stars on the screen, and their first picture since their marriage proves an attraction."

Morning World:—"This picture is one of the few entertaining stories screened in the last six months. There is excellent acting by Lila Lee in the role of the crook's wife, and there is even better acting by James Kirkwood as the crook."

Evening World:—"'Love's Whirlpool' has about everything in it."

"Thy Name Is Woman"—Metro, Warfield, San Francisco

Call:—"Hailed as a 'master picture,' this term fits it perfectly. It is going to be termed one of the best pictures of a decade. It is a sincere effort to make a film masterpiece, and Fred Niblo has accomplished it with a finesse that is completely satisfying."

Bulletin:—"In bringing 'Thy Name is Woman' to the screen, Niblo has created a classic that will be long remembered after the usual variety of photoplays have been forgotten. It will do more than anything else to impress the public with the creative ability of Niblo."

Herald:—"If we are clamoring for better pictures, why not welcome those that are worth while? It contains all the ingredients of a really big picture—plot, scenery, setting, direction, superb acting and a story that grips relentlessly."

News:—"A subtle and powerful film. Replete with drama—and its tensity, maintenance of suspense, and abundance of local color set it apart as one of the excellent productions of the year."

Chronicle:—"There is something more than a picture play at Loew's Warfield this week. It is a tragic poem of love, in which the soul of a woman is laid bare."

Examiner:—"Barbara La Marr and Ramon Novarro make a pair of ideal lovers. Miss La Marr makes the Warfield screen, itself, vibrate with the pulsating and conflicting moods through which a woman in love must pass."

Journal:—"Strong, true, and dramatically moving, it certainly takes rank with the better things."

"Scaramouche"—Metro, Strand, Syracuse

Telegram:—"'Scaramouche,' is destined to take its place with the really great pictures of the year. It is a masterly adaptation of a great novel and as masterly picturized. It grips with its perfect atmosphere, rapidly moving action, its tense drama, its equally tense romance."

"Three Weeks"—Goldwyn, Rialto, Washington

Herald:—"'Three Weeks' is another triumph for both director and producing organization. The famous love story has lost nothing in its change to film form. On the contrary, it is one of the most gorgeous romances ever screened."

Evening Star:—"The picture follows the book fairly well—indeed, it does so, more than film versions of novels generally do. The few liberties taken really enhance the story and are helpful to those who have not read the text. 'Three Weeks' is wonderfully staged . . . the acting of Aileen Pringle as the Queen is superb."

Post:—"Bob Long, manager of the Rialto, says he expects to break all box office records with the picture and if the crowds which flocked to the theatre yesterday and last night mean anything, Bob's expectation is in a fair way to be realized. Aileen Pringle does a great piece of acting as the Queen; so does Conrad Nagel."

Times:—"It follows the original Elinor Glyn novel both in letter and in spirit . . . good screen entertainment in this day and age—and, incidentally, splendid box office receipts."

Daily News:—"The thing is impressionistic, really . . . the director dressed it in shimmering fabric and electric moons and here it is. It has dignity! The cast is very good."

"The Extra Girl"—Associated Ex. Palace, Washington.

News:—"Mabel Normand is there. Yes, siree. Nobody can loosen this little star's grip on fame. To see her in 'The Extra Girl' this week at the Palace is to believe it. We honestly say this is the best picture of her career."

Star:—"Mabel Normand's methods in comedy are decidedly individual and effective."

Times:—"'The Extra Girl' is recommended as a cure for blues."

'Maytime'—Preferred, Granada, San Francisco

Journal:—"The film is a worthy representation of the play, a definite achievement in the struggle to make the screen deserving of the support of intelligent people. This picture is charming because the director had confidence enough in his audience to avoid the commonplace and to trust to some inherent sense of values."

Chronicle:—"The present production tells the story fully and beautifully. A good picture, one that you will enjoy."

Bulletin:—"The picture version of 'Maytime' is an entertaining film with the story well worked out. The entire picture is given attractive settings."

Call-Post:—"Maytime" has made a delightful film play. It carries the beautiful story told in interest-holding fashion. Ethel Shannon and Harrison Ford give excellent portrayals of their respective parts."

"Maytime" — Preferred, State, Cleveland

News:—"A glowing example of what is possible in the silent art; perfect acting, an alluring love story and settings as beautiful and enchanting as the time they are supposed to have appeared — Maytime in 1865. Ethel Shannon gives an excellent performance. 'Maytime' is screen entertainment of the first grade."

Plain-Dealer:—"Maytime is a pretty bit of celluloid. It abounds in feminine beauty with Ethel Shannon, Clara Bow and Betty Francisco at the head of the aggregation."

"The Virginian"—Preferred, New Theater, Baltimore

News:—"Kenneth Harlan is big, manly and altogether fine as the Virginian. Florence Vidor is a sweet and lovely Molly. 'The Virginian' comes under the head of good photoplays."

"The Fighting Coward"—Paramount, Rivoli, New York

Tribune:—"Never has James Cruze done a more delightful bit of directing, and Walter Woods is to be congratulated on his perfect adaptation. Ernest Torrence is an absolute joy. So is Noah Beery—It seems as though everyone in the cast does the best work of his career, and surely this is true of Cullen Landis, who plays the fighting hero. We are unselfish enough to want everybody to see 'The Fighting Coward.'"

News:—"'The Fighting Coward' seemed to me to be awfully funny."

Times:—"An hilariously funny entertainment."

Herald:—"James Cruze is the possessor of the keenest sense of humor in the cinema directorial field, and he is at his best in 'The Fighting Coward.'"

Evening World:—"It is fine film entertainment, and thousands seemed to enjoy it greatly yesterday. James Cruze, responsible for the direction of 'The Covered Wagon,' has scored again."

Sun:—"The chef who cooked it up is none other than James Cruze, the same James Cruze whose masterly hand has pushed a covered wagon around the world. The views of the old Southern mansions, the ramshackle gambling halls of Natchez and the lumbering Mississippi river boats would alone make the picture worth while."

Times Square Daily:—"Cruze has turned in one of the best features of the season."

THAT Metro's "The White Sister" is the most artistic and entertaining picture they have ever viewed, is the opinion of the Better Films Committee of Jacksonville, Florida, according to a letter received at the Metro offices last week from Joseph F. Marron, chairman of the committee.

Mr. Marron wrote:

"This is to advise you that at the meeting of the Better Films Committee of Jacksonville held today the members of the committee who saw Lillian Gish in 'The White Sister' were unanimously of the opinion that this is the most artistic and entertaining film that they have had the opportunity of viewing. They commend it most heartily to the public as one most worthy of seeing."

GOLDWYN-COSMOPOLITAN'S exhibitors' press and service book on Elinor Glyn's picturization of her novel, "Three Weeks," is now ready for the trade. The book is physically one of the most beautiful which Goldwyn Cosmopolitan has ever prepared. The cover is a reproduction of the window card showing the beautiful Aileen Pringle on the tiger skin which "Three Weeks" made famous.

The book has been prepared with an eye to the service of the exhibitor. The advertising cuts are most attractive and compelling. In many instances, the same ad is used twice, but with different treatment.

A great full page ad has been prepared, using the still of Miss Pringle and the tiger skin for the cut at the top of the page.

Vitagraph has issued a new twenty-four sheet and compiled a new and supplementary campaign book on "Pioneer Trails." The new billing is a reproduction of the prairie caravan which is attacked and the riders massacred in a thrilling fight.

New advertising illustrations and press stories have been prepared for the campaign book which will have twenty-four pages.

Through a tie-up arranged by Charlie Giegerich of the Hodkinson Corporation with Chappell-Harms Inc., publishers, the latter have recalled and will shelve the present printing of their song, "Miami" and put out a new edition with a special Betty Compson cover.

The new cover design is an artistic pose of Miss Compson in a one piece bathing suit on the shore at Miami under moonlit palm trees with a palatial yacht in the background. An inscription reading "Dedicated to Betty Compson, star in the Man Crosland motion picture production 'Miami,'" distributed by the Hodkinson Corporation is printed prominently on the cover and the title "Miami" is printed in big bold letters across the top of the page, affording conspicuous advertising for both the motion picture and the song.

From the exhibitor's standpoint these new front covers will be in effect displays of especially attractive posters permitting direct tie-ups without trouble or expense. To take advantage of this powerful advertising feature all that is needed is a window display of the songs at the time the picture is being shown.

THE "Beau Brummel" press sheet, fresh from the press this week, is a testimonial to the way Warner Brothers have put themselves out to give the screen version of Clyde Fitch's play a fitting accompaniment in lithographs, accessories and advertising material.

Beside being attractively gotten up, it contains an opulence of practical exploitation suggestions and publicity material. "Dandies of all Days" is the title of a long six-column feature story containing a cut of John Barrymore surrounded by beaux of four different centuries.

Distinction is in every one of the posters; the same applies to the oil paintings, Barrymore and Carmel Myers photographing superbly. Both line and half-tone cuts are offered in the way of scene reproductions.

SPECIAL posters and advertising accessories are being made ready by Vitagraph to exploit "Borrowed Husbands," the picturization of the modern society novel by Mildred K. Barbour which David Smith has just completed. The production lends itself particularly to attractive pictorial billing. Artists are at work upon sketches.

A campaign book is now being compiled which will be profusely illustrated with cuts of posters and other accessories.

WITH the growing adoption of the policy of restricted feature lengths and the increasing use of short-subject attractions on theatre programs throughout the country, Pathe reports renewed interest in a group of one and two-reel scenics being distributed under the collective title of the Oregon Trail Series. These pictures, made by the Kiser Studios of Portland, Ore., embody action themes associated with the great Northwest. There are six subjects in the series, as follows:

"The Price of Progress," a two-reel scenic-drama of the Northwestern timberlands; "Weeping Waters," visualizing a dramatic Indian legend of the Northwest: "Royal Chinook," a portrayal of the high lights of salmon fishing along the Columbia and its tributaries; "Fleeced for Gold," an insight into the Northwestern sheep industry; "The Festive Haul," an actionful and humorous film account of the biennial run of smelts in the Big Sandy River in Oregon; and "Crystal Ascension," showing Mt Hood in all its grandeur of scenic beauty.

WARNER Brothers have issued an unusually attractive de luxe book on their latest release, "Beau Brummel," starring John Barrymore. The book is complete in every detail and splendidly arranged. Its purpose is primarily to aid the exchange manager when he is selling the picture. It is a conversation saver because it tells readily its own comprehensive story. In addition the books are proving valuable as exploitation material, used in the theatre lobbies in advance of the showing.

LARGE and imposing outdoor electrically lighted signs are a feature of the extensive exploitation which is being accorded "Yolanda," the newest Cosmopolitan production starring Marion Davies which is playing at the Cosmopolitan theatre, Columbus Circle.

Four of the largest of these advertising structures within the city limits have attracted considerable favorable comment. The most attractive of these extends the entire width of the New York American building in Columbus Circle and is a combination electric and painted bulletin on which Marion Davies is depicted as an armored knight after the remarkable painting by Lucien Bernhard, the famous Viennese artist. Two other mammoth signs are located at 86th street and Broadway, and 163rd street and Broadway both densely populated districts.

One of the largest of the "Yolanda" signs is located at Park avenue and 134th street on the roof of the Pathe Studio Building.

W. E. SHALLENBERGER, Arrow chief has the following to say regarding serials: "My experience with serials, now called chapter-plays, began with "The Million Dollar Mystery," the success of which marked an epoch in the history of screen entertainment."

"Since then I have been a firm believer in this type of picture, which is proved by the fact that in the past four years we have distributed twelve serials.

"The care used in obtaining a logical common-sense story is well repaid by the sustained interest in the development of the plot week by week. Weak stories disgust the audiences and make for dissatisfaction and loss.

"The really meritorious serial will bring in the audience week after week with a most gratifying increase in the box office receipts. Every exhibitor who has booked good serials and displayed any degree of showmanship in exploiting them will agree that they are consistent profit makers."

BECAUSE of what he termed "a variety of comment" pertaining to the showing of D. W. Griffith's "The White Rose," when this United Artists release was being shown at the Strand theatre, Binghamton, N. Y., an editorial writer of the Binghamton Morning Sun went himself to see the picture. The result of his viewing "The White Rose," brought out the following editorial:

"Many Binghamton people have witnessed the screening at the Strand this week of 'The White Rose,' and a variety of comment has been heard. One note that interested us was to the effect that somehow this is a 'suggestive' picture. Curiosity—we trust not morbid—moved an inspection. It revealed not alone that 'The White Rose' is by no means a 'suggestive' picture, in any sense of the term, but on the contrary, a highly valuable and for that matter a thoroughly conventional picture.

"Valuable, that is, for the spectator who approaches it in a suitable frame of mind. For people prone to skim the surface of a presentation of this character, 'The White Rose,' of course, means next to nothing. The subject is too deep, vital and far-reaching to permit of casual consideration. It demands thought, serious, sober thought. Approached from this angle, Griffith's masterly production is one movie among ten thousand, as movies go nowadays. As for suggestion, it offers nothing of the sort except for those of minds more or less depraved."

IN an official statement concerning the William Fox production of "The Blizzard" which was released February 3rd, the National Board of Review gives exceptional praise to Elinar Hansson, the young Swedish star of the cast, comparing him favorably with the leading male stars of the American screen. "The Blizzard" was adapted from "The Story of a Country House," by Selma Lagerlof, noted Swedish writer, winner of the Nobel prize for literature. Mary Johnson has the leading feminine role.

SOL Lesser, president of Principal Pictures, insists that replies and photographs of Baby Peggy be sent to each of those writing her fan letters. The result of this insistence is said to be that five secretaries are kept at work daily.

Advices from the Coast are that the cutting and titling of "Captain January," Baby Peggy's next picture have been completed, and a print is expected in New York at any time. Among the players in the cast are; Hobart Bosworth Irene Rich, Lincoln Stedman, Harry T. Morey, Barbara Tennant and Emmett King.

An elaborate advertising, publicity and exploitation campaign has been mapped out by the Lessers and Mike Rosenberg, financial manager for Principal. A motion picture edition of the book will be put on the market, as the result of arrangements made with L. C. Page & Co. and Boston, publishers of the original edition.

Seattle

SEVERAL changes in the personnel of the Lannon-Sheffield Greater Features exchanges were announced recently by Mr. Sheffield. Joe L. Connors, formerly associated with the Goldwyn and Metro exchanges in this city will cover the entire Washington territory for Greater Features. Another man in this state will be Art Skoog, who for several years was connected with the Universal exchanges in Butte and Spokane. F. C. Gordon, recently connected with the Famous Players-Lasky corporation will take care of sales in the Oregon territory, working out of the Portland office, and W. E. Matthews, a film man from San Francisco and Southern California has been selected as salesman in the Denver, Colorado, territory. Mr. Sheffield also announced that, effective April 1, the Lannon-Sheffield exchange in Denver would be operated under the name of the Greater Features Exchange, in conjunction with the other Greater Features offices in the Northwest.

Ed. A. Lamb, formerly a salesman for Manager Paul R. Aust's Selznick exchange, returned recently and is now acting as assistant office manager and booker. G. G. Maxey, who is being replaced by Mr. Lamb, is alternating by taking the road for a while, and at present is carrying the Selznick product to the smaller towns and cities in the state of Washington, on a road trip to last a few weeks.

James R. Grainger, general sales manager for the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Distributing Corporation, arrived in town recently on a tour of all his exchanges. He came from the South, and was accompanied on his trip by J. E. Flynn, Goldwyn's district manager in this territory. Louis Amacher, formerly manager of the American Releasing Corporation exchange, and at present Goldwyn's representative in Spokane, spent a number of days with Manager Seth D. Perkins here early in March. From his Eastern Washington headquarters, Mr. Amacher handles that territory, Idaho, and Western Montana, and comes to this office only on an average of once in every two to three months.

Guy F. Navarre, manager of the Fox exchange, and president of the Northwest Film Board of Trade of Seattle, returned to his office last week, after about three weeks spent in California. During his stay in the South Mr. Navarre attended conferences with Fox officials in Los Angeles, discussing plans for the spring and summer seasons.

Fred G. Sliter, manager of the First National exchange, has left the city again—this time on a sales trip to Spokane and other important points in Eastern Washington, where, he reports, business has been quite successful. During Mr. Sliter's absence from this territory, Arthur Gollofon, assistant office manager, is in charge of the local exchange.

H. A. Black, manager of the Vitagraph exchange, has returned to his office after an extended sales tour into the Eastern Washington territory. During his absence he visited Spokane, Walla Walla, and a number of other cities and towns in that district, covering the key points practically to the state of Montana line.

Announcement was received here on Film Row early in March of a number of changes in the ownership of small town houses in the Washington territory. Included among the sales was the purchase by Ray Tucker of a string of three houses, including the theatre at Coupville, formerly owned and operated by G. W. Hasslegrave; the theatre at Oak Harbor, formerly owned by C. I. Adams; and the house at Langley, formerly owned by W. E. Howard. All three theatres are located on Whidby Island.

Charles W. Hardin, manager of the United Artists exchange, returned to the city recently after a short trip around the key points of the Washington territory, including a several days' visit in Spokane.

John Hamrick, owner and general manager of the Blue Mouse circuit of theatres, last week announced that Fred C. Teufel had succeeded William Houck as manager of the Blue Mouse Theatre in Tacoma, following Mr. Houck's resignation early in March. Mr. Teufel was formerly connected with the Blue Mouse organization in Portland, having managed Mr. Hamrick's house in that city for a number of seasons. Mr. Houck has as yet announced no plans for the future.

Tom Williams, connected with the Blue Mouse Theatre here for the last four years, as watchman before the house opened, and as doorman and maintenance man since the opening three and one-half years ago, last week resigned his position with the organization, and after a short vacation intends to enter the hotel business in this city.

Reports received here this week were to the effect that Ed Dolan and William Ripley's new "D. & R." Theatre in Aberdeen was scheduled to be opened the latter part of March. The house has been under construction for a number of months, and will be one of the outstanding houses in the Grays Harbor territory when completed, according to all reports.

Oliver G. Wallace, head organist at Manager Leroy V. Johnson's Liberty Theatre, has been receiving much praise lately for the novelty preludes which he offers with each Liberty screen attraction. After previewing the picture to play the following week, Mr. Wallace composes an appropriate verse and sets it to music for use as a musical introduction.

Southeast

CARL KETTLER'S new Kettler theatre, West Palm Beach, Florida, was formerly opened last week with a representative attendance of honor guests including many film and theatre executives from the Southeastern States and an imposing array of floral offerings and best wishes. Kettler himself was not present, being confined to his bed with a severe attack of pneumonia, but nevertheless, the attendance paid glowing tribute to his showmanship.

It is one of the most magnificent and imposing theatres in the South, rivalling in beauty and splendor many of the more costly edifices in the larger cities of the country. While the cost of building and equipping is around a half million dollars, many experts claim that it has the appearance inside and out of a million dollar structure. It has a seating capacity of 1400, of which 800 are in the orchestra, 120 in the loges and the remainder in the balcony. Carl DuBois of the Atlanta Scenic Company, constructed and installed all stage settings, the lighting equipment and curtains being produced in their Atlanta studios.

The Orpheum theatre, Madison North Carolina, has been leased for a term of five years by Harry Somerville, manager of the Orpheum and Imperial theatres, Greensboro, North Carolina, and will be conducted as a combination picture and vaudeville theatre opening March 17 after extensive alterations. Mr. Somerville will remain in Greensboro employing a manager for the Madison theatre.

Enrico Leide, who has since the first opening of Atlanta's million dollar Howard theatre led the mammoth orchestra therein, goes with Willard Patterson's "Metropolitan," according to announcement made during the past week. Leide enjoys a reputation second to no conductor in the South.

The announcement made last week by R. G. Allen, formerly owner of the Superba theatre, Raleigh, North Carolina, that he had secured a long term lease on the mammoth new Temple theatre, Birmingham, Alabama, came with interest to the entire industry of this territory. The Temple was built by the Masons of Birmingham, but has not been operated since its completion six months ago. It has a seating capacity of 2800.

Mr Allen, while operating for many years the Superba in Raleigh, maintained the reputation of hanging up records on all the larger film productions and had first premiere showings on a majority of the pictures released from the Charlotte exchanges, being recognized as one of the ablest showmen in the territory.

Frank Reynolds, manager of the magnificent Ansley hotel, Atlanta, headquarters for most film and theatre men in Atlanta, has gone to Cuba as a member of the Georgia Trades Commission on an educational tour. Mr. Reynolds is personally acquainted with the President of Cuba.

Bill Harwell, formerly a Paramount exploiteer in this territory has gone with Universal out of Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Dureau, of New Orleans, announce the birth of a son. Mr. Dureau is general booking manager for the Saenger chain of theatres.

J. G. Vardell, of the Princess, Piedmont, Alabama, was an Atlanta visitor the past week.

R. A. Carruth, of Roswell, Ga., is now operating the Community theatre there.

Frank Strozier, of the Strozier, Spartanburg, S. C., paid Atlanta film row a call the past week.

H. T. Whitlock, a newcomer in the business, will go on the road for the Atlanta Paramount office.

G. V. Whitton and E. H. Gillespy of the warehouse department of Southern Enterprises gave H. W. Baker and Homer Hamlin of the accessories department, a trouncing at golf recently.

M. J. Mullen, purchasing agent for Southern Enterprises is attending the special meeting of district managers with Harold B. Franklin, in New York city this week.

J. N. Treece, formerly assistant manager for Consolidated in Jacksonville, has been made booker for Southern Enterprises in the Florida territory succeeding I. L. Kennedy, who resigned.

Arthur Lucas, of Educational, is spending some time in the New York office.

George Goodale, besides handling the bookings for Enterprise Distribution Corporation's Atlanta exchange, is a member of the Calvin Rolfe Rainbow Orchestra which has just completed a two weeks' engagement at "Pat" Patterson's Metropolitan, Atlanta.

Albany

ANOTHER change has come to Film Row in Albany, through the resignation last week of Samuel Hochstim, who has been looking after the product of Associated Exhibitors in this territory for several years. Mr. Hochstim will be associated from now on with his brother, in running the Star theatre, in Hudson. Mr. Hochstim is one of the old timers in the business, having served with Pathe before going to Associated Exhibitors. He has a host of friends in the territory. Nat Marcus, who has been acting as salesman, has been promoted to Mr. Hochstim's position, with Aron Nacht from the home office taking Mr. Marcus' position. A testimonial dinner was tendered Mr. Hochstim last Friday night at the Hotel Kenmore, by the entire Pathe sales force.

Frank Bruner, local manager for Pathe, spent the week end in New York.

The Mark Strand, in Albany, decides on its feature for Junior Movies, by allowing the boys and girls to settle the question for themselves. At each Junior Movie, some person announces from the stage four or five pictures, and then lets the applause settle which one it will be. For March 22, "To Have and To Hold" will be the attraction.

It has been definitely decided to go into stock at Harmanus-Bleecker Hall the first week of May. Pictures are now being shown at the Hall three days a week.

Under his own table went the feet of Oscar Perrin, manager of the Leland and the Clinton Square in Albany, last Thursday night, when the quarantine was lifted from the Perrin home, and son Jack, was pronounced entirely recovered from diphtheria.

Among the exhibitors dropping into town last week were Earl Kelly, of Millbrook; Mr. and Mrs. McAllister, of the Rex, in Middleburg; R. V. Erk, of the Big Ben, in Ilion, and Charles McCarthy of Hoosick Falls, who, incidentally, is seriously contemplating a trip abroad during the coming summer.

Al Bothner, for several years, manager of various theatres in Troy, and now handling the Colonial and the Capitol, in that city, will branch out for himself on April 1, when he will take over the Capitol theatre, a residential ten cent house, seating 500 persons, and one of the original Barhydt chain of five or six years ago. Mr. Bothner will continue to look after the interests of the Colonial, a downtown house.

The Central Park, in Albany, has changed hands during the last week or so.

Carpenters are still busy at work at the local Universal exchange, but it now looks at though the job would be completed within another week or two. The interior of the office has been greatly changed, and while the office part itself is considerably smaller, the rear room has been arranged with racks that will accommodate hundreds of films and paper.

F. L. Davie, the new manager for F. B. O. here, is gradually getting acquainted with his territory, and made a trip to Utica and other points along the New York Central, during the past week.

Lent does not appear to be seriously cutting into the business at any of the theatres in Albany, but in Troy there is a different story to tell. All of the Albany theatres drew exceptionally well last week, but in Troy, the managers of the American, Troy and Lincoln theatres were inclined to be a bit pessimistic.

The father of Sol Manheimer, manager of the Robbins' theatres in Watertown, died at his home in New York city last week.

The Griswold, in Troy, has decided to use no more slides. The theatre is doing exceptionally well these days, and according to all reports is making inroads on the receipts of some of the nearby houses. Steve Harrington, a Troy cop, who scored a big hit as a vocalist, has been engaged to sing at the Griswold, for a straight week, beginning Sunday.

There is a rumor to the effect that the Strand theatre, in Troy, recently damaged by fire, may not reopen but may be replaced by a store.

Jacob Golden, manager of the Griswold, in Troy, has been promoted to the position of resident-manager of Harmanus Bleecker Hall, in Albany, also owned by Proctor interests. Virgil N. Lappeus, who has been connected with the Hall, will look after the Griswold, with Mr. Golden, keeping a supervising eye over both houses.

The first of a series of motion pictures at Clarkson College, in Potsdam, New York, was given last Saturday night for the purpose of enriching a fund that will provide a projection machine for the college.

Harry Symansky, manager of the Lincoln, in Troy, has just secured a sixty day protective clause that will fortify him in booking first runs. In fact Mr. Symansky now goes so far as to state that he does not intend to book any pictures unless there is some such stipulation.

The eight ushers at the Troy theatre blossomed forth last week with brand new uniforms of a medium gray color. The new outfits replace ones of dark maroon.

Manager Berinstein, of the Palace, in Troy, appeared with a brand new automobile last week, but it failed to arouse any envy in the heart of Al Bothner, who declared that so long as his old car is unpainted he can save money through paying no insurance premiums as no one would take the car unless perchance a blind man happened along.

Benjamin Apple, Harry Symansky and Walter Roberts, acting as a delegation representing the theatre owners of Troy, will appear before the common council in opposition to daylight saving in the Collar City.

An odd jam occurred last Sunday night at the Troy theatre, resulting in two officers being called to straighten out the tangle. The outcoming crowd became wedged in the doors with some thousand or more that had lined up in the streets and who had made a rush for the entrance at 9 o'clock, just as some 1,400 or more were leaving at the conclusion of the first showing. As a result of the jam, those outside could not enter the theatre, and for perhaps ten minutes or so, while people struggled, the box office probably didn't take in five dollars.

San Francisco

PAUL C. MOONEY, vice-president of Hodkinson held an important meeting in San Francisco last week with the entire personnel of the local Hodkinson exchange.

H. Eagles, exploitation manager for Paramount, has just returned from a campaign in the San Joaquin valley.

Washington

V. P. WHITTAKER, one-time associate of Ince, and later with Preferred Pictures, was in the city over the week-end in his latest capacity as special representative of the New York office of Associated Exhibitors, calling at the Pathe suite to see Harry Hayner and R. C. Robin.

The Washington Film Board committee, to arrange for the local observance of T-N-T night at Hotel Astor, when the oral entertainment is to be radio broadcasted from there to Washington and some thirty other film centers, has Walter Price, manager of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan as chairman and Sam Flax, J. F. Driscoll, secretary of the board, Norman J. Ayres of the Independent-Warner Bros. as members. The gang will meet in the film board room in the Mather Building on the night of the 29th of March, and put on the vulcanized ear-muffs.

Jules Levey, general manager of sales of Universal Pictures, visited Manager Jack Osserman of the Washington office, on his way south last week.

W. E. Jasper, once connected with the General Film and more recently circulation expert for the Baltimore Post, a Scripps-Howard paper of the tabloid order, is now selling the Paramount product for the Washington exchange of F. P.-L. in the Shenandoah-Clinch valley zone.

Special Representative Tom Kilfoil of the New York office of Paramount has been in the local exchange for several days. He has known the local go-getters long enough to prove his rep. as "Smiling Tom," to be well deserved.

C. M. Goble of Bristol, Tennessee-Virginia, is reported to be launching a new theatre there as a first run house. Then the Isis will be demoted to second run standing. He will be thus in direct competition with Leo Garner, former Washington exchange owner, who manages the other circuit there, the Columbia for white patrons and the Lincoln for colored.

Percy Raphael, of London, England, is a new face on the New Jersey avenue exchanges. He was manager of the Goldwyn exchange for Great Britain at London, and will be Goldwyn special representative in Virginia, familiarizing himself with American film sales methods, and exploitation, under the direction of Manager Price.

The Scheer Bros. of Washington recently added the Princess theater, at 1119 H street, N. E., to their chain which thus embraces three neighborhood houses, the Raphael at 9th and O streets, N. W., and the Favorite at 62 H street, N. W., near the Government Printing Office, being their earlier units.

The Washington Star now lists under "Film Features," 19 theaters, three of which are Scheer theatres. The two Loew houses, the Rialto, the Strand, Cosmos, and eight Crandall theatres are of course not in the 19 named. Besides the Chevy Chase and the Scheer trio, the theatres are: Olympic, U-between 14th and 15th N. W.; New Meaders, (O'Donnell) 535 8th street, S. E., American, 1st and R. I. Avenues, and Liberty North Capitol and P streets (Biron Bros.); Dumbarton, 1349 Wisconsin Avenue, Georgetown (Frain & Marceron); Empire, 911 H N. E. (Linkins); Takoma, 4th and Butternut, Takoma Pk. D. C. (Ex-Mayor Platt and others); Hippodrome, 9th and N. W. Avenue, (Stenz and receiver); Carolina 11th & N. C. Avenue, S. E. (Murphy of Home Amuse. Co.) Home Theatre, 1230 C street N. E. Circle of Washington Circle neighborhood control, (Dr. Herbst, Hahn and others) 2105 Pa. Avenue, N. W. New Stanton, 6th & C streets, N. E. (Colman); and Elite, 14th street and R. I. Avenue, N. W. (Stone); Truxton, (Ben Lust), N. Capitol and Florida Avenue at Truxton Circle; and Regent, 18th & California streets, N. W. (Silver).

Miss Louise Payne, booker at Federated Films of Washington, past year, has transferred her affections to the new Trio exchange on New Jersey avenue, resigning from the Oletzky office as of March 15th. She will be booker and cashier there, handling bookkeeping also. George Leibold of the Baltimore interests of Mr. Oletzky, has been sent over to assume Miss Payne's former duties as booker in Federated. No manager has as yet been appointed to succeed Israel Colb, who was here hardly two weeks.

Miss Miriam Knapp, formerly from up-state New York, near Utica, recently became billing clerk and cashier's assistant in Vitagraph.

Since Willy Banfler took to selling for F. B. O., the shipping, poster and inspection rooms of McNamee's growing Washington office, have been taken under the wing of the new chief shipper, James Walsh. Miss Donna Gleason, formerly of Leesburgh, Virginia, is a new member of the staff of film inspectresses in F. B. O.

Ground was broken last week for the new film theatre at Suffolk, Pa., near Norfolk.

The lease of the old New Pickwick theatre, 113-115 No. Howard street, Baltimore, from Waldo Hack and others to Samuel Soltz of Pittsburgh for a term of 9 years, with an annual rental of $7,500 for the first three years, $8,500 the second three years, and reaching an annual rental of $9,500 the last three years was recorded last week. Lee Dornberg, who has had a sign on the place for several months, was the broker.

Leon Brusilof, director of the orchestra of Loew's Columbia theatre here, has received nation-wide publicity in connection with the news of his recent acquisition of a historical old-time violin, which has the maker's name and date inscribed upon it.

Harry Howe, house treasurer and assistant manager of the Columbia, has just returned from his annual mid-winter trip to Florida.

The pageant of fashion staged by Pemberton and his dancers last week at the Palace made quite a drawing card. Former, present and future modes imported by Hecht's from New York were displayed, and the finale was a wedding scene. This is the first real fashion revue ever staged in a Washington picture theatre.

Harry E. Lohmeyer, manager of Crandall's Avenue Grand, who shortly goes to the new Tivoli, is using "tabs" in his audience building. His two costliest attractions during the current week are Gerald Cook's Oriole Society Orchestra, a music novelty act of eight syncopators, appearing three times Sunday and twice on Monday evening. Thursday the gifted violin virtuoso, Miss Sweeney gave a miniature recital with pipe organ embellishments.

Jury duty seemingly hit the Crandall executive staff pretty exceeding hard lately. Harry M. Crandall who has prominently aided the Emergency and Casual Hospital drives, on which he was a committee man, has served recently on condemnation and other juries. Others of his staff recently impaneled for jury service, included his general manager, Joseph P. Morgan; and George A. Crouch, treasurer of the Crandall theatres, have had their court room juror blues.

John B. Upperman, manager of the Apollo theatre, Crandall house in the north-east end of Washington, has now almost convalesced from a week of enforced idleness due to La Grippe, which did not permit his getting about until last Thursday.

Des Moines

L. J. SELZNICK, head of Selznick Select,and Jimmy Grainger, general sales manager of Goldwyn, visited the A. H. Blank headquarters in Des Moines.

Spring has come. The Des Moines Theatre is blossoming forth. An arbor bedecked with gay colors and garlands of flowers on all sides will turn the lobby into a bower. The theatre is also putting on a style show, Ivan D. Martin's New York Models Fashion Revue, with a runway extending out over the audience, and six girls who are assisted by a number of local people.

The Famous Players salesmen were all in town and each brought business. A. W. Nichols, district manager, was in Des Moines for three days.

E. J. Smith has taken over the Rialto Theatre at Cedar Rapids, Ia. He bought the picture house from J. J. Jacobson who is now partaking of a vacation from the film business.

Helen Ditzler, sales control girl for Pathe, was called to Grinnell by the sudden illness of her mother.

R. H. Fairchild, recovered from his recent attack of appendicitis, is back on the job as salesman for F. B. O.

R. S. Ballentyne of the Pathe office called in all the salesmen for a conference last week.

The Iowa Theatre Equipment company have installed a Simplex machine at Waverly, Iowa. They put in two low intensity arcs at the Strand Theatre, Des Moines and put in a projection machine at the K. C. headquarters at the hospital at Knoxville.

S. S. Schwarz, manager of the Premier Pictures, exchange, which is now nicely located in their new headquarters at 1005 Film Exchange Building, announced that he expects to call on every exhibitor in the territory. Schwarz has been associated with A. H. Blank Enterprises for the past eight years.

T. M. Eckart, Paramount salesman out of Minneapolis, visited Des Moines which used to be his headquarters. He is arranging to move his wife and family to Minneapolis. Ted Mendenhall, who was also transferred from the Des Moines to the Minneapolis office, will be down soon to look after his car which he left in Des Moines.

Marie Clements, inspector of film for Famous Players, is no longer of the staff.

Manager Kahn, of the Educational exchange, made a flying trip to Omaha last week.

Visitors at the Des Moines exchanges were J. C. Collins of Perry, and C. W. Morgan of the Palace Theatre at Murray, L. C. West of Perry and Grinnell, visited the Premier exchange.

Charles H. Grahl, husband of the News correspondent in Des Moines, was re-elected school treasurer with a flattering majority, last week. The film exchanges helped put him over.

Business is not so good in Iowa. The roads are so bad that it is impossible for the farmers to get in to the towns. In many places the schools have been closed for several weeks as traffic was impossible on the mud roads.

Cleveland

MAX MARCUS, manager of the U. S. theatre, Cleveland, known as the daddy of the Cleveland movies, is sick. Marcus has not been around the exchanges for two weeks. He's just another grip victim.

Matthew Schiessel, manager of the Reel theatre, East 9th St., Cleveland, is recuperating after an operation on his eye.

Pauline Garon who has an important role in Universal's "The Turmoil."

The American theatre at Elyria is closed. The house will be converted into stores. Max Young was formerly manager of the American.

The Colonial theatre, Elyria, has been lifted from its state of receivership, and is now under the management of a group of men headed by John Pekras of the Dreamland theatre. The Colonial has been operated under a receivership for the past year.

John Palfrey, of the Princess and Opera House, Kent, came up to pay the Cleveland exchanges a personal visit during the week, and write in dates for previously booked pictures.

Leo Burckhart, manager of the Hippodrome at Crestline, made his first personal appearance in the Cleveland exchanges last week, after an attack of grip that laid him up for several weeks.

Ray Wallace, who conducts the destinies of the Ohio theatre at Alliance, was in town last week on one of his regular monthly trips around the exchanges. Wallace reports business excellent.

Charles Barbian, whose name in these parts in synonymous with the Waldorf theatre, Akron, was around the Film Bldg., recently and said he's about due for a vacation. Now comes the good word that Charlie is off for a two months' tour of foreign climes.

Mark Goldman, manager of Selznick Distributing Corporation's Cleveland exchange, has an announcement of importance to make to his film friends and associates. It is that henceforth they should change their day for calling on Howard Feigley of the Rivoli theatre, Toledo, from Friday to Monday. Heretofore the Cleveland film men have kept Friday open for Feigley. And Feigley keeps Friday open to spend the week-ends in Chicago. So, to overcome the disappointments, film salesmen are notified to steer clear of the Rivoli the end of the week.

Negotiations have been completed whereby the Princess theatre, Medina, now owned by W. H. Gardner of Medina, will become the property of George Willis and Benj. Yukelovich, who have been lessees and operators of the theatre for the past five years. Messrs. Willis and Yukelovitch also operate the Idol theatre in Lodi and another small house in Valley City.

A new $35,000 modern fireproof motion picture theatre, with seating capacity of 500, is to be erected in Lorain by Bernard Firestone, owner of the Paris theatre.

L. R. Smith of Martins Ferry, a brother of Lemotto Smith of the Smith Amusement Company of Alliance and Warren, has been named manager of the Hippodrome and Opera House at Warren.

Bill Hoffman, for the past two years divorced from the film business, is back in harness again, selling Associated Exhibitor pictures in Cleveland and the surrounding territory. Hoffman has been connected with a local bank for the past two years.

Norman Moray, manager of the First National exchange, spent the week in New York, brushing up on the newest sales policies. Moray has been laid up for the past month, and this is his first trip out of town.

Frank Drew, Fox exchange manager, is in the best of humor these days when he calls on his exhibitor friends. The reason is that he's got a new Jewett, and it's such a pleasure to drive that he greets all of his movie friends with a smile.

Helene Chadwick, star in Hodkinson Pictures.

Clifford Almy, Metro exchange manager, was out in the territory most of the week, giving the first-run picture house the once-over.

Exhibitors all over this territory will rejoice with Sam Gorrell of Progress Pictures Company in the acquisition of a new Ford sedan. Gorrell's old famous trick Ford touring car is no more. And he wants to thank his many friends, through this column, for their co-operation in making possible the new Ford.

J. Charles Davis II of Lowell Film Productions, New York, was in town last Tuesday and Wednesday, scouting around for a Cleveland home for his product.

Salt Lake City

JOE Koehler who has made the Idaho territory out of the Metro office for the several past years, will sever connections with this firm to take over the management of the Idaho theatre, at Idaho Falls, Idaho. He will replace Joe Madsen who is resigning. Koehler will assume his managerial duties March 23. He was formerly an exhibitor, running many successful theatres before he entered the selling end. His successor at the Metro office has not been appointed yet, although it is expected that a capable salesman from the Coast offices will be sent here.

St. Louis

DR. F. M. RIELY of Mountain Grove, Mo., plans to open his new theatre in that city about April 1. Building mechanics are now remodeling the structure recently purchased by Dr. Riely. The show house will contain a stage large enough for vaudeville and road shows.

There is considerable speculation in St. Louis theatrical circles as to whether William Fox will renew his lease on the William Fox Liberty theatre on Delmar boulevard just west of Grand boulevard. This house is just slightly off the Grand boulevard movie belt, but with the widening of Morgan street to a 100-foot thoroughfare should become more valuable as a theatrical or movie center. The Fox lease is said to expire within the next year. It is known that many other interests have considered the Liberty, among them being the Shuberts who must give up the Shubert-Jefferson theatre on Twelfth boulevard at the close of 1924.

Harry Greenman of William Fox Liberty Theatre has inaugurated a split-week for that show house and in the future will change his feature picture on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Mabel Normand, star in the "Extra Girl," a Mack Sennett production for Associated Exhibitors.

The New Tivoli Theatre at the conjunction of St. Louis and University City on Delmar boulevard will throw open its doors very shortly. The St. Louis Amusement Company headed by Spyros Skouras will operate the new show house which is the last word in motion picture theatre construction.

Lou Stahl, veteran motion picture salesman, is said to be angling for a prominent West End St. Louis theatre.

Sol Koplar is said to contemplate the erection of a modern exchange building on Locust boulevard just east of Compton avenue. The new structure will be three stories high, it is said. The widening of Olive street to a 100-foot thoroughfare will take off the fronts of a number of exchanges on the south side of Olive street at present, making it necessary for the occupants to find new quarters.

Mary Pickford in the center of a group of Shriners and their wives, who visited her at Hollywood while she was making "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

Morris Horowitz has joined Barney Rosenthal's Columbia Picture Corporation sales organization. He will make his first trip under the Columbia banner this week, calling on his old customers in Eastern Missouri.

George Ware, formerly manager of Vitagraph's offices in St. Louis and Kansas City, has joined the Paramount sales staff.

Oscar Lehr, owner of the Peerless, Family and Broadway theatres, has again taken up the practice of law which he was forced to forego upon his return from France because of the "gassing" he received while storming a German trench. He has opened offices in the Arcade Building. He is a graduate of the Washington University Law School. He will retain his interest in the picture houses.

Morrie Arron, former First National salesman, has opened a restaurant in Picture Row. His new place should prove a popular haven for film salesman, exchange managers and exhibitors as Morrie numbers his friends in the business by the hundreds.

Howard Brown of Portageville, Mo., stopped off in St. Louis en route to Canada. He called at the Columbia Picture Corporation Exchange to extend congratulations to Barney Rosenthal.

Maurice Stahl, who guided the Pershing Theatre through its brief season of super-special attractions has taken charge of the Pageant Theatre for the St. Louis Amusement Company. Cullen Espy is the new manager of the West End Lyric Theatre operated by Skouras Brothers Enterprises.

G. E. Howe, traveling auditor for Universal, was a visitor of the week.

Folks throughout filmland will be pleased to learn that Dr. J. L. Price, owner of the Liberty and Star Theatres, East St. Louis, and the White Way, St. Louis, has recovered from his recent attack of ptomaine poisoning. He has resumed his quest for money-making theatres. Dr. Price represents the exhibitors on the arbitration of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade.

Visitors seen along Picture Row during the week were: Green Luttrell, Majestic Theatre, Jacksonville, Ill.; Oscar Wesley, Gillespie, Ill.; Phil Cohen, Lyric and Avenue, East St. Louis, Ill.; Chester Gruber, Collinsville, Ill.; Tom Ronan, Shelbyville, Ill.; Howard Brown, Portageville, Mo., Charles Van Preter, East Alton, Ill. and Jim Reilly, Princess Theatre, Alton.

Barney Rosenthal's Columbia Picture Corporation has signed a lease on the present Metro exchange quarters in the Plaza Hotel Building and when Metro moves into its new home at 3328 Olive street about April 1 the Columbia Picture Corporation will enter its permanent quarters in Picture Row. At present temporary offices are maintaining on the third floor of the Empress Theatre Building, Olive street west of Grand boulevard.

N. E. Bucklin, manager of the St Louis Exhibitors' Supply Company returned from Chicago on Tuesday, March 18. He went to the Windy City to confer with the home office officials.

Exhibitors and film men of the St. Louis territory are extending their heartfelt sympathy to Mrs. William H. Young, owner of the Easton-Taylor and Euclid theatres in the recent death of her husband. Young was very well known throughout the St. Louis territory.

Ira D. Cooley has tendered his resignation as manager of the Peoples' Theatre, Spickard, Mo. He has not announced his new connection.

Ray Atkins of Elkville, Ill., is a candidate for the state legislature from his district. Atkins is a staunch advocate of good roads and was instrumental in obtaining several concrete roads in the vicinity of Elkville and Dowell, Ill.

The Empress Theatre, formerly the Electric at Conway, Mo., has reopened. Other theatres in this territory that re-opened recently were: Star, Clinton, Ky.; Kosy, Dresden, Tenn.; Empire, Laddonia, Mo.; Playhouse, Shelbyville, Ill.

Jack Truitt of the Sedalia, Mo., theatre is just back from a trip to California.

Joe Safferty, formerly with Universal, is now traveling for W. W. Hodkinson.

C. L. Hickman has resigned from F. B. O. sales staff and accepted a post with Paramount. He will make the Arkansas territory.

St. Louis visitors of the week were: Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McCutcheon, Sikeston, Mo.; Ray Adkins, Elkville, Ill.; Albert Richard, Witte, Ill.; Tom Ree, Duquoin, Ill.; Curley Lawson, Mount Olive, Ill.; John Reese, Wellsville, Mo.; Sam Boyd, Louisiana, Mo.; Leon Bernstein, Springfield, Ill., and C. C. Calvin, Washington, Mo.

Dick White, assistant general manager for Fox Films, was in town last Tuesday.

Olga Printzlau, who has written screen verson of "Breath of Scandal" to be produced by Preferred Pictures

E. E. McElravey, manager for Southern Enterprises in Memphis, Tenn., has just returned from a visit to New York City. While East he attended the Famous Players convention.

Lord Dearth, manager for Pantages in Memphis, Tenn., has been transferred to Kansas City, Mo. Ben Prince, formerly a publicity man for Pantages takes charge of the Memphis theatre.

Ralph Thayer, who was manager of the Capitol Theatre, is now acting manager of the DesMoines Theatre, while Omar Kenyon, manager of the Majestic Theatre, vaudeville and picture house, will also manage the Capitol Theatre.

ALBERT HAY MALOTTE, former organist at Shea's Hippodrome, who has been making a vaudeville tour of the country, with his wife, Mary Jane, is back in Buffalo as feature organist at the Lafayette Square theatre, where he succeeds Franz Rath, Jr. Mr. Malotte has a large army of admirers in Buffalo and he received an enthusiastic reception this week.

Earl "Cuckoo" Arnold, who has been in the theatre end of the business for the past year or so as manager of the Sesonski houses in Watertown, N. Y., has returned to his first love, the exchange business and is now representing the Buffalo F. B. O. office in the Southern Tier. Manager Fred M. Zimmerman journeyed to Rochester the other day to meet Edward M. Fay, owner of Fay's theatre in the Kodak city and to sign up some nice contracts for F. B. O. products.

Allan S. Moritz, manager of the Universal exchange in New Haven, just can't keep away from Buffalo where he has many friends. Allan, who formerly managed the local Paramount office, visited Buffalo last week end to call on his former Film Row colleagues.

Members of the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo gathered at the new Como restaurant on Monday evening, March 10, and participated in a spaghetti-downing contest. Sydney Samson, president of the board, had his shirt front spoiled the least and was announced the winner. J. H. Michael, chairman of the executive committee of the M. P. T. O. of New York, Inc., was the guest of honor. The event was just a little social affair. Showing the heights of financial standing to which he has climbed, Mr. Samson exhibited cigarettes with his own monogram printed on them. Sydney was the only Buffalo attendant at the recent Paramount ball in New York where he met his old friends Earl L. Crabb, Art Amm, Bruce Fowler and Harold B. Franklin, himself, in person. All were former Buffalo exhibitors now risen in fame in the fillum firmament.

Murray K. Ross, former booker at the Paramount office, and recently transferred to the sales staff by Manager Kempner, is now covering the Rochester territory formerly taken care of by Earl L. Brink, who has been transferred to the Southern Tier. Mickey Rose is representing Paramount in the Southern Tier. L. O'Connor has resigned from F. P.-L. sales force.

It is reported that M. Shea has an option on a new site in Main street for his new picture theatre. Mr. Shea is expected back from New York in a few days with an announcement of his new plans.

According to well founded reports, Loew interests are seeking a community house in Buffalo and a representative of Marcus Loew was in town recently seeking to acquire the Elmwood, one of the finest neighborhood theatres in the city, located at Elmwood avenue and West Utica street. Frederick Ullman, president of the company operating the house, turned down the offer, it is said.

Frank Harris, special feature representative for Pathe, was in Buffalo last week, for a conference with Branch Manager Basil Brady. Hub Taylor, Pathe plugger in the southern tire, also returned to civilization last week end.

"Idle Acres," "Forest Guardians," and "Wilderness Friends," are the titles of some new film educative subjects just issued by the State Conservation commission and which were shown at a free motion picture entertainment in the Central high school of Binghamton, N. Y., last Friday evening. The films are part of the reforestation program being launched by the commission. The pictures are well titled and are virtually self-explanatory.

Kansas City

CIGARS were being passed out liberally and profusely last week by C. W. Allen, assistant manager of the Kansas City Vitagraph exchange. He is the proud father of a 10-pound girl.

Leo Adler, traveling auditor of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., was in Kansas ity last week, checking up on general business at the local exchange.

Few are the idle moments of W. E. Truog, district manager for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan. After making a trip over the territory, Mr. Truog returned to Kansas City last week from Omaha, where he attended a sales conference with J. R. Granger, vice-president and general sales manager of the company. Mr. Granger was en route to the Pacific Coast.

M. L. Smith has taken possession of the Strand theatre, Arkansas City, Kas., which he purchased from J. T. Salmons. Several new improvements are being planned by Mr. Smith.

C. M. Pattee, the veteran exhibitor of Lawrence, Kas., was a busy buyer in the Kansas City exchanges last week. Following close behind him was Clarence Rehm of Baxter Springs, Kas.

THE Independence Amusement Corporation, headed by Athenas George, former owner of the Victoria motion picture theatre in Harrisburg, and now operating a large picture theatre in Altoona, on March 11 made a compromise offer to the City Council of Harrisburg which has been vigorously opposing the plan of the company to establish a big amusement park, to include motion picture facilities, on two islands in the Susquehanna river directly opposite one of the chief residential sections of the city.

Opposition to the plan has been raised on the ground that it would mar the beauty of the river front, and the company now has offered to abandon this project and surrender the islands to the city in return for the right to establish a bathing beach and park at the Municipal bathing beach on another (city-owned) island in a place where the park would be obscured by trees from view from the city's river front. The City Council has taken the proposal under consideration.

Plans are being drawn by H. G. Cooke, Jr., of Wilkes-Barre, for a new picture theatre that is to be erected at 252 Wyoming avenue, that city, by Thomas E. Husband of Edwardsville.

A wealthy Reading, Pa., business man, who has succeeded in concealing his identity, has been host to a large number of Reading poor children at a series of specially arranged morning matinees in Reading picture theatres. Recently, at one of these affairs, he entertained 1,200 newsboys and children from various orphanages of the city, at a morning matinee at the Arcadia theatre, a Carr & Schad house. Little Mickey Bennett, seven years old, appeared in person to the delight of the youngsters and the main film displayed was "Big Brother." The members of the Reading Rotary Club lent their automobiles to transport the kiddies to the theatre. The Rotarians have been sponsoring the "Big Brother" movement in Reading.

C. C. Heit, of the Hodkinson Exchange, and Tom Bible, of the Keystone, both of Philadelphia, were snowbound near Williamsport during a recent blizzard which swept that part of Central Pennsylvania. Mr Heit, while battling the storm, had a fall in which he suffered a painful injury to his arm. Both men, however, fell into good hands when Joseph F. O'Neill, manager of the Keeney theatre, heard of their plight and acted as their host during their stay in Williamsport.

Chicago

L. J. SELZNICK and General Sales Manager David R. Blithe, were in Chicago this week for a conference with local exchange officials of their organization.

Henri Ellman reports that he and Morris Salkin have taken over the Kenwood theatre. He states that they will make extensive improvements and will continue to operate it as a high-class movie house.

Eddie Mardeau is now connected with United Artists' sales staff and is covering country territory.

William Parra, popular member of Fox's staff has been assigned to the New York office and left on Saturday for the new headquarters.

The "Zambreno" drive started this week and will continue until April 26th. The sales force and office staff of Progress Pictures Company are up on their toes as they want to make this sales campaign a real compliment to their popular chief, Frank Zambreno.

Hal Opperman of the President and Bond theatres, Pontiac, is combining theatre and campaign pubpublicity in his race for alderman. He has gotten out postal cards announcing that "When a Man's a Man," is to run at the Bond theatre, and that if the voters elect him they will have "a man who is a man" in that city office. Mr. Opperman has recently installed four of the latest model Powers Projectors in his two theatres and has re-decorated the houses.

Meyers & Stern have set the opening date of their fine, new Marquette theatre at 63rd and Kedzie avenue, for March 19th. The house was built by Fitzpatrick & McElroy and is one of the handsomest theatres on the south side.

District Manager Hickey, of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, has been confined to his home with a severe cold for several days, but hopes to be back at his desk by the end of the week.

James Coston, who has been ill at the German-Deaconess Hospital for some time, is reported to be improving rapidly and is well enough to enjoy the radio which he has had installed in his room, and visits from many friends in the film business.

Salesman Jack Howland, of First National, has been transferred to the Chicago and suburban territory, formerly covered by Phil Dunas and Tom Gilliam, will, hereafter, travel the Bloomington and Jacksonville district, formerly presided over by Mr. Howland.

Ray Atkins, well known exhibitor of Elkville and Dowell, Illinois, is a very busy man these days, being out electioneering for state representative. Film peddlers are particularly strong for Mr. Atkins as he is said to be responsible for the concrete roads in his territory.

Charles Bigelow of the Rothacker-Aller Laboratories, Hollywood, California, is spending his vacation in Chicago. He was assistant superintendent of the Rothacker Chicago plant before going to the coast.

C. H. Fulton, president of the Fulco Sales Company has been spending considerable of his time in Indianapolis for the last six weeks, having recently taken over the Indianapolis Calcium Light Company, 111 S. Capital avenue, that city, where he opened up an Indianapolis branch of the Fulco Sales Company. Joe F. Bommerscheim has been installed as the Indianapolis branch manager.

Rudolph Kopp has been selected as musical director of the New Wisconsin theatre, which will open in Milwaukee on March 28th, the largest and finest of the Saxe chain of theatres. The orchestra, which will play under Mr. Kopp's direction, will include thirty musicians. Mr. Kopp was for two years, conductor of Balaban & Katz's Chicago theatre orchestra, alternating with his chief, Nathaniel Finston, who is musical director for Balaban & Katz. Louis R. Al Lichtman, of Universal, reached Chicago Monday, after four weeks' hard work at Universal City, and immediately went into a sales conference with a number of Universal executives who were waiting his arrival at the Chicago exchange. Production plans and sales policies of Universal for the next few months were fully covered.

Those participating in the meeting, besides Mr. Lichtman, included District Manager Herman Wolfberg and Sales Manager Steve Montgomery, of Chicago; A. Stern of Baby Peggy Pictures, New York; Phil Dunas, Minneapolis manager; George Levine, Milwaukee manager, Jerry Akers, manager of Kansas City and St. Louis territory; Special Representative Nathan Friend and Special Representative Charles Scherin.

New England

FOR some months there has been a species of "Moving Fever" evident on Film Row in Boston, which was started when Associated First National opened up their modern exchange building on Church street under the auspices of District Manager Tom Spry, and when Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan opened up new and spacious offices on the same thoroughfare. Since then the bug has bit Fox, Educational, Franklin Films, Selznick, and even the N. E. Film Board of Trade.

The latest shift is the Independent Films, Inc., distributors in this territory for Arrow. They have been cramped for some time, but unable to find suitable quarters. Now they have secured quarters adjacent to their present offices, and they have had the place thoroughly renovated and made over to their needs.

Alice Long, well known in Film Row for her work with the Associated First National exchange, became Mrs. John Jacobson in Worcester on March 12. John is a musician at Gordon's Washington street Olympia, Boston. The employees at the First National exchange gave them a party shortly before the wedding date in the exchange building, and gave them their wedding present from the "gang" at that time. Tom Spry officiated.

Boston is looking forward with a great deal of expectation to the opening of Gordon Field's Corner theatre in a couple of weeks or so. It will be one of the most pretentious suburban houses, will seat 1800, and run on a straight picture policy with combination program Sunday's.

William H. Hickey, former special representative for Associated First National, is now manager at Poli's new Lyric in Bridgeport, Ct. George Elmore, who has been with Poli for 10 years, and who was last at the Lyric, has resigned for a much needed rest and has gone to South America for several weeks. He will stop at Miami on the way back and then will go to his old home in Los Angeles.

Louis Gordon, who for some time was manager of his uncle's Capitol theatre in Allston, has gone out to the Lynn Olympia as manager there, his Allston berth having been ably filled by Mr. Berg, who was formerly his assistant there.

Geoffrey L. Whalen, known as "The Radio Movi Man" has been secured by Federated Film Exchange, Inc., of New England, to edit their house organ, Film Digest and also direct the publicity.

Proper Atmospheric Conditions for Theatres

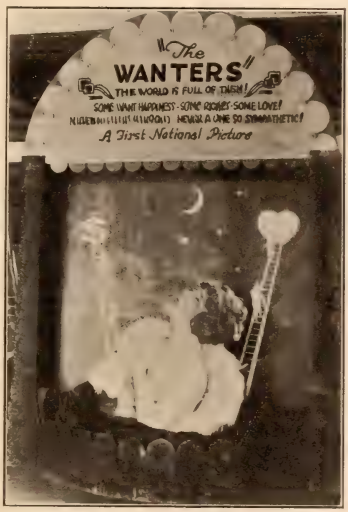
Method for Securing Desirable Temperature and Humidity for Greatest Comfort of Patrons

By Horace L. Smith, Jr., Engineer
C. K. Howell, Inc., Theatre Architects, Richmond, Va.

WHAT is the ultimate object of bringing together valuable real estate, expensive and elaborately furnished and decorated buildings, trained personnel, operating capital, and management for the conduct of the theatre business? The answer is simple. Profit!

It is expected by the people that make this large outlay of money and energy that by so doing they can earn a good percentage on the capital invested. In order to earn a profit they must sell to their patrons something that gives the patron satisfaction, enjoyment, and comfort that is equal to or more than equal to the price charged at his valuation—and the price charged must be more than the cost of the service rendered. The profit is the difference between the selling price and the cost price.

In the theatre business the commodity offered for sale is an intangible thing. It is offered for sale in the face of strong competition. In order to overcome competition it is necessary to offer more value to your patrons than your competitor. Right here is a point that requires careful thought, for it must be borne in mind that when you offer more value, your costs will increase and the profit decrease thereby.



Selling the Six Human Senses

To get a better idea of the commodity offered for sale it is well to divide it into its component parts and we find that they are three of the five human senses—seeing, hearing, and feeling. The remaining two, taste and smell are not factors that enter into the subject, unless the sense of smelling be considered in a negative form only, in that it is highly desirable to eliminate all odors. This will be considered later.

Seeing. The sense of sight of course receives the largest consideration. If it is a moving picture theatre, the picture of course is the principal feature. This must be of the finest quality and there is but little chance for a saving on the cost of pictures over your competitor, value considered, as they are practically purchased on the open market and the price is controlled by the producer and not the exhibitor.

The decorations within and without the theatre are to appease the sense of sight only. They must be pleasing to look upon, and to be this, demands quite an outlay of money.

Hearing. The next sense to be considered is that of hearing. The many piece orchestra

"Wanters" (1st Nat'l) display at Hamilton, Lancaster, Pennsylvania and fine Cathedral organ are for the purpose of giving the sense of hearing a maximum of comfort and enjoyment. To supplement this, it is necessary to have correct acoustical conditions.

The above two senses have received so much thought, time, and money that there is little left to improve.

Feeling. The third human sense that we have to consider is that of feeling. The average theatre owner thinks that when he has provided fairly comfortable seats and a reasonable amount of heat that he has discharged his obligation in full to the appeasement of the sense of feeling. Little does he realize how much he has left undone and what a valuable asset he possesses if he only knew how to capitalize it fully.

Success of Theatre Depends Largely on Good Will

The success of a theatre is largely dependent on the good will of an easily influenced and quickly prejudiced public. The physical comfort or discomfort of a theatre will quickly build up a valuable good will or will as quickly neutralize large sums of money spent along other lines to attract the theatre patron. In order to fully grasp the significance of this point we will have to understand some fundamental principles of physics as related to atmospheric comfort of the human body as given below:

To begin with, the human body is a generator of heat. Part of the food consumed is converted into body heat that maintains a nearly constant temperature of 98 degrees F. It is both desirable and necessary to give off a part of this heat. The normal amount of heat given off by an adult at rest is 440 B. t. u. per hr. Too great a dissipation of body heat produces a sensation of cold. Too small a rate of heat dissipation produces the sensation of being too warm. Both conditions produce discomfort. The temperature and humidity of the surrounding air should properly regulate the rate at which the body heat is given off.

Moving Air Gives Sensation of Cooling

Body heat is given off by direct radiation, the same as a hot water or steam radiator gives off heat in a room and also by evaporation of moisture on the surface of the skin, which is in the form of perspiration. When moisture is evaporated it requires heat, so the required heat is obtained from the body, thereby absorbing a part of the body heat. A moving current of air does not lower the temperature of the air, but it does cause a more rapid rate of evaporation on the surface of the skin, thereby absorbing heat from the body at a higher rate and producing the sensation of cooling. We have every day examples of this in the form of the office desk fan. It is at once apparent that air containing a small percentage of moisture will evaporate and thereby cool faster than air that is nearly saturated with moisture. Clothing protects the skin from moving currents of air, thereby reducing the rate of evaporation, and also acting as an insulator, preventing the heat of the body from being radiated—thus clothing keeps us warm. Clothing does not supply warmth, but simply acts as a retainer of the heat generated by the body, retarding its dissipation.

Air contains varying amounts of moisture and for any temperature (dry bulb), there is a maximum amount of moisture that the air will absorb and hold, this is called the satura- tion point. When the amount of moisture contained is less than the saturation point for any temperature, it is denoted as a percentage of the total amount possible for the air to hold at this temperature. An example will make this better understood; a cubic foot of air at 40 degrees Fahrenheit may contain 1.7 grains of moisture, whereas the maximum amount that air at 40 degrees Fahrenheit will hold is 2.9 grains, therefore we speak of the air having a relative humidity of 60 per cent (approximately). If the temperature of this cubic foot of air is now raised to 70 degrees Fahrenheit the amount of moisture contained will be the same, i. e., 1.7 grains, but the relative humidity is now only 21 per cent, for at 70 degrees Fahrenheit air will hold eight grains of moisture.

Ideal Conditions for Maximum Comfort of Patrons

The ideal condition for maximum comfort is a temperature of from 67 degrees to 70 degrees Fahrenheit (dry bulb) and 50 per cent relative humidity. We now see that air at 70 degrees Fahrenheit and 50 per cent relative humidity contains 4 grains of moisture per cubic foot—so it is necessary to add 2.3 grains to the 1.7 grains originally contained, in order to make the air ideal for comfort. An increase of the moisture content of 75 per cent.

The usual type of heating plant only increases the temperature without adding moisture to the air, therefore it decreases the relative humidity as the temperature is raised. This very dry air is very harmful as it dries up the skin, causes rapid evaporation of the skin moisture, thereby requiring a much higher temperature for comfort and is very enervating. Parched, prickly skin and diseases caused by irritation of the mucus membrane in the throat and lungs, from lack of humidity, are directly traceable to the heating plant, in fact there is no way of telling how serious may be the effects of this extreme dryness upon the human system.

Nature demands a more even balance between the moisture in the body and that of the surrounding air, for the reason that the dry heated air, if not fed with moisture from other sources, will draw moisture from the human body faster than it can be supplied by the body through the skin and mucous membrane. Aside from this, the excessive evaporation of moisture from the body has a decided cooling effect upon the skin, so that it is necessary to maintain a higher temperature to offset this effect.

In order to again emphasize the extreme dryness of the air in a heated building, a second numerical example will be given: Starting with zero temperature outdoors, we find that saturated air (containing the maximum possible amount of moisture) contains only one-half of a grain of moisture per cubic foot. If the air is now heated to 70 degrees Fahrenheit the weight of moisture in the air remains the same, but the capacity of the air to absorb moisture at 70 degrees Fahrenheit is 8 grains per cubic foot and the relative humidity is now only six per cent. The importance of this is apparent when it is realized that the relative humidity of the arid desert air is from twelve to twenty-five percent—from twice to four times as much as the air in the building just considered.

Moisture Essential in Air Used for Heating Buildings

It is hoped that conclusive evidence has been presented to bear out the statement that it is very essential to introduce moisture into air that is used in heating buildings. The next and opposite phase to be considered is the treatment of air under summer conditions.

When moisture is evaporated it requires heat and this heat is absorbed from the surrounding matter. The camper and soldier (especially those that served in warm climates) are familiar with the expedient of wetting the outside covering of canteens and then hanging them in the wind. The moving current of air caused the evaporation of the moisture on the outside and in evaporating, heat is absorbed from the contents of the canteen, thus cooling the water. The cooling effect of evaporating moisture is sometimes very useful. If we pass a current of air through a fine mist or spray of water, part of the water is evaporated and absorbed by the air and the temperature of the remaining water is materially lowered. If the remaining water is now used again as a spray its temperature is lowered even more, until it reaches a point known as the wet bulb temperature. If we now add a constant supply of water equal to the amount evaporated, we will have a constant spray of water that is much cooler than the incoming water, and that reduces the temperature of the air passing through the spray.

In this arrangement we have what is known as an air washer. It lowers the temperature of the air passing through it, and at the same time removes all suspended dust, bacteria, gasses, acid fumes, etc. It also dissipates electrostatic charges, so as to reduce nervous irritation, and facilitates the precipitation of indoor dust. Bear in mind that the average city air contains from 100,000 to 1,500,000 dust particles per cubic foot, and as high as 100 counts of bacteria. A well designed air washer will remove from 90 to 98 per cent of all dust, bacteria, and other impurities contained in the air. In Public School No. 6, Brooklyn, N. Y., five buckets of mud, soot, and other disease breeding filth were removed from the air washer within one week.

Requirements of Proper Ventilation

There is also of course the ulterior saving resulting from washed air, in the less cleaning required, less depreciation of decorations, draperies, etc.

We now realize that the problem of proper air conditioning is very important. The requirements of proper ventilation are:

1. Correct amount of air properly distributed. In theatres this should be at least 1,000 cubic feet per person per hour.

2. The temperature must be maintained within close limits and be subject to proper regulation and control.

3. The humidity should be properly regulated by means of a properly designed and installed air washer. It should be controlled by a humidostat (a device for automatically regulating the humidity of the surrounding air by controlling the air washer).

4. The velocity of the air must not be too great, as drafts are very disagreeable. By proper design of ducts, grilles, etc., the velocity can be kept within the permissible limits, 2 feet per second is the maximum.

5. There should be no offensive odors introduced with the air. An air washer will eliminate all odors.

6. The dust suspended in the incoming air must be removed as far as possible. A well designed air washer will remove from 95 to 98 per cent of all suspended dust.

7. The bacteria count must be kept to the absolute minimum.

The well designed heating and ventilating plant of a theatre works as follows:

The air is drawn in from the outside and then passed over a few heating coils to raise its temperature so that it will not cause freezing of the spray water in the air washer. These coils are called tempering coils. The air then passes through a mist of water caused by a number of spray nozzles that create a very dense fog. It is here that the dust, odors, gasses, bacteria, etc., are removed, and the humidity increased. The air absorbs moisture from the spray water and is cooled thereby. It then passes through a series of sheet iron baffles that remove all suspended and entrained moisture. The air next passes through the bank of heating coils that raise its temperature to the required degree. From here it is distributed through a proper system of ducts so that every part of the house received the same proportion of new air. The old air is exhausted by fans, and is either discharged out doors, or in cold weather, part of it is recirculated, being mixed with the new air entering the air washer, in order to save fuel.

A Statement of Great Importance to Theatre Owners

Please read carefully the following statement. It deserves the earnest consideration of every theatre owner and manager. It is possible with a well designed ventilating system equipped with a properly designed air washer to maintain a temperature at least 10 degrees Fahrenheit lower throughout the summer months than the outside dry bulb temperature in practically every part of this country. Is there a theater in the country that would not be packed throughout the hot summer days and nights if it was ten degrees cooler than the outside? This, regardless of the quality of the show too. It may be well to state here that a difference in temperature between inside and outside of more than ten degrees becomes uncomfortable and is not desired.

Cannot the live and progressive show man see the advantage in making capital of the very air that permeates his theatre by increasing the comfort, health, and enjoyment of his patrons thereby, and thus creating widespread publicity and good will?

The public has demanded better, finer, and more costly theatres, they have demanded better shows—and their demands have had to be met. The public is now becoming educated as to what constitutes health and comfort in theatre air conditioning, and they will make their wants known in no uncertain terms.

Why not provide your patrons with a laundered atmosphere—anticipate their wants and win their approval and patronage!

Associate Members' Division of Supply Dealers Formed

There has been formed a division of the Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America, composed of Associate members only. The purpose of this division is t opermit the Associate Members to act or pass upon any resolutions, agreements, laws and regulations taken up by the Active members.

This division gives the Associate Members an organization, in a sense, that is separate from the main body tho functioning in harmony and co-operation

It has been decided upon to hold the annual meeting of the Supply Dealers' Association at Cleveland, July 17, 18 and 19. Agood attendance is predicted.

Check Depreciation

In Your Theatre Chairs Before it is too Late

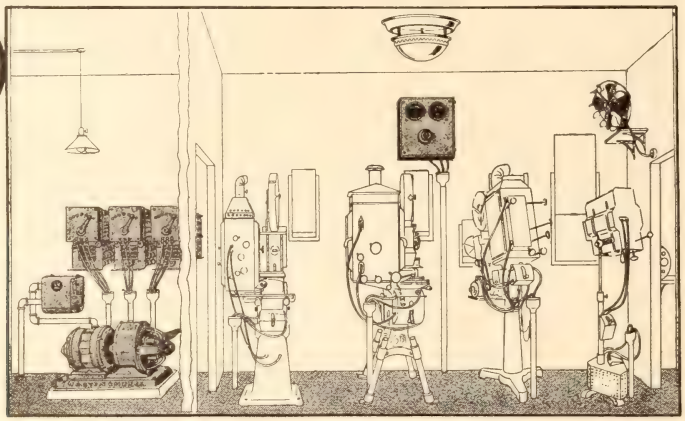
RECEIVING as they do the hardest individual daily use of any one single item of theatre equipment, Theatre Chairs are the most likely to show the marks of wear and depreciation. Next to pictures and program, no feature should be guarded more against failure to please and satisfy your patrons. As every good manager knows, it is the combination of comfortable chairs and pleasing surroundings in your auditorium with good bills on screen and stage that build dependable patronage and sure profits year in and year out.

As specialists in Theatre Seating, with an experience covering many years and thousands of theatre chair installations we know that we can be of assistance to you in appraising fairly and efficiently the exact box office and patron value of your present theatre chair equipment.

If your seating is not clearly up to the standard that you must maintain to safeguard the prestige and patronage you now enjoy, you want to know that more than we. It will cost you nothing to take us into your confidence. Our advice you will find disinterested and honest.

Poor seating is a poor investment in the first place but a still poorer one to hold on to.

Make today "Chair Inspection Day" in your theatre. Come into it as though a total stranger and try out your chairs yourself, by sitting out a show or more. Try them on yourself.



Then if you are in the least doubt of their entire suitability, write us to secure, without obligation, a theatre seating engineer's candid opinion.

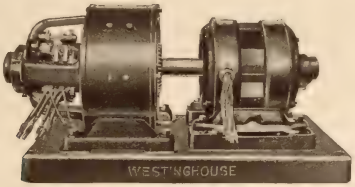
Electrical-Equipment for

No part of the entire equipment for a motion picture theatre is more important than the electrical equipment for projecting the picture on the screen.

The experience of Westinghouse in designing motor-generator equipment for motion picture projection means much when made use of. This experience has been acquired by actual contact with the various problems of better projection, affording a thorough knowledge of the apparatus necessary to produce the best results.



Westinghouse equipment is sold through distributors who are representative dealers in the entire equipment for a motion picture theatre—they have complete information on Westinghouse Motion Picture Projection Equipment and will be glad to assist you in selecting the proper electrical equipment for your theatre.

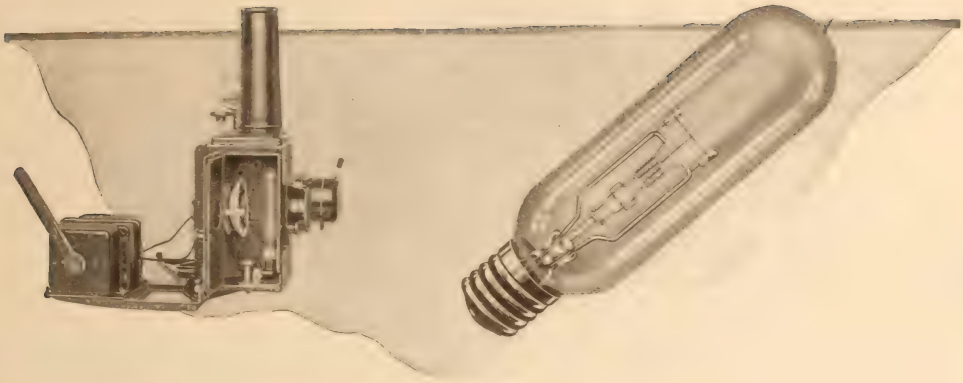
Fenway Theatre, Boston, which has recently been acquired by Paramount. This theatre which has always been one of the leaders in Boston, has been subjected to a thorough renovation and now vies with the most modern houses. New equipment is also installed, including a Wurlitzer organ.

Fenway Theatre Undergoes Renovation That Adds to its Popularity

AFTER having served for many years as one of the most popular motion picture houses in the City of Boston, as well as enjoying an established clientele of the better sort, the Fenway theatre, on Massachusetts avenue, has been taken over by the Paramount interests as their key city house in the Boston territory. Not that the change has in any way detracted from the house standing, having on the other hand served as an example of the possibilities latent within the comparatively small theatre.



The Fenway was closed down for a thorough revamping process when Paramount took hold, and for several weeks remained dark. When it did finally reopen there was but little sign of the old theatre left. The first striking feature to come in sight was of course the huge electric sign and marquis that was added, the vertical name sign reaching almost to the top of the building, the name being surrounded with a flasher. The panels on the marquis were also outlined with flasher connections, and later after the structure had been in place for some time, the whole bottom of the marquis was covered with frosted globes on every cross beam and about the edges. It became the outstanding feature on the avenue after dark.

Considerable rearrangement was effected in various parts of the interior, though most of the work found necessary was backstage. Here there was no equipment at all. The entire stage was completely equipped and lighted, and the stage floor itself was raised so that a better view might be afforded from all parts of the house. A Wurlitzer organ is one of the popular features of this theatre.

Perhaps the most startling of all the changes wrought was that affecting the appearance of the auditorium itself. The house was one of the older type, very much inclined to be long and narrow, giving the impression, without the use of decorative skill, of being somewhat in the nature of a tunnel. The general color scheme carried out through the theatre was silver grey, and by a clever use of darker tints and colors in the vicinity of the stage, and on the fore-stage occupied by the orchestra, did away entirely with the "tunnel" effect, seemed to bring the stage forward at the same time widening the auditorium itself. A glance at the auditorium photograph will confirm this, as the effect still persisted to the camera's eye. This feature alone has been the cause of much comment of a favorable nature.

As the house stands today in its new dress, it is one of the most luxuriously appointed houses, considering its size, in this part of the country. As far as interior appointments go, practically the whole thing was made over. The seats alone for the most part were left intact, though in the process of renovating they had to be all taken up. Such rearrangement and renewal as was found necessary was left in the hands of the American Seating Company. A feature of the furnishing was the fact that instead of a strip of carpet down the aisles, and perhaps others between seat rows, the entire floor was laid with a thick pile of carpet in a deep maroon shade.

Things were found in very good shape as far as the projection elements went. A very good screen was in place, but an unfortunate accident in the work of fitting the stage destroyed it. A new Raven screen was installed. New spotlights were also installed. Another feature, very noticeable to those who knew the old house are the very artistic lighting fixtures installed by Black and Boyd of New York City.

Good Pictures on Alternating Current With the G-E Incandescent Lamp Projector

The General Electric Company's Incandescent Lamp Projector gives constant, even and steady illumination for motion pictures. It can be used successfully in theatres having a main floor seating capacity up to 1000, at a throw not exceeding 120 feet and with a picture not exceeding 16 feet wide. It gives better results than an a-c. arc and is the equal of the d-c. arc up to 50 amperes.

It has other important advantages:

Adaptability: The G-E Incandescent Lamp Projector can be attached to any projection machine made in the United States.

Economy: The 900-watt Mazda lamp and regulator consume but 1 kw. an hour as against 4 kw. an hour consumed by a 50-ampere d-c. arc. The cost of lamp renewals does not exceed the cost of carbons for the arc and there is a further saving in the absence of any carbon dust to injure the delicate moving parts of the projection machine.

Simplicity: The Incandescent Lamp Projector requires no adjustments while operating.

Healthfulness: Being hermetically sealed the Mazda lamp gives off no fumes nor dust to contaminate the atmosphere of the projection room.

Two Different Types of Images Formed by Curved Mirrors

Lesson II — Part IV
The Convex Mirror

THE use of curved mirrors for the formation of images brings out the fact that there are two types of images which differ from each other in the following respects:

1. If the position of the image is the same as that of the object (not turned upside down) it is called erect.
2. If the position of the image is turned upside down as regards the object it is referred to as being inverted.
3. When the image is such that it is formed somewhere out in space and thus be received on a piece of paper and rendered visible it is called real.
4. When the rays of light from the object diverge after being reflected from the mirror no image can be formed out in space, since all the rays from any one point on the object do not cross, or come together to form an image at that point. It is possible, however, to form an apparent image by prolonging the reflected rays back to the points from which they apparently come. The necessary crossing of all rays from any one point is thus accomplished and such an apparent image is called a virtual image.

To summarize, we have: REAL, VIRTUAL, ERECT and INVERTED images. Usually, though not always, real images are inverted and virtual images are erect.

Image Construction

Of course, the Law of Regular Reflection which states that the angle of incidence is equal to the angle of reflection holds for all mirrored surfaces whether plane or curved. It is possible, therefore to trace out the paths of the individual light rays as they leave the object and are reflected by the mirror. It is unnecessary however, to go to this tedious method of locating the image since, by means of the two principal rays mentioned in last week's article it is possible to determine both the location and size of the image.

Thus, in Fig. 15, the arrow OB represents an object placed a certain distance in front of the convex mirror LK having its center of curvature at C and its focus (equal to half the radius) at f. If line OR is now drawn parallel to the axis AC, the ray of light which this line represents will be reflected in such a direction as to make it appear to come originally from the focus at f. Line RF then represents the apparent path of this ray within the mirror. If another line is drawn from point O to the center of curvature C, the actual light itself, OT, will be at right angles to the mirror and hence will be reflected back on its own path.

Now the crossing point of the rays OR and OT, after reflection will mark the position of the image of point O. Since the two rays outside the mirror are diverging their crossing point must lay within the mirror at point I. Since the reflected rays do not actually cross there can be no real image and the apparent crossing point I represents the apparent, or virtual image of point O.

This same construction is carried out for point B on the object and its virtual image is located at point M within the mirror. Thus, IM represents the virtual image of object OB and since the image occupies the same relative position as the object (not inverted) it is erect and smaller than the object.

Examples of Images

It may be stated here that all images formed by convex mirrors are virtual, erect, smaller than the object and are located between the mirror and focus.

When an object, such as the sun, is located a tremendous distance away from the mirror, all the rays striking it are practically parallel and the image is then seen as a pinpoint located at the focus of the mirror.

A combination of convex and concave mirrors can often be seen in amusement parks forming grotesque images of all persons and objects within the field of the mirror. The explanation is as follows. The general shape of the mirror is that of a panel containing three distinct mirrors. The top of the panel is shaped in the form of a convex cylindrical mirror; the center has a concave cylindrical shape; and the bottom is again turned into a convex cylindrical shape like the top. Looked at from the side the edge of the mirror would resemble a wavy line.

Now a person standing before the mirror would see an image of himself having an extremely small head from the top convex mirror. The center of his body, in turn, would be shaped like a balloon due to the magnified erect image from the concave mirror. Then the feet would be extremely small as a result of the small image formed by the bottom convex mirror.

Ordinarily, concave mirrors form inverted images but in this particular type the center mirror has such a large center of curvature that any object reasonably close to the mirror will be between the focal point and the mirror itself and so an erect image will be formed.

Convex Mirror Formula

The determination of image locations by means of the two principal rays mentioned before is only possible in the case of extended objects, that is, those having an appreciable size. Where the object is very small or distant from the mirror, it is sometimes impossible to use this graphical method unless a magnified scale is used to enlarge the figures.

There is a formula, however, by means of which it is possible to accurately determine the position of the image. This is as follows:

$$\frac{1}{u} - \frac{1}{v} = \frac{2}{r} \quad \text{or}$$

$$\frac{1}{u} + \frac{1}{f} = \frac{1}{v}$$

As a practical example suppose, object O (Fig. 16) is located 8 inches from mirror LK which has a radius of curvature of 4 inches

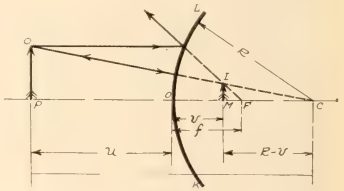

Figure 16

(hence f = 2 inches). The position of the image will be as follows:

$$\frac{1}{8} + \frac{1}{2} = \frac{1}{v}$$

$$0.125 + 0.5 = \frac{1}{v}$$

$$v = 1.6 \text{ inches}$$

In other words, image I will be found 1.6 from the mirror as shown in Fig. 16. This however, tells us nothing about the size of the image and to determine this we must refer again to Fig. 16. Since the bottom of image I and object Orest on the axis, PC, and line OC touches the top of both object and image, the two triangle OCP and ICM is to the corresponding side of triangle ICM as any other side of the first triangle is to the corresponding side of the second. Or

$$\frac{IM}{OP} = \frac{MC}{PC}$$

This says that the size of image IM is to the size of object OP as the distance of image from center, C, is to the distance of object also from center C. This can be written in another way

$$IM = OP \frac{R - V}{R + U}$$

Steiner Appointed Sales Manager Mills Novelty Co.

Harry E. Steiner, formerly sales manager and vice-president of the Holcomb & Hoke Manufacturing Company, Indianapolis, has just been appointed general sales manager of The Mills Novelty Company, Chicago, in charge of sales of the Famous Mills Violana, the Mills Electric Piano and other musical instruments.

Mr. Steiner has been in the specialty selling field for many years and has achieved a widespread reputation for his original selling methods. Before he associated himself with the Holcomb & Hoke Company he was sales manager of the Aluminum Products Company.

Mr. Steiner states that the Mills Novelty Co. will soon enter upon a special advertising campaign in various trade journals as well as direct mail activities. The account is to be handled by The Richardson–Briggs Company, Cleveland.

U. S. N. Projectionists' Visit Nich. Power Co.

Graduates of the United States Navy School for Motion Picture Projectionists, Brooklyn Navy Yard, who are about to return to their ships are shown in the accompanying photograph which was taken in the offices of the Nicholas Power Company, No. 90 Gold Street, New York. This class accompanied by Chief Electrician's Mate A. Middleton, who is in charge of the Navy Motion Picture School in Brooklyn, paid a visit to the Power's plant and were taken through the factory by M. D. O'Brien, Travelling Representative of the Nicholas Power Company. O'Brien was in charge of the Navy School prior to coming to the Nicholas Power Company several years ago.

In addition to the excellent school which the Navy Department conducts in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, the Government also operates a film exchange which is one of the largest in the world. Excellent programs, including many first run pictures, are supplied by the United States Navy Film Exchange, and these are sent regularly to all ships in port or at sea.

The Government has been very liberal in this matter and it is generally recognized that the entertainments given on board American naval vessels make a favorable comparison with those given in the best American theatres.

This illustrates how billboards can be designed and used in an attractive way. This advertising installation was built by the Strand and Victory Theatres, Tampa, Fla.

Farm Light and Power Plant Serves Garage and Theatre

AN ingenious method of getting the greatest service possible out of his small light and power plant has been devised by G. T. Blakely of Vincentown, N. J., who transports his generating outfit in a truck between a garage and theater, thus making use of it in two widely separated places. Most of the time, the unit, a Westinghouse Type E–60, is kept at the garage, where it charges a 6000 watt-hour battery supplying current for lighting the building. Once or twice a week when the moving picture theater is operated, the plant is loaded on a truck and transported to the theater. Without being removed from the truck, the outfit is hooked up by a pair of flexible leads to a weatherproof outlet box on the side of the building from which wires run to a storage battery inside. The generator is operated during the moving picture show and the battery only used as a standby. When the play is over, the truck carries the set back to the garage, where it takes up its usual duties.

The load carried in the theater is a heavy one. It includes two motion picture machines, with 600 watt Mazda lamps, four 50 watt lights in the main hall and two on the outside of the building. There are also three 20-watt lights in the operating room, one in the ticket booth, one over the piano, and one in the entrance hall.

Billboards Planted in Country by Progressive Exhibitors

That billboards can be made so attractive they are really an ornament, is proven by this photo of one of the classy stands now being erected in Tampa, Fla., and the surrounding territory, by that combination of hustlers, R. C. "Jack" Frost, manager of the Strand, and Jno. B. Carroll, manager of the Victory.

This is one of their "country shots," erected at Six Mile Creek, on the most traveled highway in the State of Florida. A check was made this winter and shows that an average of 2,500 cars pass here daily.

Billboards, however, are only a small part of the advertising done by these theatres, for they are the largest users of space in the Tampa papers and put out several hundred window cards each week.

News on Theatres Constructed and Sold From Southwest District

A NEW $250,000 motion picture theatre will be erected at the northeast corner of High and Charlotte streets, Pottstown, Pa. Bennethum & Snyder, theatrical promoters, expect to have the building operation begun early in the spring.

The new Bradentown (Fla.) Theatre will be ready for opening about March 1. It will have a seating capacity of about 1,200 and has been leased for a long term by J. Sparks Enterprises.

A new motion picture theatre will be erected at Russell, Kansas, in the near future.

A motion picture theatre is now under construction at Big Lake, Tex.

It is reported that a new modern motion picture theatre will soon open at West, Texas, and will present pictures as the policy.

The new Strand theatre recently opened at Minden, Neb., to a very pleasing business.

Several new motion picture theatres are now under construction in Oklahoma and Kansas. They are purchasing and installing the very latest and finest in projection room equipment. Business is reported to be getting better and better. A number of theatres have changed managment and have been sold. Quite a few theatres are now installing late type projection machines and other equipment to make their houses up-to-date in every respect. Texas also reports good business in the theatre line.

The Rialto Theatre, Camden, Ark., is being built at a cost of $75,000. Will be ready to open early in the spring. Will be under the management of E. C. Robertson.

A. Easton will operate a cinema theatre at Belleville, Ill. Pictures will be the opening policy of the new house.

Elmer Lewis has recently purchased the old opera house at Watonga, Okla.

A. Kreamer has purchased the Rialto theatre at Stanton, Neb., and will conduct same as a first class motion picture theatre.

The W. O. W. Lodge has purchased a motion picture theatre at Wilber, Neb., and will operate same as a motion picture theatre in the near future.

The new municipal theatre at Lancaster, Wis., will be known as the Grantland theatre hereafter.

F. E. Wesp has recently taken over the management of the Liberty Theatre at Kelso, Wash. Mr. Wesp has had many years experience in the show game and will no doubt make a huge success of the new house. The writer wishes him every success in the world. Pictures will be the policy for the present.

Claude Kelly has purchased the new Hiway and Victory theatres of Remond, Ore., and will present first run features as the policy of both houses.

George W. Latesner has purchased the Empress theatre, Central City, Neb., from M. H. Garvin.

Wesley Trout, Enid, Okla., reports the sale of supplies to the new Empress theatre, Enid, Okla. This theatre supply house has recently been made agents for the complete Automatic Ticket Company line of products, handling special printed tickets and their Gold Seal Ticket machines.

The picture theatre at Ismay, Wash., under the management of J. H. Moga, opened recently to a very pleasing business.

which says that the size of image IM is equal to the size of object OP times the radius of curvature minus distance v. divided by the radius of curvature plus the distance u.

In the example before cited if the size of the object had been 2 inches the image would have been

$$IM = 2\ \frac{4 - 1.6}{4 + 8}$$

$$IM = \frac{2 \times 2.4}{8}$$

$$= \frac{4.8}{8}$$

$$IM = 0.6 \text{ inches high}$$

This checks with the statement made once before that the size of the image formed by a convex mirror is always smaller than the object and lies between the mirror and its focal point.

Cameo, Brooklyn, Equipped by Hornstein, Installs Five Simplex

A MOST important installation of Simplex equipment recently recorded is that at the Cameo Theatre, Brooklyn. The installation at the Cameo, which is the latest of the Weingarten chain of Greater New York theatres, is but another successful achievement of the Howells Cine Equipment of which Joe Hornstein is the aggressive manager.

The Cameo is located at the corner of Van Nostrand Avenue and Eastern Parkway, which latter thoroughfare is called "the Riverside Drive of Brooklyn," and is considered one of the most beautiful theatres within the five boroughs.

Three motor driven Type "S" Simplex Projectors are located in the projection room of the theatre proper, while two similar machines form the projection equipment on the Cameo Theatre Roof Garden, which garden for size and appointments in itself outstrips the average modern theatre.

Mr. Hornstein, whose services to the Weingarten chain date back some years, is proud of the fact that Mr. Weingarten in opening his Parthenon Theatre purchased the first three Simplexes that Mr. Hornstein handled. This order was closely followed by a duplicate order for the Pantheon Theatre, Bronx, another Weingarten house, so with the building of the Cameo, Mr. Hornstein was given carte-blanche to make this latest installation, one which represents everything that is modern in the way of projection room equipment and development. Besides the five Simplex Projectors which are equipped with every latest Simplex device, are two 110 ampere motor generator sets, are controls, speed indicators, special high power jaws, Superlite lenses and other accessories all of which tend to elevate the Cameo projection room to a standard in keeping with the other units of this unusual theatre.

Marr & Colton Organ for Philadephia Theatre

Robert Lynch of Philadelphia, a well-known Metro distributor and prominent exhibitor, has purchased a Marr & Colton Organ for his Pastime Theatre, Philadelphia.

The greatest showman-producer in this business is, beyond a doubt–

CECIL B. DE MILLE

The greatest showman-picture DeMille ever produced is, beyond a doubt–

"TRIUMPH!"

WITH

Leatrice Joy, Rod La Rocque

and typical DeMille all star cast

IN "Triumph", De Mille returns to the gorgeous girls, gowns and settings of "Manslaughter" and "Male and Female". An ultra-modern society love story adapted by Jeanie Macpherson from May Edginton's Saturday Evening Post serial and novel.

Other featured players: Victor Varconi, Charles Ogle, Julia Faye, Theodore Kosloff, Robert Edeson, Zasu Pitts, George Fawcett, Raymond Hatton.

Reviews that mean Business

AT THE RIVOLI.

"THE DAWN OF A TO-MORROW."

"The Dawn of a Tomorrow" is a fine motion picture. Frances Hodgson Burnett's book and play, which might so easily have been brought to the screen dripping with sentimental gush, has with rare discretion and infectious acting been made into one of the finest pictures of the year. It is at the Rivoli this week and ought to be seen by all who think there's not much sense in going to the pictures at all.

This is a [illegible] slums, of a [illegible] boy of [illegible]

New York World

George Melford's "DAWN OF A TOMORROW"

Boys, here's a real clean-up!

Read the review the hard-boiled New York World critic wrote about "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" above. See the great reviews in the other papers. Look over the crowds that are filling the Rivoli every performance this week.

Then you'll KNOW Melford has made one of the biggest pictures of the year out of the world-famous novel and play by Frances Hodgson Burnett (Adapted by Harvey Thew).

Book it while it's hot!

"GALLOPING GALLAGHER"

WITH THE NEW BIG WESTERN STAR

Fred Thomson

WORLD'S CHAMPION ALL 'ROUND ATHLETE AND STUNT MAN

Directed by ALBERT ROGELL

a Harry J. Brown Production

"GALLOPING GALLAGHER" is No. 3 of F. B. O.'s Big Six Series of fast action Western Pictures. No Western Star has flashed so brilliantly across the movie horizon as has FRED THOMSON, champion athlete and stunt man, and his marvelous horse SILVER KING.

Here are real showmen's ingredients for money making. A great horse, his great master, hurricane stories with youth, love, romance and high speed action.

"GALLOPING GALLAGHER" will pull 'em in and please 'em mightily. Lots of powerful advertising material to help you get the crowds out.

Read under the heading "'WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME" in Exhibitors Herald about this series of Six Big Westerns and you'll book 'em.

SPECIAL SHORT SUBJECT NEWS

A Whirl of Speed in Universal Short Subjects Programs

THE LIVE showman who is writing profits into his bank account every week has learned that he can't risk pleasing some of the people all of the time, or all of the people some of the time. He is the one man in the world who must please all of the people all of the time. That's why Universal Short Subjects meet his demand.

Whirlwind Pace Set by "Ghost City"

"THE picture captured our intense admiration. Action is so rapid and intense the audience draws a deep breath of relief after each mishap."—"Exhibitors Trade Review." That's what was promised and that's what has been performed. Pete Morrison is building a big following in this series and you are building profits when you book them.

"Leather Pushers" Went Over Big

"NONE could be better than Billy Sullivan. Fourth Series went over very big" wires O. L. Meister, Manager of the White House Theatre in Milwaukee, Wis. They crackle with action and breathe the very life of the ropes arena. They are taken from H. C. Witwer's Collier's Weekly stories — read by the nation. You need the Leather Pushers series.

"Business Beyond Expectations!" with VALENTINO

NOW comes Manager Cliff A. Schaufele of the Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ont., Canada, with "Business beyond expectations."

It was the same story in St. Paul where Manager Joseph Friedman at the Tower Theatre did a business of sensational volume all week. One of the most sensational bookings of a short feature on record is Mareus Loew's booking of this subject for 35 houses in the metropolitan district of New York and for cities in 9 other states!

Valentino in "A Society Sensation" is an unfailing hit. This Universal reissue is out making profits wherever shown and no exhibitor can afford to miss the opportunity to cash in on this release. Valentino's name in your lobby means cash volume in receipts.

In "Nobody to Love" your audiences will be convulsed with laughter at the other fellow's troubles in and out of jail. It's a one-reel Universal Comedy riot.

Thrills in the News an Audience Does Not Forget

WHATEVER the caprice of human nature that affords the next big thrill in the day's news, wherever or whenever it happens, the International News cameraman will be there to catch it for your expectant audiences. And if ingenuity can help interest, then the International News No. 24 offers the first animated diagram of the 24,934 mile air journey around the world as plotted by the United States Air Service, together with close-ups of the men who will make the attempt. Intimate views of the Tea-Pot Dome hearings at Washington, action scenes of the Army and Navy, object lesson in safety first dramas of the street, panoramas of the storm-wrecked Connecticut coast, fleet-footed runners of France trying for the Olympic games, horses at the horse show, a baby athlete on a dreadnought of the Navy,—these and many other interest-compelling picture-paragraphs of world news are offered in International News.

Fast Outdoor Action in New Westerns

NOTHING is being left undone to make this group of Universal two-reel Westerns the best the industry ever produced. Flawless as to story value, matchless for fidelity to detail and characterization, perfect as to audience appeal and fan interest, the material for this series has been drawn from the best short stories of popular authors. That the exhibitors who select them may enjoy the advantage of ready-made audiences, the stars have been carefully selected—Pete Morrison, Bob Reeves, Jack Mower, Jack Dougherty, Neal Hart, Wm. E Lawrence and Robert Hayes. With such a combination of story, author and star, casting and direction, these Westerns in the Universal Short Subjects are features condensed.

These are the fast-action Westerns your audiences are waiting for. It is with absolute confidence that they will be presented as profit-yielding entertainment to the showmen of the country. Your booking should be made now.

SPORTING YOUTH (6,712 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. A whale of a picture; simply a knockout. If anyone did not like this one we failed to see them. Believe it pleased one hundred per cent. Can't go wrong on this one; boost it to the sky. It will stand anything you can do for it. Moral tone good and it is suitable for Sunday. Had big attendance. Draw best class in town of 8,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

Sporting Youth, with Reginald Denny.—Man, Oh man, what a picture! If there ever was a picture that is 100 per cent, this one is.

This picture has everything that it takes to make a picture: Romance, comedy and thrills galore. An actual automobile race that was staged at Santa Monica, with wrecks that are real wrecks. It made our patrons stand up and howl and clap their hands when the auto race was in progress, and when the rival car was gaining you could hear groans all over the house. It is that interesting. Everybody doubly satisfied. Big business too.

Boys, if you can get this picture do so. It is brand new here, and for that matter, is just released, and if J. C. ever gets a good look at the leading lady Denny has in this picture he will forsake Vfola sure. Seven reels was entirely too short for this picture.—C. H. Powers, Strand Theatre, Dunsmuir. Cal.

THE SPICE OF THE PROGRAM

Hitting the Mark

A GOOD hearty laugh is the mark at which every screen comedy aims. When it hits the mark, the comedy is the finest of film entertainment, for what could be a better treat than a real hearty laugh?

Their reputation for consistently hitting this mark explains why comedies bearing the Educational Pictures trade-mark are favorites with all picture goers who enjoy a good laugh—and why the best theatres show Mermaid Comedies, Christie Comedies, Hamilton Comedies, Juvenile Comedies, Tuxedo Comedies and Cameo Comedies.

And the theatre which gives you the best in Short Subjects has many things to offer besides a laugh—thrilling drama, novelty, scenic beauty, an occasional community "sing", the news in pictures, wonderful revelations of the microscope, all the newest marvels of motion picture photography. For all these things are to be found in Wilderness Tales by Robert C. Bruce, Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge, "Secrets of Life", the Sing Them Again Series, Kinograms (news-reel) and Specials such as "Plastigrams", the Third-Dimension Movie.

The Educational Pictures trade-mark is your assurance of a good laugh, real entertainment and a liberal education.

All over the country there is a great revival of the songs we used to sing. Three great radio broadcasting stations in Chicago asked what songs the people liked best. More than 70 per cent of the 100,000 replies favored the old familiar songs over the modern jazz.

All over the country wide-awake exhibitors are turning this love of the old songs into box-office profit.

To My Exhibitor Friends

I have never before written an advertisement and only because of my great faith in the success of my last picture, "BY DIVINE RIGHT," am I writing these few words to my many exhibitor friends.

"BY DIVINE RIGHT," made by the Grand-Ascher Company, is one of the finest pictures in which I have ever acted. It has everything. It has thrills, it has a most astounding train wreck, it has drama carried to the very highest degree, it has happiness, romance, beauty and great appeal.

It is the kind of motion picture that builds up at the box office each succeeding day. Although it was released by the Film Booking Offices just a few days ago, I have already had a number of letters from Exhibitors expressing their satisfaction with the splendid results of the picture. This is all very gratifying of course.

I am intensely interested in seeing "BY DIVINE RIGHT" played in as many theatres as possible throughout the world because it carries such a big theme.

It is easy to watch. It is simple to understand. It is fine, wholesome, and most refreshing in the character of entertainment that it provides.

I hope that I am able to make more pictures as big as "BY DIVINE RIGHT." The excellent advertising material provided for the picture by the Film Booking Offices, if properly used, will hit with telling effect at your box offices.

I commend it to all my exhibitor friends. I know it will make money for you all.

Cordially and sincerely yours,

Elliott Dexter

VOL. XXIX NEW YORK APRIL 5, 1924 NO. 14

The Thief of Bagdad

"THE Thief of Bagdad" is such an exceptional accomplishment that it deserves, it seems to us, much more than passing notice here.

We are inclined to view it apart from purely trade considerations — the fact that it will not reach the picture theatres for a long time, its box-office value as compared with other big pictures, including Fairbanks' own previous successes, etc., etc.

There are times when all of us can well lift our eyes above the box-office roof, and this is one of them. There are pictures now and then that greatly broaden our mental horizon as picture people — and this is one of the greatest of all these uplooking pictures.

I would like to give what I am about to quote as my own judgment of this remarkable picture. It was given me by a man who, I believe, is as competent to judge as any man in the world today. He says of "The Thief of Bagdad" — "This great phantasy is one of the finest works in the history of art. I have seen it again and again and each time I marvel more at it. It is superb. It will, I feel, send Fairbanks down in history along with the best names of the renaissance period."

We don't like to lean over backward; but we do agree with this estimate. And if it is correct it must mean much to Mr. Fairbanks; but also it means much to the motion picture and therefore to the industry and its box-office.

It is obvious that Douglas Fairbanks, keen showman though he is, had much more in mind than the box-office when he planned and executed "The Thief of Bagdad." He departs from his former well-established role, completely — and in his new one he aims his bow straight up at the blue sky of idealism. That was courageous, but also he has lavished time and money upon his art effort, so that today it stands as the most expensively produced picture to date. And he has splendidly and completely achieved just what he set out to do. He has made an art triumph.

Whenever a long step — such a long step as this is taken, when the production ship breaks loose from its trade moorings, we are inclined to gasp and wonder — wonder where it will land, which means, how will it do at the box-office.

From that part we believe that "The Thief of Bagdad" will find abroad the greatest reception ever accorded an American picture, and in this country it will hold the Fairbanks following and greatly add to it.

But the point is this: If we are to tread altogether in the box-office path, with "safety first" as a slogan; if we are to talk nothing but box-office jargon, we will never rise to the picture heights. We will hold fast to the dead level of mediocrity and to the twenty percent attendance. It is not merely a question of art attainment; it is a question of putting life into picture theatre attendance, of putting zeal into production, of putting pride of possession into all who claim a place in the ranks of the industry.

We need revivals in this business—need them badly. When Billy Sunday preaches in a town the churches fill up after he has departed. And so will "The Thief of Bagdad" prove a spur to public interest in motion pictures; and so will all these occasional departures from the beaten path, these highly courageous and admirable steps forward.

We talk too much box-office stuff. It sounds wise but often it isn't. Our great and successful efforts are not due to hindsight; and that is true of all creative fields.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

SCREEN premieres in New York are rapidly becoming a nightly occurrence — also a menace. Time was a few years ago when one could promenade the Great White Way and discover but one or two pictures housed in a theatre for a continuous run—and no enthusiastic demonstration was offered by the amusement seekers. This season has presented one premiere after another—and lucky is the patron who can escape the milling crowd outside—and reach his seat without feeling that he has participated in a football game.

That the screen premiere offers a magnet for the star worshippers can be testified to any evening in which one is presented. The crowds have surged about the theatres—and overflowed into the lobbies—and the ticket holder must walk or run the gauntlet to his seat, perhaps losing hat, his poise and temper on the way.

We have had premieres of "The Courtship of Myles Standish," "The Ten Commandments," "The White Sister," "America," "Abraham Lincoln," "Scaramouche," "Little Old New York," "Thy Name Is Woman," "The Great White Way," "Secrets," "Yolanda," "A Woman of Paris," and "The Thief of Bagdad." And dense mob scenes outside the theatres have figured in each presentation.

Any pedestrian not knowing his Broadway at all could guess, when sauntering by a theatre, that if a huge gaping crowd is parked outside there is a premiere of a picture inside. The legitimate drama does not attract them. They have come to see the film stars treading the common ground with them. They wish to brush elbows with these personages of the screen.

This milling crowd is an easy and effective tie-up for publiciy campaigns. Look beyond the outskirts and you will discover the flashlight photographers ready to snap the evidence.

But the REAL SELLING VALUE of the picture for the exhibitor rests with the crowds who patronize it night after night—not with the hero worshippers who surge outside for the premiere. It's about time the bluecoats used their well known slogan: KEEP MOVING.

DURING the controversy over the revenue measure in the Lower House, Representative Blanton of Texas declared himself on the admission tax. He would assess every patron paying an admission price above 20 cents. His proposal inspired an editorial in the March 9th issue of the Waco Times-Herald which is reproduced as follows:

"When the revenue measure was pending in the House of Representatives at Washington, Mr. Blanton of Texas offered an amendment to 'strike out 50 and insert in lieu thereof 20.' This had reference to admissions to theatres. The committee report had taken off all taxes on admissions up to and including 50 cents. Mr. Blanton wished to lay a tax on all above 20 cents. The House rejected the Blanton proposal. And it seems to us that the House was right in the matter. The people want high-class amusement and a tax interferes to a considerable extent with the fulfillment of this desire. It is a pity that any tax has to be levied against the stage, whether spoken or silent. For the stage is educational. But non-interference below the 50-cent mark is some contribution to better productions, and it is the better production that concerns the patron of the theatre."

IT is a trifle early for the football season, though they are engaging in spring practise at Yale and Princeton — which may be one of the reasons why Sam Rork of Los Angeles is in town. The main reason may be summed up in Mr. Rork's own words:

"It isn't that I love football less, but that I love pictures more."

The Los Angeles producer and impresario is asking New York —"WHAT HAVE YOU?"

IT is a matter of common knowledge that the editorial offices of a newspaper offer the best training school for those endowed with any spark of imagination. Reporters in daily contact with life become keen, accurate observers—and even if they do not follow a literary career, their newspaper association gives them a mental alertness which entitles them to fit their grooves.

This is by way of introducing the defunct New York Herald, which passed out as an individual newspaper last week. This daily was a training school for a host of men now prominent in the picture industry.

If you entered its editorial rooms seven years ago you would have found seated at one row of desks Tom Geraghty, C. Gardner Sullivan, Luther Reed, Harvey Thew, J. E. D. Meador, John Flinn, and such other perhaps less well known personages as William S. Gill, eastern sales manager for Rothacker Laboratories; Charles K. Ulrich, who wrote exploitation matter for Famous; F. W. Mordaunt Hall, motion picture critic of the New York Times; Leonard Mitchell, in charge of film renting for the U. S. Shipping Board; William Murphy, publicity for Fox, and Larry Semon who was a ranking cartoonist in those days.

BARNEY BERNARD, the creator of "Abe Potash" of the celebrated stage and screen firm of "Potash & Perlmutter," is dead after a brief illness from pneumonia. The actor, who made a nation laugh with his characterization of the excitable cloak and suit man, will be sadly missed because of his humanity expressed not only in his admirably limned portraits, but also when he came in contact with his fellow beings.

His death upsets the plans of Samuel Goldwyn to present Bernard and his partner, Alexander Carr, in "Potash & Perlmutter in Hollywood," production on which was to have started in about two weeks. Mr. Bernard hailed originally from San Francisco, but has made his home in New York for several years.

JOHN SPRINGER, owner and manager of the Seventy-seventh Street Theatre, New York, has hit on a plan to outwit thieves. He is not in complete agreement with Mayor Hylan and Commissioner Enright concerning their oft-repeated contention that New York is the safest and most free from crime community in the world. At each performance Mr. Springer flashes before his patrons' eyes this message in letters of glaring red:

"Warning — Do not leave wraps or any articles of value on backs of seats or seats adjoining, as the city is infested with thieves from all over the world."

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS and Mary Pickford leave Bagdad on the Subway for Cherbourg, April 12, sailing via the Olympic. This is but the first stop on a world tour—including the Scandinavian—which will take the celebrated couple through Paris, London, Brussels, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Christiana, Petrograd, Moscow, Vladivostok, Manila, Tokyo, Honolulu and eventually San Francisco. To cover this immense territory and be back in the States by June the stars will take along the magic carpet.

Just how Doug will get the daily box-office statement from the Liberty theatre in New York hasn't yet been determined, but if he takes our tip he will carry the magic crystal—and by peering into it in these far off places he will be able to count the house. Mary will have to forego the pleasure of attending the opening of "Dorothy Vernon" which occurs at the Criterion during the first week in May. During off moments they will study film conditions in the various cities on the schedule and approximate premiers for their latest productions will be arranged for.

Also included in the party are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fairbanks, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, Kenneth Davenport and little Mary Rupp.

THE following is presented without apologies. It is from the pen of Chester J. Smith, a News scribe; just a contribution to our campaign for better prints. Last man in the world, too, we'd expect to grow poetic, Smith is.

"A long way back in '49 when The Covered Wagon was doing its best
To traverse that land to the far, far west;
When they lighted their fire with steel and flint,
There was often heard the subject of "print."

A little further along in creation, about the time of the Birth of a Nation,
Some wise gink started a wide agitation;
Just look, said he, how the audience squints,
We gotter do something about picture prints.

And then the Four Horsemen came galloping in,
And started the multitude's plaudits to win.
But out in the tanks some called it a 'quince,'
Then once again came the howl about prints.

When Doug set 'em agog with his fantastical "Thief."
The campaign at its height was urging relief.
But even so early there came along hints
About boosts in the price and a lack of good prints.

St. Peter is talking up there at the gate:
'Zukor, Fox, Laemmle and Rowland, you're late.'
'Oh, pray, do forgive us,' they say with a wince,
'We were trying to settle that question of prints.'"

LOU MARANGELLA — press-agenting for himself — writes from the coast that he has donned grease paint for a bit in "Dollar Down," a forthcoming Ruth Roland feature. The erstwhile sheik of Longacre Square should make a go of it, according to a group of well-wishers from the Wampus who speak of him in two-dollar words. Here they are: "His histrionic and emotional abilities will eventually bring him great success as a screen luminary."

JACKIE COOGAN will desert the kliegs for ten weeks this summer in order to lead a modern "Children's Crusade" throughout the United States in an appeal to the children of America for a million dollar shipload of foodstuffs for the destitute orphans of the Near East. The youngster will sail in person to deliver the gifts to the Near East orphans in Greece, Palestine and Syria.

A worthy project and one which will endear him to the public as a real humanitarian as well as a real actor.

Just at present Jackie is enjoying a well-earned vacation after his arduous work before the camera. Accompanied by his parents and a few friends he has gone to a big ranch in the Sierras.

THAT innovation established several months ago by the Rock Island R.R., and which has been adopted by other roads, concerning the presentation of motion pictures in the dining car in order to relieve the tedium of the travelers, has been adopted in England — and Horace Judge, American publicist who not so long ago went back to his old home in London as publicity director for the English offices of First National, gets credit for proving Yankee initiative in service and exploitation.

He has sold the idea to a British railroad operating "The Flying Scotchman" and henceforth film shows will be held aboard that train in an effort to popularize rail traffic. The test has been made and the result was excellent — and the idea will probably open up a regular renting system with the rail officials because of the hearty praise accorded the novelty showing by the passengers.

IT was only a few years ago that Ann Pennington was one of the bright lights of the film. Now she has returned to the Kliegs again — after several seasons devoted exclusively to musical comedies and vaudeville. But she is not returning alone. She has taken Brooke Johns, with her — and they will support Gloria Swanson. The Follies entertainers will not forsake the stage during their flier in the films.

IT is, indeed, rare to find a story published while the picture upon which it is based is in the course of production. Yet Paramount offers two stories which are appearing serially in magazines as the pictures are being "shot." Thomas Meighan's production, "The Confidence Man," is running serially in Argosy-All Story Magazine, while "Manhandled" is running serially in two installments in Saturday Evening Post.

The plot of the latter as well as the title originated in the mind of Sidney R. Kent — and the task of elaborating upon the central idea and developing it into a story was entrusted to Arthur Stringer. The story appears in the Post under his name.

HARRY ROWSON, the London film magnate, believes English exhibitors and English audiences have a better sense of humor than he observed among Americans during a recent visit in the States.

In a recent conversation with Jack Woody he points out that the American slant on the Britisher's sense of humor is all wrong — and proves his case by showing Mr. Woody the following from a Piccadilly program:

"'One Week of Love' For Three Nights Only"
From a Strand Cinema is this:
"The management reserve the right to exclude any lady they think proper."
A Marble Arch Cinema announces:
"'Those Whom the Gods Destroy'
With a Cast of 8,000."
"That wins," said Woody.

Connecticut Theatre Owners Meet

National President Sydney S. Cohen Guest of Honor at Annual Session in New Haven

ACCOMPANIED by State President, R. F. Woodhull of New Jersey, and M. J. O'Toole, Chairman of the Public Service Department of the national organization, Sydney S. Cohen, National President of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, attended the annual convention of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut as the honor guest and was eulogized highly in a resolution adopted at the close of the meeting.

State President Joseph W. Walsh, of Hartford presided at the meeting and many matters of special importance to the Theatre Owners were considered which included processes for handling legislative matters in the state and different cities, as well as contributing in effort and otherwise as much as possible to necessary work of a like character in the Nation.

The Music Tax situation was also discussed and moves made to defend the cases for alleged infringement of the Copyright Laws brought against certain exhibitors in the state.

President Walsh was assisted by General Manager Louis Sagal of the Poli Theatre Circuit.

At the banquet Mr. Woodhull spoke in a pointed way of the need for organization among the exhibitors and illustrated how its effect had been felt in a very favorable way in regulating and improving conditions within the industry and Mr. O'Toole told of the movements made at Washington with respect to Admission and Seat Tax legislation and how the Screen Power of the exhibitor was making him a powerful factor for good in all communities and that the officials at Washington were cognizant of the great service this was to Government and people.

Mr. Cohen disclosed that at the Boston convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in May, he would retire from the Presidency and expressed hope that the zeal and fidelity manifested by the Theatre Owners of the country in sustaining the outstanding programs of the National Organization would increase in volume under the administration of his successor to the end that all exhibitor problems would be satisfactorily adjusted.

Bishop Succeeds Cloakey at Regent, Ottawa

Announcement has been made by N. L. Nathanson of Toronto, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., of the appointment of Leonard Bishop as manager of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, in succession to Oral D. Cloakey, who is leaving for Los Angeles, Cal., to become director of the exploitation department of Universal. Mr. Bishop is from the Canadian West, being well known in a number of the cities of the Western Provinces. Mr. Bishop has been manager of the Orpheum Theatre at Fort William, Ontario, a house controlled by Famous Players, and previous to this time he was manager of the Capitol Theatre at Winnipeg, Manitoba. He has also been identified with several picture theatres of importance in Calgary, Alberta, and other centres.

The appointment of Mr. Bishop to the Ottawa Regent was announced following a conference at Toronto between Mr. Nathanson and H. M. Thomas of Winnipeg, Western Division manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp.

"Movie Mashers" Fined by Cleveland Judge

Judge Moylan of Cleveland is handing out $25 fines to "movie mashers," who annoy women patrons in the picture theatres. Four men have been meted out fines to date.

A fifth offender has had his case continued until April 3d. Policewomen Frances Gratz and Emma Schuler have been assigned to round up "movie mashers." The movement has been backed by the Federation of Women's Clubs.

Music Tax Hearing April 9 Before Senate Patents Committee at Washington

THERE will be a public hearing at Washington on April 9 before the Senate Committee on Patents on the bill introduced by Senator Dill which would amend Section One of the Copyright Law, with particular reference to the so-called Music Tax.

The hearing will be held at 10 o'clock a. m. in Room 210 of the Senate Office Building. Senator Richard P. Ernst, chairman of the Committee, will preside.

The Dill measure is identical with the bill introduced in the House by Representative Newton. Its effect would be to eliminate the Music Tax by inserting the following provision: "And provided further, That the copyright control shall not extend to public performances for profit, of musical compositions where such performance is made from printed or written sheets or by reproducing devices issued under the authority of the owner of the copyright, or by the use of the radio or telephone or both."

Otherwise, the Dill-Newton bill, except for a few verbal changes, is the same as Section One of the law as it now exists.

Representatives of the M. P. T. O. A. and state exhibitors organizations will be in attendance at the hearing to urge the measure be reported favorably by the Committee. The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers will be on hand to oppose the change in the law.

The radio interests will also be represented, and will, of course, line up with exhibitor representatives in urging the passage of the bill.

Hearing Held on Jenks Children Bill

WITHOUT a single person speaking in favor of the Jenks bill which was introduced in the New York State Legislature on March 3, and is one of the several relating to the admission of unaccompanied children to motion picture theatres, the public hearing held at the State Capitol Tuesday afternoon showed plainly that the bill will never be reported out of committee. There were plenty of protests against the bill, these being mainly from Ernest K. Coulter, of New York, one of the heads of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children; Nathan Walker, John F. Hylan, and Canon Chase, all of New York city.

The Jenks bill provides that unaccompanied children, between the ages of 8 and 16 years may be admitted to motion picture theatres at such times during the day as will not conflict with school hours, but in no event later than 6 o'clock at night, providing the governing body of the city town or village adopts such an ordinance. In other words, it leaves the whole matter with the communities.

Mystery Surrounds Murder of Warner Watchman

The mysterious murder at Warner Brothers' west coast studio of Watchman R. Jansson last week has baffled both police and studio officials. Jansson, running and calling for help, collapsed in the arms of a passer-by and died at the receiving hospital without reviving sufficiently to throw any light on the shooting.

The dead man, reputed the strongest in Hollywood, is supposed to have surprised intruders rifling the carpenter shop and to have been shot while grappling with them. Two bullets took effect. Deceased was married, the father of two daughters and went to Hollywood from Chicago. He was 45 years old.

N. H. Gordon to Have Big New Theatre in Boston

Foundation work is well started, on one of the biggest real estate propositions that has been launched in Boston for some time, a feature of which will be a big picture theatre, to be known as the Capitol, and which will be run by the Olympia Theatres, Inc., Nathan Gordon, President, now constituting the largest chain in the territory.

The rest of the building, which will be capped by a high tower, will be a hotel. The structure will stand at the corner of Tremont and Hollis streets, centered in the theatre district, and dwarfing all around it. There will be several unusual features in the theatre, according to present plans.

Carolina Executive Committee Holds Meeting

A call was issued by President Henry B. Varner for a meeting of the executive committee of the North Carolina M.P.T.O., in Charlottee at the new Charlotte Hotel. March 26th.

It was planned to discuss many matters of importance relating to the functioning of the Joint Arbitration Board and the exact date of the annual convention to be held at Morehead City, was to be named.

Metro in Deal To Take Over Goldwyn

Hearst's Attitude in Doubt

NEGOTIATIONS are in progress for the amalgamation of Goldwyn with Metro, it was learned on unquestioned authority this week. Details of the deal have not yet been settled, but the indications are that it will be consummated.

The plan involves the taking over of Goldwyn by Metro. Whether this would mean that William Randolph Hearst will affiliate Cosmopolitan with Metro remains to be seen. The attitude of Mr. Hearst toward the deal has been widely discussed in the trade, but it remains an unknown quantity.

It is believed, however, that Mr. Hearst will align his forces with Metro.

The terms of the prospective transaction are said to include the issuing of Metro stock to the Goldwyn principals, and, if this is a correct view of the situation, no cash consideration is involved.

Mr. Hearst's contract with Goldwyn expires April 15. On that date, he will be free, of course, to make a new arrangement with any distributor he desires. The date of the expiration of the Hearst contract will, it is generally understood, mark also the merger of Goldwyn with Metro, if the deal goes through.

Details Being Worked Out

An official in position to know informed MOTION PICTURE NEWS on Wednesday that the papers had not then been signed. He admitted, however, that the deal had been in progress for a long time. If it became a reality, he went on, there would not be any immediate radical changes in the present Goldwyn sales force, and the best men would be kept eventually.

Indications that the status of Goldwyn was likely to undergo a change have been apparent recently. It is known that F. J. Godsol, President of the company, has been dissatisfied with the picture business, and has expressed a desire to retire from his position. On Monday of this week, the situation was reflected in the New York Stock Market, when 6,400 shares of Goldwyn changed hands at an advance of 3⅜, a marked gain.

The Goldwyn financial statement issued last summer showed a big operating loss, but Mr. Godsol at that time made public a personal statement in which he took an optimistic view of the future.

One of the chief elements of interest in the situation centers about the disposition that might be made of the immense Goldwyn studios at Culver City, Calif. There have been reports from the Coast that the studios might be dismantled and the ground sold for building lots, particularly in view of the present real estate boom in and around Los Angeles. In other quarters, this report is discounted. It is possible that the Metro studio might be sold and all production of the amalgamated companies centered at Culver City.

There is no likelihood that Hearst would take over the idle studio, as he has definitely decided not to produce on the Coast. It is evident, therefore, that either the Goldwyn studio or the Metro studio would be disposed of.

With regard to the Capitol Theatre, New York, which is owned by Goldwyn through a subsidiary, the story is current that the big house would be included in the deal. In any event, it appears that Metro would assume the position Goldwyn has held relative to playdates in the Capitol and other first-run theatres throughout the country.

It was also pointed out that, if the deal went through, Marcus Loew would have consummated a theatre coup as well as greatly strengthening the output of Metro through the accession of Goldwyn product. The Loew circuit of theatres, which now numbers around 200, would be a tremendous asset in the combine.

Other Deal Recalled

After the completion of "Janice Meredith," all the Hearst production activities will be suspended. "Yolanda," which it had been planned to run as a super until Fall, will be generally released at once. The Cosmopolitan Theatre, New York, will be closed Saturday night, March 29.

The deal with Metro is the second of the sort in which Goldwyn has been involved since its organization. The other was an attempted merger with First National two years ago, apparently upon terms very much like those which now form the basis of the proposed amalgamation with Metro. The Goldwyn-First National deal hung fire for several months and finally fell through. Subsequently, Hearst withdrew from Famous Players and formed his distribution alliance with Goldwyn, when the company became Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.

It is known that he had an option to take over the remaining 50 per cent in Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan on April 15, but he has apparently decided not to exercise it.

The accession of the Goldwyn product to the Metro schedule would bring it a number of features for distribution. Goldwyn pictures ready or recently released now include "Three Weeks," "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," "Greed," "Second Youth," "Recoil," "The Great White Way," "True as Steel." A number are in production: "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," "The Tree," "Mary the Third," "Ben Hur" and several others.

Howard Theatre, Atlanta, Sold to New Corporation

FORMER associates of Stephen A. Lynch have purchased the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, and this step has given rise to reports that the Southeast is to have another big theatre operating corporation.

The new company which during the past week announced the purchase of the million dollar Howard theatre is titled the Enterprise Realty and Investment Corporation. Its officers include Y. F. Freeman, formerly general manager of the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, who is president; W. R. Lynch, a brother of S. A. Lynch, vice-president; and C. E. Holcomb and D. R. Millard, both former Lynch men, as treasurer and secretary respectively.

Along with the deal another plot of property on which now stands a small hotel, was purchased, the entire deal involving over a million dollars. Upon the other plot of ground it is believed another theatre will be erected by the corporation, just a block from the Howard and what is now considered the very heart of Atlanta's hotel and theatre district.

The Howard was built in 1919 at a cost well over $800,000 by Troup Howard and has been operated under auspices of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which management, it is declared, will continue under its new ownership. The purchase of the theatre included the lease which has about nineteen years to run. It is the finest theatre in the South under the management of Southern Enterprises, Inc., it is stated.

Film Export Figures Are Announced

According to a recent announcement by the Department of Commerce, exports of films, sensitized, but not exposed totaled 4,540,999 linear feet in December, 1923, valued at $109,761; declining in footage during January of this year to 4,441,665 linear feet, with an increased actual and relative value amounting to $119,573. January of last year the linear footage of 4,092,590 was valued at $101,832.

Negatives last December had a footage of 352,540, vauled at $121,079; but jumped in January to 576,912 linear feet, worth only $83,665. January, a year ago, the linear footage of 462,673 feet were priced as but $48,398.

Positives had the grand total of 10,590,922 linear feet, worth $547,788 in December of last year. In the first month of 1924 the footage leaped to 13,564,915 linear feet, valued at but $579,809, a relatively low value. The preceding January, 11,271,151 linear feet had a relatively high value of $460,809. Thus the total linear footage, exposed film stock, in December was 10,943,462, worth $668,877; amounting in January to 14,141,827 linear feet, valued at $663,474, relatively low in comparison; while the 11,733,824 linear feet of the preceding January bore a comparatively high valuation of $509,207. This bears out the statement that the footage and value of exports are running nearly as high for the positives, as they have over the past two years.

Maxwell Karger's estate has been appraised at $128,292, most of which he left to his widow, Anna Karger of the Hollywood Hotel, and a son and daughter. His three sisters were left $25,000.

The estate comprised $63,849 from the sale of Metro stock, $21,000 due from Richard A. Rowland, $11,000 due from Joseph Engel, a half interest in "Some Baby," appraised at $1,500, 1500 shares of Loew's, Inc., valued at $25,681 and a bank deposit of $1,464.

Trade Commission Hearing Resumed

Famous Players Presents Defense Testimony at Sessions Held in Atlanta

AFTER the lapse of several months, hearings on the Federal Trade Commission charge against the Famous Players-Lasky group were resumed in Atlanta, March 25, when the respondents continued the presentation of defense testimony.

About thirty witnesses were subpoenaed for the Atlanta sessions which were expected to last all this week, and perhaps next. It is expected the sessions will then be transferred to New York, where Famous, it is understood, will offer its star witnesses.

The sessions in Atlanta are being conducted before Examiner E. C. Alvord, with W. H. Fuller, chief counsel for the Commission, representing the Government; and Robert T. Swaine, Bruce Bromley, and E. J. Robb appearing for the respondents.

The first witness for the defense was Martin May, wealthy Atlantan, who flatly denied the statement made by L. H. Joel, manager of theatres at Jacksonville and Lakeland, Fla., and Greenville, S. C. Joel testified at the previous hearing in Atlanta in July that he had been forced to sell to Southern Enterprises, because of alleged unfair practices.

According to May, he financed Joel in the purchase of the theatres and was Joel's sole financial backer. Contrary to Joel's statement, which was to the effect that he (Joel) had made the transaction with Southern Enterprises, May said that he (May) made the trade and Joel did not figure in the deal.

May stated that he was not forced into the deal by any one, and that he considered the price he received for the theatres outrageously high. He netted considerable profit, he added.

"The deal was a straight business transaction," May continued. "Coercion played no part in it." He had asked $35,000 for the theatre at Greenville and had actually received $34,000 for it, he said.

W. T. Yoder, Atlanta manager for Hodkinson, declared the picture market in Atlanta and surrounding territory was free and open to all film companies. The fact that Southern Enterprises owned a chain of theatres and sold pictures in block did not interfere with the business of other companies, he said.

M. Redmond, of Birmingham, Ala., a former employee of Famous Players-Lasky, testified that he had never threatened Frank Smith, an exhibitor who declared on the stand last July that Redmond had tried to force Smith to sell his theatre to him.

Frank Miller testified that a witness named Hackworth, from Huntsville, Ala., who complained that Southern Enterprises had arbitrarily withdrawn service from him, was an active member of a booking association of thirty or forty exhibitors, the purpose being, according to Miller, to threaten boycott and compel Southern Enterprises to sell Paramount pictures exclusively to members of the group.

Further contradictory testimony was given by Charles McElravy, district superintendent for Southern Enterprises at Memphis. An exhibitor named Jackson of Columbus, Tenn., had declared at the July hearing that, after making threats against him, Southern Enterprises had purchased a rival house and then transferred the Paramount account from his theatre to the competing house. McElravy denied this, stating that the house had been purchased by his brother, who had no connection with Famous Players-Lasky, or its subsidiary.

Non-Theatrical Showings Bring Protest to Hays

A DELEGATION of Jamestown, N. Y., exhibitors appeared before the Film Board of Trade of Buf falo at its meeting this week to protest the showing of motion pictures, in non-theatrical institutions in that city. As a result o ftheir appearance before the board, a general protest will be made to the Hays' organization.

J. H. Michael, manager of the Regent, an exhibitor member of the board and chairman of the executive committee of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y., Inc., declares that the question is a real menace to the exhibitor and declares that exhibitors all over the country should take up the question with Mr. Hays' organization in an effort to arrive at some plan which will do away with the serving by exchanges of non-theatrical institutions.

Mr. Michael declares the practice is hurting business in many houses in Buffalo and western New York. Mr. Peterson, of Peterson & Woods, headed the Jamestown delegation to Buffalo.

Northwest Board of Arbitration Holds Meeting

The Board of Arbitration, a part of the Northwest Film Board of Trade of Seattle and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, met in session in Seattle recently, after a number of months during which no meetings were scheduled. Two exhibitors of the Northwest territory were brought before the Board at the request of Seattle film exchanges, who charged that the exhibitors in question had failed to comply with certain film contracts which they were alleged to have signed.

Members of the Board, which met in the executive rooms of the Film Board of Trade, are: Fred C. Walton of Bellingham, James A. McGill of Port Orchard, and H. W. Bruen of Seattle, representing the theatres; and Paul Lynch, Pathe; George P. Endert, Famous Players; and Al Rosenberg, De Luxe; representing the film exchanges.

New Companies Chartered in N. Y. State

The following motion picture companies incorporated during the past week in New York state, the capitalization as well as the directors being given: Selco Pictures, Inc., capitalization not stated, L. G. Bernstein, Harold Wisan, H. P. Booth, New York city; Brooklyn United Theatres, Inc., $10,000, Antonio, Giovanna and John Zappa, Brooklyn; Cherniavsky and His Orientals, $5,000, Isidor Louis, Brooklyn; George Rubinstein, Joseph Cherniavsky, New York city; Link Amusement Corporation, $30,000, H. Suchman, J. Rosenthal, F. Berger, New York city.

Canada Exhibitors Balk at Newspaper Scandal

MEMBERS of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Canada, Ontario Division, are suffering as a result of a deluge of newspaper stories purporting to depict the scandalous conduct of motion picture players, and their objection took the form of a strong protest to the press.

Exhibitors complain that the constant reference of newspapers to "Unfortunate men and women who have been murdered, kidnapped, imprisoned, or have indulged in pursuits contrary to the will of the people and the laws of the country, are motion picture players when they perhaps never appeared even in a mob scene as an extra," are hurting the film industry.

Theatre owners complain in the resolution following such publicity in the newspapers they have been subjected to a series of malignment and prejudiced attacks and the standing of the exhibitors has been impaired.

Illinois M. P. T. O. Planning Big Convention

A letter has gone out calling on exhibitors to attend the annual state convention of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, on April 23–24, and the secretary, Ludwig Siegel and other officials of the organization are completing arrangements for what promises to be a very successful gathering. The sessions of the convention will be devoted strictly to business, according to Mr. Siegel.

A special effort is being made to provide an interesting entertainment program, as well as constructive business sessions, for the visitors and their wives. One of the features already decided upon, is a combined banquet by the exhibitors and the Chicago Film Board of Trade, including a midnight review with many well known stage stars as guests and entertainers.

The Chicago organization is now affiliated with the I. M. P. T. Owners and this assures an active, local interest in the convention and participation of many of the big theatre owners in deliberations.

Lorain, O., Theatre Robbed of $2,500

Bandits broke into the State theatre, Lorain, O., last week, cracked the safe, and got away with $2,500 in cash. Checks and valuable papers remained intact. The State theatre belongs to Mark Greenbaum and his son, Jack Greenbaum. The robbery must have occurred sometime after 2 A. M. at which time Manager Bentley Wallace closed the safe and left the theatre.

The following morning the janitor discovered that the combination had been knocked off the safe. Police believe the job was done by Cleveland bandits.

New Theatre to Open in Dover, N. J.

A new picture theatre will be opened in Dover, N. J., on Monday evening, March 31, by John Howell. It has been named the New Playhouse. A number of film men in the New York and New Jersey territory are expected to attend the opening.

N. Y. Repeal Battle Takes New Turn

Would Amend Penal Law

THROUGH the introduction of the Davison bill in the Assembly last Monday night, calling for the repeal of the motion picture censorship law in New York State, the whole situation at the State Capitol in Albany, in so far as the censorship repeal is concerned, changed in the twinkling of an eye. It is now believed that there is more than a fair chance of repealing the measure, which went on the statute books in the Empire State in 1921.

Up to the moment of the introduction of the Davison bill, chief opposition from the Assembly, Republican in majority, came by reason of the fact that the two bills that had already been introduced were plainly regarded as Democratic administration measures. One of these bills had been introduced by Senator James J. Walker, majority leader in the Senate, and the other by Assemblyman Frederick L. Hackenburg. This latter bill is still in the Assembly ways and means committee, the members of that committee having voted against reporting it out.

But with the introduction of a repeal bill by a Republican, the Assembly is now confronted with an entirely different situation. If party lines are to prevail, then the Assembly must pass the Davison measure, and if it once passes the lower house, it is probable that it will pass the Senate.

There is some question though as to whether the Davison bill will be regarded as a Republican measure. State Chairman Morris, just back from Europe, and at the Capitol this week, declared that he was against any repeal of the censorship law.

Davison Bill Drastic

The Davison bill is a decidedly drastic one. While it eliminates censorship, it also provides that anyone who produces, distributes, exchanges or exhibits an improper picture, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to heavy fine or imprisonment. In addition, places showing such pictures may be declared public nuisances and closed.

No action was taken on the censorship situation by Republican members of the New York State Assembly in a conference Wednesday afternoon that lasted from 2 to 7 o'clock. While the conference was to have settled the attitude of the Republican majority in the lower house on the three bills introduced and calling for the repeal of the censorship law in New York State, other measures given consideration occupied the entire time. No date was fixed for another conference.

The text of the Davison bill follows:

"An act to amend the Penal Law, in relation to public morals and to repeal Chapter 715 of the Laws of 1921 entitled 'An act to regulate the exhibition of moving pictures, create a commission therefor and making an appropriation therefor.

"The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

"Section 1. The Penal Law is hereby amended by adding a new article 16a to read as follows:

"Article 16a. Public morals.

"Section 1795. Immoral and improper exhibitions.
"1795a. Punishment
"1795b. Revocation of license. Common nuisance.
"1795c. For injunction proceedings.

"Section 1795. Immoral and improper exhibition. No person shall produce or make, or exhibit or offer, sell, lease or rent to another for exhibition any motion picture film or any poster, banner or other similar advertising matter in connection therewith, which is obscene, indecent, immoral, inhuman, sacrilegious, or of such character that its exhibition would tend to corrupt morals or to incite crime.

"1795a. Punishment. A violation of any provision of the last preceding section is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than $100.00 or more than $2,000 or by imprisonment, for not less than thirty days or more than one year, or both.

"1795b. Revocation of license; common nuisance. Upon conviction of a violation of any provision of section 1795 of this article, all rights and privileges granted by any permit or license, issued to the person so convicted, or to the room, building, structure or place in which such violation was committed shall terminate or license shall be revoked and nullified thereby and the room, building, structure or place in which such violation was committed is hereby declared to be a common nuisance.

Injunction Proceedings Possible

"1795c. Injunction proceedings. A person or copartnership who, or which shall maintain a common nuisance as defined in this article, may be enjoined from maintaining such nuisance in the manner prescribed in this section. The attorney general or the district attorney of the county in which the nuisance is maintained may present a verified petition to a justice of the supreme court or a special term of the supreme court of the judicial district in which such county is situated, or the county court or judge of such county for an order enjoining the maintenance of such nuisance. Such petition shall state the facts upon which such application is based. Upon the presentation of the petition, the justice, judge or court shall grant an order requiring such person to appear before such justice, judge or court, or before a special term of the supreme court of the judicial district, on the day specified therein, not more than ten days after the granting thereof, to show cause why such person should not be enjoined from maintaining the nuisance alleged in the petition. Copy of such petition and order shall be served upon the person named therein, in the manner directed by such order, not less than five days before the return day thereof. On the day specified in such order, the justice, judge or court before whom the same is returnable shall hear the proofs of the parties and may, if deemed necessary, or proper, take testimony as to the allegations of the petition. If the judge, justice or court is satisfied that such person maintain a common nuisance as defined by this article and as alleged in the petition, an order shall be made enjoining such person from maintaining such nuisance. The court or judge also shall order that such room, building, structure or place shall not be occupied or used thereafter for a period to be specified in the order not less than ....., and not more than ....., or that it shall not be occupied or used during such period for other than dwelling purposes exclusively. Costs upon the application for such injunction may be awarded to either party thereto against the other in same as in the discretion of the court or judge, may seem proper. No bond shall be required to institute or prosecute a proceeding under this section.

"2. Chapter 715 of the Laws of 1921, entitled 'An act to regulate the exhibition of motion pictures, creating a commission therefor, and making an appropriation therefor,' is hereby repealed.

"3. This act shall take effect immediately."

N. Y. State Exhibitor Officials Meet

A JOINT meeting of the officers and boards of directors of the M. P. T. O. of New York State and the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce is being held at the Hotel Astor, Friday, March 28.

The meeting is for the purpose of discussing important questions affecting exhibitors welfare in the state, it is stated. The call was issued by President Charles L. O'Reilly, for the T. O. C. C., and William Brandt, head of the state organization.

Earle Theatre Formally Opened in Philly

The latest addition to the Stanley chain, the Earle theatre in Philadelphia, was formally opened with fitting ceremonies Monday night of this week. Keith vaudeville ruled the program, with the addition of Pathe News, an Aesop Fable and Topics of the Day.

Many prominent in the industry were present, among them being, Adolph Zukor, Richard Rowland, Sydney Cohen, Samuel Katz, E. V. Richards, Julian Saenger, Harry Crandall, Hugo Riesenfeld and B. S. Moss.

Claim Board Withdrawals in T. O. D. C.

Charges are made by the M. P. T. O. A. that some of those mentioned by W. A. True as members of the advisory board of the T. O. D. C. of New York accepted the berth under a slight misapprehension and that they had ordered their names withdrawn when they learned the organization was not the original Delaware company. True declared the statement of the Cohen organization the "bunk."

Those named by the M. P. T. O. were Fred C. Seegert, W. W. Watts, John A. Schwalm, E. W. Collins, C. A. Lick and Martin G. Smith.

Milwaukee Opens $2,000,000 House

Saxe Wisconsin Is Declared Among Most Handsomely Equipped in World

THE doors were scheduled to be thrown open Friday night of this week on the Wisconsin theater in Milwaukee, said to be one of the largest and most luxurious picture palaces in the world. City, state and society leaders were to participate in the opening ceremonies. The theater is said to have been built at a cost of $2,000,000 by J. E. and Thomas Saxe. The inaugural attraction was the Louis B. Mayer-John M. Stahl production for First National release, "Why Men Leave Home."

The building, in addition to housing the theater, has a magnificent roof garden and ball room, recreation parlors, billiard and pool rooms and a bowling club room in the basement.

One of the distinguishing features is the great electric sign. It is 75 feet high, each letter being taller than the average man. Inside the theater is a special lighting system, arranged so that colored lights, in keeping with thematic stage lighting, may be used to carry picture atmosphere to every part of the auditorium.

Music will be provided by two orchestras and a $50,000 organ, one of the two double-concoled instruments in existence. One orchestra will be stationed on the mezzanine promenade surrounding the lobby.

The Messrs. Saxe have built a stage of proportions ample to accommodate legitimate theatrical attractions and musical comedies, should they ever desire to change their house policy. As part of the stage equipment they have included a Vilter machine for creating artificial rain, wind and snowstorms; and this also will be used as a cooling plant for the theater in the summer, providing ice water for patrons.

E. J. Weisfeldt, who has been managing director of Saxe's Strand, will be in control of the new theater.

An innovation in the Wisconsin will be the maintenance of a Service Division to serve the public and the press, and this will be in charge of Harry Davey as director.

Rudolph G. Kopp, famous Viennese composer and orchestra leader, who swung the baton at the opening of Graumann's Million Dollar theater in Los Angeles, will be the musical director of the Wisconsin.

Annual Election Held by T. O. C. C.

CHARLES L. O'REILLY was re-elected president of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York City at the annual election, March 25. He was unopposed.

The slate, nominated two weeks ago, was also voted on, with the following results:

First vice-president—Charles Steiner (unopposed).

Second vice-president—Joseph Jame.

Treasurer—Sam Schwartz (unopposed).

Secretary—Samuel Moross (unopposed).

Board of directors—Sol Brill, Hy Gainsboro, J. Arthur Hirsch, John Manheimer, Joseph Stern, Sol Raives, William A. Landau, Lee A. Ochs, Hyman Rachmil.

Finance committee—Bernard Grob, Morris Needles and Wm. Behrend.

The meeting was addressed by Col. H. A. Cole, of Marshall, Texas, president of the M. P. T. O. of Texas.

New Charters Granted in Delaware

Delaware has granted charters to the Hoyt Laboratories, Inc., $500,000 capital; The Consolidated Cellulose Products Corporation of America, Incorporated, Capital $2,200,000; and Kozal Laboratories, Inc., $20,000.

The Kentucky Reel Show Corporation received a Delaware charter, to make and sell motion pictures and films, and is capitalized at $150,000. The Aldine Amusement Company, Incorporated, was given a charter as theatrical proprietors, musical hall operators, etc., capital, $50,000; The Strand Corporation, Incorporated, (dealing in theatre realty property, etc.) took out a charter on a $500,000 capitalization.

A charter for a $100,000 was granted to "Pennant Film Productions," Inc., to make and produce motion pictures. Incorporators are: J. M. Frere, J. A. Frere, S. A. Williams, of Wilmington, Del., acting through the Corporation Trust Company of America, of Delaware.

Veteran Day Backed by Cleveland Exhibitors

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association is backing a movement for a Disabled Soldiers' Veteran Day. The idea started with Sam Schachtel, of the "Y" theatre, and instantly took root with fellow members of the association. A percentage of the total receipts for one day in every picture house in the city and suburbs, will be turned over to the Disabled War Veterans.

The plan, as now being worked out, will be to solicit the co-operation of every club, organization and school, in a ticket selling campaign.

Frank Keenan Injured in Auto Collision

Frank Keenan, screen star, suffered minor injuries in a recent automobile collision in Los Angeles. His arms and face were bruised and his back and shoulders wrenched.

The mishap is said to have come when a roadster coming out of a side street hit the rear of Keenan's car turning it over. The star will shortly resume work in the leading role of Reginald Barker's production for Metro, "Broken Barriers."

Bronze to Commemorate First Picture Show

A bronze plaque will mark the place in Paris where the first public exhibition of a motion picture is said to have been given.

On December 28, 1895, the Lumiere brothers showed their first film to an audience, on a screen in the basement of the Grand Cafe, which is now being destroyed to make room for a bank. The bronze will be placed by the city council of Paris.

Sunday Shows Banned in Kokomo, Ind.

THE city council of Kokomo, Ind., on March 24 adopted an ordinance prohibiting picture shows on Sunday after one of the most heated debates in the city's history. The vote stood four to four and Mayor James Burrows cast the deciding vote in favor of the ordinance.

The W. C. T. U., the Ministerial Association, and other church organizations started the movement resulting in the ordinance. Theatrical interests have retained attorneys to test the legality of the measure.

Suit to Collect Insurance on Theatre

Trial of a suit to collect insurance on damages from an explosion, believed to have been caused by gas, at the Doric theater, Kansas City, began last week in Federal Court. The explosion was December 7, 1922, and virtually wrecked the theater, which did not reopen as a theater after that.

The suit was instituted by the Overland Amusement Company, which operated the theater, against the Connecticut Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., and the Union Insurance Society of Canton, China. The amusement company seeks to recover $13,463.65 on three policies. The insurance companies contend they are not liable because the damages were caused by an explosion and not by fire. Maurice Winger represents the amusement company.

Record Attendance Forecast for Kansas Convention

If advance indications can be accepted as a barometer, the much anticipated record-breaking attendance at the sixth semi-annual convention of the M. P. T. O. Kansas at Emporia, Kan., April 1 and 2, will be a reality. Never before has as much enthusiasm been displayed by exhibitors over the state and seldom has as much tireless effort been devoted to the "preliminaries" of a convention as now is the case.

The M. P. T. O. K. headquarters might properly be compared to a wheat broker's office. Form letters, "dummy" souvenier programs, special invitations and instructions to exhibitors literally are heaped upon the desk of C. E. Cook, business manager of the orzation.

New Presentation Policy at Loew's Dayton

Loew's Dayton theatre at Dayton, Ohio, started a new presentation policy last week which included all the latest and most progressive methods. Though there has been no advance in prices, each picture is accompanied by a program as complete as that given in the leading Broadway houses. Charles Wertz, formerly manager of the Lyric and Astor theatres in New York city, is serving in the same capacity at the Dayton.

Among the features already announced for presentation at the Dayton are, "The White Sister," "Thy Name Is Women," "A Boy of Flanders," and Rex Ingram's new production for Metro, "The Arab."

Better Prints Are More Economical

John W. Nickolaus Writes News

LESS economy in the quality of prints is the subject of a commendatory letter to William A. Johnston, editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS from John M. Nickolaus of Standard Film Laboratories. Mr. Nickolaus urges the cooperation of producers in ordering better prints as a matter of economy for the additional time they will last.

Mr. Nickolaus says:

It was with great pleasure that I read your editorial entitled "Prints," in the March first issue of the M. P. News.

It is a subject which has needed discussion for a long time and it was very gratifying to us, as laboratory people, to realize that even at this late date the subject of prints is about to be championed by somebody in a position to awaken our producers to an understanding of what "prints" really means.

You can well afford, in my opinion, to devote considerable space in your valuable paper to this subject, and while at first it may not be appreciated by our producers, I know that in the long run they will thank you greatly for this education.

From my personal experience, I am convinced that the producer is so busy doing numerous other things that he is in reality neglecting what might be considered one of the most important parts of his business, namely: the release prints, which in reality is the only means he has of showing his product to the public.

Producer Too Well Satisfied

It seems that the producer is too well satisfied with conditions as they are as far as prints are concerned, feeling perhaps that if there is anything wrong with prints that one wrong thing is the fact that they cost too much.

While it is a wonderful thing that Mr. Eastman is able to give to the industry film at a constantly decreasing price while still maintaining the high standard of quality, I think that it would be far greater news for the industry were Mr. Eastman to announce that film would be made of superior quality regardless of cost, for improvement in the quality of films is the one thing which the industry should demand and expect.

The writer is in a position to know that the processing of all films today is not done one-half as good as it could be done, nor one-half as good as it should be done, nor one-half as good as it would be done if the laboratory had any support or encouragement from the producer.

The producer today absolutely disregards quality, absolutely disregards the efforts of our high-class laboratories, many of which are capable of turning out wonderful quality. These laboratories have no chance to improve their institution nor their technique because of the rank lack of cooperation that they receive from the producer.

Whenever the subject of prints comes up, the question asked by the producer is not how perfect can they be made nor how durable can they be made, but how cheaply can they be made.

The points taken up in your wonderful editorial are very well taken, but they do not go far enough. You speak of the number of prints used by exchanges. This, no doubt, is true. Laboratory men are not in a position to comment upon this, but the writer is in a position to say that even if the producer is not willing to use more prints, he can get a lot more work out of the prints he does use if he will only take the precaution of getting better prints. Better prints cost more but they pay the additional cost back three times over in their wear. There are several laboratories that can, with the proper encouragement, make prints that will outwear the average prints made and put on the market today.

Although the producer is using prints largely today that wear out quickly and from which he does not get full value, it is a fact that he is not at all prone to listen to the conclusion which this fact implies.

Wants Follow Up Editorial

I believe that you would do the industry a great service were you to make the caption of your next editorial on this subject: "Prints that Wear Better." You might well ask the producer what he individually is doing to encourage the laboratory men to make better and more durable prints that will wear longer.

As long as the producer is "penny wise and pound foolish," the better laboratories will be unable financially to give to the industry the brilliant and durable prints of which they are technically capable.

It would be surprising for the industry to know that several of the better laboratories are able, with the fortunes invested in buildings, equipment and talent, to develop a product for the producers which would be far superior in appearance and wear to the present product turned out, and this great difference would cost but little more than the cheaper product now bargained for.

While the motion picture industry has advanced wonderfully in recent years, the quality of the prints with few exceptions has failed to keep pace with the other advancement and we feel that even here the producer has not been responsible for these few exceptions nor does he encourage them, much less reward them.

How wonderful it would be if the producer were to announce that he would spend some of the saving effected by the drop in the price of film, in encouraging the laboratories with a cry of quality instead of price.

It is a fact that often prints are subjected to terrific wear in poorly-adjusted projecting machines but the writer can state unqualifiedly that often prints are ruined in perfectly good projecting machines because the print was never a good print to begin with, never was first-class, never properly made. The reason for this is that ninety-nine per cent of the time, the producer did not pay for first-class print, was not entitled to it and, therefore, did not receive it, and the blame is upon him. Regardless, however, of the condition of projecting machines, good prints will stand the strain of a poorly-adjusted machine better and longer than an inferior and brittle print.

Print Durability Laboratory Problem

The durability of a print is in direct proportion to the air conditioning in the laboratory, and long-lived prints cannot be produced by a laboratory not constructed with this purpose in mind.

The producer himself, with no technical knowledge, were he to go into a laboratory, would instantly realize that there must be a definite reason for humidity, temperature and cleanliness in their effect upon the product, and the producer should assure himself before signing a contract for prints that the plant, to which his work is assigned, is capable of producing what in a last analysis he must obtain, and that is quality and durability.

Operators of projecting machines, exchange attendants—these people know and will tell the producer, if asked, which prints wear longer and better and it is to the producer's advantage to determine that he is obtaining from the laboratory the highest quality of work of which the laboratory is capable, but in during this he must not tie the hands of the laboratory men too tightly with his cry of "How cheaply can the work be done?"

The object of this letter is not to advance the interests of the Standard Film Laboratories nor to gain any publicity or advertising herefrom, but I earnestly and conscientiously feel that inasmuch as the producer obtains only a negative and prints as a result of all his efforts and expenditure of money that the subject of laboratory work is a serious subject to which the producer should awaken, and through the channel of your valuable paper I trust that this enlightenment may take place.

Premieres Announced for "Dorothy Vernon"

PREMIERES of Mary Pickford's newest production for United Artists, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," were held simultaneously, March 19, in Los Angeles and Cleveland.

It was also announced this week that the picture would open in Louisville, Ky., Macrh 24. Great interest was aroused when it became known that "Dorothy Vernon" would follow "The Covered Wagon" at the Criterion theatre, New York. The latter production will end its long run on May 2, when Miss Pickford's film will be given its metropolitan premiere. "The Covered Wagon" will have run sixty weeks on May 2, a record engagement in the history of the industry.

Other road shows of "Dorothy Vernon" will follow in quick succession, until all the key centers have been covered, it is expected.

Union Operators Appear at Albany Hearing

A. J. McCOSKER of New York city, representing Moving Picture Machine Operators Union, Local 306, and Abraham Horowitz, secretary of the same organization, appeared before the judiciary committee of the New York State Legislature at Albany and opposed the Murphy bill, which pertains to nitrocellulose film.

Frank H. Richardson of New York city, unable to be present, filed a brief with the committee and opposed the bill. Observers do not expect that the bill will ever be reported out of committee.

The operators declare that the repeal of "Any and all provisions of law restricting the purchase, lease, use, sale or similar disposition of motion picture film of an acetate of cellulose, or similarly non-hazardous base," is particularly inquitous, because it removes the present safeguards on so-called slowburning-film, making it unnecessary for a person to be licensed before he can operate a machine to project such film.

Would Extend Compensation Act to M. P. Workers

Under the provisions of a bill introduced by Assemblyman Alterman in the New York State Legislature, employees of motion picture producing companies, will come under the provisions of the State's workmen's compensation act, provided that they do not earn more than twenty-five dollars a day or one hundred dollars a week

The bill would add a new group to the law as it now exists. It is in the hands of a committee on labor and industries and there appears to be no opposition to its ultimate passage.

Civic Drive Aided by K. C. Theatres

Members of the Women's City Club of Kansas City this week are selling tickets, at 25 cents each, for all picture theatres in the membership of the Kansas City Division of the M. P. T. O. A., in connection with a $50,000 drive for the Girls' Hotel, a civic institution.

The exhibitors co-operating in the campaign will receive one-half of each admission sold by the women, the names of the thirty-eight membership theatres being printed on the back of the tickets.

Ohio Revokes License for Fight Pictures

VERNON M. RIEGEL, head of the department of education, and chief of the Ohio censor board, has issued an order revoking the license to exhibit the Dempsey-Firpo fight pictures in the state.

Riegel assigned as the cause for his action the fact that: "Inasmuch as there have been disclosures in the Senate investigation at Washington relative to the transportation and exhibition of the Dempsey-Carpentier pictures that indicate a conspiracy or other form of invasion of the law and mockery of justice, it is the opinion of the division of film censorship that an exhibition of this type of film is, at the present time, harmful. The certificate of the Dempsey-Firpo pictures, is therefore, hereby revoked."

In and Out of Town

JESSE J. GOLDBURG, President of Independent Pictures Corporation, is back after an absence of five months in California where he produced eight Westerns starring Franklyn Farnum.

IRVIN WILLAT has gone to Boston with negative of the Paramount production, "Wanderer of the Wasteland." The picture will be edited under his supervision at the Technicolor laboratory in Boston.

GEORGE W. WEEKS, division sales manager of Famous Players-Lasky, left March 22 on a tour of Paramount exchanges in the Middle West. He will be away about two weeks.

JOHN W. HICKS, Jr., managing director of Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., of Sydney, Australia, arrived in San Francisco, March 21, en route to New York for his annual conference with E. E. Shauer, director of the F. P.-L. foreign department. He will reach New York about April 1.

MARCUS LOEW is making an inspection tour of his Middle Western Theatres and will visit St. Louis, where his newest theatre, now in course of construction, will be opened early this Fall.

ANDREW J. COBE, former managing director of the Central and Astor Theatres for Universal, was due in the city this week from Miami, Fla., where he has been spending a vacation.

M. I. MINTZ will sail shortly to open branch offices in London, Paris and Berlin.

HARRY M. and ABE WARNER have arrived from the Coast, accompanied by Sol Brill and Motley H. Flint. After the completion of fall distributing plans, the Messrs. Warner will return to Los Angeles to devote all their time to production.

COL. WM. BRADEN, Goldwyn vice-president, has returned from Europe, where he went relative to the production of "Ben-Hur." Emil E. Shauer, head of the Famous Players foreign department and Jacobo Glucksmann arrived from Buenos Aires.

H. S. ("Jack") FULD has joined the exploitation forces of First National and is busy on a campaign for "A Son of the Sahara" in the metropolitan district.

B. F. STAPLETON, of Ottawa, Canada, arrived in New York on March 24 to serve on the First National Retailing Committee. He will remain two weeks.

PAUL SLOANE, who is writing the scenario for Thomas Meighan's next Paramount picture, "Whispering Men," has gone to Indianapolis to confer with Booth Tarkington, the author of the story.

M. H. HOFFMAN, vice president of Truart, hsa left Los Angeles after a conference with his various producing heads, during which production plans for the forthcoming year were laid.

DAVID R. BLYTH, Director of Sales and Distribution of the Selznick Distributing Corporation, has returned to New York after a trip around the Selznick exchanges in the East and South, during which he visited Chicago, Cincinnati, and Atlanta.

Albany News Advocates Censorship Repeal

STRONGLY advocating the repeal of the New York State censorship law, the Albany Evening News came out with the following editorial:

"It is now reported that the motion picture censorship repeal bill can be passed if brought out on the floor of the assembly. This with other bills is expected to be a subject of a conference next week. It should be brought out and be voted upon.

"The censorship law is not only un-American but it is cumbersome and useless. It permits certain persons to pass on what shall be presented to the public. It sets up a board as an arbiter of public morals and taste. Laws already on the statute books make provision to guard against indecent productions. Not only is there no need of this law but it is contrary to American principles.

"The repeal can be passed. It is a plain duty to bring it before the legislature for a vote. That duty cannot be denied."

Daylight Saving General in Capitol District

Although the exhibitors of the territory put up some fight in hopes of being able to prevent daylight saving, the clocks will be advanced in at least seventeen places in the Capitol district of New York state on April 27. Fourteen other places are giving the matter thought and will debate the matter at meetings of the Common Councils.

In Albany, Troy, Cohoes, Watervliet, Waterford, Hudson, Saugerties, Amsterdam, Johnstown, Gloversville, Ballston Spa, Saratoga Springs, Glens Falls, Williamstown, North Adams, Pittsfield, and Bennington, daylight saving will prevail from April 27.

Adoption will be debated during the coming weeks in Lake George, Mechanicville, Chatham, Catskill, Fonda, Greenwich, Schenectady, Hudson Falls and Fort Edward

M. P. T. O. A. Nat'l. Convention Committees at Work

A special committee of Massachusetts and New England exhibitors is arranging details for the fifth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at Boston, May 27-28-29.

State President Jacob Lourie and Executive Secretary Ernest Horstmann took the initiative is shaping local convention plans and at a mass meeting held March 25 a large committee of theatre owners was named to perfect arrangements for the convention.

"Tune In" With Publicity, Is Frank Newman's Way

IF the radio "cuts in" on attendance of picture theatres it is up to the exhibitor to "tune in" with some publicity, according to the policy of Frank L. Newman, owner of the Newman theatres, Kansas City.

The Royal Syncopators of the Royal theatre are giving weekly concerts over the sending station of the Kansas City Star and an abundance of free publicity from that newspaper has followed, in playing up the radio program.

"Three Weeks" Will Open at N. Y. Capitol

Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks" will be seen for the first time in the east when it opens Sunday at the New York Capitol. This Goldwyn production was directed by Alan Crosland in association with the author.

The leading roles are played by Aileen Pringle and Conrad Nagel. In the supporting cast are, John Sainpolis, Mitchell Lewis, Dale Fuller, Claire de Lorez, Nigel de Brullier, Stuart Holmes, Robert Cain, John Standing, William Haines and others.

Sullivan Will Write Ray Story for Ince

C. Gardner Sullivan has been selected by Thomas Ince to write the first of the series of Charles Ray pictures in which Ince will present Ray in the character of the bashful, small town youth which made him famous.

Mr. Sullivan was responsible for a number of Ray's earlier successes. The title of the new story which brings Ray back into the Ince fold has not yet been announced.

Olga Printzlau Adapting "Faint Perfume"

Olga Printzlau is adapting "Faint Perfume" for spring filming by B. P. Schulberg as a Preferred picture. The adaptation is from Zona Gale's widely read novel. Miss Printzlau's recent work for Preferred includes "Daughters of the Rich," "Maytime" and "The Breath of Scandal."

Original Essanay Sheriff Back on Screen

Arthur Markly, famous in the old days as the Essanay sheriff in "Broncho Billy" Anderson pictures, has returned to the screen. He will be seen in the first Arrow-Ben Wilson release, "Notch Number One." Markly will play opposite the star, Ben Wilson.

"Reckless Age" Captions by Tom Miranda

Captions for Reginald Denny's "The Reckless Age," for Universal will be written by Tom Miranda who Universal commended for his captions in "The Signal Tower," the Universal-Super-Jewel production starring Virginia Valli.

"Dorothy Vernon" Premiere for Criterion

MARY PICKFORD'S "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" will have its New York premiere at the Criterion, Monday, May 5th, according to announcement from United Artists. It will follow "The Covered Wagon" into that playhouse and the same prices will prevail as now exist.

This screen adaption of Charles Major's romatic novel is booked for an indefinite run and will be shown twice daily. "Dorothy Veron" was directed by Marshall Neilan from an adaptation by Waldemar Young.

The above scenes are taken from the latest Charles (Buck) Jones feature "The Vagabond Trail" which is being released by Fox Film Corp.

Smallwood Forms Distributing Guild

Will Merchandise on Commission Basis According to Booking Amounts

ARTHUR N. SMALLWOOD has announced the formation of the Producers Distributing Guild, Inc., which proposes to handle the merchandising of pictures at a lower rate of commission than has heretofore prevailed. The rates of commission are to be graduated according to the amounts involved in the bookings.

A regular scale has been provided as follows: Bookings $1,000 or over, 10 per cent; $900 to $1,000, 11 per cent; $800 to $900, 12 per cent; $700 to $800, 13 per cent; $600 to $700, 14 per cent; $500 to $600, 15 per cent; $400 to $500, 16 per cent; $300 to $400, 17 per cent; $200 to $300, 18 per cent; $150 to $200, 19 per cent; $100 to $150, 20 per cent; $85 to $100, 22 per cent; $75 to $85, 24 per cent; $60 to $75, 26 per cent; $45 to $60, 28 per cent; $30 to $45, 30 per cent; $15 to $30, 32 per cent; less than $15, 35 per cent.

Mr. Smallwood claims the new organization is the result of many letters that have come to him through a series of open letters forwarded by him to independent producers, The American Railway Express Company, National distributors of motion pictures and newspaper publishers and the trade press of the motion picture industry. The latest Smallwood letter explains the plans of the Producers Distributing Guild, Inc.

The plan provides for a highly specialized merchandising agency divided into three units — advertising and exploitation, selling, and cooperation with physical distributor.

Only a limited number of the higher class of productions are to be accepted for distribution each year. The producer of each must agree to a certain national advertising and exploitation appropriation to cover newspaper and trade advertising. A complete plan of campaign will be mapped by the guild for the advertising and exploitation of each production.

This service will be handled for the producer at net cost to Producers Distributing Guild, plus a service charge of 15%, providing that the service charge totals not less than $5,000 on the entire campaign for the individual production; for a minimum service fee of $5,000 will be exacted of each and every production accepted for merchandising and distribution supervision by Producers Distributing Guild.

Thirty or more branch offices are to be opened by the new organization.

"Beau Brummel" Premiere at Strand March 30

Warner Brothers' "Beau Brummel" will have its eastern premiere at the New York Strand on March 30th, according to announcement from the producing company. Elaborate preparations are being made for the presentation of this production, which is an adaptation of the Clyde Fitch play with John Barrymore in the title role.

Vitagraph Ships "Borrowed Husbands" Prints

Vitagraph has shipped prints to exchanges on "Borrowed Husbands," with Florence Vidor, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Earle Williams and Robert Gordon in the principal roles.

The picturalization is from the Mildred K. Barbour novel which ran serially in newspapers throughout the country.

New Producing Unit For Hodkinson

Elmer Harris and Frank Woods to Make Ten Features for 1924-25 Distribution

THE activities of the Hodkinson Corporation are to be further augmented, according to an announcement made by F. C. Munroe, president of the company, at a luncheon given to Elmer Harris and the trade press, Tuesday at the Knickerbocker Grill.

Mr. Munroe stated that Mr. Harris and Frank Woods who have been producing for distribution through Allied Artists have been signed to make ten features for the Hodkinson Corporation. The producing company will be backed by a group of western capitalists headed by A. B. C. Dohrman, a San Francisco millionaire and W. C. Connery of Los Angeles, an equally responsible West Coast business man.

Present plans call for the pictures to be made in San Francisco. It was stated that in case the San Francisco idea was found impracticable the features would be made at Los Angeles.

The first picture to be made under the new contract will be an original story written by Mr. Harris under the title of "The Wise Virgin." This will be one of the ten productions scheduled of which Mr. Woods and Mr. Harris are each to produce an equal number.

The Harris-Woods unit will operate two companies in the making of the ten pictures, each unit however cooperating with the other. Contracts have been signed with Patsey Ruth Miller and Matt Moore to be jointly featured in "The Wise Virgin" and there is a possibility that Miss Miller will be seen in several of the subsequent Harris-Wood productions, stories for which Mr. Harris will select while here in conference with the Hodkinson executives, especially Mr. Munroe, John Flinn and Paul Mooney.

The formation of the new producing company will give the Hodkinson Corporation at least 37 features to be released for the 1924-25 season.

It is planned at present writing to begin distributing this product in August and each month thereafter on a regular schedule. Announcement of the titles, casts and full information of the years out-put will be made at an early date, according to Mr. Munroe. The schedule may include as high as 40 or 45 pictures before the season is over, Mr. Munroe stated.

The formation of the new company and the distribution arrangements are the culmination of conferences held recently in San Francisco and Los Angeles between Mr. Munroe and the western financiers. Mr. Dohrman has been financially interested in producing ventures previously but at the present time has no other picture interests except those mentioned. Mr. Connery divides his time between Los Angeles and Chicago. He is well known in both cities.

Wells Hawks Engaged by Mary Pickford

Wells Hawks has been engaged by Mary Pickford as her personal representative to handle publicity, exploitation and other details in connection with the road show engagements for "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." Hawks' work will include the New York premiere set for May 5th, at the Criterion.

Prior to the organization of United Artists, Hawks served as Miss Pickford's personal representative on a number of occasions.

"One Law for Women" Is Ready for Release

Vitagraph exchanges have received prints on "One Law For Women," the picturization of the Charles E. Blaney melodrama. This is the second of the personally supervised Blaney productions for release through Vitagraph. Cullen Landis and Mildred Harris have the leading roles.

"$20 A Week" is the title of this Selznick release from which these scenes were taken.

"Free Love" Selected for Metro Picture

"FREE LOVE," an original story by Benjamin Glazer, has been selected by Hobart Henley as his first screen vehicle for the Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces. Carey Wilson is now at work on the adaptation. The cast is being selected and production will be started shortly.

Mr. Glazer is a noted author and playwright as well as an adaptor for the American stage of many European successes. It was his American version of Karl Schoenherr's play that Fred Niblo used for his latest Metro-Louis B. Mayer production, "Thy Name Is Woman." Mr. Glazer recently arrived in Los Angeles from New York to join Mr. Mayer's literary staff.

Williamson Speaks Before Four Arts Club

J. E. Williamson, who with Ralph Ince produced "The Uninvited Guest" for Metro, was the speaker last week before the Four Arts Club at the Madison Galleries in New York. He explained in detail his method of taking motion pictures at the bottom of the sea, his underwater chamber and his color photography. The talk was illustrated with scenes from "The Uninvited Guest."

Shipping Board to Show Metro's "Happiness"

The U. S. Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation has purchased "Happiness" for showing on all of its trans-oceanic liners. This is a Metro picture, starring Laurette Taylor. It was picturized from the J. Hartley Manners' play of the same name, in which Miss Taylor also starred. The picture was directed by King Vidor.

To Produce Features in Chicago Field

For ten years the Atlas Educational Film Company of Oak Park, Ill., has been making commercial pictures and it has now entered the regular feature production field beginning with a five reel feature entitled "Blind Virtue."

Arthur Berthelet will direct and the cast includes Mahlon Hamilton, Gladys Leslie, Burr McIntosh, Charles Delaney, Jane Jennings and Jack Drumier.

Baxter Signs Three Year Ince Contract

Thomas H. Ince has signed Warner Baxter to a three-year contract, according to announcement from the Ince office. The contract followed completion by Ince of "Those Who Dance" for First National release.

Baxter's progress has been rapid in his two years in pictures and he will be kept busy in the many productions planned by Ince during the coming summer.

"Fools in the Dark" Has Five Special Sets

With the idea of producing an elaborate feature in "Fools in the Dark," F. B. O. has built five special sets for it, including living room, foyer hall, doctor's office, ship's cabin and Greenwich Village dive.

Matt Moore and Patsy Ruth Miller are the stars with Al Santell directing.

Rupert Hughes to Start Another Picture

FOLLOWING the completion of "True as Steel," Rupert Hughes visited New York but will soon be back at the Goldwyn Studios on the West Coast to start another picture.

While in New York, Major Hughes signed contracts with magazine editors for twenty-two short stories in addition to his yearly novel and the motion pictures which he always writes himself, even to the preparation of the continuity.

He also arranged to write a play for David Belasco, although he has not written a play for several years. One of his most notable stage offerings was the Pullman farce, "Excuse Me," produced by Henry W. Savage.

Toy Balloons Feature in Pola Negri Scene

Two thousand toy balloons were used in carnival scenes during the making of "Men," Pola Negri's latest starring picture which Dimitri Buchowetzki produced for Para mount.

When the balloons were finally released over the heads of the five hundred players in carnival costume, they floated upwards in a varicolored cloud which reflected the scores of lights directed against them.

Exhibitors Reject Picture Title

"Plaster Saints" Changed to "The Family Name" as Result of Questionnaire

AS a result of a canvass of theater owners and managers, Associated Exhibitors and Murray W. Garsson, the producer, announced this week the change of the working title of a picture based on the novel, "Plaster Saints." The production will be called "The Family Name."

Exhibitor comment on "Plaster Saints" was such as to discourage its use, as the following figures, expressed in percentages, show:

Those voting "excellent"	9.70
Those voting "good"	30.10
Those voting "fair"	25.24
Those voting "poor"	34.96

The percentage of those voting "excellent" and "good" was 39.8 of the whole, or about two in every five, as compared with three in five who considered the title "poor" to "fair."

As is humorously indicated by G. B. Morris (of the Strand, Plaza, Pike, Liberty, Pearl, Wigwam theaters, and seven other, all kinds"), San Antonio, Tex., the title isn't necessarily good for a picture because it has carried a book to some sort of success. "'Plaster,'" says Mr. Morris, "listens like something to do with a bricklayer, and 'saint' like something pertaining to heaven, neither of which means anything to present-day people."

Confirmation of this idea comes from A. E. Andrews, of the Opera House, Emporium, Pa., who is emphatic that "any title pertaining to saints or sinners is no good," and who pleads: "Call it anything but this." Neither does the idea of "saints who sin" appeal to Henry Hall, Dean Street theater, Adrian, Mich., "People are tired of this sort of appeal," he declares.

W. A. Erwin, of the Orpheum theater, Marion, Ill., also gave the distributor and producer something to think about when he classed the story "good," the proposed cast "excellent," the director "okay," but the title "poor," adding this comment: "Looks to me like an opportunity for another good picture that don't draw at the box office."

This same insistance upon working drawing power into titles runs through all the comment. "Title does not sound like box office appeal to me," says H. E. Redfield, of the Royal theater, Sioux City, Iowa, adding: "This is very important to my mind."

Mrs. J. G. Heywood, Lyric theater, Cornell, Wis., objects that the proposed title "does not have a modern appeal," apparently having found that titles should keep step with the trend of current thought.

One criticism, that of S. V. Swartz, of Broadhead, Wis., was that "Plaster Saints" indicated "lack of action" unless the person happened to be familiar with the story.

This demand for titles that suggest action and definitely convey an idea was, as a matter of fact, reflected in nearly all of the comment. For instance, J. G. Waters, of the Amuza theater, Inman, S. C., thought that "Plaster Saints" was too vague and generally descriptive to make much of an appeal to "the average theatergoer in the small town." And the owner of the Palace theater, Marksville, Iowa, considered "Plaster Saints" might even be "confusing."

George Fawcett Engaged for Neilan's "Tess"

For an important character role in "Tess Of The D'Urbervilles," which Marshall Neilan is making for Goldwyn, George Fawcett has been engaged.

Fox Filming "Man Without Country"

Coast Studios at Work on Elaborate Version of Story of Philip Nolan

WORK has been started at the Fox West Coast studios on an elaborate version of "The Man Without a Country," which the Fox organization declares will be one of its forthcoming big attractions.

Announcement of director and cast has not yet been made. It is understood that the Fox production will avail itself of the spectacular elements in the story, with a view to first-run appeal.

Some years ago Edward Everett Hale's famous story was picturized by another producer with Arnold Daly in the role of Philip Nolan. This film subsequently was shown widely under American Legion auspices, and is still in circulation.

The Fox organization is planning to make a far more elaborate version, taking advantage of the improvements in production technique which have been developed within recent years.

The story is built around Philip Nolan, army officer, who enlisted in Aaron Burr's scheme to form a new nation of the Louisiana and Mexican territory. The trial scene where Nolan cries out in a fit of frenzy: "Damn the United States. I wish I may never hear of the United States again" is one of the highlights of the story.

Then follow the sentence of the court that Nolan must spend the remainder of his life on a boat where he must not hear the name of the United States mentioned: the incidents connected with the War of 1812 when he redeems himself as a true American patriot; his unrequited love affair when he meets his former sweetheart on board the ship which was his home; and the slow torturing of his soul in the fulfilment of his sentence.

Just when the picture will be ready for presentation has not been announced.

Associated Will Road Show "The Chechahcos"

Associated Exhibitors are planning to road show "The Chechahcos," it is said. The decision came as a result of the recent private showing of the production. With this end in view Associated has appointed H. Elliott Stuckel as general press representative in charge of production. He is secretary of the Theatrical Press Representatives of America.

"The Chechahcos" was taken over by Associated from the Alaska Motion Picture Corporation. Every foot of the film was shot in Alaska. President Harding was a guest of the company on his last ill-fated tour of Alaska.

Educators Show "Little Old New York"

Because of its historical and educational value, Cosmopolitan's "Little Old New York" was selected by the New York Public Education Department of the Museum of Natural History and shown to 5,000 public school children at the museum March 21st.

The selection was made by G. H. Sherwood, curator of the Museum of Natural History and Director of the Public Educational Department to supplement a lecture by Mrs. Grace Fisher Ramsey.

Vitagraph British Chief Lauds U. S. Pictures

FOREIGN film production will never seriously rival product of American producers in foreign countries, according to George H. Smith, London, managing director of Vitagraph, Ltd., who is on the coast visiting his brother, Alfred E. Smith, President of Vitagraph.

Mr. Smith gave it as his opinion that British Film Week would react against English made films because of the failure of native producers to present pictures of the high grade of the American product.

"This is my first visit to the western center of the motion picture industry," Mr. Smith said, "and I am amazed at the progress and development in studios and studio equipment. Nothing abroad in Great Britain or in the countries of the continent, approaches the vastness of our industry as demonstrated by this colony."

Exclusive Announces Mix Feature Sales

Exclusive Pictures, Inc., announce the sale of many territories on the Tom Mix feature, "Pals In Blue." The territories so far sold are:

Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia, Virginia to Progress Pictures, Inc., Washington, D. C.; The State of Michigan to Exclusive Film Company, Detroit, Mich.; Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma to Specialty Film Company, Dallas, Texas; Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey to Rialto Productions of Phila., Inc., Phila., Pa.; Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia to S. & S. Production Progressing on Christie Special

Production is well under way on the first of the Al Christie special features for Hodkinson release. Director Scott Sidney hopes, under favorable weather conditions, to have the production ready for release late in May.

The complete cast of principals to date includes Dorothy Devore, Walter Hiers, Tully Marshall, James Harrison, Priscilla Bonner, Jimmie Adams, Jay Belasco, Patricia Palmer, Lincoln Plumer, Rosa Gore, George Pierce, Victor Rodman, Babe London and Douglas Carter.

"Lightning Rider" Is New Harry Carey Title

"The Lightning Rider" is the new title of the second Harry Carey production to be released through the Hodkinson Corporation. It was made under the title of "Desert Rose." It is expected that "The Lightning Rider" will be completed this week and the negative shipped east for early release.

Series Will Depict Life of Napoleon

A series of productions depicting the life of Napoleon has been started by Abel Gance, director of "I Accuse." In order to assure historical accuracy, cooperation has been enlisted from a number of professors of history who have specialized in the Napoleonic period.

Paul Mooney Enthusiastic Over Outlook

PAUL C. MOONEY, Hodkinson vice-president in charge of distribution is back in New York after a trip which took him to all parts of the United States. He expresses the utmost enthusiasm over the prospects for the future.

"In the tangible prospects ahead of them in the form of first run features definitely contracted for, every man in the field for the Hodkinson Corporation is genuinely enthusiastic," said Mr. Mooney, "and their enthusiasm surpasses anything I have ever seen in any body of men. This enthusiasm speaks volumes because I believe that the men in each territory know what their exhibitors want and when these men are enthusiastic over the product they will have to sell, it means that we have happily secured a line of offerings that will fill the demands of the exhibitors, and that spells success for any organization."

"Try and Get It" Opens at N. Y. Cameo

"Try and Get It," Samuel V. Grand's production for Hodkinson release will open its New York run at the Cameo March 30th. Bryant Washburn and Billy Dove share starring honors in "Try and Get It" which is an adaptation of the Saturday Evening Post story, "The Ring-Tailed Galliwampus" by Eugene P. Lyle.

Dereleys Perdue in a current F.B.O. Production, "Untamed Youth."

Jackie Coogan in scenes from his latest production for Metro, "A Boy of Flanders."

Many Independent Films Marketed

Various Companies Report Activity in State Rights and Foreign Sales

REPORTS of recent sales in the state rights and foreign fields show that independent producers generally are having no great trouble in disposing of their pictures.

Arrow Film Corporation disposed of its serial "Days of '49," to J. S. Jossey of Progress Pictures Corporation of Cleveland for Ohio.

C.B.C. Film Sales Corporation sold its output for Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia to Harry Crandall of Exhibitors Film Exchange, Washington, D. C., and sold to Apollo Trading Corporation the foreign rights to Europe, except Holland and Scandinavia, for "Yesterday's Wife," "Forgive and Forget," "Innocence," "The Marriage Market," "Discontented Husbands" and "The Barefoot Boy."

Grand-Asher Distributing Corporation also sold to Apollo Trading Corporation the foreign rights to its output. Other Grand-Asher sales are the thirty-six two reelers, some made by Joe Rock, some by Sid Smith and the balance by Monty Banks.

Thirteen Monty Banks comedies for Switzerland, Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania and Fiji Islands were purchased by Associated First National while Pearl Films, Ltd., bought thirteen Monty Banks and ten Joe Rocks for United Kingdom and Famous Players-Lasky secured thirteen Monty Banks, thirteen Sid Smith and ten Joe Rocks for Japan and ten Joe Rocks for Australia, Dutch West Indies, Straits Settlements, Tasmania and Malay States.

Max Glucksmann purchased thirteen Monty Banks and ten Joe Rock Comedies from Grand-Asher for Argentine, Chili, Paraguay, Uraguay, Peru, Equador and Bolivia, and Glucksmann also bought "The Love Trap," and "Mine To Keep."

Further recent sales of Grand-Asher were "Mine to Keep" to Quality Features, Ltd., in Australia and New Zealand and Havana Film Co., for Cuba.

C. C. Burr sold New York State franchise on "You Are Guilty," to Bernard Mills of First Graphic Productions Exchange.

Independent Pictures Corporation has just sold to Columbia Pictures Co of St. Louis eight Franklyn Farnum subjects and "The Wildcat," "The Offenders," "In The Spider's Web," "Shattered Faith' and "What Three Men Wanted."

Other sales just made by Independent Pictures Corporation are "What Three Men Wanted," to Appolo Exchange, New York City; "The Wildcat," "In The Spider's Web," "The Offenders" and eight Franklyn Farnums to J. W. Adams for Arkansas; Eight Franklyn Farnum westerns to All Star Feature Distributors of San Francisco, Big Feature Rights of Louisville, First Graphic Exchange, New York City, Mountain States Film Attractions of Denver and Max Glucksmann for Argentine. Evan Anderson bought California, Neveda and Arizona rights for "What Three Men Wanted."

Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation has disposed of its "After Six Days" to Kerman Film Exchange, New York City; Standard Film Attractions of Philadelphia; Epic Film Attractions of Chicago; North and South Carolina to B. and W. Booking Office and Canada to Charles Lalumiere.

C. B. C. Product Disposed of in Cuba

The C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation has negotiated a deal for the distribution of its productions in Cuba. The Liberty Film Company, of Havana, is the exchange to which this sale has been made.

Solve Contract Problem in England

First National Comes to Agreement With British Exhibitors' Organization

ASSOCIATED FIRST NATIONAL believes it has paved the way for a general settlement of the contract question which has long been a bugaboo among producers, distributors and exhibitors in England. An agreement regarding contracts has been reached between First National and the C. E. A., the English exhibitors' organization.

Time and again attempts have been made to find a contract which would meet all the requirements of the situation. Each time there has been something to which either C. E. A. or the producers objected, and each contract has died shortly after its birth. The First National's contract form, which has met the approval of the C. E A. is hailed in the trade papers in England as a big step toward the ultimate solution. In fact, one of them, "The Bioscope," in an editorial on the matter, declares the matter is "nearing finality."

The section of the new contract which went furthest in meeting the demands of the British distributors is that giving the renter of the film the right to cut off supplies, after notice to that effect has been given, where contractual obligations as to payment have not been complied with. There is also an important clause substituting arbitration for judicial proceedings in case of disputes over pictures.

About the only criticism of the contract voiced in the British trade press is to the effect that a few loop-holes are left to which both parties might avail themselves if they wished to injure the contract. For instance in the provision permitting the renter the right to cut off supplies, there is no provision that notice shall be served by registered mail. There is also, the critics say, no provision for the fixing of liability in the case of a film, destroyed or damaged while in the custody of the hirer, and the exhibitor has no means of knowing his exact liability.

However, these same critics are warm in their approval of the contract as a whole. One of them says, "We hail it as a genuine endeavor to sweep away the difficulties that have surrounded the problem of film hire."

"It Is the Law" Almost Completed by Fox

J. Gordon Edwards is completing "It Is the Law" at the William Fox New York Studios. This is the stage play dramatized by Elmer Rice from the novel by Hayden Talbot and Mimi Palmeri has the lead.

The dual role of Albert Woodruff and "Sniffer" is portrayed by Albert Hohl, and the other principals are Herbert Heyes, George Lessey, Robert Young, Florence Dixon, Byron Douglas, Olaf Hytton, DeSacia Mooers, Byron Russell, Guido Trento, Bijou Fernandez, Dorothy Kingdon, Patricia O'Connor, Helen D'Algy and Nancy Newman.

Robert W. Service Sells Story to Fox

"The Roughneck," by Robert W. Service, author of "The Spell of the Yukon" and other tales of the Alaskan country, has been purchased by William Fox

INGRAM'S ARAB WARD Excites Broadway Interest

Lively interest is being evoked along Broadway as Rex Ingram, gaunt and tall, comes striding down the Roaring Forties with his little eight-year-old Arab ward, Kada-Abdel-Kadir, a picturesque little figure in his turban, flaming red cloak and lacquered boots.

Kada-Abdel-Kadir appeared in Mr. Ingram's latest production for Metro, "The Arab," a screen version of Edgar Selwyn's play. Ingram and Alice Terry found him somewhere around the outskirts of Tunis in Algiers where "The Arab" was filmed. He seemed a joyous little fellow, according to Mr. Ingram's description, knowing nothing about his home and caring even less. Miss Terry and her famous husband became attached to him, arranged for a part for him in "The Arab" and when the picture had been completed brought him back with them as their ward to this country.

Mr. Ingram has not yet disclosed just what the future of Kada will be. He displayed remarkable ability in "The Arab" and it is possible that he is destined for a career on the screen. Whether Mr. Ingram will do this or whether he simply plans to give Kada an up-to-date upbringing and education has not yet been disclosed.

But Kada does not mind about his future in the least. He travels up and down Broadway in wide eyed wonder for he and his people on their native deserts never dreamed of such sights, even in the wildest flights of their immagination.

"The Arab" was photographed by John F. Seitz. Alice Terry and Ramon Novarro are the only Americans in the cast. The other players are all famous European screen and stage actors.

Cast for "North of 36" Has Many Big Names

WITH the expectation that "North of 36" will be a fitting successor to Emerson Hough's other filmed story, "The Covered Wagon," Jesse L. Lasky has completed the preliminary arrangements for the production.

Irvin Willat will direct when he finishes editing and titling Zane Grey's picture, "Wanderer of the Wasteland," which Famous Players-Lasky predict will make Director Willat an outstanding figure in the motion picture profession.

The cast of "North of 36" includes several of the players featured in "The Covered Wagon." Ernest Torrence, Tully Marshall, Jack Holt, Jacqueline Logan and Noah Beery will have leading roles.

Locations will be mostly in Texas where co-operation of a large group of ranchmen has already been assured and the production may be ready for showing in the late fall.

Gaumont Company Secures Warner Productions

The Gaumont Company, Ltd., of London, have secured the exclusive distribution rights for the United Kingdom on Warner Brothers' "The Marriage Circle" and "Broadway After Dark." This is the result of Albert Warner's recent trip to England, though the transaction was only concluded this week. The deal was negotiated between Albert Warner and Colonel Ernest Bromhead, the Gaumont managing director.

"The Marriage Circle" print has already been forwarded and will be followed shortly by "Broadway After Dark." Extensive advertising campaigns are planned for both pictures.

Selects First National Cast on "For Sale"

Production on "For Sale" will start immediately, according to John McCormick, First National coast representative. This is an original story by Earl Hudson to be directed by George Archainbaud.

Claire Windsor, who has just returned from abroad where she was engaged in Edwin Carewe's "Son of the Sahara," also for First National, will portray the leading feminine role. Adolph Menjou will interpret the role of Joseph Hudley, a part peculiarly suited to him; Robert Ellis will play opposite Miss Windsor, while Mary Carr and Tully Marshall make it a cast of superlative merit.

Fitzmaurice Drops Plan to Visit Cuba

George Fitzmaurice has abandoned his plan to make the Cuba scenes for "Cytherea" in Cuba. It is the producer's opinion that the proper atmosphere is to be had in Hollywood, and he has had no difficulty in obtaining ideal locations. "Cytherea" will be a First National release.

Arrow Representative in New England

George West, Special Representative of Arrow Film Corporation, is spending a week or so in the New England territory co-operating with McConville, Patton & Heffron of Independent Films, Inc. for Arrow pictures.

New Managers Appointed in Pathe Branches

New branch managers have been appointed by Pathe in the exchanges at Albany, Minneapolis and New Orleans. P. A. Schmuck, who has been acting as salesman in the Philadelphia territory has been promoted to the branch-managership in New Orleans.

H. J. Bayley, who has been in charge of the Pathe office in New Orleans, has been named branch-manager of the Minneapolis exchange.

Charles W. Stombaugh has been transferred from the branch-managership of the Pathe exchange in Minneapolis and placed in charge of the Pathe office in Albany, N. Y.

No Universal Shake-Up, Says Lichtman

Emphatically denying a rumor published in a Broadway publication that there was a big shake-up due in Universal sales forces, Al Lichtman, general manager of Universal Exchange said:

"This story is absolutely false and unfounded. There is no truth in it whatsoever. And yet, in a way, I am glad that the story was published, because it gives me an opportunity to deny something definite.

"Ever since I have been with Universal, these rumors have been coming back to me in one form or another, but this is the first time that they have taken any definite form and the only time I have felt that they have been concrete enough to be denied."

Seven Leading Men for "Mary the Third"

King Vidor's next Goldwyn picture, adopted with a different title, from Rachel Crother's stage play "Mary The Third," will have seven leading men.

They are: Johnny Walker, Ben Lyon, loaned by First National, William Haines, one of Goldwyn's permanent acting organization who had a part in Rupert Hughes' latest picture, "True as Steel," Creighton Hale, who appeared in Victor Seastrom's "Name the Man!", William Collier, Jr., James Morrison and Niles Welch.

Eleanor Boardman will have the leading role and Pauline Caron has been engaged for another important feminine part.

"Tiger Love" Is Started by George Melford

With Antonio Moreno and Estelle Taylor in the featured roles, George Melford has started his Paramount production of "Tiger Love" at Hollywood.

Miss Taylor joins from San Francisco where she played lead in a production filmed there. Manuel Penella adapted "Tiger Love" from "The Wildcat," a Spanish opera.

Four First Nationals in April Schedule

INCLUDED in the "First National 1924-20 Group" are four productions to be released during the month of April.

"The Marriage Cheat" is a South Sea Island story with Percy Marmont and Leatrice Joy in the featured roles with Adolph Menjou, Laska Winter, Henry Barrows and J. P. Lackney.

"A Son of the Sahara" is the Edwin Carewe production which has been six months in the making in Algeria and Paris. Claire Windsor is cast in the feminine lead with Bert Lytell in the titlerole. The other American players who appear in the picture are Rosemary Theby, Montagu Love, Walter McGrail and Paul Panzer.

"The Woman on the Jury" was made by First National's own producing organization, with Harry O. Hoyt directing. Sylvia Breamer is in the title role and her supporting cast includes Frank Mayo, Bessie Love, Lew Cody, Hobart Bosworth, Mary Carr, Myrtle Stedman, Henry B. Walthall, Jean Hersholt, Fred Warren, Leo White, Arthur Lubin and Grace Gordon.

"Those Who Dance" is the second Ince production and it is a story of modern life by George Kibbe Turner. Blanche Sweet, Bessie Love, Warner Baxter, Robert Agnew, John Sainpolis and Lydia Knott appear.

National Screen Service Signs Hodkinson

National Screen Service will have exclusive distribution of Trailers on all Hodkinson releases, according to a contract entered into last week. With the signing of Hodkinson, National now has exclusive trailer distribution for seven of the largest companies, including Fox, Goldwyn, Pathe, Paramount, Universal and United Artists.

"Virtuous Liars" to Open at N. Y. Rialto

"Virtuous Liars," Whitman Bennett's third production for Vitagraph will have its Broadway premiere at the Rialto theatre the coming week. David Powell and Edith Allen have the principal roles.

The story is an original by E. C. Holland. It was directed by Whitman Bennett.

Neil Hamilton Engaged for "Mountebank"

After completing his role in D. W. Griffith's "America," Neil Hamilton has signed to play the juvenile lead in Paramount's "The Mountebank," which Herbert Brenon is directing at the Long Island Studio with Ernest Torrence and Anna Q. Nilsson in the featured roles.

Foreign Deals Closed on Burr Specials

A number of foreign deals are reported consummated on C. C. Burr independent specials through Richmount Pictures, Inc. productions include "Three O'clock in the Morning," "Restless Wives" and "The New School Teacher."

Among the deals concluded are the following:

Sociedad General of Buenos Ayres have purchased the rights on the three pictures for Argentine, Uraguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru and Equador; I. V. T. A. of Johannesburg, secured the South African rights to "Three O'clock in the Morning"; Liberty Films Company, of Havana, "Restless Wives," Three O'clock in the Morning" and "The New School Teacher."

"How to Educate a Wife" Cast Completed

Warner Brothers have completed the cast for the Elinor Glyn story, "How to Educate a Wife." The latest additions are Claude Gillingwater, Creighton Hale, Betty Francisco, Edward Earle and Lydia Yeamans Titus. Marie Prevost, Monte Blue and Louise Fazenda have the leading roles.

Production on the story started several weeks ago and will now be rushed with the completion of the cast. Monte Bell is directing, assisted by James B. Flood and Sandy Roth. The photography is in the hands of Charles Van Enger.

Charles Jones Completes "The Circus Cowboy"

Fox Film Corporation has bestowed the title of "The Circus Cowboy" to the latest Charles Jones starring vehicle to be released in May.

This program feature was produced at the William Fox West Coast Studios under the working title of "The Circus Rider."

William Wellman directed the production which was adapted by Doty Hobart from the original story by Louis Sherwin. Marian Nixon, one of the "Baby Stars," has the leading feminine role.

"Sally" Company Guests at Pickford Studio

Members of the "Sally" company, of which Marilyn Miller was formerly the star, were recent guests at the Pickford studio, where Tom J. Geraghty is preparing his first production for Jack Pickford, temporarily titled, "The End of the World."

Screen tests were made of a number of the "Sally" principals and it is not unlikely that some of them will be included in the Pickford cast, which is now being selected.

Advocates "Longer Wear" Prints

Raw Stock Official Believes This is Real Answer to Print Situation

MR. BRIEFER of the Research Department of the Powers Film Products Co., puts light on another angle of the "More Prints Drive" in the following statement:

"Simultaneously with the recent price reduction of positive film a 'drive' seems to be in progress for 'More Prints.' The exhibitor suddenly comes in for a large share of the blame for print deteriorations and producers are asked to offset this deterioration with additional prints. Thus the price advantage, due to the recent cut, is to be absorbed in greater consumption of raw material.

"Mr. E. V. Richards, in the March 8th issue of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, scores exhibitors for abusive handling of prints and concludes that the remedy lies in 'More Prints.'

"The MOTION PICTURE NEWS Qestionnaire, March 15th issue, develops a very mixed opinion and it is doubtful if a truly reliable index to the problem can be obtained of a question involving so many factors.

"The Film Daily of March 17th calls for 'More Release Prints' and suggests that the saving of the difference in cost of raw stock be diverted into an added number of prints.

"Mr. E. A. Eschmann declares in the March 18th issue of The Film Daily, that long runs are chiefly responsible for the demand for additional prints.

"Mr. L. A. Jones of the Eastman Kodak Company sums up the situation with the broad statement that 'whatever tends to give greatest satisfaction to the ultimate consumer, even if it costs more money at the start, works for the general progress and prosperity of the business.'

"None will deny that more prints will tend to give better exhibition prints. In all the agitation so far noted, the idea seems to prevail that the remedy all lies in 'More Prints.' No thought is expressed as to the possibility of greater projection life of motion picture film and how this may be accomplished to the financial advantage of the industry in general. 'More Prints' may well be made in many instances with distinct advantage. Indeed the practice of false economy is ever present and worthy of serious attention, but we feel that instead of stressing the obvious remedy of avoiding deterioration with shorter number of runs, some thought should be given to the physical factors controlling the useful life of prints and seek to get the most out of the prints purchased.

"The 'longer wear' idea carries its own appeal. It calls for no increased expenditure in direct outlay or the inevitable additional cost of handling more prints.

"The 'More Prints' idea compels a consideration of economic factors such as the additional expense of handling, examining, storing, shipping, and other costs incident to the plan proposed. It is not quite as simple as it sounds.

"The 'longer wear' idea has an economic advantage—the 'more prints' proposition only serves to increase the old extravagance in the motion picture field from which we should attempt to recover.

"The technical details relative to longer film life investigation is obviously out of place here but such investigation has actually been in progress for more than two years in the Research Laboratory of the Powers Film Products.

"Exhaustive tests have clearly demonstrated the possibility of improving the useful life of the present motion picture film from 25 to 50%. Motion picture film embodying this feature has actually been, and is being circulated and independently reported from separated territories as showing greatly increased projection life.

"It has been found that increasing the useful projection life of the sprocket holes, eliminates many of the other objections to long runs such as rain marks, unsteady pictures, and of course enormously reduces breaks in projection.

"By all means there should be a sufficient number of prints made to serve the needs of the exhibitor, but improvement along the lines indicated should not be forgotten. The saving on the price of raw stock might be better diverted to the making of better pictures."

Laemmle Offers Million to Jack Dempsey

ONE million dollars has been offered to Jack Dempsey, heavyweight boxing champion, by Carl Laemmle, President of Universal Corporation, to appear in motion pictures this summer.

Following the opening of negotiations Dempsey went to Los Angeles to confer with Laemmle at Universal City.

Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager has left for Los Angeles and may sign the contract.

No definite information is available as to what Dempsey is to do for Universal; whether he will be starred in a big feature production, in a serial, or in a number of pictures.

Geraghty Names Pickford Organization

Tom J. Geraghty has selected his executive organization for his first screen production for Jack Pickford which is temporarily titled, "The End of the World." His final selection was Vernon Keays as director. Keays, for the past five years has been an assistant director to James Cruze.

Others included in the Geraghty personnel are: Arthur Edeson, chief photographer; James Dugan, assistant director; Edward M. Langley, art director; and W. W. Kerrigan, company manager. All of these have been associated in the past with Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford productions.

Casting for "The End of the World" is under way.

"Three Weeks" at Capitol March 30

Goldwyn's first Metropolitan showing of Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks" will occur March 30, at the Capitol Theatre in New York City.

Winfield R. Sheehan Back From European Tour

FOX Film Corporation home office expects to see its Vice-President and General Manager Winfield R. Sheehan back at his desk this week from a two months' European trip.

During his tour abroad Mr. Sheehan visited all the Fox branch offices, including those just opened this Spring, and arranged for the widest possible distribution of the Fox product on the Continent.

"A Lost Lady" Commended Among Best Sellers

Willa Cather's Story, "A Lost Lady," recently purchased for the screen by Warner Brothers has been commended as a best seller by the New York Tribune and "The Bookman."

The Tribune says: "'Lost Lady' is a cameo portrait of a man's woman and is one of the six best sellers of the season."

The Bookman reports: "'Willa Cather's book 'A Lost Lady' is among those most in demand at public libraries throughout the country during the past month."

The story is being syndicated to newspapers by the Bell Syndicate. The first installments appeared last week and they will continue for the next nine months.

Hoxie In High Sierras For "Back Trail" Scenes

Jack Hoxie has finished his William McLeod Raine story, "Ridgeway of Montana," and left Universal City for Lone Pine, high up in the Sierras. On this elevated strata the outdoor scenes for "The Back Trail" by Walter J. Coburn will be directed by Hoxie's new director, Clifford Smith. The cast includes Eugenia Gilbert, Claude Payton, Billy Lester, William McCall, Pat Harmon, and "Bunk" Hoxie's big Australian sheep dog who has just made his picture debut.

Whittle Foreign Manager for Lee-Bradford

Frank Whittle has been appointed foreign manager for Lee-Bradford, according to announcement by Mr. Lee. Mr. Whittle has been with the organization for a number of years and is well and favorably known by all foreign buyers.

The position, it is said, was created for Mr. Whittle because of the company's increased business in the foreign field.

Inspiration Appoints New Publicity Chief

CHARLES HOLLAND DUELL, president of Inspiration Pictures, Inc., announces the appointment of Wythe Williams as general director of publicity for the organization. Mr. Williams for the past four years has been Paris correspondent for the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

For his journalistic work during and following the war, the French Government created Mr. Williams a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. He will make his headquarters in New York.

The King of

A Feature

Wild Horses

He Was As Dangerous As a Tiger
Yet the Sympathy of a Man Tamed Him!

Almost every stallion is dangerous.

But when he is a wild stallion, foaled in the mountains, with a mother and a sire who have never felt the halter, then he is doubly dangerous.

Rex ranged the canyons with his herd of mares. By his strength, skill and cunning he not only escaped capture but he drove away rivals and kept his herd intact.

Man after man tried to capture this magnificent coal-black horse, but tried in vain. His rivals he defeated; men he kept at a distance, until one man came along. That man didn't capture him; he captured the man!

The most unique feature ever presented, with novelty, thrill, excitement and a real wild horse as the hero, a horse so dangerous that the cameramen were in danger of their lives. For concentrated punch it is a feature in a thousand!

BIRDS OF PASSAGE

Three Reels

The most remarkable nature picture ever made

One of the greatest mysteries in Nature is the migration of birds.

Every Spring the air is filled with feathered travellers, who, as though at word of command, start flight through space over thousands of miles and may end their journey at the Arctic Circle. In the Fall they turn back over the long and dangerous journey, heading for the sunny and welcoming South.

Bengt Berg, the celebrated Scandinavian scientist, has made a life study of the migrations of birds. Now you may see in one marvellous picture the results of years of patience. Not a person in your audiences but who will marvel at these surprising scenes.

See the air dark with millions of birds; see a river fairly choked with wading water birds; see huge crocodiles living with big birds in perfect friendship; see the land of the Pharaohs as a huge Winter resort for every kind of bird you can think of!

Exhibitors Box-Office Reports

PARAMOUNT

Ten Commandments—
Judging by the fact that seats are selling a month in advance it might be conservatively estimated as a hit, and the lines every night prove it. A great film, say critics and public alike. (East.)

Next Corner—
Feature with good entertainment value. Was well liked and we did good business. (Middle West.)

Stranger—
A fairly good picture which seemed to be well taken by our audiences. (Middle West.)

Fighting Coward—
The fans laughed themselves sick over this one, a fine example of cinema sarcasm. Went over big. Very good business. (East).

Heritage of the Desert—
Good picture that went over big. (East.)

Flaming Barriers—
Box office receipts were fair. (Middle West.)
Much hokum but went over to fair business on account of novel exploitation. (East.)

Society Scandal—
More like the old type of Swanson vehicle, but a very good story, and one that is playing to good business. (East.)

Singer Bill McKee—
Better than "Wild Bill Hickock," but still not up to Hart's best. Pretty good business for Lent. (Middle West.)

Ice Bound—
Proved a winning attraction. (Middle West.)

METRO

Scaramouche—
First popular-priced showing of this picture would have gone over very big but followed too soon the first showing at high prices. Consequences rather sad. (Middle West.)
Had a good crowd at the end of the third week. (East.)
A good drawing card which made money on a week's run. (Middle West.)
Packing them in—second week. (East.)

Thy Name Is Woman—
The stars of this picture have appeared in much better productions. With the exception of the cast, patrons were rather disappointed. A golf reel on the bill brought in a good share of business. (West.)
Very good picture; business good (Middle West.)

Happiness—
An average attraction which played to the usual weekly attendance. (Middle West.)

Women Who Give—
Went very strong hereabouts where most people know their Cape Cod and the people there. A fine story and well liked. Good business. (East.)

Don't Doubt Your Husband
Another rollicking Dana vehicle. Not quite as finished perhaps as the last one or two, but well liked withal. It kept them laughing. Good business. (East.)

White Sister—
Many folks thought it too sad and heavy, but they flocked to see it nevertheless and business was capacity for the week. (East.)

Pleasure Mad—

Uninvited Guest—
An excellent picture. Good business. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Lilies of the Field—
Beautifully staged production which did not seem to register for receipts were little better than fair. (Middle West.)
This one went over good, more than satisfying patrons for a week. (Middle West.)
Good picture. Plot liked by attendants. Receipts helped by fashion show. (West.)

Painted People—
Box office receipts were very good, which may be partially attributed to fashion display held at theater by local dealers. (Middle West.)
Does not compare with "Flaming Youth," but attracted good business on the strength of that former Colleen Moore success. (East.)

Flowing Gold—
The house was packed on this picture. The audiences thought it good, and so did the critics. Excellent business. (East.)
Good picture, well acted and we did excellent business with it. (Middle West.)
Did a good ten days' business, despite the fact that it opened in the middle of the week. Likened to "The Spoilers" and that was all that was necessary. (West.)

Her Temporary Husband—

Galloping Fish—
Clever comedy and nicely presented but audiences did not take to it and business was bad. (Middle West.)

Fighting Blade—
Barthelmess usually draws very well here, and this one did its share. Patrons didn't seem enthusiastic over the picture, however. He gets by better in modern roles. Business was quite good. (West.)

Love Master—
A good average box office attraction. Business good. (Middle West.)

FOX

Not a Drum Was Heard—
Fans and critics like it and drew nice business with it during run. (Middle West.)
Hoot Gibson's admirers liked this one. Business fair. (Middle West.)

Shadow of the East—
Fair picture; business fair. (Middle West.)
A good business getter. (East.)

Ladies to Board—
Mix and the famous horse had company in this film that the patrons liked almost as well as the stars. It made a big hit. Very good business. (East.)

Eyes of the Forest—
A good Tom Mix picture which did the usual good business. (East.)

No Mother to Guide Her—
Box office receipts were poor. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

Hunchback of Notre Dame—
Wonderful picture, third week, but it isn't holding up as well as expected. Too gruesome for the women. (Middle West.)

Fool's Highway—
Most interesting picture we have shown this year. Wonderful attraction for those tired of jazz. Picture was recommended without reservations, by papers. (Middle West.)

Flashes of Lightning—
Good picture, one of best Universals for some time. Did a good business. (West.)

SELZNICK

Defying Destiny—
Paired with "A Society Scandal" for a program hard to beat. Very good picture and good business. (East.)

Daughters of Today—
Went fairly well, but needed boosting. (East.)

ASSOC. EXHIBS.

The Extra Girl—
A smile, a tear and a thrill make this a mighty good attraction. (East.)

F. B. O.

Judgment of the Storm—
Picture judged capable of registering strong but business in second week was very disappointing. (Middle West.)

Lullaby—
Patrons of this house enjoyed this picture as much as any they have seen here in a number of weeks. It is a very well done production. Business was good. (West.)

PREFERRED

Poisoned Paradise—
Fair picture that had to be bolstered up a bit. (East.)

HODKINSON

Drivin' Fool—
Did very good business here and was well liked. One of the livest in some time. (East.)

GOLDWYN-COSMO.

Great White Way—
One of the biggest hits of the season here. Selling out the house every night. Everybody is talking about it. Very good business indeed. (East).
Entertaining, but could be shortened to advantage. Business not so good. (Middle West).

Rendezvous—
Considered a good picture with plot that is a little different. Did fairly good business. (West.)
A very entertaining picture, that seemed to please pretty well. Good cast helped the story. Business good. (West.)

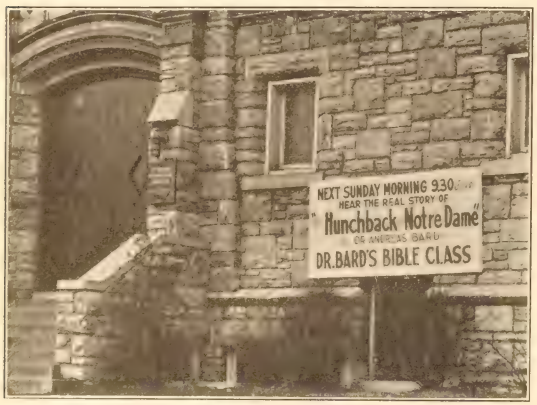
Eternal Three—
Picture did not appeal and business was badly off. (Middle West).

WARNER BROS.

Beau Brummel—
Excellent picture. Acting and scenes all especially liked by crowds. Receipts very good. Held for second week. (West.)

Marriage Circle—
The title proved an attraction and the weekly attendance was good. (Middle West.)
Opinions divided. Business averaged up. (Middle West.)

Conductor 1492—
The best thing Johnny Hines has offered the screen to date. Folks liked it immensely. Business was excellent. (East.)



YOUR IDEA

DURING the time that Harry Yost, exploiteer, was arranging the preliminary campaign for "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" at the Hamilton theatre, Lancaster, Pa., a syndicated editorial by Dr. Frank Crane appeared in the Philadelphia Public Ledger containing the following statement:

"If I were czar of the world I would order than any woman bearing a child should have the right to draw from the treasury daily an amount sufficient to provide her and her offspring with food and shelter. Any woman having two children should have a little more than enough to sustain the life of three persons; and so on, increasing the bonus up to ten.

"The woman having ten children should be enobled by the state and be entitled to wear an insignia of honor. All churches should be compelled to give her a front pew. She should have a free ticket for any theatre she chose to attend, and every Easter she should have the finest hat in town."

Yost quickly seized upon the opportunity, and at once inserted an advertisement in the Lancaster papers in which he announced that

When "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" (Universal) was shown at the Isis, Kansas City, Mo., Exploiter Jean Belasco arranged this unusual tie-up with St. Mark's Lutheran church

"conforming with the philosophy of Dr. Crane and believing with him that the mother of ten children was deserving of signal honors, he took pleasure in inviting any such mothers in Lancaster—and their children—to be the guests of the Hamilton theatre at any time during the engagement."

While no such mother came forward to take advantage of the offer, widespread publicity resulted from it.

Watch the list of local events coming off. Many of them will afford opportunities for exploitation tie-ups.

WHEN "Name the Man" played the Allen theatre, Cleveland, the management used a series of advance semi-teaser ads on the production, one of which is reproduced here. The original ad was three columns in width, or about half again as large as it is shown here.

They were used daily, with a slight change of copy. That shown here preceded the opening announcement, and carried the theatre name and the date of the run. The stock slug was used throughout the series, and tied up with the advertising during the showing, when the same design was employed.

The copy was extremely brief, with no superfluous adjectives or billing, and the ads could be read at a glance. The arrangement was unusual enough to insure attention and the series paved the way for the regular line of advertising on the production.

The valuable stunt is the one that not only sells the picture, but sells your theatre for the future.

UNIQUE among theatres, in that it is "manned" entirely by women, except for the head usher, the New Hoosier was opened recently at Whiting, Ind. The opening was a gala affair and the house was given a rousing send-off.

Mrs. Margaret V. Bennett is directing manager, with Miss Ann Grogan as treasurer. Mrs. Bennett announces a policy of appealing especially to women (after all, what theatre doesn't?) and she will pick her programs with that in mind.

In the souvenir program issued for the opening, the request is printed that patrons let the management know what they think of pictures shown at the New Hoosier. "Going Up" was the opening attraction, and Organist Benedict of the Stratford theatre, Chicago, played for the occasion.

Contests are valuable, but in staging them, try to handle them so that even the losers won't be disappointed. Better to give away a few extra consolation prizes than to have a kick-back.

FOLLOWING his circulating library and public garage, Manager H. C. (Tod) Browning of the Olympia theatre, New Haven, has developed another exploitation stunt of the sort that build good will and local prestige.

His latest is a tie-up with the Congress Bank and Trust Company of New Haven. Coupons have been issued under the auspices of the Olympia, which when presented with one dollar at the bank start the bearer off with a two dollar savings account.

Only one coupon is allowed to a person. Since the plan stimulated saving, the New Haven newspapers played it up and considerable attention was attracted. It meant a new line of co-operation for the house and opened up possibilities of future exploitation.

Don't expect a string of exaggerated adjectives to sell pictures these days. Find the human angle—the thing about the picture that is different —and tell them about it.

WIDESPREAD co-operation will be given "Lilies of the Field" by the Florist's Telegraph Delivery association, an organization that boasts 3,200 members in every part of the country, it is announced.

Corinne Griffith's photograph, as she appears in "Lilies of the Field" with a corsage of flowers, will be the centerpiece of an attractive card to be rotogravured and delivered to association members for display in their windows.

The step is the beginning of a new campaign inaugurated by the Floral association to educate the public in the facilities offered in delivering flowers by wire. It marks the first real tie up with picture people and promises to have permanent, far reaching results.

AND OURS

TRAVELING ten thousand miles to study American exploitation and presentation is something of an unusual pilgrimage. Yet that is what has been done by Roy L. Purves, general manager of the Sydney branch of the Hoyt's De Luxe theatre chain, Australia. The fame of American showmanship having reached the Antipodes, this excursion was decided upon—although after looking over the work done by Mr. Purves it is difficult to see where Australian methods are particularly behind those used here.

Full page ad on "The Common Law" (Selznick) in Australia, as described here.

In the accompanying illustration are shown two of the animated displays which are a regular feature of Mr. Purves' work. Moving figures and effects are always used in these. In the one showing the ring scene, the referee's arm moved up and down, and at every tenth stroke a bell clanged. This one attracted particular attention.

In the lower corner, to the left of Mr. Purves' picture, is seen an unusual ad on "The Isle of Lost Ships." It is a reproduction of the cashier's seat plan of the house on the opening night, showing every seat in the house sold. The genuineness of this was duly attested to. He reports that his campaign on this picture was easily the outstanding success of last year.

The one thing in which Australia has lagged behind, he reports, and the thing in which he has been particularly interested, is the American method of presentation. Three weeks were spent on the coast in studying the presentations in Los Angeles, and he has since been observing those employed along Broadway. Due to the lack of adequate theatres in the past, it has been impossible for Australian houses to compete in this regard, but with those now under construction, he believes that this defect will shortly be remedied.

The advertising done by Hoyt's in Australia is unusual in two particulars—large space and the use of the half-tone art ad. Many of the ads laid out by Mr. Purves are full page size—all are hand drawn—and a large portion are drawn in wash and half-toned. The result is an unusual quality and a likeness in the faces not always found in ads here. One of these full page ads, that on "The Common Law," is here shown, although in the reproduction most of the original effect has been lost. The plate shown was later mortised and type matter inserted.

An interesting point brought out by Mr. Purves is that Antipodean styles are almost entirely dictated by American photoplays. Within three days from the time a film is first shown, copies of the dresses worn will be on display in the store windows.

FROM San Juan, Porto Rico, comes an ingenious bit of exploitation, in whch excellent advantage is taken of the location of the theatre. On the ocean front, at the terminal of the trolley system of San Juan, is the Parque Borinquen. The trolley company operates a theatre here, seating about eight hundred persons.

Immediately adjoining this is a large, open air restaurant, seating some five hundred persons, extensively patronized. This fact has been utilized by placing a conspicuous display by the theatre in such a position that it can be seen by every patron of the restaurant.

The accompanying photo shows the display used on "White Tiger." Occasionally, instead of the cut-out, a 24-sheet is used. The park is under the supervision of John D. Allen, formerly of Montreal, who is assisted by William L. Zwigard.

Costuming your usherettes gives a pleasing change to the appearance of things, and it need not be expensive, either.

CONSISTENT and aggressive work is being done by Grosset & Dunlap, publishers, in furthering co-operation between its dealers and motion picture theatres on the popular price reprints of novels. This firm has just issued a booklet for dealers called "Getting the Movie Crowd Into Your Store."

The front cover carries a photograph of the crowd before the California theatre, Los Angeles, during the showing of "Little Old New York." Other pictures receiving publicity are "In the Palace of the King," "Under the Red Robe," and such adaptations.

The publishers urge the booksellers of the country to tie-up with the local exhibitor when showing a motion picture made from a book as a means of "making book families of movie families" and describe methods in which they can co-operate to mutual advantage. They cite instances of a book-shop selling 500 copies of a novel, the film version of which was showing at a local picture house, in five days. In another store 25 copies an hour were sold for 100 hours.

Pictures of window and lobby displays in which books are tied up with their film showings illustrate the book. The centre pages are devoted to reproductions of newspaper advertisements of novels which have been picturized. One page is devoted to illustrating a few of the window and interior displays which Grosset & Dunlap furnish free to the book dealers with their photoplay editions of novels.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see Motion Picture News — first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—A figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Contest Aids "Marriage Circle"

Chronicle Readers Invited to Submit Ideal Decalogue for Married Couples

UNUSUAL interest and volume of replies distinguished the contest staged by the San Francisco Chronicle in connection with the Imperial theatre showing of "The Marriage Circle" in that city.

The Chronicle distributed $3,000 in 43 prizes for the most complete set of commandments that should be observed if marital happiness is to be. The contest was open both to married folks and those contemplating marriage. The awards ranged from an automobile to scrip books containing admissions to the Imperial California and Granada, operated by the Herbert L. Rothschild enterprises.

The contest was called "Marriage Circle Contest" and the participants were segregated into two divisions—those couples already wedded and those about to take the matrimonial dive; it was open to all, save employes of the Chronicle and the Rothschild theatres.

The same issue of the Chronicle which announced the contest also carried an ad of the "Marriage Circle" two columns wide and thirteen inches deep that dominated the page with its bold black and whites.

The awards were as follows:

First award: Overland Champion Car; second award: A living room set, comprising five pieces of furniture valued at $580; third award (for those wedded) one Cheney Consols phonograph, with 25 vocalian records; fourth award: (for those about to be wedded) one wedding supper for twenty persons; fifth award: two dozen gold-toned photographs from Hartsook and one $6.00 scrip book, containing admissions to the Imperial, Granada and California; sixth award: two dozen gold-towned photographs from Hartsook; ten additional awards: one $1,000 Life Insurance Policy to each of the ten from the State Life Insurance Company of Indiana, with the first year's premium paid; policies doubled in case of accidental death; honorable mentions: (for aspiring matrimonists) one wedding ring and one marriage license to eighteen persons; honorable mentions (for married persons) one $6.00 scrip book, containing California, Imperial and Granada admissions each to ten persons.

Teaser Envelope Stunt for "Her Temporary Husband"

Small envelopes advertised to contain the Wonder Cure, described as the Discovery of the Age, were distributed by Loew's State theatre, Los Angeles, in conjunction with the showing of "Her Temporary Husband." The cure was guaranteed to prevent depression, that tired feeling, blues, and kindred ills. The directions given consisted of mixing the advice on the slip inside the package with an ounce of consideration.

The inside slip was headed by the line: "Prolong your life." It added that laughter cured all ills and that this medicine could be found during the showing of "Her Temporary Husband" at the State theatre. The postscript stated that consultations began the following Saturday.

Book Buyers See Show Free in Tieup by Rialto

Free tickets to purchasers of the photoplay edition of "West of the Water Tower" brought the Strand Birmingham several display ads in the merchandise section of the News.

The Glass Block, Duluth, Minn., gave this handsome display to "Scaramouche" (Metro) at the new Garrick theatre.

Ministers Guests of House at "White Sister" Run

Fred E. Walter, handling the engagement of "The White Sister" at the Stillman, Cleveland, put the picture on a solid foundation with local church representatives during the second week of the engagement, when he sent letters to every minister in Cleveland and its suburbs, enclosing a pair of tickets to a performance, and asking for their opinion of the production. This was done primarily to dispel an impression that "The White Sister" was sectarian in character. It served to introduce the picture to thousands of people who are not regularly picture patrons, and gave the engagement a wonderful boost. Walter says he is going to use this idea all along the line, wherever the picture plays in the state.

Exploit Navarro as "Best Dressed" Man in Films

When the Ohio Retail Clothiers Association at a meeting in Cleveland recently selected Ramon Novarro as "the best dressed man in movies," they supplied the Allen theatre with some snappy material for a publicity campaign for "Thy Name Is Woman."

Immediately the decision of the Ohio Retail Clothiers Association had been announced the Allen started a newspaper contest offering prizes to winning letters either agreeing or disagreeing with the election of Novarro to that distinguished place in the hall of theatre fame. The campaign also introduced a local tieup with the Vivaudou producers, which have arranged for a national campaign on "Thy Name Is Woman."

Lyric Scores Hit With Five Act Fashion Show

Staged entirely at the expense of the merchant displaying the styles, a five act fashion show presented as a prologue to "Don't Call It Love" was regarded by A. R. Lynch as largely responsible for the capacity business recorded during the week at the Lyric, Jackson, Tenn.

The concern co-operating with the theatre, Loeb's Style Shop, not only bore the full cost of the prologue but in addition made a large window display, used a quarter page ad on the opening day and was responsible for announcements printed in the society column of the newspaper two weeks in advance of the engagement. Between the acts while the models were changing costumes there was music supplied by a local jazz band. The entire show was staged in front of a purple eye.

Barber Shops Display Cards for "Ponjola" Showing

The widely exploited haircut which Anna Q. Nilsson underwent for her role in "Ponjola" was used by G. L. Shields of the Mojeska, Atlanta, Ga., to gain the cooperation of the local barbers. Neatly arranged cards, illustrated with stills of the star being separated from her goldi-locks, were made by the theatre and displayed in the tonsorial palaces. They read as follows:

"Anna Q. Nilsson got $10,000 for cutting her hair. We give you a $10,000 haircut for fifty cents."

Auto Tie-Up Made During "Love Master" Showing

A new chapter in the history of Strongheart and Lady Jule was unearthed recently when photographs arrived showing the canine star and his leading lady outside the Garde Hotel, New Haven, comfortably ensconced on the running board of a Buick automobile.

A tie-up was effected with the local agent that furnished additional publicity and advertising space, the agency taking advertising to announce the event. Strongheart and Lady Jule were motored around town to keep their various publicity appointments at no cost at all. It not only furnished good publicity but saved transportation expenses.

The tie-up was worked in connection with the canine star's personal appearance in behalf of "The Love Master," to be shown at Gordon's Olympia theatre.

No Charge for Ballyhoo by Taxi Company

A fleet of taxicabs did the ballyhoo work for "When a Man's a Man" during its presentation at the Trianon, Birmingham. Without a cent of expense to the exhibitor, the Red Top Cab Company adorned all its cars with signs advertising the run.

The six cylinder exploitation had a twelve cylinder display in a tie up with Caheen's millinery shop which briefly stated that when a man was a man he wanted his wife well dressed. There was no argument on that point, so the store urged passersby to bring their wives there.

Official Endorsement Basis of Direct Campaign

With permission to mention the Consulate from the Italian vice-consul as ammunition for his campaign on "The Eternal City," Howard Wough of the Palace, Memphis, initiated a direct-by-mail campaign which created response among both the Italian and American residents of the city. Wough also made a special drive to interest Italian population by using "L'Appello Coloniale," the only Italian language paper in Memphis.

The Rex theatre, Jackson, Mich., combined posters, stills and painted banner into this effective front on "When a Man's a Man" (First Nat'l).

Merchant Cooperation for "Trilby" in Portland

With several merchants aiding in the campaign Gus Metzger, manager of the Rivoli, Portland, Ore., assisted by Ray Coffin ot the Richard Walton Tully publicity department, exploited "Trilby" extensively and successfully. The cooperating forces were three of the leading merchants, all entering in a stunt which provided awards for women wearing the same size shoe as Andree Lafayette, star of the film, and a laundry which sent out circulars calling attention to the contrast in methods prevailing today in laundries and those seen in the scenes of "Trilby."

The novel was printed serially by the Portland Telegram, which made effective advance advertising. The pace of the campaign increased near the opening date and during the run through the window displays of the department stores, cooperative newspaper advertising and the lobby display, which featured a head cutout of Svengali shown behind scrim and lighted by colored spots.

Postcard Advertising Used In Duluth on "21" Run

Picture postcards with advertising copy printed in the left half and signed by Richard Barthelmess announced the star's coming appearance in "Twenty-One" at the Garrick theatre, Duluth, Minn. Under the exploitation management of H. W. Laurence, the campaign was inaugurated to reach several thousand homes along the north shore and Woodland sections of the Lake Superior city.

Barthelmess's message got over the predominating thought that his latest picture was a modern story that showed him in modern clothes. Laurence played on the fact that people wanted Dick in this type of story.

One Stunt Campaigns for Two Engagements

J. Wright Brown used the special matinee stunt for "The Acquittal" by making his awards for the successful discoverers of the murderer of John Prentiss copies of the photoplay edition of "The White Sister," the attraction which followed "The Acquittal" into the Grand, Columbus, Ga.

This unusual effect was created in the lobby of the Garing theatre, Greenville, S. C., by H. B. Clarke, manager, on "Ashes of Vengeance" (First Nat'l)

Novel "Why Men Leave Home" Ads

Balaban & Katz Campaign in Chicago Is Distinguished by Unusual Ideas

DURING the showing of "Why Men Leave Home" at the Chicago theater, Chicago, newspaper advertising was carried which was distinctly novel as regards amusement copy. The Balaban & Katz offices worked out a series of ads that attracted wide attention.

The difference lay in the stress placed upon the copy appeal, rather than big type, bold headlines and flaring mats. The four paragraphs of copy were all run in type of the same size. The appeal was made to logic, reason and understand. It read:

"For once you will learn the secrets of the second year of marriage—the danger time that lies between the first fading of romance and the finding of true sympathy.

"For once you will see 'the other woman' with eyes of humor and understanding—she was only a human, ambitious, lonely girl, beautiful but dumb—

"For once you will peer into the soul of a mother-in-law. Mary Carr who made her name playing a 'mother,' now flashes forth as memorably as the most interesting mother-in-law you ever saw.

"For once you will be instructed and entertained at the same time—instructed in the art of holding a husband's love and entertained with a romance that is too sensational to be polished and too distinguished with cleverness to be labeled 'sensational.'"

Such argumentative copy marked a new line of advertising copy and apparently brought a response.

At the same time the picture was exploited through the office of County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer, official dispenser of marriage licenses. He was host to all the couples that applied to him for marriage licenses during the week; and the entertainment he provided was a special invitation to see "Why Men Leave Home." Printed invitations were supplied him by Balaban & Katz and the inspiration for them was dedicated, like the picture, to the great American husband and his patient suffering wife.

Howard Drive for "Marriage Circle" was Complete

A campaign ranging from newspaper teaser advertising to ballyhoo supported the presentation of "The Marriage Circle" at the Howard, Atlanta. The ballyhoo was necessarily of a conservative nature, it being supplied through an exclusive tie-up with a bus company for advertising of the Howard shows. The big motor cars carried cards announcing "The Marriage Circle."

The teaser campaign was designed to drive home the Marriage Circle idea, all the copy being framed in a dark circle. This was opened a week in advance of the engagement and employed catch lines.

In addition to newspaper and ballyhoo advertising there was a mail campaign worked in conjunction with the American Express company, which mailed out letters announcing the Howard presentation in tie-up with propaganda for its vacation tour service and travelers' cheques. The Howard also had a window display of wedding rings in a jewelry store and used a banner, one hundred feet long and carrying letters about five feet in depth.

Lightens Dramatic Program with Song Hits Number

As a counter-balance for the program featuring the heavily dramatic play, "The Stranger," Guy Kenimer used an orchestration made up of popular song hits, at the Arcade, Jacksonville. Slides announced the number—the fact that passes for the following week's show would be awarded those who turned in a list of the melodies as they were presented.

Rowland & Clark Theatres Publishing New Paper

A new four paged newspaper publishing picture and general news is being sponsored by the Rowland and Clark theatres, Pittsburgh. It is called "The Lariat," because as a sub head explains "it ropes them all in." Milton D. Crandall, the film's publicity and advertising chief is named as Rodeo editor and two of the staff, W. B. Dygert and C. B. Frost are named as cowboy writers.

The paper, a combination house organ and sales promotion sheet, is devoted to motion picture events with especial emphasis on films in which the Rowland and Clark Theatres will be interested. The back page of the first issue was devoted to an advertisement for "Flowing Gold." The full page streamer at the head of the front page read: "We Deny We Promoted the Tea-Pot Dome Scandal" and the news stories played up the oil angle of "Flowing Gold."

The paper was of general reader interest. Real news services were subscribed to. Dwig's "School Days" cartoon had been bought and the syndicated instalment of Helen Rowland's "Reflections of a Bachelor Girl" also appeared on the feature magazine page.

"Circus Days" Advertising Shows Value of Tie-up

One advantage obtained by the eleven Mexico City theatres that combine in the play date and advertising of First National pictures is that of space preference. This was exemplified again in the showing of "Circus Days." Their consolidated buying power gives them such an advantage over competitive theatres that they are able to claim preference from newspapers. The result is that where other theatres get the run of the theatrical page space, the eleven combine has preferred space at the top of theatrical advertising.

Their copy always stands out like a sore thumb for other Mexico City exhibitors.

Keith's Jefferson theatre, New York City, decorated the theatre front in this manner for "The Darling of New York" (Universal).

Put on Plenty of Dog for "Love Master" Ballyhoo

The Regent and Blackstone theatres, Pittsburgh, "put on the dog" thoroughgoing fashion and as a result a double for Strongheart, dog star of "The Love Master," stopped traffic on the sidewalks of the city during the demonstration. The double, which resembled Strongheart not only through physical likeness but by its possession of repertory of tricks, was advertised as the real star of "The Love Master."

To give the full note of impressiveness to the event the dog was escorted through the streets by a mounted policeman. The animal which doubled for Strongheart is an aristocrat of his species and is owned by P. C. Weller, who works for the Rowland and Clark theatres interests when he is not practicing his hobby as a dog fancier.

"It Has a Soul" Slogan of Drive for Beach Play

An intensive campaign for the showing of "Big Brother" at the Rialto, Atlanta, Ga., was built around the slogan "It Has a Soul." In advertising the film on this basis W. J. Murray directed most of his efforts to billing on the front of the house and circulars. A banner carrying the slogan and suspended over the entrance to the Rialto opened the campaign. Later four thousand circulars stating that "Big Brother" was a picture "with a soul" because it was pronounced the greatest picture they had ever seen by fifteen thousand men, likewise fifteen thousand women. The circulars were contained in envelopes with the slogan printed in purple letters.

Fashion Show Staged for "Beau Brummel" Run

Fashions for men were displayed by living male models from the stage of the Bellevue theatre, Niagara Falls, in conjunction with the presentation of "Beau Brummel." Herman Lorence, manager of the house, gave the fashion show an interesting presentation. As the stunt was managed in co-operation with local merchants there was a brisk exploitation drive through the efforts of the store keepers.

No Accessories Available so Club Drive Is Used

When no stock accessories for his showing of "Judgment of the Storm" were to be had at the exchange, T. J. Coleman of the Galax, Birmingham, made his own opportunity by arranging a benefit ticket sale with a woman's club which was making a drive for funds. Coleman sold the club tickets at box-office prices, and the members went about selling them at an advance. One of the street ticket booths was located on a prominent corner and was decorated with advertising cards for the theatre. The stunt brought in a nice return.

Manager Howard Waugh of Loew's Palace theatre, Memphis, arranged with a local millinery store for this pleasing display during the run of "The Humming Bird" (Paramount).

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Going Up"—Associated Ex., Savoy, Washington

News:—"How eager Wilmington audiences are to enjoy clever screen comedy that makes the house vibrate with roars of laughter was proved yesterday, when Douglas MacLean's screen version of 'Going Up' was presented. 'Going Up' was built solely for laughing purposes and it hits the bull's eye squarely. It is funny from beginning to end, without a lagging scene. The screen story might well serve as a model for comedy producers."

"Courtship of Myles Standish"—Associated Ex., Merrill, Milwaukee

News:—"By far the finest thing in Charles Ray's career."

"Children—young and old—are in for a treat. 'The Courtship of Myles Standish,' dear to the heart of every American, has been faithfully and artistically reproduced in films. It is truly a classic and should be stowed away with 'The Covered Wagon' and 'Chronicles of America' for future generations. Ray makes his return to the screen a triumph. He gives us by far the finest thing in his career and it is a picture everyone will want to see."

"Yankee Consul"—Associated Ex., Regent, Pittsburgh

Press:—"No one who enjoys a good hearty laugh should miss seeing 'The Yankee Consul.' The picture is an adaptation of that famous old Broadway musical comedy of the same name with everything brought strictly up to date. It is full of exceptional fun, good and wholesome, and MacLean never lets up for a single instant."

"The Dawn of a Tomorrow"—Paramount, Rivoli, New York

George Melford's Paramount production, "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," adapted from Frances Hodgson Burnett's story and featuring Jacqueline Logan, David Torrence and Raymond Griffith, which opened an engagement at the Rivoli Theatre Sunday, has caught New York's fancy, as reflected in the criticism of the daily newspapers.

Herald-Tribune:—"The picture is a delight. We do not hesitate to recommend it to all."

Evening Post:—"To the average movie-goer its very simplicity and lack of fireworks are like a cool spring unexpectedly found in an aridity of 'super' photoplays."

Telegram & Mail:—"Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's famous story, with its infectious optimism, lent itself readily to the speaking stage. It is even more effective as presented in a motion picture drama."

Telegraph:—"George Melford has done an excellent piece of work as the director of this film. Jacqueline Logan was a happy choice for Glad, the girl who always looks at the bright side."

World:—"A truly fine motion picture. Frances Hodgson Burnett's book and play, which might so easily have been brought to the screen dripping with sentimental gush, has with rare discretion and infectious acting been made into one of the finest pictures of the year. It ought to be seen by all who think there's not much sense in going to the pictures any more."

Holmes Herbert in leading role in Hodkinson's "Another Scandal."

Barbara La Marr as she appears In First National's "The White Moth."

"Unknown Purple"—Truart, Capitol, New York

Morning Telegraph:—"A good old-time thriller."

American:—"It is by far the best thing Henry Walthall has made since those early Griffith days. Anyone who likes spook stories is going to get his money's worth."

The Times:—"Furnishes attractive and thrilling entertainment."

World:—"Will amuse and entertain you."

Evening Journal:—"Lights are turned out, papers stolen, vengeance properly distributed, detectives bewildered and the audience startled. The mystery is smoothingly maintained and action moves rapidly."

Telegram and Mail:—"Keeps the onlooker in high pitch of excitement."

Evening World:—"Version of famous stage play is even better on the screen."

"The Marriage Circle"—Warners, Imperial, San Francisco

Daily News:—"A screen counterpart of a Wilde Comedy, with gesture for epigram . . . The sheer fun in 'The Marriage Circle' is as plain as a pikestaff and the spontaneity of the humor and the simplicity of the story should hold the attention of every one."

Rex Ingram, Metro director, who has just returned from Africa where he filmed "The Arab."

Bulletin:—"It lives up to all claims. Delightful entertainment. Lubitsch has taken a story and made it fresh and pulsing with life by his method of treatment."

Call:—"A slice out of everyday life. Comedy of the highest order. Lubitsch has been given an unusually good cast with which to work."

Chronicle:—"Delightful entertainment for the adult mind, fast, naughty, finely presented. A great picture, one would say, is "'The Marriage Circle.'" Journal:—"All the sparkle, frivolity and smoothness of a Viennese waltz. Miss Prevost is convincing. Smiles fail, and would be useless anyway in describing the finished performance of Adolphe Menjou and his remarkable smile.

"The White Sister"—Metro, Academy, Richmond

News Ledger:—"The Angela of Miss Gish is a superb achievement. Without qualification of any kind, it is possible to say that never since "Broken Blossoms" has Miss Gish reached such a high point of beauty in performance and in many essentials her Angela excels that characterization.

Hilliard Karr, Century-Universal Comedian

Times-Dispatch:—"'The White Sister' is a beautiful thing. It is beautiful, in that it is perfectly acted by a remarkable cast; in that the scenes—or what the old time press-agents call the scenic investiture—are almost too exquisite to be true."

"Poisoned Paradise"—Preferred, Newark Theatre, Newark, N. J.

Ledger:—"The picture has a good plot. With Monte Carlo as a background, dramatic situations come thick and fast, and there are some remarkable scenes of the Monocan principality. Kenneth Harlan as the artist gives a good performance and Clara Bow is excellent."

"The Virginian"—Preferred, Capitol and West End Lyric, St. Louis

Globe-Democrat:—"A notable success. Thrills, action, romance and clean entertainment are the ingredients that go to make it a real treat."

Star:—"A splendid new production."

Times:—"Has good cast. What make 'The Virginian' an enjoyable photoplay is that it is an out and out western story, simple, logically developed, with good atmosphere, its quota of shooting and riding and romance."

Post:—"While a drama of the West, this subject partakes of none of the chief crudities of the ordinary cowboy thriller."

Star:—"It is a play well known and the present screen version is by far the best yet offered of it. A story of the western plains with a romance interwoven, it offers strong characterizations and thrilling, as well as amusing, situations."

"Alexander Hamilton" Put in Production

"Alexander Hamilton" of the "Chronicles of America" series for Pathe release has just gone into production. It covers the period immediately following the war of Independence.

A feature of the new "Chronicle" is said to be a thrilling reproduction of the famous "Whiskey Rebellion" of 1794 in Western Pennsylvania following Hamilton's levy of a federal excise tax. The production will present the character of Washington as General and also as President and will include such famous historic figures as Phillip Schuyler, William Livingston "Light Horse Harry" Lee, and Martha Washington.

Webster Campbell will shortly complete the direction of "Yorktown," which portrays the dramatic events leading up the great final battle of the Revolutionary War and the surrender of Cornwallis.

Film Fun Title Contest for "Telephone Girl"

One hundred dollars will be awarded the person sending in the best pun title for one chapter of "The Telephone Girl" series, according to the April issue of "Film Fun," a fan magazine.

F. B. O. officials, H. C. Witwer, writer of the stories appearing in Cosmopolitan Magazine, and Alberta Vaughn, star of the pictures, will be the judges.

The titles already selected are "Julius Sees Her," "Sherlock's Home," "When Knighthood Was in Tower," "Money to Burns," "William Tells," "Love and Learn," and "King Leary."

Two Christie Officials Are Promoted

FRED L. PORTER, secretary, became a vice-president and treasurer and William S. Holman, auditor for four years, is now secretary as a result of the annual stockholders' meeting of Christie Film Corporation.

Al Christie remains President and Charles H. Christie is vice-president and general manager. Porter has been with the Christies since organized in 1916 and Holman is also treasurer of Christie Realty Corporation, a separate company.

Ants Have Best of It in Cincinnati Theatre

According to the reviewer on the Cincinnati Enquirer, who devoted more than a quarter of a column to reviewing "The Ant," from the "Secrets of Life" series produced by Louis H. Tolhurst for Principal Pictures Corporation and released by Educational Film Exchanges, the ants had the best of it on the bill.

The reviewer said in part: "We believe that the ants had a shade the best of it at the Strand this week. It is the sort of film that no one, either nature lover or movie fan, can afford to miss."

"The real novelty of the program at the Strand" says the Cincinnati-Times Star, "is the first of the microscopic studies of insects, 'The Ant'."

To Use "Secrets of Life" Series with Lecture

"The Ant" and "The Bee", two of the subjects of Educational's "Secrets of Life" series, have been booked by the American Museum of Natural History, New York City, for a special showing. The motion pictures will be used to illustrate a lecture given by one of the scientists connected with that institution.

Monkey Actors Featured in "He's My Pal"

The latest Imperial comedy in which the monkey actors, Max, Moritz and Pep are featured has been titled "He's My Pal." It will be released on the Fox short subject program the week of April 6.

The current Pathe offering in the Chronicles Of America series is entitled "Wolf and Montcalm."

Pathe News Editor Talks to Radio Fans

Emanuel Cohen, Editor of Pathe News, talked to the radio fans from Station WJAZ of Chicago, March 18.

After describing the work of news cameramen with its attendant difficulties and perils he mentioned the work of his organization in securing the Dempsey-Gibbons fight at Shelby, Mont., and the exclusive scenes later of Lenin's funeral.

Latest Imperial Comedy Is "He's My Pal"

Max, Moritz and Pep, the monkey actors, are featured in the current Imperial Comedy which Fox Film Corporation will release April 6, under the title of "He's My Pal."

Change "Playing Hookey" to "Happy Days"

Buddy Messinger's Century-Universal comedy "Playing Hookey" has been changed to "Happy Days" and Martha Sleeper, twelve year old ingenue, plays opposite Buddy in this film of school days.

"Safe and Sane" Next For Jimmie Adams

Jimmie Adams' next Christie comedy will be "Safe and Sane", with Jimmie swinging a black-jack as a finished product of a correspondence school in burglary.

Billy Sullivan is shown in "Big Boy Blue," the last of the "Fourth Leather Pushers" series by Universal.

Lloyd Hamilton in his latest Educational-Hamilton Comedy, "Killing Time."

Vernon to Star in Future Comedies

Bobby Will Make Two-Reel Comedies at Christie Studio for Educational

WHILE E. W. Hammons, president of Educational was visiting the Christie Hamilton, Mermaid and other units producing for Educational release, he arranged contracts providing for a series of two-reel comedies starring Bobby Vernon to be made at the Christie Studios.

Already a new director has been engaged for the Vernon comedies in the person of Gil Pratt, whose comedy work has been on the Educational program before through Mermaid comedies.

Working with Pratt will be Keene Thompson, well-known writer in the comedy field, and Earl Rodney, former Christie leading man who will write stories and assist in the handling of the unit.

In announcing the three-cornered deal whereby Vernon will have his own unit for two-reel comedies, Charles H. Christie states: "Bobby Vernon has not been set up as a two-reel star arbitrarily, but has attained this position by a growing popularity with exhibitors and patrons, increasing gradually over a period of years.

"He started when the short comedy business was very young indeed, co-starring with Gloria Swanson under the Sennett banner.

"Then he came with our organization for the Christie one-reel comedies which were made from 1916 to 1920, Vernon appearing in many of those pictures until he joined the Navy during the World War.

"Shortly after returning from the service, Vernon was put into the Christie two-reel comedies, and has reached the point now where he is an outstanding figure in the comedy field, due to his pleasing personality and the ability he achieved through long training and constant appearance before the regular movie fans.

"In this connection it is interesting to note that comedy stars and players are often much better known to the fans than certain widely heralded feature stars, because the comedy stars are on the screen in a given theater more frequently than the average feature star who makes only one or two pictures a year.

"Furthermore, the comedy stars and players have a tremendous popularity with the younger generation of movie fans who are the foundation of the theater business for the coming years."

C. B. C. Closes Deal For Screen Snapshots

J. F. Cubberly of Minneapolis will handle the distribution of Screen Snapshots, the "Fan Magazine of the Screen" in Minnesota. The deal was recently closed with the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation who are the producers of the series.

Hysterical History on Universal Schedule

SEIZING upon the present trend of many pictures to portray ancient and modern history, Universal will distribute a series of one-reel comedies burlesquing notable events in the past, to be known as "Hysterical History."

Universal announces that these one-reelers will picture the amorous finesse of Cleopatra, the inquisitiveness of Mr. Balboa, the preseverance of Chris Columbus, the conquering mania of Napoleon, aesar, Alexander and Hannibal; the electrical Mr. Benjamin Franklin, the veracious Captain John Smith, the equestrian Paul Revere, the busy du Barry and the ambitious Maximillian, to be shown on the screen this fall.

Newspaper Tie-Ups for "The Fun Shop"

MAXON FOXALL JONES' reel of original humor written especially by newspaper humorists, column conductors, contributors and the public generally will be supported by a great number of newspaper tie-ups, according to Educational Film Exchanges.

Such nationally known humorous writers as George S. Chappell, Percy, Waxham, Hugh Wiley, A. C. M. Azoy, Jr., Dorothy DeJagers and others will be regular contributors to the reel and to the newspaper service.

The newspapers are contracted to take the column, also known as "The Fun Shop." The service will be daily except Sunday and will consist of from one-half to three-quarters of a column of humor. The material appearing in the newspapers will not appear in the motion picture, the humorous writings for which will be selected from the same unpublished and original material as is the newspaper column.

C. B. C. "Snapshots" Show Screen Stars

Issue number fifteen of C. B. C.'s "Screen Snapshots" shows a number of screen favorites bidding good-bye to Abe Lyman's California orchestra. The latter organization, departing for New York and a vaudeville tour, made a round of the studios and serenaded the stars. Among those seen in "snapshots" are Conrad Nagel, Blanche Sweet, Norman I. Kerry, Barbara LaMarr, Conway Tearle, Walter Hiers, Viola Dana, Colleen Moore, Monte Blue and Larry Semon.

Luddy's First Century Comedy is "Hikers"

Edward I. Luddy has written his own story, "Hikers," which will be the first comedy he is to direct for Century.

Century Follies Girls, Al Alt, Joe Bonner, Marjorie Marcel, Bartine Burkett and Betty Young are in the cast.

Clyde Cook Comedy Title Is Changed

A change is announced in the title of the latest Educational Clyde Cook comedy. It was originally titled "Under Orders," but will be released under the title of "The Misfit." The picture is scheduled for release March 23.

Scenes from the current two reel "Spat Family" comedy "Hunters Bold," made by Hal Roach for Pathe

Arthur Trimble looks like Buster Brown in this current Century Comedy, "That's Rich," released by Universal.

"Birds of Passage" on Pathe Bill

Program of Releases for Week of April 6th Also Included an "Our Gang" Comedy

"BIRDS of Passage," a novelty heads the Pathe program of releases for April 6th. The subject is in three reels and portrays the annual migration of birds of every description from northern climes to the faraway banks of the River Nile.

It is said to have taken Dr. Bengt Berg of Sweden, an ornithologist, more than two years to secure these views.

Another "Our Gang" comedy is on for the same week. Hal Roach has named this one, "Seein' Things," and it is all about Farina's dream, the after affects of eating too much meat at a barbecue.

"The Swift and Strong" is a Grantland Rice screen "Sportlight" showing nationally known sport figures, Koppisch of Columbia, Totell of Bowdoin, and Lieb of Notre Dame in action, besides an array of scenes filmed at recent track and field meets.

"Friend Husband" presents "Snub" Pollard as an ex-soldier, who adds to his war service record by getting married promptly after his discharge. Blanche Mehaffey, Lucille Carter, Eddie Baker, and George Rowe support Pollard in this single-reeler.

In "The Hawk's Eye" the third chapter of "Leatherstocking," the little White garrison at Muskrat Castle is further depleted by the capture of Floating Tom and Hurry Harry by the wily Hurons.

"Running Wild" is a piece of cartoon philosophy on the misadventures of life, showing that every pursuer is in reality a fugitive from worm up to dog-catcher.

Pathe Review No. 14—Topics of the Day No. 14 and Pathe News issues Nos. 30 and 31 complete the April 6th program.

Fighter's Elbow Breaks Miss Short's Nose

With all the ill luck of the innocent bystander Gertrude Short was accidently struck by Kit Guard's elbow and her nose broken during the filming of F. B. O.'s "For the Love of Mike," seventh episode of the Telephone Girl series.

Miss Short supports Alberta Vaughn and is forced to remain out of the cast for several days.

Earle, McCoy and Karr in Century Comedy

Three of Century Comedies' stars will appear in the same comedy, "The Runaway Car," to be released by Universal.

Jack Earle, Harry McCoy and Hilliard Karr are the three stars chosen and they will be supported by Bessie Welsh, Marjorie Marcel and Betty Young.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Dusty Dollars"
(Educational—One Reel)

A NOVEL scheme to aid the sale of the articles in an old curiosity shop is introduced in this one-reeler. All the articles are marked No. 5 and fake telegrams are distributed about the streets designating the article so numbered as the hiding place of plans which reveal the whereabouts of Captain Kidd's treasure. The usual bargain day crush results. The money realized from the sale of the curios is put into a hat which is burnt due to the careless dropping of a lighted match causes much woe until a broken jardiniere reveals grandmother's hoard. Sid Smith, Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance are featured.

A fairly entertaining contribution from this trio.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Marry When Young"
(Universal—One Reel)

NED has hardly finished gathering the best of the old shoes from his marriage ceremony, when with his valet he encounters a couple of swell looking flappers and proceeds to make a date for that night. But he has necessarily figured without the new wife. When it is time to get out Ned is given every assistance by the valet, but the latter's disguise is penetrated. The pair meet the flappers as the latter are administering to them as nurses on hospital cots. This is as good as the best of the Neely Edwards and Bert Roach comedies.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Seein' Things"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

FARINA not only "hogs" this Our Gang comedy but "hogs" the meat which gives her bad dreams in which all of Hal Roach's young rascals appear to torment her until her mother awakens her.

The director evidently started to produce another style of comedy but apparently drifted off into Farina's dream and the barbacue which started the film off so boldly was soon forgotten.

This one is entertaining but not up to the producer's high standard set in previous Our Gang comedies. Nevertheless there are attempts to inject thrills when Farina scales the side of a building pursued by the gang.—TOMHAM.

"Secrets of Life"
(Educational—One Reel)

THIS number of the series describes the life and habits of that household pest, the Fly. To quote from a subtitle "The more you know about houseflies the more you'll cherish spiders, centipedes and scorpions." Its life from the time it emerges from its shell until its full growth is depicted in an interesting manner. An acrobatic fly who juggles a ball and a dumb-bell is shown for the first time.

This reel will interest, if you are interested in flies.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Running Wild"
(Pathe—One Reel)

CARTOONIST TERRY permitted his imagination to run wild and the angle worm leads the cats and mice a lively chase in this current Aesop Fable.

Pursued rapidly become pursuers and with dog catchers and all this is ridiculously funny to afford the needed relief in many a program—TOMHAM.

"Days of '49"
(Arrow Serial)

IF THIS Arrow serial continues throughout as it does in the first three episodes, none can complain at least, for lack of action. If there is a criticism of the first three chapters it is that the action is too long sustained. The fight at the Cardosa cabin between the Cardosa and Sutter forces and the battle between the Indians and early Pilgrims to California offer just a trifle too much repetition and are a bit too long continued.

There are scenes in these three episodes which inevitably bring to mind "The Covered Wagon" because they have to do with the early pilgrimage to California in the gold rush days. Being a serial these covered wagons show more speed and add a consequent thrill. In fact the mad dash of these wagons to escape the Indians would give a thrill even to those early invaders of the far Golden West. Nothing has been left undone to make this episode as realistic as could well be possible. It is easy to conceive the press agent's tale of the number of cameramen injured as these covered wagons dash toward the camera lens, for to all appearances the wagons are right on top of the cameras as the scene is shot.

The story has to do with duplicate land grants to the Cardosa family and to Captain Sutter of that territory of untold wealth which is now Sacramento in California, and the battle for possession of that territory. Captain Sutter, a man of great vision and character is, unfortunately influenced by Robert Marsdon, unscrupulous and avaricious. The latter determines upon a rout of the Cardosa family and Cardosa is killed in the ensuing battle, leaving his daughter an orphan and unprotected.

Captain Sutter and "Cal" Coleman of his outfit repent of the action of Marsdon and the latter rescues the girl in the attack of the Indians on the Pilgrims whom she has gone to warn of impending danger.

Neva Gerber is most impressive as Senora Cardosa and Edmund Cobb does almost equally well as "Cal" Coleman. The other roles are in the hands of Ruth Royce as Arabella Ryan, Wilbur McGaugh as Robert Marsdon, Charles Brinley as John A. Sutter and Elias Bullock as Boris Bemetroff.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Killing Time"
(Educational—Two Reels)

LLOYD HAMILTON is featured in this latest Educational comedy, which deals with his adventures as driver of a milk wagon and his efforts as a teacher of etiquette to a newly rich sheep herder.

After delivering his morning route he "meets-up" with the sheep herder in a restaurant and proceeds to initiate him in the art of eating chicken in public with such success that he is engaged as tutor. They attend a banquet held in his honor and the herder is called on to carve the turkey but Hamilton substitutes for him and has a lot of trouble carving due to the fact that a live cat has decided to make his home in the center of the "bird." A servant places a chaffing dish under Hamilton's chair which soon causes him to remark on the extreme heat of the room. His antics when he comes in contact with a live wire is good for a laugh.

An amusing comedy which should please any type of audience.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Birds of Passage"
(Pathe—Three Reels)

NOVELTY is the chief claim of this portrayal by a Swedish ornithologist of the annual migration of birds from northern to southern climes.

The flights are rather spectacular in spots and the camera has some excellent close-ups of various birds in close proximity to vicious crocodiles on the Nile.

Many types of birds are presented and some fights as well as flights are shown. This should please children and students and prove a unique departure from the regular entertainment film and may interest the majority but cannot be considered exclusively for entertainment.—TOMHAM.

"Hit Him Hard"
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

WHEN Margy's father decides that the best man at the manly art of self defense shall have his daughter, it looks as though big Jack Earle will have a decided advantage over little Harry McCoy. In fact, Jack does flatten Harry. While under the influence of Morpheus Harry dreams he is living in a prehistoric age and that it is only necessary to touch Jack on the chin to render him useless. A return bout is arranged and Harry's dream comes true. There is a lot of fair comedy in this one and a lot that is not so fair.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Friend Husband"
(Pathe—One Reel)

ALL the slapstick that could be crowded into a single reel was utilized in this one with Snub Pollard closely pursued by Blanche Mahaffey, Lucille Carter, Eddie Baker and George Rowe.

He acts crazy enough to secure his discharge from the army in order to marry and his wife brings her relations and a former husband to live upon him while he does the housework.

After several chases and breaking of crockery he escapes the house and re-joins the army. There are exhibitors and audiences in some localities that may appreciate this sort of a comedy.—TOMHAM.

Pathe Review No. 14
(One Reel)

WHAT is termed a "Featurette" is contained in the current issue of this filmed magazine. Allene Ray is pictured in "Two Little Love Birds."

"The Man The Desert Got" is a pictured interpretation of a poem by Arthur Chapman while "A Workman of Japan" shows how they make umbrellas as you wait. The Pathecolor shows "In The Land Of The Moslems."

The entire group of subjects portray a wide scope of interesting entertainment—TOMHAM.

"The Swift and Strong"
(Pathe—One Reel)

MANY footraces feature this issue of Grantland Rice's "Sportlight," and both the fast and slow moving effect are achieved to show speed and grace. Notable track and field meets are portrayed and the views show athletes like Koppisch of Columbia, Totell of Bowdoin and Lieb of Notre Dame in action.

Skipping hurdles afford the most excitement but the pole vaulting, broad jumps, hundred yard dashes and disc throwing are entertaining, especially at this time of the year.—TOMHAM.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Galloping Gallagher
(F. B. O.—4700 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS western is typical of its kind — being conventional in outline — and featuring the customary incident, such as the conflict between hero and villain, a bit of hard riding — and the usual protection of the heroine by the title character. Because there is a market for westerns the sponsors of them do not give sufficient attention toward making them conspicuous in plot and treatment. Once in a while a picture labeled western melodrama will come along which carries a note of novelty. And we begin to see a development in the pattern. But most often the pictures branded as westerns carry on in the same conventional manner. The screen has not progressed to any extent in this field

It isn't the background, nor the action which is weak; it is the plot. And this one treats of the stranger who gallops into town and rids it of the bandits. The one redeeming touch here is the employment of his horse as aiding in their capture. Rewarded with the sheriff's badge it is up to him to disprove the theory that he will only last a week. The romance is brought in with the introduction of a woman evangelist who is aided in getting converts by the newly-elected sheriff. There being no way of treating it with new incident, the author has her rescued by the hero after the leader of the bandits (the bank president) lures her to the hills.

The conflict between the hero and villain is continued to the final episode — even to the extent of showing the former thrust into jail from which he is freed when the horse gets the keys for him. Then comes the hand-to-hand fight which is over-emphasized to the point of becoming ridiculous. The two participants crash through a window, onto the porch and roll to the ground where they continue their gory brawl. The situations do not ring true. It is illogical to introduce a bank president as a bandit in view of the size of the town — yet he gets away with his stuff until exposed by the hard riding hero.

The best touch is the comedy relief put over by the local undertaker who wants to know if anyone is killed when the guns begin popping — and the incident involving the horse

THEME. Western melodrama featuring adventurer who comes into a town overrun by bandits and succeeds with the aid of his horse is capturing them. Rescues girl evangelist and develops a romance with her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The horsemanship of Fred Thomson. The work of the highly trained horse. The lively action. The crisp incident.

DIRECTION. Builds slight plot to carry fast action. Much of it is far-fetched — with the idea that spectators must be thrilled. Director is prompted to keep it moving — and succeeds. But he over-stresses much of the incident.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The best angle to exploit here is the horsemanship of Fred Thomson — and mention the horse, Silver King, who is a highly trained, intelligent animal. Bill it as a fast-moving western. Ballyhoo it with rider and horse, etc.

DRAWING POWER. For program houses catering to westerns.

SUMMARY. This is a conventional western which is enlivened by several stunts exploiting an intelligent horse. Contains lively action, but incident is far-fetched in several sequences — so that it suggests burlesque.

THE CAST

Bill Gallagher	Fred Thomson
Evelyn Churchill	Hazel Keener
Jos. Burke	Frank Hagney
Leon Berry	Nelson McDowell
Tub	"Shorty" Hendricks
Slim	Andy Morris

By Marion Jackson. Directed by Albert Rogell. Photographed by Ross Fisher.

SYNOPSIS. Wanderer strikes western town just as bandits are robbing the bank. With the aid of his horse he captures the thieves —and is rewarded with a sheriff's badge. Girl evangelist comes to town and she is rescued by hero after villain has lured her to the hills. The elected sheriff is "framed" and put in jail, but he gains freedom with the help of his horse. He punishes the villain and continues romance with evangelist.

The Plunderer
(Fox—5812 Feet)

THIS western runs true to form in plot, characterization and treatment — and while it is perfectly obvious as to outcome, it does succeed in measuring out a fairly vivid line of action. One expects a vigorous sequence or three with Tom Santschi playing the heavy — and sure enough the big punch arrives when he engages Frank Mayo in a "knock-em-down-and-drag-em-out" fight.

The idea here concentrates upon the conflict between a likely hero and a somewhat theatric villain — the latter, a miner who has tunneled beneath his neighbor's mine and gained wealth from the stolen metal. Mayo, playing the lead, appears as a youthful engineer's foreman — and he employs repression in making himself more or less convincing. His romance with the proprietoress of the honky-tonk establishes a different conflict — as the heroine underestimates her good qualities because of being a social outcast. Not until she sells the saloon does she encourage him. Meanwhile there is a counter romance — with its conventional conflict — expressed by the engineer and the daughter of the crooked miner. Because of her relationship, the youth refuses to co-operate with the foreman in tracking down the father's villany.

It is a trite story, but it is developed in a fairly compact manner — and because of its incident — and punch, it is certain to entertain the interest of the average spectator — the spectator who patronizes the program houses. The daughter of the crook upbraids him for his cowardly conduct — and the foreman finishes her indictment with his fists. It is a vigorous he-man brawl — with no quarter asked or given by the participants. Mayo and Santschi must have suffered some healthy bruises for milling around on the floor. The latter had his reputation at stake — a reputation as a realist when it comes to in-fighting, if you remember his battle in the first production of "The Spoilers." The victim of a knock-out, he takes his punishment in a manner which convinces because he knows how to time his actions.

THEME. Melodrama of western mining camp — with honest foreman triumphing over crooked miner whose daughter has fallen in love with youthful owner of adjoining mine.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The honky-tonk atmosphere. The incident featuring the operation of abandoned mine. The vigorous fight between Mayo and Santschi. The fairly good suspense.

DIRECTION. Has conventional plot, but manages to arouse interest with incident and suspense. Stages a vivid fight scene and doesn't overdo it. Handles story with repression.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as melodrama of mining camp, telling patrons that it packs a punch. Feature fight between Mayo and Santschi. Use stills of attractive feminine leads, Evelyn Brent and Peggy Shaw.

DRAWING POWER. For program houses.

SUMMARY. An orthodox melodrama of a mining camp. Has nothing new to reveal in plot and incident, but suspense is fairly active while villain is being exposed. Carries an effective punch scene in he-man fight. Atmosphere fair, acting is first rate, but photography is poor.

THE CAST

Bill Mathews	Frank Mayo
The Lily	Evelyn Brent
Bill Presby	Tom Santschi
The Wolf	James Mason
Joan Presby	Peggy Shaw
Richard Townsend	Edward Phillips
Bells Parks	Dan Mason

By Roy Norton. Scenario by Doty Hobart. Directed by George Archainbaud.

SYNOPSIS. Graduate of mining school goes West to take over abandoned mine. His father's foreman is re-employed and together they start operating the mine. They discover neighboring miner has gained considerable wealth by tunneling beneath their property and stealing the metal. The engineer refuses to interfere because of his love for the villian's daughter. But the foreman punishes the plunderer, thus putting an end to his villany.

The Arizona Express

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a picture based upon one of Lincoln J. Carter's mellow melodramas which served years ago in making the boys in the top gallery thoroughly excited. As a picture it lacks nothing in the shape of fast action, suspense, thrills and excitement. It has every melodramatic trick which has been catalogued under the name of hokum. One might call it a serial compressed into feature length. And it surely should please those patrons who enjoy lively incident — and who do not ask for plausible ideas just so long as their interest is held.

Since this is adapted from an old time melodrama the spectator must overlook the improbabilities and merely take into account the action and suspense, two elements which saturate the picture from inception to conclusion. It might be called a companion piece to "The Fast Mail," which Fox produced a season or two ago. In that we will say that it surpasses that feature in its fast moving incident. Nothing absolutely nothing is forgotten in carrying the suspense to the breaking point. But the steady patron will see through it all and guess the outcome far in advance. The last-minute rescue has lost some of its punch because it has been exploited so much in the serials.

We will tell you that the innocent hero's sister has a tough time of it in reaching the governor so that he will grant a pardon on the evidence she has discovered. The boy, sentenced to death on a murder charge, puts over a spectacular jail delivery — after which comes a thrilling episode — or a series of episodes which feature the girl in her mad rush. She is followed and threatened wherever she turns. It is all improbable, but it creates excitement — for it is concentrated upon sharp conflict. The pursuit includes a fight in a mail car, a jump from the moving train to an auto, a runaway train rolling down an embankment — and several other exploits of heroism and villainy. There is no soft pedal about it.

The picture runs at top speed — with the throttle wide open, although at the start it introduces a rather slow pace. Some of the stunts are truly breath-taking. It is all sure-fire stuff for the action lovers, but the action becomes so exaggerated that it may invite laughter. The players work hard to put it over and it is likely that they earned a vacation for acting their parts so spiritedly.

THEME. Melodrama revolving around triumph of virtue over villainy exploiting central character who is victim of circumstantial evidence involving a murder.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fast action. The suspense. The thrills featuring a jail delivery. The efforts of girl to reach the governor before the execution. The sensational jumps.

DIRECTION. Takes Lincoln J. Carter's mellow melodrama and keeps it moving with thrills and action to the end. Doesn't pay any attention to plausibilities, but packs it with fast incident. Enlivens it with several thrills. Makes it resemble a serial.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The old timers will recognize the title. Get them out. Play it up as lively and exciting melodrama. Mention the cast — it contains well known players. Use trailers advising your action lovers what they may expect.

DRAWING POWER. For program houses — or any house catering to audiences who love action.

SUMMARY. This is old-fashioned melodrama of the type which was popular back in the days of the gallery gods. It is like a serial — and it is crowded with hokum — and implausible. But it keeps moving, carries thrills and stunts and those who crave excitement will surely find it — if they are not too sophisticated.

THE CAST

Katherine Keith ..... Pauline Stark
Lola Nichols ..... Evelyn Brent
Florence Brown ..... Anne Cornwall
David Keith ..... Harold Goodwin
Steve Butler ..... David Butler
Victor Johnson ..... Francis MacDonald
Judge Ashton ..... Frank Beal
Henry MacFarlane ..... William Humphrey

By Lincoln J. Carter. Directed by Thomas Buckingham.

SYNOPSIS. Youth is suspected of murder and he is sentenced to death. His sweetheart claims he is guilty of killing his uncle. His sister has information which proves him innocent. The boy escapes from jail—and the sister with tremendous odds against her, succeeds in reaching the governor in time to save him. She is aided by the mail clerk.

His Darker Self

(Albert L. Grey—Hodkinson—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A COMEDY satire on bootlegging is offered in this picture from the Griffith studios. As a five reeler it does not carry sufficient high jinks to provoke continuous laughter since its idea is slight and the gags are not ingenious of conception and execution, except in brief intervals. Compressed into three reels it would contain more compact action. The two reelers being manufactured on our best lots are consistently amusing — but considerable ingenuity would have to be expended to make them provocative of laughter throughout five reels.

"His Darker Self" is the picture which was to introduce Al Jolson to the screen — and when the blackface songbird refused to entertain the idea, Lloyd Hamilton was substituted. This comedian possesses sufficient individuality of expression to fulfil the demands of the role. His keen sense of burlesque inspires him to squeeze every ounce of comedy from the part — that of a blackface detective whose mission is to catch the ebony leader of the darktown bootleggers.

The director hasn't "gagged" the picture. He doesn't use exaggerated incident. But it might have been more humorous had he employed more comedy and less melodrama. There are several gags which suggest that Hamilton had a hand in them. He knows all the comedy tricks and he employs economy in expressing them. But he is not permitted moments of slapstick which heretofore have marked his efforts. And it is as a disciple of slapstick that he has gained recognition. The picture gives him some mirthful moments — particularly in the scene showing him being baptized. The real colored gentry are panic-stricken when they see him emerge from the water with his face washed of the burnt cork. The action takes him through some adventurous incident which culminates in a chase in which speed boats are employed. This touch is exceedingly familiar — and indicates that the chief episodes lack invention.

However, it is a pleasing enough effort for the average house — and it demonstrates that blackface comedy can be put over if the gags are sufficiently novel and bright. In the cast are Irma Harrison who plays a blacktace part similar to the one she had in "One Exciting Night," and Lucille La Verne who has been cast in burnt cork roles for many years upon the stage. Ralph Spence's titles are too wordy and too suggestive of wise cracks — though at several intervals they invite laughter.

THEME. Comedy with melodramatic trimmings based upon youth impersonating colored man in order to track down the bootlegging king of darktown.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The humorous impersonation by Lloyd Hamilton. The baptism. The fights in the colored cabaret. The melodramatic climax featuring chase with speed boats. The good work by cast.

DIRECTION. Has slight idea and gives too much emphasis to melodramatic trimmings. Gags could have been much better had they been exaggerated with burlesque incident. Provides big laugh in baptismal scene. Gets good results from Hamilton and cast. Finish is orthodox.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature this as the first five-reeler in which the principal roles are done in blackface. Feature Lloyd Hamilton. Might exploit it with prologue featuring blackface comedian in a monologue, etc.

DRAWING POWER. Satisfactory for average house — but needs support with a well balanced program.

SUMMARY. Five reels is too long for this slight idea — and the humor isn't spontaneous. Has several laugh-provoking gags — but picture is too strongly supported by titles. Lloyd Hamilton flashes some good bits of business and does a blackface in good style.

THE PLAYERS

Lloyd Hamilton
Tom Wilson
Lucille La Verne
Tom O'Malley
Irma Harrison
Edna May Sperl
Sally Long
Kate Bruce

By Arthur Ceasar. Directed by John W. Noble.

SYNOPSIS. The leader of the darktown bootleggers is elusive of capture so amateur detective disguises himself with burnt cork and associates with the colored violators of the eighteenth amendment. He captures the ringleader after an exciting chase in a speed boat. His sweetheart co-operates with him in tracking down the villain.

$20 a Week

(Distinctive Pictures—Selznick—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

CHALK up another hit for George Arliss! This distinguished character actor has put across a picture that is the direct antithesis of "The Green Goddess." Here we have a comedy drama rich in humorous situations and delightful character portraitures. It is good light entertainment and Mr. Arliss contributes more of his inimitable acting to the screen. But in the present instance he must needs share honors with Taylor Holmes and the diminutive fellow who plays the role of Little Arthur. Mr. Holmes is going to cause much merriment through his work as the irresponsible steel plant head, who never places business before pleasure, while the interpreter of Little Arthur is going to add much to the gayety of the nation through his antics in the Hart home.

The feature is something different from anything in which Mr. Arliss has ever appeared on the shadow stage and therefore has the quality of "being novel." The feature has been made for fun purposes only and has succeeded in its aim 100 per cent. Ivan Simpson, who was with Mr. Arliss in the stage and screen version of "The Green Goddess," has an important role in his present vehicle. Miss Roberts adds beauty to the picture and wears stunning gowns.

The settings are distinctly high class and at times elaborate, especially those showing the interior of the Hart home. There is real comedy as Little Arthur decides to take a bath and starts the water going through the ceiling to the heads of the conferees below. There is equal merriment in his falling on Hart's high hat, in his spilling water over the latter's lap at breakfast and other things which send the nervous young financier into "retreat."

The picture works up to a good climax in which "the adopted father," saves the Hart fortune from some schemers, brings about the union of his son and Hart's sister and then joins hands in business with Hart. "$20 a Week' should find a welcome on any program.

THEME. A comedy drama in which a wealthy father, in order to show up his worthless son, takes the latter's dare and gets a job at $20 a week. Then both make good.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The characterization contributed by Mr. Arliss. The fine comedy work of Taylor Holmes. The excellent supporting cast. The fun injected by the antics of Little Arthur. The exciting climax. The attractive settings.

DIRECTION. An admirable piece of work from beginning to end. Has been able to put over some great comedy and is sure to bring laughs from any audience. Has had a talented cast to work with and has brought out the best in each player.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Be sure to mention that this is the first picture made by Mr. Arliss since "The Green Goddess." Play up the names of the cast. Tell the folks of the rich humor in the picture. Start a discussion in your local newspaper on whether it is possible to live on $20 a week.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for the best houses in the land at any time.

SUMMARY. After the success of "The Green Goddess." there isn't the least doubt but that the public will flock to see anything in which George Arliss appears. And no one is going to be disappointed in this starring vehicle which has that rare quality of being able to make your patrons laugh.

THE CAST

John Reeves	George Arliss
William Hart	Taylor Holmes
Muriel Hart	Edith Roberts
Henry Sloane	Walter Howe
George Blair	Redfield Clarke
Chester Reeves	Ronald Colman
James Pettison	Ivan Simpson

From Edgar Franklin's novel, "The Adopted Father." Directed by Harmon Weight. Photographed by Harry A. Fischbeck.

SYNOPSIS. Chester Reeves bets his father that he cannot live on $20 a week. The elder Reeves takes the bet and gets a job in the office of a steel plant owned by William Hart. Hart's sister adopts a little boy against his will so he, to get revenge, adopts a "father" in the person of Reeves. Reeves finds that James Pettison is scheming to buy up all the Hart stock and ruin Hart and is instrumental in saving the company from financial destruction. Reeves' son also makes good by working and wins Hart's sister as a wife. Reeves then identifies himself as the famous Reeves of steel fame and joins a partnership with Hart.

The Right of the Strongest

(Zenith Pictures Corporation—Selznick—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THERE is always entertainment in these Blue Ridge stories. Some of the best photoplays on record have had their locale in the romantic Kentucky hills and valleys and here is another one that unfolds on the screen a tense tale of the quaint, suspicious, fighting folk of the Blue Grass region. While the picture gets away to a slow start and would have been better if cut to five reels, the action picks up along about the third reel and from then on things happen fast and furious culminating in a fistic battle between E. K. Lincoln and George Seigman that reminded us of a similar fight in "The Spoilers." This fight is realism — plus.

The production is rich in tense moments once the action gets under way. There is the situation in which one of the "hill billies" steals a letter setting forth just what the hero is doing in the valley, but which the heroine refuses to read when told to do so by the villains. There is drama in the situation in which the hero rushes into the store and tells the assembled mountain bullies that he will kill the one who again slanders the little school teacher with whom he is in love. And then when the climax comes in which the mountaineers ride to lynch the hero through a blinding rain storm and are about to accomplish their aim, following the big fight, when the hero's pals from the camp over the valley, arrive just in the nick of time (a la movie) and prevent it, the audience is sure to be pulled to the edge of the seats.

The cast is a large and talented one. E. K. Lincoln and Helen Ferguson have the leading roles and they are ably supported by such well known film folk as George Seigman, Tom Santschi, Tully Marshall, June Elvidge, Niles Welch, Winter Hall and others.

THEME. A Kentucky mountain melodrama setting forth the trials and tribulations of an engineer who seeks to grab the home and lands of the hill folk for a gigantic power project. He almost loses his life in the deal. He wins a mountain girl for a bride.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fight between Lincoln and Seigman. The storm scenes. The scene in which the girl is told to read the contents of the stolen letter. The ride of the mountain ruffians to lynch the hero. The exteriors.

DIRECTION. Has taken too much footage in getting the story under way but has redeemed himself toward the middle of the picture by packing events in close order until the fine climax which is a knockout. Has handled the lynching scene well. Should have cut the scene in which the villain is shown stamping the face of the hero.

EXPLOITATION. Dress the lobby in mountain cabin style. Play up the names in the big cast. Tell the folks about the storm scenes and big fight.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for program houses.

SUMMARY. An entertaining story, with the always refreshing Kentucky hill country locale, told by a cast of uniform excellence. There are some very fine storm scenes, a fistic battle that will stand comparison with any on the screen this season and some dramatic situations that will thrill the most jaded fan.

THE CAST

John Marshall	E. K. Lincoln
Mary Elizabeth Dale	Helen Ferguson
"Trav" Williams	George Seigman
"Babe" Davis	Tom Santschi
"Bud" Davis	Robert Miasch
"Uncle Beck" Logan	F. B. Phillips
"Mister" Sykes	Tully Marshall

By Frances Mimmo Green. Adapted by D. Hobart. Directed by Edgar Lewis. Photographed by Vernon Walker.

SYNOPSIS. Entering a Blue Ridge valley to lay plans and acquire lands for a mammoth power project, John Marshall meets and falls in love with school-teacher. The "hill billies" suspect Marshall of being a "revenooer" and determine to "get" him. They start out to do so and there is a terrific battle between Marshall and "Trav" Williams but the former's engineering camp chums arrive in time to save John's life. He wins the girl.

The Dawn of a Tomorrow

(Paramount—Six Reels)

THIS adaptation of the novel and play by Frances Hodgson Burnett, which served as a stellar vehicle for Eleanor Robson many years ago, comes to the screen a most refreshing excursion into the realm of sentiment. There was opportunity to crowd it with artificial theatrics; there was plenty of chance to spoil its wholesome idea with movieish incident. But the director has wisely used discretion in avoiding any unwarranted hokum. While the idea carries a Pollyanna flourish, there is no mawkish sentiment introduced to burden the theme — founded upon the simple theory that happiness can be enjoyed by wishing it.

The story is unpretentious — and while the production is colored with incident and atmosphere, the spectator's interest is held to the plot and characterization. There is simplicity in the heroine's wish to find happiness — and her faith in a product of London's slums And yet it is embroidered with melodramatic threads which serve its theme — without sacrificing its humanities.

George Melford, always good with production detail, has not erred on the side of atmosphere. His London backgrounds and figures, a squalid corner of the slums — the ever-present fog, the sordid rooms of its wastrels, the beggars and bobbies — these are in rich focus here. And yet with these picturesque types and details the story goes bounding along, telling a familiar tale with emphasis upon its heart appeal — its humanities. It carries thrills — which are projected for the sake of drama.

You've seen this type of picture a score of times — with its ragged heroine, its unkempt women, its philanthropist, its reckless sinner, its philanderer — and its products of the criminal world. But here it has been treated differently. It sends out its note of optimism without any sticky sentiment.

The acting is well taken care of by Jacqueline Logan as the slum girl, while Raymond Griffith thrusts himself into a vivid characterization as the swaggering crook. David Torrence also contributes an effective bit, but Roland Bottomley is too stagey as the philanderer.

THEME. Romantic melodrama based upon slum girl's faith in humanity. She finds happiness by thinking it — and redeems her crook admirer.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The straightforward plot. The manner in which characters serve the theme. The touches of humanity. The thrills in the pursuit of the crook. The creditable atmosphere. The splendid acting by principals — especially Raymond Griffith, who contributes a rich study.

DIRECTION. Uses good judgment in projecting theme — and keeping it dominant. Does not sacrifice humanities to add unwarranted action. Keeps it vital and moving — and gets results from players. Good backgrounds.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Get out the family for this one. It treats the Pollyanna idea in a most refreshing way. Play up the virtues of hope and faith — and campaign the idea that happiness can be found by thinking it. Mention cast.

DRAWING POWER. A fine audience picture. For the entire family.

SUMMARY. Here is a refreshing treatment of the Pollyanna pattern — with the theme ever dominant even when the melodramatic moments are expressed. Carries humanity and heart appeal — and is finely acted and staged. Should appeal everywhere.

THE CAST

Glad	Jacqueline Logan
The Dandy	Raymond Griffith
Sir Oliver Holt	David Torrence
Arthur Holt	Roland Bottomley
Nod	Harris Gordon
Black	Guy Oliver
Ginney	Tempe Piggot

By Frances Hodgson Burnett. Scenario by Harvey Thew. Directed by George Melford.

SYNOPSIS. Girl of the slums has crook admirer, who refuses to go straight. Philanthropist becomes interested in her—and she finds happiness by thinking it. The wealthy man has evil nephew who would compromise her, but he is caught and crook, with his alibi established, sees the light of understanding.

The Thief of Bagdad

(Douglas Fairbanks—About 12,000 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, being a man of ideals, is moved by but one ambition, to serve the screen and give it the best which his independence, courage and imagination affords. His is an enthusiasm which inspires him to eclipse any previous work — though that work may have been appraised as the last word in de-luxe entertainment. The superlatives which have been heaped upon him since he began producing on a colossal scale must serve again for "The Thief of Bagdad," which is unique in that it offers no comparison with any picture which has ever been projected

It is a magnificent spectacle, imposing in its pictorial effects — and carrying an opulence of background which establishes a definite ocular appeal. Fairbanks has credited his audience with imagination. He has dared to explore in a fanciful world — and he stakes his sense of showmanship upon the results. The picture will naturally arouse much discussion among exhibitors. As it has no standards of comparison with anything heretofore projected, no one can state with authority just how it will go in this or that locality.

Some will say that it lacks the devil-may-care spirit of "Robin Hood"— that the star, having established himself as a keen satirist, should have employed buffoonery all the way here. Robin Hood was incorrigible — and the Thief since he is a fanciful figure might have abandoned himself to mischievous high jinks to the end — without ruining a single thread of the fantastic design. And satirizing this page from the Arabian Nights, he would have continued the dizzy pace which has established him as the bounding playboy of the silversheet. There are rare moments after he has turned lover in which his gift for satire generates spontaneous laughter — and there are intervals when he is not the Fairbanks as we have come to recognize him.

The public pays to see Fairbanks. And here he tests this public. The majority will appreciate the artist in him, but in all likelihood most of them would prefer him in such a role as he portrayed in "The Mark of Zorro." The new picture is destined for a long run in the large cities — which means that the exhibitors elsewhere will not get it for several months. It is an artistic success — the finest so far recorded. Will it be a financial success? We offer no predictions. The exhibitor must be a plunger here for it offers no standards of comparison. It will succeed or fail on the strength of an audience's intelligence in each community.

THEME. Spectacular fantasy suggested from a page of the "Arabian Nights" — exploiting a thief, who in order to find happiness, must earn it. Finds redemption and love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The beautiful settings. The opulent backgrounds and atmosphere. The technical details. The spectacular appeal. The amazing trick photography. The colorful acting by star and principals.

DIRECTION. Projects an intricate skein of romance and adventure — without digressing from theme and plot. Gives it magnificent mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Limitless opportunities here, ranging all the way from star and supporting cast to elaborate lobby displays and prologues. Should be exploited weeks in advance with every kind of publicity matter. Can stand biggest kind of campaign.

DRAWING POWER. For high class houses and intelligent audiences.

SUMMARY. A marvelously spectacular achievement — carrying rich pictorial appeal. Gorgeously mounted — and a sure feast for the eye. Projects star in a series of amazing adventures.

THE CAST

Secrets

(Norma Talmadge—First National—8363 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

NORMA TALMADGE, who has not been so fortunate of late with her screen selections, has found in "Secrets" a picture of most appealing quality — one which gives her a chance to flash her emotional talent through four distinct episodes of a woman's life from early girlhood to old age.

It exudes a fine sentiment and is told with rare charm and marked restraint. The time lapses do not alienate one's interest in the romance because the four episodes mark the dramatic turning points of the protagonist's life. The picture introduces the elderly figure reading from her diary. Her husband lies critically ill — and as she pens the words that she wishes to join him if he dies, she falls asleep and the dream brings back a retrospection of her romance.

The girlhood scenes are rather slow in development and considerable stress is laid upon displaying the fashions of 1865. However they are saturated with delicate humor and the sympathetic note is generated early — and held to the conclusion. The next episode, five years later, features the young couple in their lonely existence on the western plains of the West. They eloped against the wishes of an irate parent and left England to make their fortune in the new world. This new sequence is melodramatic and the accompanying thrills measure out suspense as the outlaws attack the isolated cabin of the couple. There is a fine bit of business suggesting deep pathos when the young mother holds the mirror to her infant's mouth and discovers no moisture present. The action shifts back to England with the 1888 episode — and this is the weakest sequence as it features a triangle that relies almost entirely upon dialogue.

The concluding episode finds the old lady awakening from her dream and discovering that her husband has passed the crisis. Miss Talmadge acts her role with dignity and feeling and her gift for repression gives the romance a delicate charm. Eugene O'Brien is adequate as the husband. The others are competent. It is a picture finely staged,— with details of costuming and atmosphere well nigh perfect. It carries depth, radiates a romantic glow, and is a sure-fire box-office appeal — particularly with feminine patrons.

THEME. Romance of a woman's life from girlhood to old age — told in four distinct episodes and visualizing a retrospection of eventful memories.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The excellent staging. The fine atmosphere. The fine acting by star. The fight with the outlaws. The sentimental flavor. The costuming and detail. The photography and lighting DIRECTION. Succeeds in projecting fine atmosphere of story — and tells straightforward story emphasizing salient chapters. A trifle slow in getting started.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. This is the star's biggest acting opportunity. Make the most of it. Put on atmospheric prologue suggestive of the early episodes of story.

DRAWING POWER. Sure-fire box-office picture— particularly a winner with feminine patrons.

SUMMARY. This type of story has been done before, but never with such tone and qualiy. It exudes a fine sentiment, which never becomes sugary — and its romance is certain to kindle response with most patrons.

She awakes and her sick husband has passed the crisis.

A Boy of Flanders

(Metro—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THE children of America and the world, as well as the grown-ups, have a rare treat in store for them in Jackie Coogan's latest starring vehicle, "A Boy of Flanders," in which the juvenile actor has not only the most appealing, but the most novel role of his short but meteoric career. It sure is going to be tough when the younger Coogan grows up for just now there isn't anyone to take his place. As a little Flemish waif who is thrown alone into an unfriendly world after his aged, blind grandfather dies, but wins his way through the help of an almost human dog, Jackie contributes to the screen a characterization that is going to reach the hearts of a nation. And right here we want to say that next to the work of the star, comes that of the veteran of many a Mack Sennett comedy, feature or other film work, "Teddy" the dog who in this production is simply immense.

"A Boy of Flanders," has many qualities that will "sell" it to the public. First it is "different" in plot, a relief from the "sameness" of present-day pictures. Second, it has a novel scenic background — quaint Flanders with its wide pantaloons, wooden shoes, windmills, dogcarts and art. Third, it affords an opportunity for delightful musical settings and wide exploitation. Fourth, it is rich in comedy values and fifth, it is a picture of especial appeal to children.

The feature has been admirably mounted and meticulous attention to detail in all the settings is particularly noticeable.

THEME. A comedy drama of old Flanders dealing with the adventures of a fatherless waif and his dog, his rise to success against tremendous odds and his amusing capers.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting of Jackie and the work of "Teddy" the dog. The artistic mounting, lighting and photography. The fine supporting cast. The party at which Jackie appears dressed as a little girl. The excellent fire scene. The rescue of Nello from death in the storm and his winning of the contest.

DIRECTION. Has inspired Jackie to eclipse his former performances and has made "Teddy" the dog do almost human work. He has inserted comedy that is rich and spontaneous. He has reached the heart ever and anon with sure-fire wallops and brought the whole to a thrilling and satisfying climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Have a little boy dress like a Dutch youth, wooden shoes and all and have him lead a great dane dog thru the streets with appropriate advertising. Put on a Dutch kiddies dance as a prologue.

DRAWING POWER. Should pack 'em in at any house.

SUMMARY. One of the real novelties of the season which should be another sure-fire box office success. Never have there been more real comedy situations in a Coogan picture, never more heart touching moments. The feature has been beautifully mounted. The supporting cast is a knockout and the work of "Teddy" the dog is going to help a lot in putting the feature over.

THE CAST

Nello	Jackie Coogan
Jehan Daas	Nigel de Brulier
Baas Cogez	Lionel Belmore
Marie Cogez	Nell Craig

Petrasche (the dog)	"Teddy"

Based on the novel "A Dog of Flanders" by Ouida. Adapted by Marian B. Jackson. Scenario by Walter Anthony. Directed by Victor Schertzinger.

SYNOPSIS. Nello a little waif, is the sole support of his aged and blind grandfather. One day he saves the life of a dog, but on returning to his little home, the boy finds his grandfather dead. He is forced from the cottage and lives under a haystack with the dog. When Baas Cogez' barn burns, Nello is blamed for the deed and is about to be sent away when Van Dullen, an artist, arrives in the village to announce a contest in drawing. Nello wins the prize eventually and after returning a lost wallet to Cogez, is adopted by VanDullen and wins the affection of the landlord who also saves the lad from being frozen to death in a storm.

Regional News from Correspondents

Seattle

RAY GROMBACHER, manager of the Liberty theatre in Spokane, spent a number of days last week around the theatres and film exchanges. Mr. Grombacher announced that he has just placed in his house the nine-piece Ray Robinson Liberty Orchestra for a thirty-week engagement. This orchestra was organized by Mr. Brombacher in Spokane almost a year ago, and since that time has toured the United States as the featured jazz band with a number of large musical shows. During his stay here, Mr. Grombacher also contracted with Manager Fred G. Sliter of the First National exchange for the entire output of all First National franchise pictures for the coming year, to be shown in Spokane under Mr. Grombacher's direction by the Liberty Amusement Company.

Letters received here last week announced that the Miller theatre at Starbuck, Wash., had been bought by Clint Thomas from the former owner and manager, Jess Miller. Mr. Thomas was making minor renovations on the house, and planned to open again in March under the name of the Mutt and Jeff theatre.

Robert Murray, head doorman at Frank Steffy's Coliseum theatre, and Miss Maxine Foughner, head usher at Frank Edwards' Winter Garden theatre, were married last week. Mr. and Mrs. Murray met for the first time a number of years ago, when both were associated with the Jensen-PonHerberg theatres, Mr. Murray in his present capacity and Mrs. Murray as head usher at the Strand theatre. A surprise party participated in by many of their mutual friends was tendered the couple the day following the announcement of their marriage.

Henry Turner, manager of the Wilma and Empress theatres in Missoula, Montana, was a recent visitor in this city. James A. McGill of the Dream theatre, Port Orchard, also spent a number of days on Film Row.

Atmospheric prologues to each feature, such as are staged in the leading theatres in the East, and in Los Angeles and San Francisco on this Coast, are being used regularly for the first time in the history of this city, at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre. Henri C. LeBel, director of presentation at that house, each week arranges a novel prelude to the feature, usually involving singing, dancing and musical specialties in specially designed settings, that are meeting with much favor from the patrons of the Blue Mouse. Casts ranging in number from three to ten persons, depending upon the type of presentation, are used regularly by Mr. LeBel in working out his productions. Andy Ward's Jazz Band each week occupies a prominent place in the prologue.

M. H. Newman, general manager of Universal theatres on the Pacific Coast, left recently after having spent a number of days with Manager L. J. Schlaifer of the Universal exchange and Manager Robert W. Bender of the Columbia theatre, arranging bookings for the next few weeks.

A. A. Schmidt, Western division manager of the Film Booking Office exchanges, spent a few days here recently as the guest of Manager A. H. Huot of the local F. B. O. branch office. Mr. Schmidt arrived from Portland, after a few days' conference there with Louis Metzger, Northwest exchange manager. He is on a tour of all his exchanges on the Pacific Coast, after which he will return to Los Angeles.

Fred G. Sliter, manager of the First National exchange, has recently returned after an extended trip to Spokane and other key cities in Eastern Washington. Upon his return, Mr. Sliter called the monthly organization meeting of all exchange employees, which was preceded by an exchange dinner and followed by a review of "Lilies of the Field," and "Why Men Leave Home." Jack Rue and Harold Boehme, First National salesmen in the Washington territory, both came into the city for this gathering.

G. G. Maxey, formerly booker and assistant manager at Paul R. Aust's local Selznick office, recently resigned that position and is contemplating association with one of the large oil companies on the Pacific Coast. He has been succeeded at the exchange by Ed. A. Lamb, who formerly held that office but has recently been on the road for Selznick. Mr. Maxey has been associated with the film business in the Northwest for a number of years, having been connected with the Goldwyn exchange, and also having served as branch manager of the First National exchange for a number of months.

Charles Code was engaged as salesman in the Portland territory for Goldwyn, it was announced last week by Seth D. Perkins, exchange manager, and will work under A. A. Schayer in that territory. Mr. Code, before joining Goldwyn was associated with Manager Paul Lynch's Pathe exchange in the city.

Samuel Henley, manager of Universal exchange in Spokane, spent a short time in Seattle last week with L. J. Schlaifer, head of the local Universal office, regarding a new sales drive soon to be instigated in this state. Mr. Henley is the brother of Hobart Henley, Universal director for Priscilla Dean and other stars.

L. K. Brin, manager of the Kwality Pictures exchange, after returning from a conference with the Warner Brothers in LosAngeles left here again last week for a short sales trip to a number of smaller towns in this state.

R. C. Hill, head of the Hodkinson exchange, has been out of the city for a number of days on a sales trip to Portland and part of the Oregon territory.

B. Wallace Rucker, star salesman for Manager J. A. Gage's Educational Film Company exchange, returned to the city the latter part of March, after having been away for a number of weeks in the Oregon and Montana territory. After spending a few days here, he was scheduled to set out again for points in Eastern Washington.

H. A. Black, manager of the Vitagraph exchange, left the city again last week for Portland, where he expected to spend a number of days with the Rose City exhibitors. He returned recently from Eastern Washington, where he reported business conditions quite good.

Salt Lake City

MARCH 17th meant more than St. Patrick's Day to E. D. Smith, manager and owner of the Utah Theater Supply Co., of this city, located over on East Second South above State street. It meant the celebrating of the seventh anniversary of his entry into the film business in Salt Lake City. He has acted in the capacity of manager of every theatre supply house since his advent until he started out on his own hook at his present location last year.

Clifton Pierce, formerly connected with the Liberty Theater at Tremonton, Utah, dropped into the city the other day on his return from Arizona.

Ben Winzeler, owner of the Liberty Theater at Tremonton, and W. R. Van Fleet, who operates the Liberty Theater at Carland, Utah, were in this city the first part of the week visiting the local exchange and supply houses with the view of securing pictures and ventilating systems for their houses.

With this week passes the fourteenth week since the opening of the Victory Theater on East Broadway, by the Louis Marcus Enterprises Company of this city. Since then business has been steadily on the upgrade, with record attendances having been run up several different weeks. The manner of presentation, facilities for comfort and convenience, and above all the stellar productions which have been the best that the market affords, have proven highly attractive to patrons. Under the capable managership of Carl A. Porter, this theater has grown from an experiment to one of the leading picture palaces in the city. The orchestra under the direction of Ralph Pollock, has done much to enhance the value of the entertainment offered.

Fire practically destroyed the Strand Theater at Boise, Idaho, last week, when the blaze broke out in a neighboring building and spread rapidly to the theater, where it soon gained headway, and it was only with difficulty that the fighters were able to get it under control. Walter Mendenhall, proprietor, says that it will take sixty days to repair the damage to the theater, which was heavily damaged.

Louis Marcus, Division Manager for Denver and Salt Lake City, under the Famous Players-Lasky banner, has returned after a few days in Denver.

Jules Wolfe, Supervisor of Educational exchanges in this territory, is visiting C. H. Messinger, local manager. He leaves within a day or two for Denver.

W. G. Seib, manager for Pathe, returned from a trip through northern Utah in company with George Hays, local manager for Associated Exhibitors. They report exhibitors in that section as enjoying good business.

Manager Seib is expecting W. S. Wessling, Western Division Manager this week. Mr. Wessling will stop off for a conference with Seib, on his way back to the coast from New York City, where he attended a two day sales meeting.

Harry Nolan, First National Franchise Holder, for Denver and Salt Lake City, paid L. L. Hall, local manager for Associated First National, a visit on his way to Los Angeles, where he will arrange for a production to be filmed in Colorado.

Fred Gage, Division Manager for Universal, arrived for a conference with Milton Cohen, local manager.

S. I. Goodwin, of the Royal Theater at Lehi; Lee Stallings, Kineman, at Richfield, and J. E. Ryan, Liberty, Brigham City, were out of town exhibitor visitors this week.

E. J. Sparks, of E. J. Sparks, Florida enterprises was in Atlanta the past week conferring with his local representative, E. Brown.

I. L. Kennedy, who recently resigned as district booker for Southern Enterprises Florida theatres, has been made manager of the E. J. Sparks theatres in DeLand, Florida, succeeding Dick Dorman, who goes to Miami for Southern Enterprises.

D. N. Flowers of Bailey, N. C., has opened the Bailey Theatre. C. Prosser, of Johnsonville, Tennessee, is making some alterations and has installed two new Simplex projectors.

A one hundred per cent membership from all employes of the Lyric, Atlanta was secured by the new Paramount Club there during the past week.

Arthur Jones, supervisor of construction for Southern Enterprises, was in Atlanta the past week conferring with M. J. Mullin, purchasing agent.

It is announced that the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Schiller, only daughter of Ed. A. Schiller, of Loew's Incorporated, will take place on April 14th. She is to marry Byron Akins, of Atlanta and the ceremony will take place at the Biltmore hotel, New York city.

The Saengers' new theatre in Pensacola, Florida, now nearing completion, will be one of the finest in the South.

V. J. Briant, New Orleans manager for Metro, Creole Enterprises and Preferred, has definitetly severed his connection with First National and has moved to new quarters at 223 South Liberty street. Lucas Connor, formerly assistant to Mr. Briant, has been appointed manager of First National to succeed him.

V. H. Bridges has been appointed field manager of Creole Enterprises and Preferred Pictures in New Orleans and will assist Manager Briant. Miss C. Landry has been named booking clerk of Creole and is the only woman booker in the New Orleans territory.

Charles E. Kessnick, district manager of Metro, has been in New Orleans superintending removal to their new quarters.

H. J. Bayley, New Orleans manager of Pathe, has been transferred to the Minneapolis office, being succeeded by P. A. Schmuck of the Philadelphia office.

Arthur Lucas, who assumed control of the Charlotte and Atlanta Educational exchanges the latter part of January announces that he has also assumed a similar interest in the New Orleans, Dallas and Oklahoma City offices, all of which territory will be under his supervision in future.

Miss Harriet Howard, who was with Southern Enterprises until the home office was removed to New York has been transferred to the district offices.

The "little" Charlotte office of Universal, presided over so ably for the past ten years by E. F. Dardine, galloped into first place in the National sales drive now being conducted.

Walter Henn, a newcomer in the film business has joined the Paramount sales force out of Charlotte, J. C. Whitlock has been sent to the New Orleans territory.

Joe Worsley, former First National exploiteer in Atlanta, is now making hook-ups with exhibitors and book stores for Grosset and Dunlap, book publishers, in this territory.

Arthur C. Bromberg, the owner now of the largest individual and independent exchange business in south, is planning to further extend by the opening of an exchange of Progress Pictures in Oklahoma City. He has just returned from a visit to his Dallas and New Orleans exchanges, and is at the present time erecting a modern exchange building for the housing of his Atlanta business.

Mrs. Dorothy M. Tripp, who was connected with the Weekly Film Review, Atlanta until succeeded by Miss Hazel Love, has returned to the film industry and will be associated with Southern Theatre Equipment Company, Atlanta.

Patricia Palmer in the Al Christie feature for Hodkinson, "Hold Your Breath."

Fred Kirby has transferred from the Atlanta F. B. O. office to Educational and will travel the Carolina territory.

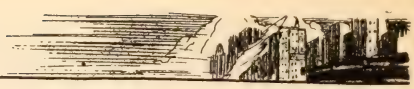
In March of 1915, Wallace Walthall, in his coal office in Birmingham, Alabama, received a letter from his brother, Henry B., suggesting that if he wanted to get into the movie business, to go to Atlanta and report for work for the V. L. S. E.

Walthall wound up his affairs in Birmingham and arrived in Atlanta received a job as shipping and poster clerk, which is the place for all new beginners in an exchange.

A year later his experience resulted in an offer from K. E. S. E. as salesman, which position he held until he was promoted as Special Sales Representative for the General Film Company in the Atlanta territory.

A year or so later, found him in Dallas, Texas as Branch Manager, for the General Film Company, which position he held until the General Film Company liquidated and closed their exchanges.

Walthall then obtained an interest in a state-right exchange. He attracted the attention of the Enterprise Distributing Corporation. When Enterprise opened its office in Oklahoma City in 1920, Walthall went there as manager, and today, from point of service, he is the oldest exchange manager in Oklahoma City.



The many friends of Mr. Walthall congratulate him on the ninth anniversary of his film experience.

W. C. Sears, of the Lyric Theatre, Boonville, Mo., has purchased the theatres at Bunceton and Tipton, Missouri, from Mrs. Brent Peters.

S. M. Robinson has purchased the Majestic Theatre at Oran, Missouri, from A. J. Matthews & Co. It will be managed and operated by Holly A. Robinson.

Chicago

TWO more large houses have been acquired by the Midwest Theatres, Inc., bringing the number of houses operated by this important chain up to thirty-nine. The two theatres involved in this company's latest transactions are the Crocker, a 1562 seat house and the Grove, both of Elgin, Illinois.

The installation of a fine, new organ in the Monroe Theatre was completed on March 24th, and its music will add much to the quality of entertainment at this loop house.

H. L. Krause, Paramount branch manager at St. Louis, was a visitor at the Kansas City Paramount office last week. If one-half of Mr. Krause's optimism is based on good logic this season should be a big one in the Kansas City and St. Louis territories.

Morris Joseph, former branch manager of the Universal office at Kansas City, now is manager of the Pioneer Film Corporation, an independent distributing concern of New Haven, Conn.

H. H. Friend of the home office of Universal was in Kansas City last week, visiting the local exchanges and incidentally meeting former acquaintances.

Canada

AFTER completing 20 weeks at the Bijou Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, as a song specialist, John T. Fiddes has gone to New York City to engage in special theatre work. During his engagement at the Bijou, Mr. Fiddes, who is a Scottish-Canadian tenor, made an excellent impression with old-time favorite songs. Mr. Fiddes is well-known in Canadian theatre circles, having been the manager of several Winnipeg theatres as well as the manager of the System Theatre, Montreal. He was also a film exchange manager for a considerable period in the Canadian West.

John A. Schuberg of Vancouver, B. C., has acquired the Rialto Theatre, Winnipeg, which he will operate in addition to the Province Theatre at Winnipeg. Manager Helmer Jernberg of the Province also has charge of the Rialto.

A prominent visitor at Ottawa during the week of March 17 was F. G. Spencer of Halifax, N. S., proprietor of no less than 21 picture theatres in the Maritime provinces. Mr. Spencer went to the Canadian Capital on special business along with ex-Premier Murray of Nova Scotia and Chief Justice McEwen of the same Province. Mr. Spencer, who recently became a Halifax Rotarian, immediately looked up Joe Franklin of the Franklin Theatre, Ottawa, who was formerly prominent in the theatre field of Halifax before opening his new house in Ottawa last September. Mr. Spencer recalled that the last time he had visited Ottawa was when he was manager for Madame Nordica on her Canadian tour 16 years ago.

Oral Cloakey, retiring manager of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, gave a "farewell appearance" at his own house during the week of March 24 when he presented a [illegible] regular performance, playing "Lutspiel" and other numbers. This was the last week for Mr. Cloakey at the Ottawa Regent before proceeding to Los Angeles to take charge of the West Coast exploitation department of Universal pictures Corp.

Several new picture theatres are projected for Winnipeg, Manitoba, during coming months. The Parkview Theatre, Portage avenue, which was destroyed by fire last January, is to be rebuilt at a cost of $90,000, according to announced plans, the new house to be on a more modern and more elaborate plan than its predecessor.

H. Gernberg, proprietor of the Palace Theatre, Selkirk avenue, Winnipeg, is securing a site for a second theatre, he has announced, and will erect an attractive neighborhood house at a cost of $30,000.

M. Blanstein has made arrangements for the erection of a picture theatre on Stafford street, Fort Rouge, a suburb of Winnipeg, which is to cost $60,000, construction to start near the end of April.

The Model Theatre, Danforth avenue, Toronto, one of the older theatres in the North Eastern section of the Ontario Capital, has been improved by the installation of the latest type of projection equipment, including two DeLuxe Motiograph projectors and a Superbite Gold Fibre Screen. The DeLuxe machines have glass enclosed mechanism, motor release clutch, pilot light device, adjustable reel-end alarms and the direct connected motors. The installations were made by I. H. Coleman of the Coleman Electric Company, Toronto, distributor of the equipment.

F. G. Spencer, has concluded arrangements for the erection of a handsome picture theater on Charlotte Street, St. John, N. B. Mr. Spencer has secured a large site opposite the new "Admiral Beatty" Hotel which is well under construction. The new theatre is to be of large proportions.

Hodkinson's Montreal office now has a woman who is taking care of the work of an exchange salesman in good style, Mrs. B. Druker having been appointed salesman out of the branch by Harry E. Feldstein, Montreal manager. Mr. Feldstein declares that Mrs. Druker has been obtaining results.

A special fashion show was held every evening at the Palace theatre, Danforth Avenue, Toronto, one of the largest suburban palaces of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., during the week of March 10. The feature, as arranged by Manager Charlie Querrie, was unique in that merchants on Danforth Avenue in the vicinity of the theatre co-operated in presenting the latest styles for men, women and children. The show was held under the auspices of the Danforth Business Men's Association of which Manager Querrie is the president.

The Beaches theatre, Queen street East, Toronto, a large neighborhood house of the Ontario Capital operated by Famous Players Canadian Corp., was the scene of a gala occasion when a special reception was extended to the members of the Canadian Olympic Team, winners of the world's amateur hockey title at Chamorix, France, shortly after their return home. A number of presentations were made and the players were given a wonderful reception.

The Gillas-Strand theatre, formerly the Strand, was re-opened in Winnipeg, Manitoba, by Al. Gillis, formerly with the Famous Players Canadian Corp., with a combination policy of pictures and vaudeville and a price scale up to 40 cents. The re-opening took place on March 10 when Mr. Gillis announced the appointment of Walter Fogg, for years manager of the local Pantages theatre, as manager of the Strand. Mr. Gillis also declared that he would secure further theatres in the West.

Joe O'Leary, formerly manager of the Imperial theatre, Ottawa, has been placed in charge of outside advertising for Loew's theatre by Manager F. W. Goodale.

Miller Stewart, former manager of the Metropolitan theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has received the offer of manager for a new $250,000 theatre which is being completed at Palo Alto, California. Mr. Stewart has left for California.

Cleveland

HERE we have Morris Kaplan, said to be the youngest exhibitor in Cleveland. Kaplan will cast his first presidential vote next fall. He's manager of the Camera theatre, Payne Ave. and East 33d St.

Morris Kaplan, Manager Camera Theatre, Cleveland.

Charles Schearer, manager of the Lyric theatre, Massilon, did his week's shopping in the Film Exchange Bldg. on Wednesday.

John Kessler, manager of the Alhambra theatre, Canton, and Joe Trunk, of the Dome theatre, Youngstown, were in town last week, looking for pictures that will play to capacity houses during Lent.

E. F. Allman, who owns the Pike theatre at Dover, is now also owner of the Webber theatre, also of Dover. This house was formerly owned by George Chrest. Chrest is now devoting his entire time to his other picture house, the Revod.

Jack Kuhn, of Loew's Ohio theatres, is suffering from improvements. Kuhn had a severe attack of grip several weeks ago. He has been steadily improving. Last week he was again confined to his home. Same trouble—more improvements.

Bert Botzum, the big boss of the Orpheum theatre, Akron, is effectively dodging the March breezes by spending the month in Florida. Botzum will be back when the robins fly north.

Mike Mastandre, who operates the Mayfield theatre, Cleveland is just recovering from a severe attack of pneumonia. Mastandre has been in a hospital for the past two weeks

"Mayor" Kelly of the Lincoln theatre, Massilon was in town last week-end. Kelly says he's putting in a new policy at his house after the first of April. He'll add two acts of vaudeville to his regular picture program. "Not because business has been on the blink," says Kelly, "but just to offer a little variety. The same policy, no matter how good, becomes monotonous after a time."

The Cleveland exchanges are sponsoring a Film Ball which is scheduled for April 5th at the Winton Hotel. Mark Goldman, manager of the local exchange of Selznick, and Bill Onie of the Standard Film Service Company, are in charge of arrangements for the entertainment. Everybody connected with the exchanges as well as exhibitors and friends of the industry, with the price of admission—$2 a couple—is welcome. Dancing starts at 9 p. m. Novelty stunts are being planned. But these are being carefully guarded as secrets until the big night arrives.

George W. Erdman has resigned from his connection with the F. B. O. organization. Erdman is not ready to announce his plans as yet.

C. F. Penrod, F. B. O. division manager, paid the Cleveland exchange a visit last week, and reports the spring business all along the way, is very good.

J. S. Jossey of Progress Pictures Company, inaugurated the first day of spring by taking his new Wills St. Claire out on the road that leads to Warren.

Charles Feldman is here from New York to take charge of the short subject department in the local Universal exchange.

Al Mendelsohn, formerly with Universal, and lately in a business of his own not connected with pictures, is back with Universal.

W. E. Wilkinson, from the office of Will Hays, was a guest in the city during the past week. Mr. Wilkinson came to discuss with local exchange managers, a new fire ordinance for buildings which house film exchanges, and conditions under which exchanges may operate with the minimum element of fire hazard.

Ernestine Goldman, secretary to Manager Mark Goldman of Selznick Distributing Corporation, has announced her engagement to Al Bower of this city.

Buffalo

THE milk drive for the Near East Relief Fund in Buffalo started this week with the work being handled exclusively by the theatres. The management of nearly every house in the city cooperated. The drive is under the direct supervision of Al. Beckerich, president of the Buffalo Theatre Managers' association. Vincent McFaul, manager of Shea's Hippodrome, acted as treasurer

After a month in darkness the Savoy theater, Syracuse, has reopened under the name of "The Empire Theatre's Little Brother." The house has been entirely redecorated from front to back. It has been finished in a color scheme of blue and gold with special lighting effects. New projection machines have been installed. The seats have been recovered.

City Engineer Ralph B. Smith, of Lockport, N. Y., states upon completion of a tour of inspection of local theatres, accompanied by Anthony W. Horenburger, state inspector, that the Temple and Hi-Art theatres met all requirements of state and local fire and building laws. The Star theatre was found to have only one exit with certain protective requirements in its projection machine booth construction unprovided. Peter Valery, manager, was directed to supply these necessary safeguards at once.

C. G. Kingsley, Selznick home office representative, who has been in Buffalo for several weeks, left this week for Cincinnati to remain at the Selznick office there for a month or so. Before leaving Buffalo Mr. Kingsley said that things were in excellent condition at the local exchange and complimented Manager Lester Wolfe on his fine showing.

Elmira newspapers have announced the purchase of the Liberty theatre in Corning by William Berinstein of Elmira. Claude Stewell, manager of the Liberty, admits that Berinstein's interests had been offered a price but stated that he had not as yet been informed of their decision. The purchase price is given at $100,000.

Miles F. Gibbons, in charge of the short subject department of Pathe, was in town last week end.

Miss Fox, who has been in charge of bookkeeping at the Fox exchange, died last week from burns suffered when her clothing caught fire in her home. Pete Galivan is now handling the bookkeeping Ira Cohen, special representative, is stopping at the local Fox office for a few weeks. J. Emerson Dickmon of the sales staff is now having Easter eggs prepared for presentation to all exhibitors.

Jim Cardina put on a benefit for the German orphan asylum last Saturday afternoon at his new Varsity theatre, contributing the entire receipts to the institution.

Plans are now under way for the filming of an industrial and civic review of the city of Geneva, N. Y. Manager C. C. Young of the Regent theatre, has been instrumental in procuring the services of the Baumer Industrial Film Company in making the film. When completed, the picture will be shown at the Regent, after which it will remain in the city at the disposal of any civic organization that might care to use it to set forth the advantages of living in Geneva. The camera car will arrive in Geneva, April 7 to begin making the film.

In discussing the present which the Film Board of Trade wishes to tender Henry W. Kahn for his excellent work in staging the recent ball, one exchange manager suggested a pair of military hair brushes. Inasmuch as Henry lost his last hair last week he suggested some other token and a bicycle and knickerbockers were suggested. In case these gifts are made, Sydney Samson, president of the board, has promised to provide a lily for Henry's buttonhole.

Mike Bloom has taken over the Gem theatre in Oswego, N. Y., and will enlarge the house to 1,100 seats. He will call the house the Rivoli. Mr. Bloom has purchased the entire equipment of the Criterion theatre, Buffalo, from Walter Hays and associates to install in the newly remodeled house.

Albert Hay Malotte, former Shea Hippodrome organist, who is now presiding at the console of the Wurlitzer in the Lafayette Square theatre, received the most enthusiastic receptions in his career during his opening week at the latter house. He received an ovation at each performance. He is putttnig on a song novelty at each show, sitting at a toy organ on the stage as he sings.

Al Beckerich got some fine publicity for the Loew State the past week by having the Rainbow orchestra, the headliner of his bill, broadcast a concert from Station WGR atop the new Hotel Statler. Manager Fred M. Shafer of the Lafayette Square did the same thing with the Kentucky Serenaders last week. Both concerts were wows.

Charles N. Johnston, formerly with the F. B. O. sales staff, is now a member of the Renown Pictures corporation sales force. Mr. Johnston formerly managed the local Fox exchange and has been with Paramount and other offices.

'More Prints' Can Make Better Projection

Full Value of Pictures Cannot Be Obtained Under Present Conditions

A GREAT amount of interest has been aroused throughout the industry over the "More Prints" movement. The idea of more prints is excellent. More prints means quicker release to a great number of theatres, it also means better prints. And better prints makes possible the all important "improved projection" which is so direly needed.

But here is where the "wrench in the works" makes its appearance. Good, bad or indifferent prints alone do not and never will make good or bad projection.

If the larger producing companies increase the number of prints distributed on each picture there's going to be an excellent opportunity for real honest to goodness screen presentation in every theatre:

Providing

Every theatre has the facilities and takes the necessary precautions to get good projection.

A Highly Desirable but Improbable Condition

But that word "Providing" represents a highly improbable condition.

If any exhibitor, regardless of where his theatre is located or to what type of patrons he caters, would only reflect a few moments on the way he is cheating himself, the above "provision" would become a fact.

Take any one of a few thousand theatres for example. The Exchange demands a price for a picture, the price usually being as much as the theatre can stand. This particular picture has the necessary potential qualifications to justify its worth.

Now it's up to Mr. Exhibitor to get his money's worth.

What happens! Here's a picture that's good (we'll assume that). The patrons of this theatre, being the average run of people, can't fail to appreciate that this picture is good, has a real appeal and will therefore send them home highly pleased with their evening's entertainment.

All these are natural assumptions but they do not represent the actual case at all.

Where the projection is not at least reasonably acceptable, the picture loses nearly all its value.

A picture, as stated before, has potential qualifications to justify the price paid. But unless those potential qualities are brought forth then the worth isn't there. Projection is the medium that presents the picture to the public and it must be good projection to make pictures please.

Exhibitors Must Get More Money from Good Prints

So there you have it. The big distributing companies are going to invest more money in more prints. The exhibitors are going to get these prints sooner and in better condition. Also the exhibitor is paying for these extra prints. There's no question about it, more prints mean more money—from the exhibitor.

Therefore its a simple proposition—the exhibitor has only to squeeze more money from his public.

That can be done too. Here are better prints and quicker distribution. Therefore larger attendance for the theatre—for some theatres.

"More Prints," excepting for the quicker distribution, are going to mean nothing at all to the public attending theatres with poor projection and nothing in the exhibitor's pocket. It's up to every theatre manager and owner to get after his projection immediately. Get the full value of a picture over to the public. Present it so they can enjoy it in the greatest degree. Make a picture worth what's paid for it.

Here are the common defects found in projection today.

Insufficiently and unevenly illuminated screen; Jumpy pictures; Flicker (either from the projection machine itself or the light source); Improper screen (the wrong type or badly depreciated.)

Elimination of Projection Defects Would Be Big Boost

If these few defects common to poor projection were all eliminated in this country the motion picture industry would get one of the biggest boosts it ever received.

And when you come to analyze it, the task of perfecting projection isn't such a tremendous job either.

It all lies in realizing the importance of this phase of showmanship. Let every exhibitor take careful stock of the projection in his theatre and take immediate precaution to get a real picture over to his patrons.

The results will be a guaranteed pleasant surprise to thousands of exhibitors.

Society of Motion Picture Engineers' Convention

THE Society of Motion Picture Engineers has selected a most attractive and practical place for their coming spring convention.

This meeting is to be held at the Lakewood Farm Inn, Roscoe, N. Y., which is located in the Catskill mountains, one hundred and thirty miles from New York City.

The natural beauties of this location along with the unusual entertainment facilities that the Lakewood Farm Inn affords make an appeal to everyone.

The Arrangements Committee are planning to entertain the attending members and guests in an elaborate manner. Special programs for evening events are now well under way. Also, those in attendance will have full use of the golf course, trap shooting, saddle stable, water sports, dancing, bowling and billiards.

The Papers Committee has acquired an excellent list of technical and semi-technical papers. The complete schedule of these papers will be published in these columns in the near future.

The enthusiasm shown by those planning this convention and by the members who have learned of the proposed program gives promise of the most successful meeting that the Society of Motion Picture Engineers has ever enjoyed.

In order to take advantage of the pleasantest part of the spring season, the convention takes place May 19, 20, 21 and 22.

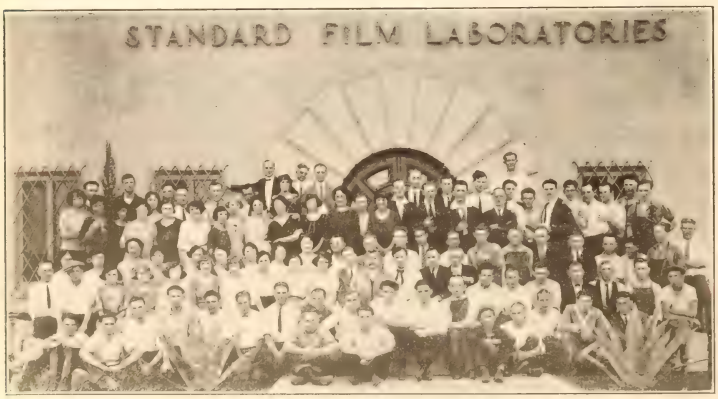
Crandall's New Tivoli Pays Special Attention to Patron's Comfort

WHILE much has been said of the size, beauty and comfort that will characterize Crandall's New Tivoli theatre, at Fourteenth Street and Park Road, N. W., Washington, D. C., little detailed information has been divulged with regard to one of the most important considerations in theatre construction.



It is of vital importance that a playhouse be properly heated in cold weather, adequately ventilated and properly cooled during the heated term. Customarily some one combination system is installed which can serve all three purposes after a fashion. Three distinctly separate provisions have been made for the heating, ventilating and cooling of the Tivoli.

In order to insure equitable temperatures in winter, the mushroom system of equal heat distribution has been installed and a tremendous amount of radiation provided for backstage. The ventilation of the largest theatre in Washington will be accomplished by a system of giant fans which, when set to exhaust, will be capable of changing the air in the house in a very short time. These gigantic fans will draw stale air through the roof and through the side walls in three directions. Rather than rely upon this forced ventilation for cooling purposes in hot weather, a system of conduits has been made to honeycomb the house in such manner that washed air of any degree of coolness desired can be driven to all parts of the auditorium, mezzanine, balcony and promenades. This three-fold provision for the comfort of its patrons in all seasons has added much to the final cost of a theatre that will rank with the finest on the continent and take second place to none.

Last week witnessed the completion of the magnificent mural paintings which lend an added touch of novelty and beauty to the entrance lobby on the Park Road side of the Tivoli and the surmounting promenade lounge. These oil paintings will create a sense of admiration in the consciousness of the amusement seeker the moment he enters the door.

Novelty Scenic Studios Add Experts to Staff

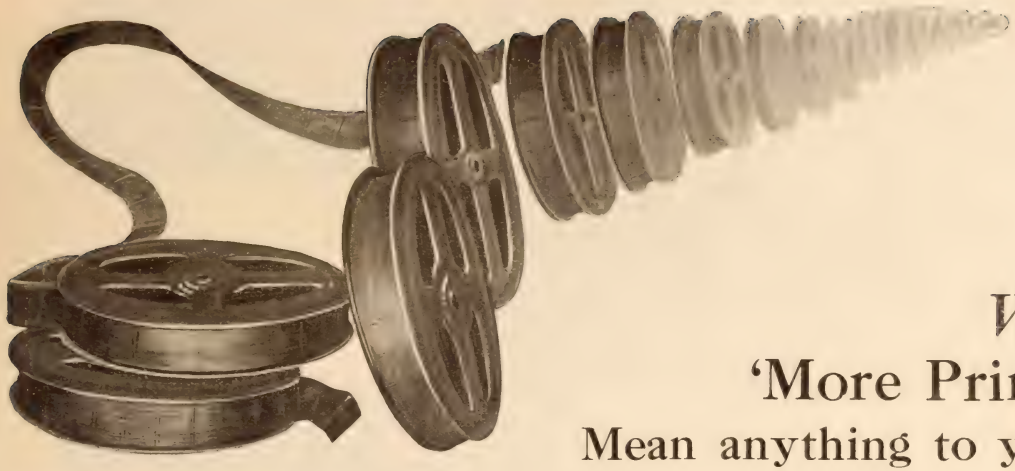
The Novelty Scenic studios have enlarged their quarters and made extensive preparations for a great increase in gross business for the coming year. They have appointed an art director of pre-eminent qualifications to take charge of the studio. Their drapery department has been augmented by an expert craftsman who understands draperies, balances and the making of stage curtains in minute detail. Other additions have been made to the various departments. Their new showrooms are equipped with facilities for demonstrating in a practical way, scenery manipulations and stage lighting.

Large hour grouping of the employees in the day shift at the Standard Film Laboratories in Hollywood, Cal., This laboratory also runs a night shift.

Building Code of Harrisburg May Be Changed

An important provision relating to motion picture machines in buildings other than theatres is contained in the new building code for the city of Harrisburg, Pa., which has passed first reading in City Council and is practically certain to be finally approved. The code has been prepared after exhaustive study and is intended thoroughly to modernize the building regulations of the city.

The section relating to motion picture machines says: "No motion picture machine shall be installed, maintained or operated in any building that does not abut directly upon a street nor in connection with any exhibition room contained in a building occupied as a hotel, apartment house, lodging house, factory or workshop, except where the exhibition room and machine are separated by unpierced fireproof walls and floors."



Council said this rule will compel the use of fireproof booths when motion pictures are exhibited in churches, hotels, dance halls and so forth.

Numerous advisors have urged upon City Council a provision of the code which would not permit having dance halls or assembly halls above the second floor of any building. This provision would have closed up several of the largest dance halls in the city, but Council decided to reject the suggestion and adhere to the recommendation made by the code expert.

A. Swazey Receives 1924 John Fritz Medal

The John Fritz medal for 1924 has been awarded to Ambrose Swazey, engineer and manufacturer, of Cleveland, Ohio, for the building of great telescopes, the founding of the Engineering Foundation and the invention and manufacture of fine machine tools, precision instruments and military and naval range finders.

Mr. Swazey has to his credit the establishment of the Engineering Foundation in America as the joint research instrument of the four great national societies of civil, mining and metallurgical, mechanical and electrical engineers. He is a past president and honorary member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and an honorary member of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Will 'More Prints' Mean anything to you?

WILL 'more prints' really mean anything to your theatre? They won't if yours is one of a great many.

Good prints or bad prints look alike when presented with poor projection.

To take full advantage of the more and better prints to be placed at your disposal, there is only one thing to do, install Incandescent Lamp Projection.

Then you get this:

More attractive pictures for your audience.

Saving of twenty-five to fifty per cent. on projection costs.

Better working conditions for the projectionists.

You, as the exhibitor, pay for prints good, bad, or indifferent, and it's up to you to get your money's worth out of them.

Incandescent Lamp Projection will do just that.

How The U. S. Navy Handles And Uses Motion Pictures

IN the old days in the navy when, as the saying goes, we had wooden ships and iron men, about all the jackie could look forward to in the line of pleasure aboard ship was a card game or "aceyducey" (backgammon) and an occasional "smoker," boxing bouts, or maybe a boat race. This was about all the entertainment the old time sailor had and, strange enough, he was quite content.

But in this day and time it is all quite different. If for any reason, our modern man-o-warsman doesn't get his nightly "movie," then something must be radically wrong with the ship, the navy and the whole world.

So in order to keep the enlisted personnel of the service contented and happy, there is maintained at the Brooklyn Navy Yard a film library, exchange and instruction school to adequately supply with film all ships and shore stations throughout the world wherever the navy or marine corps are serving.

It is of this exchange and instruction school that this article is intended.

The U. S. Navy Motion Picture Exchange is under the direction of the Bureau of Navigation, Navy Department, Washington, D. C. It is under the direct charge of Lieut. W. R. Ryan (S. C.) U. S. N., a capable and efficient officer who supervises the activities of the exchange and instruction school and the film service throughout the naval service.

The exchange procures from time to time from the various producing and film distributing organizations the best of their releases. The subjects selected are leased for a period of three years, at the end of which time all prints are returned to the concerns from whom procured. In order to insure the producers that the films will not get into wrong hands, the contracts entered into between the Navy Department and the producers and distribuors, provide that the film subjects supplied to the navy will be exhibited only on board naval vessels or within the confines of a naval station, and that there will be no civilians in the audience. (This, of course, is not intended to exclude casual guests.)

In order to protect both the producers and the navy, a record of the film, its location and where exhibited is at all times kept. This is accomplished by having each ship or station report the receipt and transfer of all motion picture programs.

The film library consists of about 2300 programs, averaging 8 reels per program and consists of practically every subject that is advertised for exhibition throughout the United States, and includes some foreign subjects. This, without a doubt, makes this exchange the largest in the world. To insure the life of the film, there is also maintained at the exchange a Macklin renovating machine. All film received is first put through this process before it is placed in circulation. In order to give the best possible film service to the fleets and stations, a sub-exchange is located in twelve different parts of the world where film may be exchanged and repaired. The instruction school is also located at the main exchange. It is there that the men who operate the machines are given the best instruction possible, considering the length of time allotted to them.

The course of instruction consists of a period of eight weeks of intensive training, divided mainly into two parts — practical and technical — and takes up the most important subjects in connection with motion picture projection such as electricity, optics, repair, care and handling of film; care, operation, assembly and disassembly of the various types of machines.

The school itself is probably the best equipped school of its type in the country, consisting of three Simplex machines and extra mechanism for disassembly and three Powers 6-A and 6-B, one Graphoscope Jr. and several portable (suitcase type) projectors; switch panels, wiring diagrams and other accessories used in connection with instruction.

The students for this school are selected from those best qualified in educational and mechanical ability, and after completion of the course of instruction, they are sent to the various shore stations and ships as required. Since the government uses Simplex and Powers projectors almost exclusively, practically all of the instruction, especially the practical part, is in connection with these two types of machines with the result that at the end of eight weeks, the students are fairly capable of handling a show with either type of machine.

The course of instruction is in charge of Chief Electrician-Mate A. Middleton, U. S. N., who has been in the naval service fourteen years of which a great deal of this time has been spent in motion picture projection and electricity.

The New Barton Twin Console Double Organ

A Musical Sensation!

Lincoln Square Theatre, Decatur, Ill.

The Barton Pitless Console Lifts occupy only 12 inches of vertical space. They rest on top of the orchestra pit floor and raise five feet. Now every theater can be equipped at a cost tremendously lower than for the pit type. This is exclusively a Barton feature.

A Box Office sensation, too! This is a new way of featuring music that has tremendous audience pulling power. This new Barton Two Console Double Orchestral Organ has gained instant favor. The theater shown above is only one of many we are similarly equipping.

This new Barton can be played by two players simultaneously, or by one player from either console. Each console is mounted on the new Barton Pitless Console Lift that raises it five feet to the audience's amazement and lowers it below the sight lines of first row of seats quickly and easily.

Remember that Barton Orchestral Organ has the richest tonal quality and is the most flexible, reliable and practical theater music equipment ever built. Now that this innovation is provided, this organ is more profitable than ever for any theater to own.

Will you be the first in your city to exploit the New Barton Two Console Double Organ? There is money in it. Write or wire for particulars.

Hollywood Laboratory Corporation Purchased by Thomas H. Ince.

THE Hollywood Laboratory Corporation with its entire equipment has been purchased by Thomas H. Ince and will be reassembled and operated in conjunction with the big laboratory on the Ince lot in Culver City, according to announcement made yesterday by H. D. Lyman, builder of the Hollywood Laboratory.

The Hollywood Laboratory was completed one year ago, its assembly including the most modern machinery and paraphernalia used in motion picture making.

The amalgamation of the two laboratory units gives to the Ince plant probably one of the most complete motion picture manufacturing laboratories. It is understood the deal, including reorganization of the Ince laboratory, involves approximately a quarter of a million dollars.

The Hollywood Laboratory was assembled and operated on a commercial basis to serve all producers of pictures in Southern California. Its holdings, it is claimed, included valuable patents.

During the one year of its operation, the Hollywood Laboratory has made titles for many of the outstanding independent productions.

One of the most important features of the Ince Culver City plant has been the printing laboratories which the veteran producer developed until they were known as one of the most complete laboratory units.

Commenting yesterday on the question as to whether other producers will still have the use of the photographic title processes for their feature productions, Ince said:

"Other producers are not to be excluded from the use of the remarkable and artistic titles and title backgrounds that have attracted universal attention during the last year as a result of my purchase of the Hollywood Laboratory Corporation."

One of the feature units of equipment in the Hollywood Laboratory was the patented title printer. This machinery in itself costing, it is claimed, a little more than $50,000, was specially constructed in Waltham, Mass., and installed in Hollywood one year ago. It is reported the only machinery of its kind and includes several printing patents and equipment for the use of secret processes in the making of transparency titles and art backgrounds.

Twin Pipe Wurlitzer Proves Big Card at Chicago

The large Wurlitzer twin pipe organ recently installed in the Balaban & Katz Chicago theatre, according to the management, which has made a close check of applause, letters, and other straws that indicate the public pulse, has proved to be tremendously popular.

The Chicago theatre commenced the installation of another console and additional resources for its already mammoth pipe organ, over a year ago. It required all that time for the artisans to complete the job, but the results achieved have proved more than satisfactory.

Jesse Crawford, famous solo organist, plays the first console, and his wife, who was formerly organist at the Balaban & Katz "Roosevelt theatre," plays the second console, with him, supplying the color-melody to her husband's dramatic tunes.

While the double console arrangement does not double the volume and power of the organ, it increases it materially because it gives the players considerable more "fingers and hands." The second console proved to be a big sensation with theatre goers, and though its cost was small compared with the cost of the original organ, Balaban & Katz believe they have captured a novelty in worth-while music that will prove to be of valuable institutional importance.

Appell Amusement Co. Building in York, Pa.

Plans and specifications for the Strand theatre, to be erected at 42-46 North George street, are being completed by the architect, E. C. Horn and Son, New York. Tenants of the properties which must be razed in order to make room for the proposed improvements have received proper notices to quit the several buildings.

The new theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,350. The theatre proper will be of one story construction, and will be reached from an entrance on George street, where Daniels store now stands, through a lobby a depth of eighty feet, and having a width of thirty feet. Another story will be built over the lobby and here the general office of the Appell interests will be located.

While the theatre proper is to be of only one story construction, Mr. Appell stated last night that it will be built with such reinforcements that at any time a balcony can be added. Brick, concrete and steel will be used in building the structure. The walls will be of brick, the floor of concrete and the roof will be composed of steel. The interior of the theatre and the lobby will be artistically decorated. It will be one of the most attractive theatres in the state of Pennsylvania when completed. The dimensions of the auditorium will be 105 feet by 110 feet. The front of the building on North George street will be built of terra cotta.

Optical Properties Concave Spherical Mirror

Lesson II — Part V

THE concave spherical mirror, as its name implies, is a section of a sphere having its inner (concave) surface polished to form the reflecting surface. Being of spherical form it naturally has a center of curvature and a focus located on the axis of the mirror midway between it and the center of curvature.

Like all mirrored reflectors each point on its surface reflects light in strict accordance with the Law of Regular Reflection. Due to its curvature, however, the reflection of light waves from its surface gives it distinctive properties.

Quite recently this type of mirror was applied to the projection of motion pictures by means of certain makes of so-called "reflecting ares". The parabolic mirror also is used for the same purpose and the results already secured with this form of equipment gives indication of its being more or less extensively used. The general design of the reflecting arc and its optical alignment will be discussed in detail later on. The action of the mirror, which takes the place of the condenser, in the case of the commonly used vertical arc, will now be described and will constitute a preliminary description of machine.

Concave Mirror

Like in the case of the convex mirror there are two principal groups of light rays by means of which it is possible to analyze the action of the concave mirror. These are:

1. All light rays traveling toward the mirror in a direction parallel to the axis will, after reflection pass thru the focal point of the mirror.

2. All light rays traveling toward the mirror in such a direction as to pass thru the center of curvature, will, after reflection, be reversed in direction and travel back over the same path.

The action of these two laws are illustrated in Fig. 17 where LPK represents a concave mirror having its center of curvature, C, and focal point, F, on the axis, CP. If a ray of light, OB traveling parallel to the axis, CP, strikes the mirror, it will be reflected in such a direction as to pass thru the focus, F.

On the other hand, a ray of light, CM, approaching the mirror from such a direction as to make it pass thru the center of curvature, C, will, after reflection, turn around and journey back over the same path. The diameter of the mirror, by the way, is represented by distance D, and should not be confused with the diameter of the circle from which the mirror is struck, equal to 2R.

The Caustic Curve

The statement just made that all rays of light parallel to the axis will be reflected back so as to pass thru the focus, is true only within certain limits. Thus in cases where diameter of the mirror is large, or where the section of sphere utilized forms a large part of the whole sphere the outside rays of those striking the edge of the mirror will be reflected in such a manner as to cross the axis between the focal point and the mirror. This action is quite similar to "spherical aberration in an uncorrected lens," and indeed, the means for correcting it is the same in each case. That is, an aspheric or parabolic form of curve is used in both cases.

The action of the mirror in causing these unequal reflections is shown in Fig. 18. It will be noted that the mirror, LK, is quite deep; that is, it forms a large percentage of the total sphere. Now the outside rays of light, which strike the edge of the mirror, will obviously not pass thru the focus, after reflection since, by the Law of Regular Reflection, the angle of reflection is equal to the angle of incidence. This would bring the reflected ray quite away from the focus. The distance, FE, between the true focus, F, and the point where the reflected ray crosses the axis, is a measure of the amount of error in the mirror and it is desirable ordinarily, to keep this error as small as possible.

It can easily be seen from Fig. 18, that the nearer the parallel rays are to the axis, the closer they will come to passing thru the true focal point. In other words, the rays nearest the axis suffer the lease aberration and hence have the smallest error.

Now all of the paralled rays, after reflection, will form a curve extending from the edge of the mirror to the focus F. This curve is shown by the dotted line in Fig. 18 and is known as the caustic. For parallel rays, the cusp, or point of the curve, will be at the focal point.

It is possible to see the caustic curve by partly filling a drinking glass with milk and holding it in the sunlight. The inner surface of the glass acts as a concave mirror and the path of the caustic can be seen on the surface of the milk. An incandescent lamp can be used to get the same results.

If all parallel rays are not reflected thru the focus of the mirror, then conversely, all rays which come from the focus will not be reflected parallel to the axis. To be sure, those rays coming from the focus and striking the central portion of the mirror will be reflected practically parallel since these rays have the least error. Those rays coming from the focus and striking the extreme edge of the mirror will be reflected in a manner shown by MP (Fig. 18) which shows the focal ray FP after reflection.

Light Projection

Concave mirrors can be used either as projectors or as image-forming devices. When used as projectors, or searchlights, they are subject to the "spherical aberration" just described. In the strict sense of the word, the concave mirror is essentially an image-forming device and it is only when the light source is placed at the focal point that an approximate parallel beam of light is obtained.

Where spherical mirrors are used as searchlights the diameter, D, of the mirror (Fig. 19) is made small compared with the radius. R. In this manner only those rays having small reflection errors are used and the resultant beam is more nearly parallel and hence better meets the requirements of a searchlight. Generally speaking, the diameter of the mirror should be smaller than the focal length.

Heretofore, we have considered only a point source of light which is non-existent. The use of large sources such as ares and incandescent lamps complicates the matter considerably.

Mangin Mirror

Metallic concave mirrors, when accurately made, have only the inherent error of spherical aberration before described. When made of glass, however, having a silver backing for the reflecting surface another error creeps in due to the unequal refraction of the incident and reflected rays as shown in Fig. 20-A.

Since such unequal refractions cause distortion of the beam some means must be taken to correct it. This is done by making the two sides of the glass of different curvature. This is called the Mangin Mirror after its inventor.

In the case of the glass spherical mirror shown in Fig. 20-A, R_1 and R_2 are the radii of curvature of two surfaces of the glass form and both are equal. The two centers of curvature are separated a distance, t, equal to the thickness of the glass and the focal point F is half the distance C_1M.

In the case of the Mangin Mirror, Fig. 20-B, there are two different radii of curvature, R_1 and R_2. The radius of the inner concave surface, R_1 is smaller than that of the outer, convex surface, R_2, which is silvered. Hence the center of the mirror is thin while the edges get thicker and thicker as the diameter of the mirror is increased. It is the thickness of the edges which really limits this form of mirror to small diameters since in large mirrors the edges are so thick as to make the mirror costly and awkward.

The focal point of such a mirror is half way between C_2 and M or half the outside radius of curvature (commonly called O. R. C.). The path of a light ray coming from the focal point of each lens is shown in Fig. 20.

The principle of correcting refractive errors by giving the two curved surfaces different radii has recently been extended to the parabolic and elliptic forms of mirrors whereas it was only applied to the spherical form. No commercial application of the former type has as yet been made.

Recommendation on Screen for Particular Theatre

For some strange reason, we are receiving a large number of requests for screen recommendations. Unfortunately, a number of these requests cannot be taken care of since no information concerning the theatre is contained in the letter. For instance, "I am a small exhibitor in Bird-in-Hand, Pa. and need a new screen. What kind shall I get?" Frankly, we don't know.

Occasionally, however, we get a letter like the following from E. J. Stuart, Best Theatre, Lakeville, Conn.: "I want to buy a new screen and would like your advice as to the best for my requirements. The throw is 67 feet, picture about 12 feet 6 inches by 9 feet 4 inches; distance from screen to front row of seats, 16 feet; distance from screen to last row of seats 83 feet; width of hall, 22 feet; height of hall 15 feet. I use an alternating current arc at about 35 amperes. At present have a home-made screen coated with Muresco. Thanking you for your kindness, I am—E. J. STUART."

It is a pleasure to receive a letter as concise and informative as that. Since all the theatre is about four times as long as it is wide and practically all of the seats lie within an angle of 30 degrees from a perpendicular made with screen the obvious thing to use is a highly reflecting type of screen.

Furthermore, such a type is favored because there is no balcony and the projection room, presumably, is practically on the perpendicular center line of screen. For this reason, the screen brightness over the entire seating area should not vary greatly.

Any high grade reflecting type of screen is recommended. A few of the most common makes being: Minusa cine; Gardiner gold fibre; superlite.

doffed his cap and straighted up and got Tearle's fist in his own instead of on his jaw—for it proved to be Pat O'Malley waiting for his director and cameraman to make a scene for "The Throwback," the Universal picture in which he is being starred.

Bert Roach, for years associated with Neely Edwards in the production of hobo comedies for Universal City, has a new working partner, Edwards having gone to another studio. Roach's new partner is Harold Austin.

Jack Daugherty and Eileen Sedgwick, co-starred in "The Fighting Ranger," Universal chapter play, are at Warner Hot Springs, on the edge of the Death Valley Desert, at work under direction of Jay Marchant. Sixty persons are included in the company.

"Wine," William McHarg's satire on society and bold expose of bootlegging, will be produced by Universal.

"Mitzi" in Work.

Filming of "Mitzi" latest starring vehicle for Mary Philbin, has been begun at Universal City, under the direction of Irving Cummings. The production will be made on an elaborate scale.

Billy Sullivan, directed by Edward Laemmle in Universal's production of the racing stories, has completed "Shooting Star," fourth of the series.

"Butterfly," starring Laura La Plante under direction of Clarence L. Brown; "The Missourian," starring Reginald Denny under the direction of James Horne, and "We Are French," to be directed by Rupert Julian, but not cast, are in the last stages of preparation at Universal City, and production on all will be begun this month.

Rolfe Sedan, character comedian, has just finished his third successive role in a Laura La Plante production at Universal City, that of an artist in "Relativity," which Robert Hill is directing.

Mrs. Frederick Paist, president of the National Y. W. C. A. and sister of Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University, was a recent visitor to Universal City. Her purpose was the study of working conditions of actresses in connection with Y. W. C. A. efforts in behalf of the young women who are making their start in motion picture activities.

Filming of "Souls That Pass in the Night" has begun at Universal City. This is the screen version of William J. Flynn's story of life in the higher levels of the underworld of crime, and will be directed by Chet Franklin. Lucille Rickson, Johnny Harron Charles Clay and Erie Mayne will have the leading parts. Miss Rickson being starred.

Sets are being constructed for "Butterfly," Universal-Jewel production of Kathleen Norris' novel. Laura La Plante is to be starred and directed by Clarence L. Brown.

Craft Has Recovered

William H. Craft, director of William Desmond, Universal Western chapterplay star, has recovered from an operation for appendicitis sufficiently to visit the lot although he will not be able to resume work for two weeks.

Hoot Gibson has Ruth Dwyer as leading woman in his latest Universal-Gibson Special Attraction, "Broadway or Bust." Edward Sedgwick is the director.

"Boss of Bar Twenty," Universal-two-reel Western, directed by Ernst Laemmle, is nearing completion.

William Duncan, director and star of "The Free Trader," Universal chapterplay, will remain with his company for three weeks more in McCall, Idaho, where snow scenes are being filmed.

Filming of "The Throwback" Universal production of Carl Laemmle prize contest story, will be finished this week.

Reginald Denny, Universal star, will appear in "The Husbands of Edith" latest novel by George Barr McCutcheon. Denny's next picture will be "The Missourin."

Starts "Enemy Sex"

Production work has started on "The Enemy Sex," James Cruze' latest screen play adapted by Walter Woods and Harvey Thew from a novel by Owen Johnson. Betty Compson is featured in this Paramount Picture with Percy Marmont, Kathlyn Williams, Huntly Gordon and De Witt Jennings in the other principal roles. Shelton Lewis, Dot Farley, Pauline Bush, Frank Bonner, Pauline French, Ed Faust, Kate Toncray, Will H. Turner, Ed Brady, John Roche, William Austin, J. Morris Foster and Walter Wills complete the cast.

Frank Urson and Paul Iribe are announced as associate directors at the Lasky studio. They will direct Beatrice Joy who will have the principal featured role in "Roles" by Elizabeth Alexander, adapted for the screen by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin. Frank Urson, recently returned as Mr. DeMille's assistant.

The William deMille unit is completing the final details for the filming of "The Inside Story," an original mystery comedy by Clara Beranger. May McAvoy will play the leading feminine role. Ethel Wales is also a member of the cast.

With Agnes Ayres as featured player, work began on the Joseph Henabery production, "The Guilty One," adapted by Anthony Coldeway, from the stage drama by Michael Morton and Peter Traill. Edward Burns plays the masculine lead opposite Miss Ayres and the cast includes Crauford Kent, Clarence Burton, Cyril Ring, Stanley Taylor and Dorothy Walber.

George Melford is completing his preparatory work on "Tiger Love." Antonio Moreno and Estelle Taylor will be co-featured in this adaptation of a popular Spanish opera.

"Triumph" is now in the cutting room. This is Cecil B. DeMille's first Paramount picture since "The Ten Commandments."

Three stories have been tentatively selected by Paramount and are now under consideration as possible starring vehicles for William Farnum, the latest addition to the ranks of Paramount stars. From this trio of screen plays will be selected the story which Wallace Worsley will direct and which will mark Mr. Farnum's return to the screen after an absence of a year.

Thomas Meighan has completed "The Confidence Man" at the Long Island studio of Famous Players.

Hal Roach's current Our Gang comedy for Pathe distribution is "Sein' Things"

What the Experts Said—

Don Allen in N. Y. Eve. World: "Makes the recent Dempsey - Firpo match look like a chess match in slow motion."

R. G. Welsh in N. Y. Eve. Telegram: "Most illuminating film ever made of the gay life of New York."

Stephen Rathburn in N. Y. Eve. Sun: "Brought roars of laughter from the audience."

What the Experts Said—

F. M. Hall in N. Y. Times: "Will have difficulty in keeping the crowds away from the box-office."

Andrew Freeman in Eve. Mail: "At last there is something new on the screen."

Martin B. Dickstein in Bklyn. Eagle: "Should do more for little Old New York than the climate has ever done for Los Angeles."

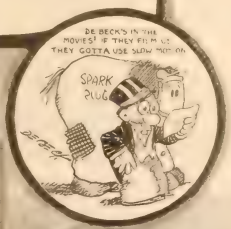
"It's the life!"

Money Not Only Talks—It Shouts

for those live wire exhibitors who are showing "The Great White Way." From coast to coast they are reaping a golden harvest. AND NO WONDER!



"The Great White Way" has everything. Rich comedy, tense drama, thrills upon thrills — and the greatest cast ever assembled.

Such world famous writers and cartoonists as Brisbane, De Beck, McManus, Hirshfield, McCay, "Bugs" Baer, Runyon and Irvin Cobb appear for the first time on the screen in "The Great White Way." Tie up to your local papers which run one or more of these features.

There are other celebrated figures in the film, including Tex Rickard, Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., Joseph Urban, H. C. Witwer, Ned Wayburn and Earle Sande. Everybody will want to see them, too.

YOUR PATRONS WILL GO WILD OVER Fred Thomson

AND HIS WONDERFUL HORSE SILVER KING

With one mighty flash across the moving picture sky, FRED THOMSON has jumped into popular favor unlike any western star that ever appeared in pictures. Hardly released, his first picture, "THE MASK OF LOPEZ," has won him thousands of exhibitor friends and millions of movie fans.

Thomson's marvelous horse SILVER KING is already as well loved as the famous police dog that has been appearing in pictures in recent months. This rare combination of world's greatest athlete and stunt man with his remarkable horse, means capacity business for theatres with every Thomson picture.

His present release "NORTH OF NEVADA" following the 1st picture "THE MASK OF LOPEZ" is a corker for action. Read what exhibitors already are saying of Thomson and his horse. And what we have in store for you in the coming pictures will make you tickled to death that you grabbed these new westerns.

Presented by MONOGRAM Pictures, Andrew J. Callaghan, Pres.—they are Harry J. Brown productions, directed by Albert Rogell. Watch for the COMING pictures. "DAN McGREW" Will Shoot Silver Into Your Box Office

A money picture if there ever was one!

Because "THE SHOOTING OF DAN McGREW" are the four most famous words in the English language. They put Alaska on the map!

And the cast. Wow!

It's the story of a man who was crooked as lightning, but straight as an arrow with a gun; of his light-o'-love, the Lady that's known as Lou; and of her husband, a musician who played Dan McGrew's "swan song" with a six-shooter!

Variety. Gives 'em everything. Great South Sea atmosphere in the first part—then fast Broadway night life, and a peach of a cabaret fire, before the action shoots from the gold diggers under the White Lights to the gold diggers under the Arctic Lights.

"Michael cannot live through the operation," said the surgeon. "I can save him with my radio vibrations," shouted Grishka. A tremulous wait... The light in the tube flickered..and died. Then.. once again it flooded the room and..."Sasha!" called the patient.
"Helen, how could you?" Michael slowly, unsteadily, entered the room, to confront his wife with his friend – the two who had betrayed his love, his ideals, his faith.

Are you wondering why we persist in using an unusual title like chechahco?

Couldn't we have found something simpler?

Certainly we could. We might have named the picture "The Gold Rush" or "The Birth of Alaska," or what-not, but these would have classified it as an ordinary movie. And that's just what this picture isn't.

chechahcos

WARNER BROS.
Classics of the Screen

NATUR

"A large audience attended the first showing of 'Beau Brummel' at the Strand yesterday and found that it was one of the most enjoyable pictures of the season. It also found that John Barrymore had by his wholly delightful performance as the famous Beau become the screen's most capable actor. Don't miss 'Beau Brummel' if you want to keep up with the best in movies."

—N. Y. Evening Sun.

"I want to commend Warner Brothers for the worthy ambition that induced them to bring a fine play like 'Beau Brummel' to the screen. That they have given their best to the making of this classic there can be no doubt and that John Barrymore is an inspired choice, no one will dispute. 'Beau Brummel' is a credit to the house of Warner."

—Louella O. Parsons, N. Y. American.

"Time may eventually wipe out the memory of John Barrymore as the young Captain George Brummel, but we intend to have an awfully good time thinking about it before that happens. It doesn't seem fair to the other young fellows on the screen like Rudolph Valentino, Ramon Navarro and Dick Barthelmess, who are doing the best they can and trying to get along, that John Barrymore should be allowed to compete. Peter Ibbetson is the only other love story we know which is so beautiful, and we enjoyed 'Beau Brummel' much more. It is beautifully produced and is played by a cast that is perfect. Long live Warner Brothers."

—Harriette Underhill, N. Y. Herald.

"One of those artistic celluloid efforts that come along none too frequently. John Barrymore delivers a performance that is a delight to the eye. . . . A stirring picture, not merely for the 'upper ten,' but also for O. Henry's four million and several other millions."

—F. W. M. Hall, N. Y. Times

"Barrymore has given to the screen a picture worthy to stand at the side of the classic Richard Mansfield gave to the stage. . . . He has made a picture which must survive as one of the splendid achievements of silent drama. An unusually large audience came for the first presentation at 12:35. By 2 o'clock there was not a seat left."

—Thos. B. Hanley, N. Y. Telegraph.

"The most fascinating motion picture play of the year, a veritable screen comedy of manners, and of morals, too. Mr. Barrymore wins new laurels as the audacious Beau Brummel."

—Rubt. G. Welsh, N. Y. Eve. Telegram.

"Devastating is the proper word for Mr. Barrymore's 'Beau Brummel.' Think, if you can, of any actor who could do this role better justice. I cannot. It is a polished and flawless performance. You'll be quite right to put your money on Beau Brummel."

WILDERNESS TALES

By Robert C. Bruce

"A Credit to the Picture Industry"

"Absolutely new"—"extraordinary"—"convincing"—"different"—"masterpieces"—only a few of the complimentary terms that have been used by unbiased critics of the trade and general press to describe these forceful one-reel Outdoor Dramas. The Exhibitors Trade Review says of them:

> "Each of them stands out as an etching of distinction and character. The very simplicity of these pictures makes for power. They convince!
> "The 'Wilderness Tales' are a credit to the picture industry."

OUTDOOR DRAMAS

Stories of real life. Gripping. Full of suspense. And with backgrounds of scenic beauty such as the name Bruce has always stood for. What an asset to balance the program with a comedy or a comedy-drama as the feature!

A New Distribution Plan

An Announcement by

William A. Johnston

One Thousand Dollars

IT has been generally agreed for some years that distribution is uneconomic, and that both producers and exhibitors are made to suffer, often heavily, for its faults. Each pays for its excessive cost. Each suffers from its inadequate operation. All in all the industry itself lacks the stability it should have because its huge wholesaling operation is admittedly not built upon sound and sensible business principles.

We want better pictures and we want pictures to earn more money. The present policy of distribution generally fails in some degree or other to function properly to either end.

It is evident at last that changes will come about. They must come. Whether they will result in emergency measures or whether there will be a brand new basic plan that will end perforce in a general adoption remains to be seen. But there will be a reordering.

To every independent producer today, from the greatest to the lowliest, and including those with ample financial resources, plans, experience, publicity, power, distribution is a dilemma. Some are dubious as to which way to turn or whether to continue at all. Even producers running their own distribution machinery are hard put to meet its expense and exactions. On the other hand, several thousand exhibitors, comprising the solid backbone of the theatre branch, demand, if they are to continue in business, a safer, saner plan of buying pictures.

It is not wise to lay all the industry's ills to distribution; just the same, distribution is the big central power of this business and it is the job of distribution to keep open the flow of production resources and on the other hand to merchandise pictures nearer, much nearer to their full earning capacity.

We have all done a lot of talking. And there is a good deal of meat in the many suggestions that have been made. But what we want today is not talk, not theories. We want a practical, complete, workable plan, a working plan, a plan if possible so sound that men of resources and responsibility will say: "Yes, I'll distribute that way." And to which exhibitors will say: "That's the way I want to book pictures."

We believe that such a plan will be forthcoming if attention upon this great and imminent problem is centered. And to this end we propose an award of $1,000 for the best plan submitted. The contest is opened herewith, subject to the following regulations:

Rules for Motion Picture News Distribution Plan Competition

1. The competition is open to everybody except officers and employees of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

2. The competition is open at once and will close on Monday, June 2nd, at six o'clock P. M. All competing plans must be in the NEWS office by that date. Proof of sending will not be considered proof of receipt.

3. The award of $1,000 will be made by a Committee of Judges to be selected by twenty-five exhibitors. The names of the exhibitors who will make the selection of the judges will be printed in an early issue. They will then vote for five judges who will make the award. The names of the judges will be published as soon as they are chosen.

4. The winning plan will be selected strictly on the merits of the suggestions offered. In case there are two or more plans which, in the opinion of the judges, are of equal merit and therefore are tied, the full amount of the award will be paid to each contestant so tied.

For A Distribution Plan

5. It is not necessary to be a subscriber to MOTION PICTURE NEWS to enter the competition.

6. The plans should be typewritten, if possible, one side of the sheet only being used. Plans written in longhand, however, will receive equal consideration.

7. Within a reasonable time after the close of the competition, the award will be made and the name of the winner published in MOTION PICTURE NEWS. The check will be forwarded to the winner as soon as the judges have reached their decision.

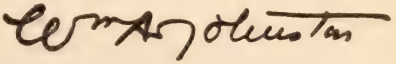
8. Honorable mention will be given to plans which the judges consider meritorious, but which are not deemed sufficiently good to deserve the award.

9. The winning plan will be published in full. Other meritorious plans will be published, in whole or in part, but no publication will be given any plan until all have been submitted to the judges and the award made.

10. Manuscripts intended for this competition should be addressed to " The Distribution Plan Competition," MOTION PICTURE NEWS, 729 7th Ave., New York City, and bear the name and address of the author on the first page of the manuscript.

11. As rapidly as manuscripts are received, they will be copied, numbered and sent to the judges. Each plan will bear a number, the name of the author being removed from the copy sent to the judges. In this way, the judges will make their decision solely on the merits of the plan submitted. This is done for the sake of absolute impartiality. The originals of all the plans will be filed in the NEWS office, and will be numbered to correspond with the copies sent to the judges.

12. Authors should retain copies of their plans. Manuscripts will not be returned unless specific request is made therefore, and stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.



Suggestions

By a distribution plan, we mean a plan covering the complete business operation between the producer and the exhibitor. Physical distribution is, of course, but one factor in such a plan. A complete plan should begin with the contract between the producer and distributor and end with the booking contract or " played and paid " settlement between distributor and exhibitor. It will of course involve selling effort, facilities and policy, advertising, and physical handling, contracts and terms. It will aim at efficiency and economy; it will indicate how the motion picture trade dollar is to be divided between producer and distributor and exhibitor.

These, however, are suggestions merely. And in addition we ask that the expositions of the plan be made as brief as possible, that argumentative writing be avoided and the plans confined as closely as possible to their exact outline and specifications.

Those competing are urged to send their contributions as rapidly as possible, in order to facilitate the handling of the material and the forwarding of the copies of the plans to the judges.

Get busy now—and let us have your constructive plan for curing the uneconomic, wasteful distribution ills of the motion picture industry.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

IT is evident that pictures are forthcoming, the advertising of which, to the trade and to the public, will savor of recent and prominent successes in which very heavy sums of money have been risked in production and advertising. It is a regrettable thing, particularly regrettable to a trade paper, which aims to be fair to its industry and fair also to its individuals. When a picture advertises what it actually contains, we cannot object; we can however ask that it do not attempt openly and intentionally to palm itself off to the exhibitor as a substitute for some very prominent success; and in this connection our sympathy is altogether with the maker of a picture in which a vast sum of money has been hazarded — to the hopeful winning of the maker, of course, but also to the elevation and everlasting good of this business and all in it.

We doubt very much if any exhibitor at all will be deluded by this sort of advertising. He knows well enough that the big pictures with recent premieres in New York are not going to be released to picture theatres for a year or more. If he books one of these masquerading pictures he does so on its real merit and with his eyes open. It may have merit. If he then, however, in his own advertising, attempts to delude the public by palming the picture off as another, he hurts the motion picture, his own house, and he furthermore will certainly find himself in a battle with the advertising clubs of the world and their active campaign against fradulent advertising.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON'S editorial, The Church and The Picture, which appeared in the March 15th issue of the NEWS, has inspired an appreciation from Carl Laemmle. The president of Universal is deeply concerned over the widening gap between the church and the picture producers.

"From time immemorial," writes Mr. Laemmle from Universal City, "the church has been one of the great molders of not only the people, but the public opinion. While today the hold of the church may not be quite so all-consuming as it was one hundred to two hundred years ago, its influence is still one of the great ruling forces in public thought."

The president of Universal states that the grievances brought forward by the church against certain types of pictures could readily be adjusted. In his contact with the clergy he finds that the churches are ready to endorse any picture that is truly worth-while, that is, clean, wholesome, and one that tells a story that means something.

Mr. Laemmle, with modest appreciation for his picture, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," writes that dignataries of every rank have endorsed it — and backs up his claim with the names of a large group of clergy of every creed.

Such endorsement speaks volumes for the picture — and Mr. Laemmle cites a Sunday in Chicago as proof of it — when the members of four hundred churches were addressed from the pulpit on the merits of the production.

By mentioning his own picture, Mr. Laemmle uses it as an illustration to drive home the point — that it is not necessary, as has been the case in the past few years, for the church to attack publicly the picture industry or for the producers to become involved in lobbying and other such matters in order to counteract the antagonism of the church.

THE fine quality of the art prints for the premiere of "The Thief of Bagdad" in New York and the key cities—and "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" has merited wonderful praise in each locality. The Rothacker-Aller Laboratories who made these art prints are naturally highly elated.

And here is our testimonial. The laboratory work on "The Thief of Bagdad" (we have not seen "Dorothy Vernon") is the best we have ever seen. The Rothacker-Aller people may well feel proud of their justly famous slogan; Look Better—Wear Longer!

OUR recent editorial, "The Church and the Picture," is taken exception to by Mr. Morgan A. Walsh of San Francisco on the ground that "the motion picture never was, is not now, nor ever will be in opposition to the teachings and beliefs of any church. The motion picture is a world-wide form of entertainment and education and is not the sponsor nor the promoter of any particular religion or belief. The motion picture industry should always be non-partisan, non-sectarian and 100% independent."

Mr. Walsh is 100% correct and the industry at large, we believe, and certainly this editorial office stands back of this statement to a man. We do disagree, however, with another paragraph in Mr. Walsh's letter, namely: "You assume the attitude that the leaders of the church are on one side of the fence and the leaders in the motion picture are on the other side. I contend that no such condition exists." Evidently Mr. Walsh has not attended, along with us, the legislative hearings on various State censorship Bills, nor, perhaps has he visited towns and cities during some heated controversies on the subject of Sunday closing of theatres. On certain occasions something in the way of a fence was greatly needed to protect each contending faction.

The very serious fact is that a good deal of a breach has always existed between the picture industry and the church and the sole purpose of our editorial was to close it. We need in this world more compromise and fewer decisions; and there is an outstanding and crying need of an understanding, and, we venture to say, a sympathy, between the picture and the church.

DAVID HORSLEY, one of the pioneer producers, has taken to the lecture platform. He will tell the world about Hollywood this coming season. Since he opened the first picture studio there it is certain that he will be accepted by the public as an authority on the subject of Hollywood and its people. Mr. Horsley will use slides and motion picture—the slides presenting Hollwoody "as was and" "as is;" its finest buildings, most beautiful homes, schools, churches, the Bowl and the Pilgrimage play. The motion pictures will be short scenes from the earliest and most recent productions; screen personalities in private life and many of the famous authors, artists, etc., who live in and call Hollywood their home.

It seems to us that Mr. Horsley is performing a real service in removing from the minds of the public any prejudice against Hollywood, based upon misinformation gathered from sensational newspapers and magazines.

His itinerary will take in practically all the large cities of the United States and may later extend to foreign shores. Showing Hollywood with pictures and slides should act as a lasting benefit to this much-maligned community. Such graphic evidence will do more to mold public opinion in favor of the studio city than all the written testimony of its champions. We wish Mr. Horsley all kinds of success in his new venture.

ORDERS for scripts have come in so fast for Edward J. Montagne, scenarist, that he has been compelled to open new and larger offices in the Levinson Building, Hollywood. This busy scenario writer will also install a complete filing cabinet to take care of his "copy." A few of his stories the carbons of which have been filed away include 'Painted People," "Rupert of Hentzau," "The Storm Daughter," "The Common Law," "One Week of Love," and "The Last of the Duanes."

J. D. WILLIAMS has come out strongly against the faulty and cumbersome distribution system. It is his opinion that producers are at present making fewer suitable subjects for metropolitan first-run theatres that will be necessary for the coming season—and he blames inaquitable distribution costs for the shortage of high grade subjects.

Condensing a few of his verbal bombshells we quote J. D. as follows:

"If the average exhibitor does not get enough worth-while pictures to assure good average business, he cannot pay for and sustain himself upon the occasional big picture when it comes along."

"Distribution is the greatest problem we have to contend with today." An accurate observation, J. D.

"The average distributor will tell you that pictures cost 30% to distribute, yet I know from personal experience that some subjects cost 15 and some 90% between studio and theatre."

"Distributors today are averse to handling a production which has cost over $500,000 if they estimate it will not gross over $700,000. At the same time they welcome negatives costing $150,000 which will gross $300,000."

Mr. Williams reminds us of the time when all pictures sold for 10c. per foot.. Then a few farsighted men got out of the rut by making big features, which earned large profits, and we moved along until we bogged into the present 30% rut.

He concludes his statement by declaring that "until distributors can make money by selling a $400,000 picture for $500,000, we will not get enough big pictures. Prominent stars, well known books and plays, lower the distributor's advertising costs, reduce sales resistance and make money for the exhibitor, but there is no incentive for the independent producer to put them in pictures so long as he has to pay an unfair percentage of the overhead for distribution as does the cheaper negative with none of these expensive elements."

THE invitations are out for the inaugural performance of Crandall's million dollar Tivoli Theatre, Fourteenth Street and Park Road, Northwest, Washington, D. C.—which will occur Saturday evening the fifth of April. The theatre is operated by Crandall's Tivoli Theatre Company—of which Harry M. Crandall is president.

Mr. Crandall is a live showman—and he has placed screen entertainment on a high plane in the Capital of these United States. His showmanship is evident again in the ceremonies which will attend the opening of this community theatre. There will be a street carnival and a colorful parade Friday evening in celebration of the event. Owners of several hundred delivery wagons, auto trucks, floats and pleasure cars have requested places in line—and all vehicles must be decorated, or they will be ruled out of the procession.

The Crandall organization has tied up with the merchants to keep their stores illuminated and decorated inside and out, particularly on the last few evenings of the week and arrangements have been made with them for extensive advertisements, showing the activities of the Columbia Heights neighborhood in which the Tivoli is located. Saturday evening—with the official opening of the theatre—will be given over to a community carnival, with fire-works, street concerts, street dancing and general merrymaking.

NEW YORK'S film colony—Hollywoodians in our midst—who now comprise Edwin Carewe, Finis Fox, Wallace Beery, Gloria Swanson, Bebe Daniels, Helene Chadwick, Lotta Woods, Bert Lytell, Alice Terry, Edward Dillon, Dagmar Godowsky, Richard Dix, Douglas Fairbanks, Rex Ingram, Mary Pickford, Ernest Torrence, Raoul Walsh and Allan Dwan have been augmented by the arrival of Anna Q. Nilsson, Clarence Badger, Mary Astor, Elmer Harris and Bill Hart. Barbara La Marr and Galdys Walton will join the group the early part of April.

AFTER a good deal has been published and a lot said—altogether too much, as usual, the owners of United Artists hold their annual meeting and with cheery words all around renew and extend contracts for the product of Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and D. W. Griffith for a period of three years. So that's settled. We compliment the press representative for the terseness of the item issued. His statement of little more than a hundred words puts at rest several million words of slushy gossip, an apt illustration of the difference between news and bunk.

The long and short of it is simply this: The United Artists people looked about over the field for better distribution arrangements and after considering for some time the various pros and cons of the situation returned to their distributing machine as the most satisfactory.

All of which is a good deal of a compliment to Hiram Abrams. That is certain. It is something of an effort to run a distributing organization on a handful of pictures a year. People say, in fact, that it can't be done; but it is done. And, apparently, it is done more satisfactorily to the producers involved than if many pictures were handled. One answer, probably, is good pictures and concentration on each so that the picture lives long and works to its utmost all the time. There's considerable in that.

"GIRL SHY"—Harold Lloyd's newest comedy—earned its ovation which was accorded it during the trade showing last Friday at Loew's New York Roof. This comedian, carrying a staff that is ever at work concocting new inventions and ingenuities, has produced a picture, which for sheer thrill and excitement surpasses the memorable "Safety Last"—which is exceptionally rich in spontaneous humor—which represents keen satire and clean fun at an unusually high development. There is a succession of high speed thrills and comedy gags in the latter reels which dwarf anything heretofore accomplished along this line. It presents action plus.

The remarkable point about Lloyd's pictures is his ability to maintain such a fast pace. No matter how high one regards a previous effort—which may represent the last word in comedy achievement—he always has something in reserve to offer for its successor. We think the keynote of his success lies in his application to the two prime requisites of high class comedy—Invention and Spontaneity. S. R. O. signs will be useful here—those not having them should place orders for them—NOW.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS appeared in the role of a magazine writer at a luncheon tendered him last week at the Aldine Club, New York, by "Boys' Life," the magazine published by The Boy Scouts of America. Doug, as a contributing editor, was introduced by toastmaster Daniel Carter Beard as "that interesting philosopher" and made a rattling good speech in which he said he was a believer of motion in life as well as in pictures. Prominent editors present were: Robert Bridge, Frank Crane, Merle Crowell, John H. Finley, Charles Dana Gibson, Norman Hapgood, Melville E. Stone, Arthur T. Vance and others.

W. C FIELD has a gag line in the musical comedy, "Poppy" of which he is the comedian, playing the part of an old-time medicine faker, he says: "It's the old army game." So he has jumped into pictures to play a soldier of Washington's army in "Janice Meredith."

VICTOR SCHERTINZGER started something when he dropped the megaphone to dash off melodies. Writing songs is becoming contagious among the coast film folks. Here is Lew Cody who recently had two songs published, "Lady of the Orchids," and "Wait for Me." And Marshall Neilan has taken time off to write "Don't Forget," which is to be introduced to vaudeville by Nora Bayes.

THAT the public, which sways the exhibitor, does not approve of so-called "suggestive" pictures is evident by the opinion gathered by J. S. Woody, general manager of Associated Exhibitors, when he had the returns compiled from a questionnaire issued previous to starting production on Murry W. Garsson's "Plaster Saints," since renamed "The Spitfire."

"Don't overdo the bedroom scenes in pictures; the public doesn't want muck," declares C. C. Klutts of the Glades Theatre at Moore Haven, Florida.

Exhibitor H. Hare of The Russell Theatre, Detroit says: "The better element of our patrons is tiring of suggestive titles and pictures. If the producers and exhibitors don't clean house soon we will go the way of the corner saloon."

From the Dixie Theatre, Bastroop, Tex., comes the suggestion: "Cut out the sex filth in pictures or producers will learn something like the saloons did when the people took things into their own hands."

N. C. Rice of the Opera House, Algona, Ia., urges: "Confine your efforts in pictures to clean, constructive material; it wins." And Harry Muller, of the Crystal Theatre, Anderson, Ind., gives it as his opinion that "the suggestive type of picture is not the one for the family audience, composed in the main of working people, whose patronage keeps up nearly all picture houses."

R. R. Quinlin of the Ideal Theatre, Chateaugay, N. Y., finds popular interest is waning in the picturization of situations "where human nature is given too severe a test."

Eller Metzger of the Strand Theatre, Creston, Ia., says: "Church stuff presents a delicate situation if the director loses sight of the psychology of the masses."

A. R. Scott, of the Strand Theatre, Sedalia, Mo., also warns against "too much of the pillar of the church robbing the poor." And E. E. Gailey of the Crystal Theatre, Wayne, Neb., suggests that it pays to "be careful how the church is treated in pictures."

The Anderson Amusement Company, Grand Theatre, Dell Rapids, S. D., says: "No picture whose title contains the word 'Saints' or refers to the Deity draws."

Film Laboratories Are Consolidated

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., Takes Over Business of Four Concerns

THE consolidation of the important Film Laboratories of the East is now an accomplished fact. Announcement has been made of the formation of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., with a capitalization of $6,000,000. Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., have taken over all the assets and the businesses of Craftsmen Film Laboratories, Erbograph Company, Republic Laboratories and Commercial Traders Cinema Corporation.

L. James San will head the new organization as President and General Manager. Mr. San will immediately take up the task of coordinating the work of the various companies.

Herbert J. Yates, Vice President, will take charge of sales and advertising. Associated with him as special representatives will be Benjamin Goetz and J. Brophy. W. H. Evarts and A. Canter will continue in the Consolidated sales force.

Harry M. Goetz and Leonard Abrahams, Vice President will have charge of the management of all the plants taken over, and associated with them will be the complete technical staffs formerly with the various companies.

Benjamin Goetz has been elected Treasurer, and Hubert E. Witmer Secretary. Ludwig G. B. Erb, Morris San, Edmund C. Dearstyne, Joseph San will together with the officers named in the foregoing make up the Board of Directors. The general offices of the Consolidated will be established at the earliest possible date at 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

The Title Department for all plants will be in charge of Louis Meyers.

Arrangements are already under way for the establishment of a large laboratory in Los Angeles, for the purpose of first-hand cooperation with Coast producers and distributors. It is also planned to establish a large laboratory in England.

The organization of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., marks the retirement from active business of Ludwig G. B. Erb. Mr. Erb, however has consented to continue on the board of directors as chief technical advisor.

Jannings Signs to Appear in Series of Ufa Films

Emil Jannings, internationally famous through his screen portrayals in German productions, has announced his intention to remain in Germany, and despite flattering proposals said to have been made for his services by Continental and American producers, has signed a new contract with the Ufa-Deela concern in Berlin. Under the terms of the new contract Jannings is to appear in a series of productions, the first of which will be directed by Ludwig Murnau.

The Ufa organization now has in production at the Tempelhof studios in Berlin a picture titled "The Comedy of Hearts." The male lead is being played by Nigel Barrie, who has played in numerous American films. In the supporting cast are Lil Dagover, Colette Brettel and Lydia Potechina.

Pettijohn, Connolly Guests at N. O. Luncheon

C. C. Pettijohn and Jack Connolly, of the Hays organization, were guests at a luncheon given by the New Orleans Film Board of Trade recently. Jimmie Bryant acted as toastmaster.

In addition to the honor guests Mack Sparks, Dallas branch manager of Southern States; W. E. Callaway, district manager of Associated First National, and Ned E. Depinet, district manager of Universal, were guests of the Board.

M. P. P. D. A. Extends Contract With Hays for Three Years—Until March, 1928

ANNOUNCEMENT was made on March 31 that Will H. Hays had signed a new contract with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc. At the conclusion of the annual meeting of the organization, held that day, the Board of Directors authorized the following statement:

"The three-year contract entered into with Mr. Will H. Hays on March 5, 1922, and which still has a year to run, has today been renewed and extended for a further period of three years or until March, 1928."

The Association, which originally consisted of nine of the large producing and distributing companies now has a membership of twenty-one. The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation was elected to membership at the meeting on March 31.

The membership of the M. P. P. D. A. is now as follows: Associated First National Pictures, Inc.; Bray Productions, Inc.; Christie Film Company; Distinctive Pictures Corp.; Eastman Kodak Company; Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.; Famous Players-Lasky Corp.; Fox Film Corp.; Goldwyn Pictures Corp.; D. W. Griffith, Inc.; W. W. Hodkinson Corp.; Buster Keaton Productions, Inc.; Kenma Corporation; Metro Pictures Corp.; Principal Pictures Corp.; Hal E. Roach Studios; Talmadge Producing Corp; Joseph M. Schenck Productions, Inc.; Universal Pictures Corp.; Vitagraph, Inc.; Warner Brothers.

Protection of the interests of American producers abroad was one of the important topics discussed at the annual meeting. Plans were taken up looking to the extension of the activity of the Hays organization into any country where the interests of its members need looking after. These would include keeping watch on censorship and other regulations.

Screen Advertisers Will Elect in Detroit

THE Screen Advertisers Association, which is the motion picture department of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, will hold its election of officers at Hotel Statler in Detroit, April 10th and 11th. This election is usually held at the Associated Clubs annual convention, but since the big convention will be held in England this year and many screen members may not be able to attend, the election is being held in this country where all may have a vote.

Douglas D. Rothacker, president of the Screen Advertisers Association, invites all interested in the screen medium to attend the Detroit gathering, even though they are not Association members.

"Since the annual convention at Atlantic City last Spring membership in the Screen Advertisers Association has increased fifty percent—and we are still working," said Mr. Rothacker. "At the Detroit meeting we will perfect plans for our Association's participation in the big convention in England. It is our ambition to do some things overseas that will cause the Britishers to remember the motion picture department of the Associated Clubs."

Municipal Admission Tax Menace in Canada

Prince Albert, Sask., has passed the municipal admission tax on theatre tickets which is an assessment on theatre patrons in addition to the Provincial taxation on theatre tielevy coming into effect on April 1. The by-law is similar to the municipal act which has been adopted in Regina, Saskatoon, Weyburn, Moose Jaw and Battleford, the schedule being as follows: There is no tax on tickets up to 10c; one cent tax on 10 to 19c; two cents on 20 to 29c; three cents on 30 to 49c; five cents on 50 to 99c; 10 cents on $1. to $1.50; 15 cents up to $2. and 10 per cent over that amount.

Loew Profits Show Increase Over 1922-1923 Period

A statement recently issued and covering the period from September 1, 1923 to March 9, 1924, on Loew's Inc., and subsidary companies shows an increase of $42,326 over the corresponding period of last year. The total profit shown for the period is $1,598,-880.35.

The income from theatres and rentals shown by the statement totals $10,326,964. with the cost of the operation of the Metro distributing organization showing at $1,870,-688.14.

Film Exports Reported for January

Department of Commerce officials report that during January, 1924. England imported from the United States 2,453,200 feet of raw stock film valued at $57,912 and 287,364 feet of negative with a $47,345 valuation while Canada imported from here 1,647,425 feet of positive film valued at $102,136 and Australia received from America 1,977,238 feet with $78,484 value.

January's grand total film exports from the United States totalled $783,047.

Repeal Battle To Occur Next Week

Davison Bill To Be Amended

THE fate of motion picture censorship repeal in New York state will be known next week. All the indications are that the Legislature will adjourn next Thursday, April 10. The Republicans of the Assembly will hold a conference next Tuesday at which the whole censorship repeal situation will come up for action.

The bill, introduced in the Assembly by F. Trubee Davison, of New York, which would provide drastic strengthening of the penal code with reference to motion pictures, will probably be redrafted or amended to meet some of the objections that have been raised against it by exhibitors.

Samuel I. Berman, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State; Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, and Courtland Smith and Jack Connolly, of the Hays organization, arrived at the State Capitol Wednesday afternoon, and lost no time in an effort to sense the attitude of the Assemblymen on the censorship bills.

Davison Bill Too Drastic

It was generally conceded that the Davison bill is far too drastic, or as Mr. O'Reilly put it, "a Volstead Act" in the motion picture industry. The Hackenburg bill, Democratic repeal measure, introduced in the Assembly, will not be reported out of Rules Committee.

The proposed amendments to the Davison bill, which, it appears, may be made, include changes in Sections 1795 and 1795-b of the measure. The word "knowingly" would be inserted in the first and the amended section would then read as follows: "No person shall produce or make or knowingly exhibit or offer, sell, lease or rent to another for exhibition any motion picture film or poster, banner or other similar advertising matter in connection therewith, which is obscene, indecent, immoral, inhuman, sacrilegious, or of such character that its exhibition would tend to corrupt morals or to incite to crime."

In Section 1795-b the provision for revocation of theatre license would be eliminated, and a change made in the provisions of the bill under which the offending theatre could be declared a common nuisance and closed up.

Before a theatre could be declared a common nuisance, three separate court actions, involving trial by jury, would be necessary. The bill, as it now stands, would use the injunction as the means for closing up the theatre.

Davison States Position

Assemblyman Davison, in an interview with representatives of MOTION PICTURE NEWS at the Capitol on Thursday afternoon, made clear his position on the whole censorship matter.

He pointed out that the principle of legalized censorship was repugnant to him, but that he was unwilling to repeal statutory censorship unless teeth were put in the penal law.

He indicated that he had drafted his bill with this attitude in mind, and that he was not unwilling to modify its drastic provisions, if the general purpose of the bill were left intact.

"Under no circumstances, however," he commented, "will I vote for the repeal of censorship unless safeguards are provided in the penal code."

The New York State Senate, Democratic in its majority, will probably pass the Walker repealer within the next few days. In the ordinary course of events it would then come to the Assembly for a vote.

If those seeking to repeal censorship can muster the necessary votes in the Assembly, then censorship will be a thing of the past in New York State on and after July 1. It is a foregone conclusion that Governor Smith will sign the repeal bill if it ever reaches him.

The sole fly in the ointment, however, is whether or not enough Republicans will break away from party lines and vote in favor of the repeal. It is a well-known fact that there is more than one Republican who is in favor of repealing the obnoxious law as it now stands. Speaker Machold has let it be known that he will not exercise the party whip when it comes to vote on censorship repeal.

The action to be taken in the Senate, however, may be conditioned on the disposition made of the Davison bill, in its amended form, in the Assembly, so far as the time element is concerned. In other words, the Senate action may come first, or it may not. The best information is that the Senate will pass the Walker repealer, in any case.

Despite rumors to the contrary, it now seems certain that the Legislature will adjourn on April 10. Majority Leader James J. Walker was ill on Monday and Tuesday of this week, but was able to take charge of things in his old-time manner by Wednesday. Every effort is being bent towards bringing an adjournment during the coming week. This means that the censorship fight will be staged in the Assembly next week.

Other Bills Still in Committee

The other motion picture bills are still in committee, or making little or no progress. These bills, however, are but of little importance as compared to the censorship measures.

It is evident that the fate of censorship repeal will be decided in the final hours of session. But little time remains for putting an amended bill through the legislative machinery necessary to get it on the floor for a vote. Of course, there is always a crush of bills at the end of the session, but reports around the Capitol were to the effect that the subject of censorship repeal might be brought to the attention of the Legislature again through an emergency message from the Governor.

The final disposition of the censorship situation seems to rest pretty largely with the action to be taken by the Republican conference next Tuesday.

Exhibitor Restrained From Censoring Picture

MARTIN PRINTZ, manager of the Circle theatre, Cleveland, was ordered by Common Pleas Judge Ruhl last Thursday, to restore one hundred feet of film of the motion picture, "The Marriage Circle," which he had cut. Printz had eliminated the last hundred feet of the film on the ground that it was too racy for his patrons.

Ruhl's order restrained Printz from exhibiting the picture unless he shows it with only those parts cut out that were prohibited by the Ohio Board of Censors. It was a restraining order, effective until April 15th.

The Film Classics Company, Cleveland distributors of "The Marriage Circle" brought suit against Printz on the ground that their contract called for his showing the picture as approved by the censor board.

Leonard S. Levy, company attorney pointed out that his client is bound by the same contract with the Warner Brothers Company of New York, producers of the film, and would be liable for damages if it allowed a distributor to make further cuts.

Universal Signs Dempsey for Ten Pictures

CARL LAEMMLE definitely signed Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion boxer, to star in ten feature pictures to be written by Gerald Beaumont, the well known sports writer, and directed by Jesse Robbins.

Beaumont was the author of the "Information Kid" stories which ran in the Red Book, and which Universal is now making as a series of two-reelers, entitled "Fast Steppers," with Billy Sullivan in the featured role.

Jesse Robbins recently made "The Law Forbids" a Universal Jewel in which Baby Peggy had a strong part.

The Dempsey pictures also are expected to be well seasoned with comedy, and Universal predicts that the Dempsey pictures, far from relying upon Jack's popularity alone, will be produced with maximum care in preparation and in direction.

Jersey Nominates Woodhull for Nat'l President

AT regular meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, held on March 28, resolutions were adopted endorsing R. F. Woodhull, of Dover, N. J., and head of the state organization, for the National Presidency of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Mr. Woodhull has been president of the Jersey organization for three years, and is prominent in the councils of the national organization, of which he is a director. He was mentioned prominently for the national presidency at the Chicago convention last year.

Mr. Woodhull is the first candidate who has been put forward by definite action of a state organization since Sydney S. Cohen announced he would not be a candidate for re-election at the Boston convention in May.

Says Big Films Are Handicapped

Blaming Distribution Evils for Condition, J. D. Williams Predicts Shortage of High Grade Features

DECLARING that the prevailing "uneconomic" system of distribution will bring about an acute shortage of big feature productions this coming Fall, with consequent harm to the business conditions affecting producers, distributors and exhibitors, J. D. Williams, President of Ritz-Carlton Pictures, Inc., and recognized in the industry as an authority on picture distributon, reiterates a warning he sounded a short time ago that the method of selling pictures must be improved to avoid the serious economic situation which now threatens.

Since his retirement as general manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., of which he was the organizer and active head until a little more than a year ago, Mr. Williams has continued his studies of the distribution problem; its immediate effects upon picture production and exhibition and the trend of affairs under the selling system which is now in effect. Recently he returned to New York from the west coast and the view he expressed at that time that the lack of incentive for producers to continue in making big pictures was directly traceable to "inequalities" of distribution, has not been changed by any conditions he found existing in New York or developing since.

"The greatest problem we have to cope with today is distribution," Mr. Williams contends. And he continues: "To realize that distribution has always been a vexing problem, we need only recall the time when all pictures sold for 10 cents per foot. Then a few farsighted men got out of the rut by making big features, which earned large profits, and we moved along until we bogged into the present 30 per cent. rut.

"Right now we should be producing more $400,000 or $500,000 pictures, but experienced independent producers are disinclined to do so because of the fear that they will not earn sufficient to cover distribution costs, provided the gross fails to approximate a million.

"It is uneconomic that 4,000 contracts on one picture grossing $300,000 should not entail approximately the same distribution costs as 4,000 contracts on another grossing $600,000. The only difference is the interest on the money involved during the time it is invested. The percentage of selling cost on the $600,000 negative should be less if there be a difference in rate at all. Yet distributors today are averse to handling a production which has cost $500,000 if they estimate it will not gross over $700,000.

"Until distributors can make money by selling a $400,000 picture for $500,000, we will not get enough big pictures. It is my contention that there should be more money in properly made pictures of the first class than those of a lower standard, because both will play approximately the same number of theatres, both require the same number of calls by salesmen with consequent equality in selling costs. The physical distribution cost of six to eight reels of film is the same whether they earn the larger or smaller gross. This comparison applies, of course, to productions which have been made without waste by competent producers.

"The claim of the average distributor is that pictures cost 30 per cent. to distribute, yet I know from personal experience that some subjects cost 15 and some 90 per cent. between studio and theatre. The gulf between what we know as 'independent' producers will continue to widen until the distributor can, with fairness, correctly assess the varying costs on his own production.

"Prominent stars, well known books and plays lower the distributor's advertising costs, reduce sales resistance, and make money for the exhibitor, but there is no incentive for the independent producer to put them in pictures so long as he has to pay an unfair percentage of the overhead for distribution as does the cheaper negative with none of these expensive elements.

"In expressing my conviction that next October there would be a shortage of big features suitable for metropolitan first-run theatres to a certain star he replied that a shortage would make a more profitable market for his pictures. This view of the situation is entirely erroneous, because if the average exhibitor does not get enough worth while pictures to assure good average business, he cannot pay for and sustain himself upon the occasional big picture when it does come along."

Senate Finance Committee O. K.'s 50c Tax Repeal

THE Senate Finance Committee has reported favorably the administrative features of the Tax Reduction Revenue Measure. The seating tax repeal was agreed to along with the repeal on admission under fifty cents. The ten per cent remains on all admissions above the half dollar mark.. To charge fifty-five cents, including tax, the exhibitor would have to pay four cents on a fifty one cent admission, and might be compelled to make his established price plus tax, fifty-sven cents

It is not generally known that Augustus Thomas when here several weeks ago, sought to have the House and Senate Committees reduce all theatre admission taxes to a flat rate of 6 per cent, without any repeal. The battle comes on the bill in the Senate chamber, then goes to conference.

Toronto Musicians' Strike Quickly Settled

Musicians in many of the Toronto theatres staged a walkout on March 24 but were back in the pit in quick order. The members quit work at 20 local houses, the majority of which were those operated by the Famous Players Canadian Corp. The Toronto Musicians Protective Association took action, it is said, because of an alleged delay in the signing of contracts by the managers.

The strike was settled within a few hours when a conference was held between N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players theatres, and a committee of the musicians accompanied by Joseph Weatherbourne.

Iowa Theatre Owners to Convene April 15

J. C. Collins of Parry, Iowa and E. P. Smith, temporary officers of Iowa Theatre Owners Association announce that their organization already has a good membership with several hundred dollars in the treasury and that the spring meeting will be held Tuesday, April 15th, at the Chamber of Commerce Library, Hotel Savery, in Des Moines.

At the session of the state legislature which draws to a close in a week, no mention was made of film censorship or of theatre tax. In the general session a year ago Governor Kendall recommended a seat tax but it did not come up in this session.

The Iowa Theatre Owners Association kept a close watch on all legislation introduced in order to be on hand to look after the interests of Iowa exhibitors.

W. E. Wilkinson Assistant to C. C. Pettijohn

After serving as secretary to the Detroit Film Board of Trade for two years, W. E. Wilkinson has been succeeded by David Palfreyman and Mr. Wilkinson becomes the assistant to Charles C. Pettijohn, General Counsel of the Film Board of Trades with headquarters in New York city.

Mr. Pettijohn's letter of notification to the various affiliated Film Boards throughout the country, says:

"Mr. Wilkinson, in addition to being a very efficient Film Board of Trade secretary, has the qualifications of being a splendid young lawyer, a graduate of the University of Alabama, both academic and law departments, and was very strongly recommended by both the Detroit Film Board of Trade and the organized Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan."

Fire Following Explosion Brings Small Award

A jury in the federal court at Kansas City Tuesday returned a verdict for $309.33 in favor of the Overland Amusement Company for damages done by fire following an explosion at the Dorie theatre, Kansas City, December 7, 1922.

The Amusement company had sued the Connecticut Fire Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., and the Insurance Society of Canton, Ohio, for $13,463.65. The decision was based on evidence established that most of the damage was caused by the explosion, against which the theatre was not insured. A leak in a gas main is believed to have caused the explosion.

Maryland House Tables Bill for Sunday Opening

Sunday pictures are still under the ban in Baltimore as the result of the tabling of a bill introduced by delegate Antony Rimarco, which would have legalized Baltimore pictures after 2 P. M. on Sundays.

The House of Delegates Committee on Judiciary called the bill and within sixty seconds it was moved and carried that it be laid on the table. Petitions pro and con regarding the bill contained names of thousands of signers and a hot newspaper fight was waged on the measure.

Analysis of "Prints" Questionnaire

Interesting Facts are Disclosed

THE questionnaires which MOTION PICTURE NEWS mailed a selected list of small town exhibitors relative to the question of poor prints and which has been given a partial survey in a recent issue are now in completed form.

A total of 90 exhibitors responded, answering a majority of the questions asked. This number is considerably more than was expected in view of the fact that the questionnaire requested information that might be considered of private nature and demonstrates conclusively how vital the matter of good prints is with even the exhibitors in the smallest towns.

The questions asked do not for the most part permit of a compilation of a table but do, however, present an opportunity to give a definite analysis.

This is best accomplished by considering the questions individually.

Question No. 1:—Would you be willing to pay more for your pictures if you could get better prints?

Replies:—24 Yes
60 No
2 Did not answer
4 Indefinite

The fact that this question did not receive a majority of affirmative replies occasions no surprise. Fully fifty per cent. of the exhibitors answering "no" to this question explained that they were paying all that they could afford for pictures at present and that much as they would like better prints they would be financially unable to obtain them at advanced prices.

Majority for New Prints

Another group emphatically stated that they were entitled to pictures in good condition at the price they were paying at present.

Others explained that they were insisting on productions from two to three months after release date and that the service they received was in the main satisfactory.

Question No. 2:—Suppose you were offered two grades of prints, one new and the other commercial, the former, say at $5.00 more than the latter, which would you select?

Replies:—48 New 34 Old
2 Didn't answer
6 Indefinite

It might naturally be supposed that the replies to this question would be about the same as to question No. 1. That this is not a fact is explained, so far as a compilation of the questionnaires is concerned, because a considerable number of exhibitors directly contradicted themselves, by saying they would not pay more for prints no matter whether new or old, and then in the second question, saying that they would.

Whether or not the question was misinterpreted we cannot say. At any rate, question No. 2 has a substantial majority for new prints.

Question No. 3:—Has the condition of prints on an average improved within the last year or two?

Replies:—64 Yes
2 Indefinite

This question contains information of unquestioned value to all branches of the industry. It indicates among other things that there is a decided tendency toward improvement in the service being rendered the small towns and probably also can be construed to mean that the tendency to issue a greater number of prints, which has been a fact in the past year or so, is making a material difference with even the smallest houses. It might also argue that the condition of small town machines is improving, that exchange inspection is better, or that small town operators are learning more of their trade.

Question No. 4:—Do you find the condition of prints on good pictures is apt to be worse than on a poor feature?

Replies:—60 Yes
26 No
4 Indefinite

Prints and Age of Releases

The conclusions to be drawn from the replies on this question are perhaps obvious, and it is only by careful inspection of the individual questionnaires that anything of value, not known before the result of the questionnaire, was published is to be deducted. Such an inspection discloses the fact that in almost every case where the question was answered "no," the exhibitor making the report was using releases not more than 60 days old. This was known by inspecting a list of ten features given as a supplementary item of information.

With the exhibitors of this last mentioned class eliminated, an almost clear vote is found for the "yes" column.

That this condition is penalizing the good picture and minimizing its chances of getting over 100 per cent. in the small houses, is apparent. It brings new proof that the better productions should have a greater number of prints. Further evidence in this connection will be found in the analysis of the replies to question number 7.

Question No. 5:—(A) Does any particular distributing company excel in the matter of good prints? (B) Does any particular fail in this connection?

Replies:—72 Stated preference
10 professed having no preference
2 Were indefinite
2 Didn't answer

The answers to this question will be separated into releasing companies, and the facts laid before the proper officials with the idea that those who are reported to be furnishing pictures on which the prints are in bad shape, will see the necessity of improving their service. An analysis of the replies for this article is impracticable. No national distributing corporation escaped censure, however.

Question No. 6:—How long after release date do you think a print on a popular picture remains in good condition?

Replies:— 2 One month
10 Two months
8 Three months
6 Four months
2 Five months
12 Six months
8 One year
26 Didn't answer
16 Indefinite

Comment on the replies to this question seems unnecessary except that the most optimistic report was one year, and to call attention to the fact that many pictures are being booked two and three years old.

Question No. 7:—Do you sometimes pass up purchasing a production because you fear that you will not be able to secure a print in good enough condition to put on a satisfactory show?

Replies:—62 Yes
18 No
8 Didn't answer
2 Indefinite

This is one of the most important questions of the ten, especially to the producers of good pictures, since it may be implied that if any exhibitor wants to buy an old release it is because the production is more than ordinary in quality.

Obviously poor prints, or old prints, which is the same thing, are keeping the good productions out of circulation and getting the mediocre pictures bookings. As was intimated in the comment on question No. 4, it stresses the advisability of giving the popular productions more prints than an ordinary picture.

Question No. 8:—Do you find your exchanges holding back play dates for some unexplained reason, and do you think it is because they do not have prints enough to serve all their customers at the time each theatre would like to play the picture?

Replies:—58 Yes
24 No
8 Didn't answer

Washington Exchange Men Hear T. N. T. Radio

SPEAKING to the representative gathering of Washington film exchange managers assembled to hear the radio from Hotel Astor direct to Harvey's, Washington, Saturday, T-N-T Night, March 29th, John J. Payette, assistant general manager of Crandall Theatres, stressed the new spirit of exhibitor-exchange co-operation. The old army game of buck passing, trivial complaints, poor prints, mediocre film stories, and the other pet peeves of the industry were included in his address.

The radio numbers were received about 9 o'clock. Walter Price, Goldwyn manager and chairman of the F-I-L-M board of Washington T-N-T night committee, acted as Toastmaster.

Walter Pacey of Pacey's Garden, was present as representative of the Baltimore and Maryland exhibitors, and spoke of the necessity for fellowship between the Washington exchanges.

F. P.—L. Presents Defense Testimony

Hearings on Federal Trade Commission Charges Are Continued in Atlanta

DEFENSE testimony by Famous-Players-Lasky was continued in Atlanta this week at the hearings on the Federal Trade Commission charges against the corporation and others.

W. T. Murray, who said he was general manager of the Exhibitors Theatre Corp., testified that he had been employed by Arthur Lucas and Charles Kessnich to form a booking combine for the purpose of fighting Southern Enterprises. The plan, he went on, involved booking Paramount Pictures one hundred per cent. for the theatres in the combine. If Paramount refused to sell a picture to any member of the combination, the whole combine planned to boycott F. P.-L., he explained.

John Crovo, manager of the Lyric, Atlanta, and former manager of the Rialto, Greenville, S. C., testified that in 1919, when he was manager of the house in Greenville, the Garing theatre was burned. He denied that when the Garing, operated by Martin May and Joel, burned he went to Oscar Hodges, owner of the property, and bid against Joel and May for the lease. This procedure has been laid to Crovo in previous testimony.

W. R. Lynch, brother of S. A. Lynch, who preceded Crovo on the stand, denied that while engaged by Southern Enterprises in Dallas he had used unethical methods in acquiring additional theatres. He said that he never went to a town to look at a theatre unless someone in the town had requested him to do so.

Mrs. W. M. Kimbrough, an exhibitor at Greensboro, Ga., where she operates the Greenland, testified that Famous Players exchange never forces he to buy any pictures she does not desire. George R. Allison, Southern manager for Fox, testified that exhibitors who patronize his exchange desire to buy films in blocks. He stated he sells pictures in blocks and finds no difficulty in disposing of them.

When cross-examined by Chief Counsel Fuller for the Government he said he didn't remember admitting to a government investigator in 1920 that the acquisition of theatres by Southern Enterprises had substantially reduced his film earnings. On redirect examination, he denied having made such an admission.

Further testimony, designed to show that the Atlanta market was free and open, was introduced. R. A. Davis, manager of the exchange handling Preferred pictures, and J. J. Barker, Jr., of Metro, testified they sold pictures under a block booking system similar to that used by Famous Players.

R. B. Wilbanks, booker for the Atlanta Paramount exchange, took the stand to contradict testimony given last Summer by E. F. Boyd, an exhibitor of Adel, Georgia, who claimed that F. P.-L. attempted to force him to use Paramount pictures.

Decision of Arbitrator Favors Paramount

When the Joint Arbitration Board of the F. I. L. M. Club and Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York City cast a tie vote and created a deadlock in attempting to settle a case brought by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation against Small, Strassberg Circuits, Inc., Chief Justice Schmuck of the New York City Court was selected as final arbitrator.

The Judge has just decided in favor of Paramount and by it Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will recover four thousand, three hundred and eighty-five dollars ($4,385) for breach of contract by Small, Strassberg Circuit, Inc., which operates the Kismet, Sumner and State theatres, Brooklyn.

It is said that the decision is of great importance in that it decides that the provision in the Standard Uniform Contract which provides that an application for contract is automatically revoked if not approved by distributor within seven days after it is signed by the exhibitor, may be extended by exhibitor orally or by conduct showing that he intends that his application shall be kept alive beyond this seven day period.

Chicago Trade Board Names Dinner Committee

The Chicago Film Board of Trade has appointed a committee to co-operate with the committee named by the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, to make the "get-together" dinner at the latter's convention on the night of April 23, a big success.

The Film Board's committee includes I. Maynard Schwartz, Edward Silverman, Joe Friedman and Harry Lorsh, and the Exhibitors' committee is composed of J. C. Miller of Woodstock, Ben Berve, of Rochelle, Glenn Reynolds, of De Kalb, and L. Siegel, L. Zahler, Ben Cooney and Abe Cohen, of Chicago.

Mary Pickford Wants to Develop Screen Talent

DEVELOPING talent for the screen is the work to which Mary Pickford will devote herself after she finishes her work as an actress, the star told her hearers at a dinner tendered "Mary and Doug" by the Society of Arts and Sciences at the Biltmore, New York, last Sunday night.

In telling her fellow diners about her ambition Mary said that she looked forward to the work as an opportunity for her to do her "greatest work." She earnestly hopes the ambition may be realized even if it has to be accomplished under endowment by the Government, with should be interested since the screen players are really "ambassadors" through the world-wide circulation of motion pictures.

Douglas Fairbanks also made an address and among the other speakers were Rupert Hughes, Arnold Daly, Sophie Irene Loeb, Beatrice Fairfax, Wilton Lackaye, and Saul Rogers.

Quad City Exhibitors Not to Join M. P. T. O. A.

MOTION picture theatre owners of Davenport, Rock Island, Moline and East Moline, members of the Quad City Exhibitors Association, an organization not affiliated with any other association of theatre owners, have decided not to affiliate with the M. P. T. O. of A. whose annual convention is scheduled to be held at Boston, Massachusetts, on May 27th to 29th. Twenty-five of the twenty-seven theatres in the four cities mentioned, are members of the Quad City Association.

Analysis of Questionnaires

Comment on this question needs to begin with the information that the questionnaires went out to towns of under 5,000 inhabitants and also that analysis of the replies disclosed the fact that those who said "no" were the exhibitors who are playing most of their pictures a month or two after release date.

It seems apparent from the interest shown in the question and demonstrated by explanatory notes appended in many cases, that small town exhibitors do have trouble getting playing dates before the picture becomes old, both as to time after release and in point of condition.

It was from this class of exhibitors that most of the affirmative replies on question No. 2 were received. A deduction therefore may be made that more prints would permit of a greater revenue and a quicker turnover for the distributor and also would please the customer to a greater extent.

Question No. 9:—(A) Do you think that poor prints are detrimental to the attendance at your theatre? (B) Do your patrons complain about "rain," unsteady projection and pull-aparts?

Replies:—84 Yes
2 No
2 Didn't answer
2 Indefinite

This question was undoubtedly unnecessary since it is recognized as the greatest drawback to small town exhibition and the source of much of the dissatisfaction from patrons everywhere. That the replies were almost unanimous does, however, prove that the exhibitors are alive to the fact and anxious to improve matters.

Question No. 10:—Do you try to improve the condition of the film before running it by careful inspection?

Replies:—62 Yes
16 No
2 Didn't answer
10 Indefinite

This question will be of interest to distributors, especially since it may be used, by the aid of the law of averages, to estimate the percentage of small towns exhibitors who try not only to treat the pictures they run as they should be treated, but also endeavor to improve the condition of the film.

It may be added that of those who reported that they did not inspect film, most of them explained that they were running only "good stuff" and that they had found it unnecessary.

The ten exhibitors who were marked "Indefinite" were largely some who qualified by saying that they did make inspections whenever they ran a picture that was several months old or which from its appearance at the beginning of the reels, looked as if it was not in first class shape.

A. M. P. A. Dinner-Dance Big Success

Industry Attends in Force

THE Naked Truth Dinner, Dance and Revel, staged by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, March 29, at the Hotel Astor, New York, was a real event — by all odds the biggest affair in the organization's history, and one of the outstanding parties of filmdom.

The names of those present read like the Blue Book of the industry. "Everybody" was there. But those who gathered in the grand ballroom made up a mere fraction of the crowd which participated in the occasion. The room was jammed. Outside, however, was the great, invisible radio host, who listened in on the festivities. So the thing was nation-wide in scope.

Thirty-one film clubs, scattered throughout the country, heard the speeches — and they were speeches, too — got an earful of the applause that periodically rocked the hall, and, for all we know, joined in the dancing when Mr. Whiteman waved his baton, which was about from midnight to dawn. The Wampas in Hollywood were among the thousands of radioites who joined in.

Of course, the radio crowd missed a few things which the more fortunate present-in-the-flesh guests thoroughly enjoyed. The A. M. P. A.'s "Newsance Reel," for example; and the excellent sketch, labeled "Passionate Italians," with a cast composed of three stars — themselves — in person: Bebe Daniels, Richard Dix and Ernest Torrence.

Clever Satire

This phase of the entertainment gave a chance for some real acting, as well as an element of burlesque and clever satire on censorship. First, a scene from "Romeo and Juliet" was given as Shakespeare wrote it. Then followed the picture producer's conception of what it ought to be on the screen, what happened when the press agent exploited it, and finally what was left when the censor got through with it. Morrie Ryskind wrote the sketch. From grapefruit to moka, the food, like everything else appertaining to the affair, was a hit, and after the diners had had their way with the viands, Victor M. Shapiro, President of the A. M. P. A., pounded for order. Presently he got it. In a clever speech, the President introduced "Roxy" Rothafel as radio announcer and toastmaster, and the microphones began to do their duty.

At the speakers' table were: Courtland Smith, Rupert Hughes, Dr. A. H. Giannini, Arthur Brisbane, Mae Murray, Mr. Shapiro, Will H. Hays, D. W. Griffith, Mr. Rothafel and A. M. Botsford.

Mr. Brisbane made one of his thoughtful and pointed speeches, in which he reminded his hearers of the power of the motion picture as a force for education and public service. In the history of the transmission of thought the printing press came first; then followed, as the next great step, the motion picture, and now radio, which, alone, he declared, was the one thing that went beyond the motion picture.

The A. M. P. A. was represented in the speechmaking—carefully regulated from above the table by triple traffic signals reminding the speakers that five minutes were enough—by A. M. Botsford, of Famous Players-Lasky and vice-president of the organization. It was one of the cleverest addresses ever heard at a film banquet, done in a style that might make Will Rogers green with envy.

In solemn tones Mr. Botsford told how, in preparing his speech, he had consulted the Encyclopedia Brittanica only to find that the term "press agent" was missing from that massive work. He did discover some other important facts, however, one of which related to ancient coins. He enlightened the crowd on that point, and stressed the value of such knowledge in film-dealings between exhibitors and exchangemen. There was more elaborate fooling of the same sort, and Mr. Botsford had his reward in the genuine laughter that swept the crowd at intervals.

Notable Speakers

A tribute was paid to the stability of the industry by Dr. A. H. Giannini, prominent banker. He had been dealing with it for fifteen years, he declared. In all that time he had lost not so much as "a five cent piece" in his transactions with the motion picture business. The Doctor had no use for the "excess bonus" men, and condemned them in unsparing terms.

Miss Murray, as the representative of the screen artists, made a charming little speech, whose theme was "if we do not please, we are not heard," and then Mr. Griffith was introduced.

In an eloquent talk, he described the "motion picture as the hope of the world." It alone spoke the universal language, he went on, and while radio was a great, a mysterious invention, Mr. Griffith called for something no one had yet devised: "Something that would bring rest and peace to the human heart."

"Why don't they invent that?" he asked.

The motion picture, he declared, could do away with the greatest of all absurdities—War.

Rupert Hughes fully sustained his reputation for incisive, humorous speeches. One of the points he registered was the press agents' handling of reviews of his pictures, wherein fragments of sentences were put together in such fashion as to make a picture a world-beater when the review had said just the opposite. It was all in the spirit of fun.

Mr. Hays made a speech that brought great applause. He reaffirmed the industry's sincerity, full acceptance of its responsibility to the public, and steadfast purpose.

When he brought out the fact that the night of the dinner marked the tenth anniversary of the premiere of "The Birth of a Nation," there was a demonstration, and Mr. Griffith smiled his acknowledgements to the speaker and the crowd.

Many Celebrities There

Just before these "Bedtime Stories" began, Jerome Beatty climbed to the topmost balcony, and with the aid of spotlight and megaphone, picked out the celebrities among the diners. They included Gloria Swanson, Miriam Cooper, Raoul Walsh, Mabel and Hugo Ballin, Dagmar Godowsky, Edwin Carewe, Senator James J. Walker, Houdini, William A. Brady, Allan Dwan, the past presidents of the A. M. P. A., and others.

Besides the features already mentioned, there was a "crowning" in the approved Sennett fashion, of the King and the Queen of the Movies. These turned out to be a couple of members of the A. M. P. A., suitably disguised.

The dancing began, after the other ceremonies were over. It lasted until dawn.

A special Naked Truth edition of the Diassociated Trade Press, composed of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Exhibitors Trade Review, Moving Picture World, Film Daily, Exhibitors Herald, and The Morning Telegraph was issued. This was described as the "Extraordinary Editorial Excursion of Expert Expressions Emanating Entirely from the Six Wise Men of the East": Tom Hanley, Martin J. Quigley, Robert E. Welsh, George Blaisdell, William A. Johnston, and Danny.

The reception committee was made up of the past presidents of the A. M. P. A.: Arthur James, Paul Gulick, P. A. Parsons, Paul Lazarus, C. L. Yearsley and John C. Flinn.

The Naked Truth Committee, which deserves the lion's share of the credit, was: Victor M. Shapiro, chairman ex-officio; A. M. Botsford, chairman; S. Charles Einfeld, Jerome Beatty, Glendon Allvine, William Mulligan, Arthur M. Brilant, Harry E. Lewis, C. L. Yearsley, J. Irving Greene, John C. Flinn, Edward D. McNamee, Russell Holman, Vincent Trotta and Morton Blumenstock.

Exhibitors File Briefs in K. C. Music Tax Case

THE second step in the Kansas City music tax case, involving six exhibitors and four music companies, was taken Monday when Samuel A. Handy, attorney for the exhibitors, filled his brief in the Federal court with Judge Arba S. VanValkenburgh. In accordance with instructions of the court, attorneys for the plaintiffs will have ten days, or until March 26, in which to file an answer. The matter then will rest with Judge VanValkenburgh for final decision which, it is expected, will not be long delayed.

Following the opening hearing on the case and the filing of the brief by Mr. Handy, which sets forth that the suit was not brought against the exhibitors by the real parties at interest, in that the interest of the individual music companies have been assigned to the Society of Authors, Publishers and Composers of America, thereby constituting a conflict with federal statutes, interest has been widespread in Missouri and Kansas.

Advertising Pictures in Small Towns

Exploiteer Declares Heralds Best

EDITOR'S NOTE—The author of this article, John W. Creamer, is exploitation man for the Strand Theatre, Chillicothe, Mo. He writes from first-hand knowledge of how to advertise pictures in the small town.

It is my sincere belief that high class heralds, judiciously used and carefully distributed cannot help but be a money maker for the small town showmen.

Take another look at those words underlined, for upon them, judging from my own varied experiences, are based the making or breaking of heralds as they apply to the small town.

With the same outlay of money, you can reach more people, by the use of heralds, create a better impression upon these people, and sell more tickets to these people than you can by any other means of advertising.

Say for example, that heralds cost $4.50 per 1,000, and you will find 1,000 plenty for small towns up to 3,000 in population. Say printing costs $2.00 total cost $6.50. This sum of money will buy 43 one sheets. Now just where is the average small town showman going to post or hang 43 one's in positions that are considered A1? And if they are posted how many people in a town of 3,000 are going to see them? Figuring roughly, not over 1,000 persons, if that many.

Of course, this sum of money can be divided into buying 3 sheets and maybe a 24, but the general result will be the same, unless your stands are extraordinarily good.

Heralds vs. Newspaper Ads.

As most small towns only have a weekly newspaper the showmen rarely puts in an ad costing $6.50, and if he does, can the average small town exhibitor write an ad, or construct one that will compare favorably with the high class heralds put out by the leading producers? And will his ad carry as good illustrations, will it have as good a layout, or contain as good selling talk? No.

Suppose Mr. Exhibitor does gamble $6.50 in the newspaper in the town of 3,000 people. What circulation has the paper? From 800 to 1,000, and we will allow an average of two readers to a paper—a total of 2,000. But how many persons read Mr. Exhibitor's ad? Not over 750, probably less, and his ad may appear a week ahead of the playing date with the result that by the time the picure arrives, many have forgotten all about it.

So there you have the weekly newspaper angle.

Now we will consider exploitation. Good exploitation will sell tickets and I know, because I am handling exploitation in a town of 7,000. And in small towns one can pull a number of stunts and build good lobby or window displays for $6.50. And some of the best stunts I have pulled (from the box office standpoint) cost practically nothing. But in only a few small towns do you find the exhibitor using exploitation to any marked degree. Why? Because he either cannot do it or has no one in his employ who understands it. So in this comparison we may entirely eliminate exploitation, and by this I mean good exploitation.

Next under the heading of miscellaneous advertising, let's place production slides, specially prepared slides, throwaways, window cards, etc. These we find have a selling value, but reach only a small number of people. In this group slides are the best medium, for you are talking direct to people interested in pictures, else they would not be in your theatre.

Now let us consider heralds. By judicious use I mean this: do not use heralds on every attraction that you play and do not use heralds more than twice a week, no matter how many days you are open. "Familiarity breeds contempt" you know. And another thing: if the heralds on a certain attraction do not look good to you, or if you think they will not appeal to your townspeople, do not use them at all.

By careful distributing I mean just what I say. After buying heralds the average small town showman takes very little pains in placing these heralds where they will do the most good.

Right Way to Distribute Them

The best place to put heralds is in the homes, either by mailing them or by house to house distribution. As I said before, 1,000 heralds are plenty for a town of 3,000 people, because in that size town there are not over 1,000 homes and places of business. Putting a number of heralds in a business house is all right. For house to house work you can use neatly dressed boys, maybe your ushers, and do not use the dirty ragamuffin from the streets, for he will probably "ditch" most of your heralds, besides creating a poor impression.

Have your distributors knock at each door and hand the people a neatly folded herald and say something along this line: "Good morning—here's an ad all about the big picture '————————' that's down at the Gem tomorrow." And right here is where Mr. Exhibitor should be on the job, for by this personal contact can be created a far better selling method. Have on hand a number of manila envelopes. In the upper left hand corner have "A message of joy for You" and across the bottom "Just called to see you—but you were out. Meet me at the Gem." Carry a pocketful of these each containing a herald. If no one comes to answer your knock, slip one of these envelopes under the door.

Another week have the leading merchants put your heralds in all the packages they wrap up. Giving them free slide service or passes for their trouble. Another week have a herald inserted in each copy of the weekly newspaper. (That is if it is issued close to the date your attraction plays).

When you get heralds for a production that was made from a good selling novel, go to Mr. Bookseller and give him the largest part of the imprint space, and he will no doubt pay for all the printing, and distribute some in addition.

Here are a few dont's:

Don't rubberstamp your heralds. It looks mussy.

Don't put your heralds out more than two days in advance, because if you do, by the time your attraction comes, it will be forgotten.

Don't throw your heralds in farmers' or anybody else's cars. Nothing is cheaper or more disliked by the autoist.

So summing it up, heralds carefully used and distributed are superior to all other forms of advertising for the small town.

Completing Plans for M. P. T. O. A. Convention

NATIONAL headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America during the Boston Convention, May 27-29, will be at the Copley-Plaza Hotel and the convention banquet will be held there May 28.

President Sydney S. Cohen and other members of the convention committee met in Boston this week to conclude all arrangements. The local Boston committee is under the direction of Ernest Horstman and Jacob Lourie.

Canada will be represented at the convention by a large delegation, it is announced.

Fare and one-half concessions have been obtained from all the Trunk Line railroads and this will favor theatre owners very much in saving transportation costs.

Complete information in railroad fares and hotel rates, together with business and entertainment programs will soon be forwarded from the National office to all theatre owners.

S. E. Managers in Carolina Hold Conference

Montgomery Hill, Carolina supervisor for Southern Enterprises theatres, has concluded a conference with all managers of houses in his territory, at the Charlotte Hotel, Charlotte, N. C.

At this conference Mr. Hill transmitted to the individual managers much of the result of the recent conference of Division managers held in New York several weeks ago.

Those attending the conference were as follows: George Brown, Imperial, Charlotte; C. H. Amos, Alhambra, Charlotte; E. D. Turner, Imperial, Asheville; J. C. Duncan, Strand, Asheville; J. H. Stelling, Rex and Strand, Spartanburg; H. B. Clarke, Garing and Casino, Greenville; Harry Hardy, Liberty, Greenwood; C. W. Irwin, Imperial, Columbia; Oscar White, Rex, Sumter; W. A. Byers, Imperial, Anderson; A. H. Frazier, district booker; M. J. Mullin, purchasing agent of Southern Enterprises.

New Companies Chartered in N. Y. State

The following is a list of the companies incorporating for the purpose of engaging in the motion picture business in New York state, during the past week: Pre-Eminent Pictures Corporation, capitalization not stated, with William G. Lovatt, Sylvia Schwartzman, William S. Walters, New York City; Matchwig Corporation, $5,000, Nathan Matchat, Long Branch, N. J.; Max Wigderson, Esther Wigderson, Ozone Park, L. I.; Prism Screen Corporation, capitalization not stated, O. V. Mahan, T. H. Forsstrom, J. F. Cleaveland, New York City.

The Re-Election of Mr. Hays

THE outstanding news this week is the re-election of Will H. Hays for a period of three years, as head of the Producers and Distributors Association. This action is taken one year in advance of the termination of Mr. Hays' first contract.

When this association of the leading firms in the industry was formed two years ago, one leader stated to the writer with much conviction:. "The important thing is that we are of a mind to get together and agree to be led."

And now this same association of competing firms has decided to continue to travel along the same common road — upward, in behalf of themselves and of their industry, and under the same leader, in whom each and every member has profound confidence. All of which is still more,— "an important thing." It is a vast accomplishment.

It is of the foremost importance to this industry that it have an association of strength and a unification of ideals. Without this possession it cannot advance. Much has been done under Mr. Hays' leadership; much remains to be done. The way has been far from easy. .Because of its youth the industry has been at odds within itself: worse still, because of much unwisdom the industry has been at odds with the public and its institutions. In narrowing these breaches, in promoting understanding and sympathy, much has been done by Mr. Hays that is apparent to any observer: but much more has been done—and we say this with certainty, than meets the eye and ear. The proof of this will be had, we willingly prophesy, within the next three years.

We are mighty glad that Will Hays is sticking to his difficult post; and we might remark that he deserves from everyone within the industry the same sympathy and understanding that the industry needs without, in the public mind.

Film Representatives to Address Pen Women

Talks by prominent writers and representatives of the picture industry, will be features of the National Conference on Motion Pictures to be held during the Biennial Convention of the League of American Pen Women, April 23-26, Washington, D. C., Shoreham Hotel.

One day will be given to motion picture discussion, the purpose of the conference being "to bring about better understanding and cooperation between writers and producers by means of a frank and open discussion of mutual problems."

Enthusiasm Marks Kansas Meeting

Over One Hundred Exhibitors Attend Sixth Semi-Annual Session at Emporia

MORE than one hundred exhibitors answered present when the two-day semi-annual convention of the M. P. T. O. Kansas was assembled at the Broadview Hotel, Emporia, Tuesday. Much enthusiasm marked the opening of ceremonies and this was maintained throughout the sessions.

The opening day was devoted largely to the reports of the various committees, while Wednesday was given over to the election of officers and the discussion of new business.

Walter Gunsolly, president of the Emporia chamber of commerce delivered an address of welcome to the visiting delegates Tuesday morning, in which he commended them for their efforts toward the betterment of pictures and for the capable manner in which their picture houses were being conducted.

The banquet Wednesday evening was a big feature of the convention, with Richard J. Hopkins, Justice of the Supreme Court, and Roland Boynton, County Attorney, as the principal speakers. A six-piece band from the Strand Theatre provided the music while the dinner was in progress. The Glee Club of the Emporia State Normal School rendered a number of selections.

A midnight frolic Wednesday with a splendid program of entertainment tested the auditorium to its capacity and brought the convention to a happy conclusion.

A report of the year's activities of the association submitted by C. E. Cook showed dues received from eighty-five members of the organization in the amount of $4,363.34 and amounts donated totaling $435. Amounts received on advertising were $1,291.57 and miscellaneous receipts, $212.15, making a grand total of receipts amounting to $6,302.04. In addition, exhibitors contributed $1,321.50 to a fund toward protection from adverse legislation.

The report also showed that 62 exhibitors were exhibiting association advertising and 85 exhibitors showing film from which revenue is received by the organization.

"Covered Wagon" Premiere Held in Havana

"The Covered Wagon" had its Latin-American premiere at the Fausto Theatre in Havana, Cuba, March 27th and was as enthusiastically received as elsewhere, according to E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of Famous-Lasky Corporation. Critics praised it as the greatest production ever presented in Cuba.

The picture is scheduled to open an indefinite run at the Capitol Theatre in Buenos Aires early in May.

New Producing Company for Hileah, Florida

Dr. Miller Reese Hutchinson and A. E. McManus of New York have started a new picture producing company to operate at Hileah, Florida. Plans have been completed for the production of a series of six pictures.

United Artists Contracts Renewed

Hiram Abrams Re-elected President and Three Year Agreement Signed at Annual Meeting

THE "Big Four" have renewed their contracts in United States Corporation for a period of three years; Hiram Abrams has been re-elected President of the corporation, and unanimous satisfaction is expressed by the owners and stockholders of the company with the management and personnel of the concern.

This action was taken at the annual meeting held Friday, March 28, at which were present Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, and D. W. Griffith, the owners and their representatives.

The re-election of Mr. Abrams was a foregone conclusion in the minds of everybody closely acquainted with the situation, in spite of the fact that several trade publications have carried within the past month numerous "smoke" stories predicting the resignation of Mr. Abrams and the reorganization or disintegration of United Artists.

During the several weeks just past in which Fairbanks, Miss Pickford and Griffith were reported as entering negotiations with other distributors, according to the rumor factories, it is evident now that there was no foundation at any time for the stories that were floating about. The status of United Artists remains just as it was.

Following is the official signed statement issued this week:

"The annual meeting of the stockholders and owners of United Artists Corporation was held at the offices of United Artists Corporation, No. 729 Seventh avenue, New York city, on Friday, March 28. There were present Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and D. W. Griffith, the owners and their representatives, and it was unanimously decided not only to carry out their existing contracts, but to renew and extend their contracts for a period of three years, except Charles Chaplin who has eight pictures still to deliver to the Corporation

"It was the unanimous sentiment expressed by the owners and stockholders of United Artists Corporation that they were perfectly satisfied with the executive and personnel of their organization, which resulted in the re-election of all the officers of the corporation.

(Signed) "Mary Pickford
"Douglas Fairbanks
"D. W. Griffith
"Charles Chaplin
"United Artists Corporation,
By Hiram Abrams,
President."

Baltic Picture Conditions Show Improvement

Emil Kokich, secretary to the U. S. Trade Commissioner at Riga, reporting on the film markets in the new Baltic states, says in his letter of January 10: "The market for foreign-produced motion pictures in the new Baltic Republics of Latvia, Esthonia and Lithuania, having a combined population of over 5,000,000 inhabitants, has steadily improved since 1922, when a total of only 50 motion picture theatres was registered for the three countries."

His reports show now that there are 85 such film theatres in operation of which number Esthonia and Latvia, each have about 30, and Lithuania, 25. The total seatage available is about 10,000 persons daily. Performances in these theatres are still confined chiefly to the evenings, program changes being but once a week.

Stanley Company's Tenth Anniversary April 28

The annual entertainment at Eagleville Sanatarium is generally held on the aniversary of the birthday of the late Stanley V. Mastbaum, but this year it will be made a part of the gala anniversary week.

A Memorial Committee composed of Lawrence D. Beggs, chairman; Al Boyd, John J. McGuirk, Abe Sablosky, Lew Sablosky, Frank Buhler, Morris Boney, Charles Segal and Abe L. Einstein, secretary is already at work preparing a delightful program for the entertainment which will be held in the afternoon of Sunday, April 27th.

Peerless Booking Corp. Is Commended

A RESOLUTION adopted by the F. I. L. M. Club of New York City commends the Peerless Booking Corporation, the picture booking agency of the Keith, Moss and Proctor circuit of theatres for assuming the contractual obligations of the Capitol and Twin States Theatres in Union Hill, New Jersey, of which Peerless has recently acquired control.

There is a growing practice on the part of theatre owners to abandon contracts when disposing of or selling theatres and a failure on the part of the new operators to assume the old picture contracts, thus disrupting booking schedules.

A committee of three was appointed by the F. I. L. M. Club to extend the thanks and appreciation of the club to the Peerless organization for their cooperation.

Delaware Charters Many New Corporations

Recent charters granted at Dover, Delaware, include the one granted to "Romance Pictures, Incorporated," of Wilmington, Del., capital named, $250,000.

The Atlas Film Producing Company, Inc., was chartered to make and produce and make retakes of motion pictures, on a capital of $50,000. Incorporators are given as Joseph Bentweglio, Angelo Montura, Pietro Santaro, all of New York city, through the Delaware Registration Trust Company of Wilmington and Dover.

Louis B. Mayer Pictures, Inc., was chartered to "stage, screen and produce motion pictures," with a capital of $500,000.

Pennet, Bennett or Pennant Film Productions, Inc., were granted a $100,000 capital permit to produce motion pictures.

The Strand (Strand theatre, Wilmington) Corporation was chartered to deal in real estate, pertaining to the theatre on a $100,000 capitalization.

A capital increase from $10,000 was granted the National (theatrical properties) Property Association, Inc., of New York city, through the Corporation Service Company.

Physical Distribution Basis of Metro-Goldwyn Negotiations, Says Loew

FURTHER confirmation of reports printed in last week's issue of Motion Picture News relative to a contemplated amalgamation of Goldwyn with Metro was received this week in a statement issued by Marcus Loew, President of Metro. It follows:

"Metro and Goldwyn are discussing the possibility of combining the physical distribution of films. The respective sales organizations are to be kept intact but very material economies are to be effected by the elimination of duplicate exchanges."

No definite date for the change has been set. The general understanding is that details of the deal are now being worked out by the lawyers. The attitude of William Randolph Hearst, who owns a fifty per cent interest in the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, remains a mystery. Mr. Hearst's contract with Goldwyn expires April 15. It is known that he has an option to buy the remaining fifty per cent interest. This option also expires April 15.

Whether the Hearst forces will be aligned with Metro, on a physical distribution basis, or some other plan, remains to be seen.

In inside circles it is stated that some thing definite may be expected as soon as Mr. Hearst returns from Florida where he has been spending some time at a popular winter restort.

Sunday Opening Renewed at Chevy Chase

Just when the Maryland Legislative Assembly had killed the Sunday movie bill, and the plans for a drive to kill the Sunday theatre in Washington, were under way and then became quiescent, comes the new Sunday war in Chevy Chase.

Manager Emanuel J. Stutz recently announced that effective Sunday March 30, he would open his doors at 2:30 on Sunday afternoons and commence his bill at 3 o'clock, with a continuous program till 11. Promptly with his announcement came the mass meetings in the churches of the neighborhoods to force him to adhere to the alleged "Gentlemen's Agreement," to refrain from Sunday shows.

Mr. Stutz declares that he made no agreement except to say that the theatre would operate on Sundays if sufficient support were given, and would give no such showings if the majority were against it.

Opera Star Has Million for Picture House

"I HAVE $1,000,000 in a company to build a big, modern motion picture house in Milan, Italy," the Kansas City Star quotes Tito Schipa of the Chicago Opera Company as saying Monday.

Mr. Schipa, who is with his company in Kansas City, trains his guns on grand opera when comparing it with the screen.

"The movies, they are so natural, so full of punch! Opera is a pose, stilted It takes an opera hero an hour to say 'I love you.'"

American pictures with American actors will be shown in the new house, according to Mr. Schipa, it being planned to operate the house, which will be similar to the Capitol theatre in New York, like an American theatre.

Paramount's Paris Agent Visits New York

Due for a conference with E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department for Famous Players-Lasky, Adolphe Osso, managing director of the Paramount distributing system in France, arrived in New York City last week.

He stated that perhaps the most encouraging feature in the French film industry today is the increased interest being shown by the more progressive exhibitors in exploitation and that quite a few of their best known exhibitors have taken up picture exploitation with a considerable degree of success, and their success is encouraging others to plan greater activity in this respect.

"Wandering Husbands" Has Three Audience Tests

Audiences in Los Angeles and Santa Monica saw "Wandering Husbands" three times with the producers noting the reaction and afterwards cutting and editing the production before shipping it east.

The idea was to secure a pre-release audience test for the production that Lila Lee and James Kirkwood made for Hodkinson.

Neilan Casts Dowling as Priest in "Tess"

When Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" is finished by Marshall Neilan it will show Joseph J. Dowling in the role of the priest.

Bill Would Ban Carrying Inflammable Film

REPRESENTATIVE Sanders of Indiana has introduced a bill into the House that would prohibit the importation and the mailing, shipment, sending, carrying or transportation of inflammable films in interstate commerce.

It provides a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for one year or both for any person depositing in United States mails or with any express company or other common carrier or carrying from one state to another any inflammable films.

The bill has been referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. If favorably considered it would become effective January 1925.

In and Out of Town

JOE BRANDT, of C. B. C., has left California and will visit several exchange cities en route to New York. He is expected here the end of next week.

GEORGE WELTNER, representative of the Famous Players foreign department, sailed March 29 for Buenos Aires on a special mission for E. E. Shauer, director of the department.

MARCUS LOEW has returned from his trip to the Middle West. He is said to be negotiating for a theatre in Baltimore.

S. W. SMITH, managing director of Napoleon Films, London, has arrived in New York. Departures for the other side include Burton Holmes and E. M. Newman.

J. CHARLES DAVID, 2d, of Lowell Productions, has returned from a sales trip to Cleveland, Chicago and Minneapolis.

COL. H. A. COLE, President of the Motion Theatre Owners of Texas, has returned to his home in Marshall, Texas, after a stay of several weeks in New York. He attended the Naked Truth Dinner at the Astor.

RICHARD A. ROWLAND, general manager of Associated First National, left for the Coast April 1 to look over production activities there.

VICTOR M. SHAPIRO, of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, has left for a trip through the Middle West.

N. L. NATHANSON, managing director of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., was a visitor on Broadway this week.

JOE WEIL sailed for Paris this week to handle the premiere of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" in the French capital.

ABE WARNER and Herman Starr, of Warner Brothers, left April 1, the former going to Chicago and the latter to the South. H. M. Warner expects to leave for the Coast with Motley H. Flint, within the next two weeks.

F. HEATH COBB, of Grand-Asher has returned from a trip to Boston.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN returned last week from the Coast, bringing with him the first print of "Cytherea — Goddess of Love."

ABRAHAM CARLOS arrived this week, in advance of his studio organization, as the initial step in the removal of the Carlos activities from the Coast to New York.

DR. W. E. SHALLENBERGER, of Arrow, just returned from a trip South, has left for the Middle West on distribution matters.

EDWIN S. CLIFFORD, Managing Editor of Exhibitors Herald, is in New York this week. He arrived in time to attend the Naked Truth Dinner at the Astor, and will remain for several days.

SAM WERNER, of the United Film Service, St. Louis, was in New York this week visiting the Lee-Bradford office, relative to undertaking the representation for Lee-Bradford pictures in that territory.

MR. HUETT, representative of the Gaumont Company in Spain, left for home last week.

D. W. GRIFFITH will sail for Italy April 12, accompanied by Albert H. T. Banzhaf, his counsel. Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks will be on the same boat.

Universal Signs Hoxie for Five Years

AFTER completing the Universal feature, "Ridgeway of Montana," Jack Hoxie was contracted by Universal for a period of five years.

Clifford Smith, former director of William S. Hart, will direct, and Isadore Bernstein will be supervising editor of the Hoxie scripts.

A number of new stories, by standard magazine artists, are in immediate view for the star, including "The Triple Cross for Danger," "Claim Nnmber One," and others.

He has just finished camera work on "The Back Trail," a story of the Sierras.

Snyder Completes Service With Rocketts

Silas E. Snyder, who has been serving as publicity director for the Rockett Lincoln Film Company has completed his service with that organization and will return to Hollywood immediately after Easter.

Mr. Snyder has been with the Rockett concern since its organization. He was responsible for much of the research work for "The Dramatic Life of Abraham Lincoln." He was also co-author with Laurence Hill of "Can Anything Good Come Out of Hollywood?"

Richard Talmadge Films to Be Made East

Abraham Carlos, president of Carlos Productions, will produce four more Richard Talmadge pictures in the east, probably at a New Jersey studio, the first of the second series to be "Stepping Lively."

In addition to this it is possible that Carlos Productions will put into work another unit to make pictures of the type of "The Unknown Purple."

Wear Resigns Charleston Rialto Management

Marvin M. Wear, one of the organizers and first resident manager of the Rialto theatre at Charleston, West Virginia, has resigned his position, effective yesterday.

Mr. Wear's moving picture relations in Charleston date back to 1906 and since then he has been actively engaged in the industry as exhibitor. His resignation as manager of the Rialto, comes as a surprise.

He has not divulged his future plans.

Sawyer-Lubin Forces Will Make Two in East

THE next two pictures of Sawyer-Lubin and Associated Picture Corporation will be made in the east, according to word from the coast. The production staff leaves Hollywood April 6. The pictures, supervised by Arthur H. Sawyer will be starring vehicles for Barbara La Marr and will be released by First National.

The reason advanced for the shift to New York is in connection with several special locations. The organization plans to return to the coast in September or October.

E. T. Peter Offers Print Solution

Would Have State Exhibitor Organizations Employ Traveling Projection Experts

E. T. PETER, nationally known in exhibitor organization circles and now treasurer and general manager of Unity Pictures, Inc., sent a communication to MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week in which he urged that state exhibitor associations employ traveling projection experts as a solution to the problem of bad prints.

Mr. Peter's suggestions follow:

"Quite a few articles have appeared in the trade papers recently regarding the responsibility for bad films and almost invariably the blame has been placed upon the small exhibitor.

"During my ten years' experience as a distributor, I had my troubles with films being returned to me in bad condition and at times completely worthless and as a small exhibitor for six years the greatest annoyance that I had was receiving bad prints from the exchanges. So you see, it all depends upon which party you belong to, as to whom you think should be elected.

"In all the articles I have seen so far, the blame has either been laid on poor stock or negligence in projecting or faulty projectors but no one has offered to suggest a practical remedy.

"In 1915, I organized the distributors in Dallas and one of the suggestions I made to the organization was that we employ an expert projectionist and have him visit the small exhibitors, inspect the machines and repair them free of charge to the exhibitor except for the cost of new parts, and also instruct the local operator as to the vital necessity of keeping his machines in good repair and to see that at all times they were properly adjusted. This in my opinion is the crux of the situation.

"The average small town exhibitor knows nothing about projection himself and in many cases employs to operate his machine, a boy or young man who works in the drug store, grocery store or who drives the express wagon in the daytime. I have known cases where this operator was paid $1.00 a night for this work, for as the gross receipts of the theatre would average twelve or fifteen dollars a night, the theatre owner could not afford to pay more. This operator had probably never had anyone to instruct him, and my thought is that the expert projectionist would be successful in making good operators out of these boys nine times out of ten, and thus more than earn his salary and expenses. The exchange managers would not agree to my proposition.

"One reason for their refusal was that they were afraid lest the projectionist might boost some one machine or some one's pictures. Another reason was that they had no authority from the home office to lay out a small amount to cover this expense, and most of them did not have the courage to take it up with the home office.

"In 1919, when I was elected president of the M. P. T. O. of Texas I advocated this same plan but proposed that the state organization defray the expenses of the expert projectionist. But while the board of directors thought that the plan was feasible and would be beneficial, our finances would not permit us to put it into effect.

"I understand that the Texas organization is now arranging to put this same plan into operation. It would be a good thing if every theatre owners state organization try this plan.

"I see that P. A. Powers thinks the answer is the improvement of raw stock and E. V. Richards advocates more prints and I agree with both of them. As the cost of raw stock has now been reduced considerably, the producers should furnish the distributors with more prints.

"But the real solution is an educational campaign as suggested in the foregoing lines, and the theatre owners state organizations should be the ones to get behind it."

New Portland Manager in F. B. O. Exchange

Milton Hossfeldt, for eighteen months a salesman in the Los Angeles exchange of Film Booking Offices, has been promoted to be manager of the F. B. O. exchange at Portland, Ore., by H. M. Berman, general sales manager.

Many Special Art Sets at F. B. O. Studios

THREE big stages and the administration buildings are all going full blast at the F. O. B. studios on the West Coast and under the supervision of General Manager B. P. Fineman and Art Director Fred Ormston five special sets described as lavish are prepared for the "Fools in the Dark" production of Al Santell.

In addition to two F. B. O. units there are six other companies now producing in the studios. The new Telephone Girl series keeps one company busy at all times and other productions under way or in preparation are the Emory Johnson production tentatively titled "Swords and Plowshares," starring Mary Carr and Johnnie Walker; "Never Say Die," the new Doug MacLean production; "Dollar Down," the Co-Artists Production starring Ruth Roland and directed by Tod Browning and Harry Carey in "Black Mask," the second Hunt Stromberg Production.

The Ralph Lewis Production organization will soon begin "The Country Doctor."

Paramount Exploitation Staff Re-organized

Claud Saunders, Direcor of Exploitation for Famous Players-Lasky, has completely re-organized his exploitation staff in preparation for the big releasing program to be launched by Paramount for the coming Fall and Winter season.

In addition to the five men who have been handling the field work of the department since last Fall, sixteen more exploiteers have been added and are now on the way to their respective assignments.

Russell B. Moon is transferred from Boston to Chicago; Leslie F. Whelan from Cleveland to Philadelphia; Kenneth Renaud is transferred to Detroit, and Harry C. Eagles and Rick Ricketson remain at San Francisco and Denver-Salt Lake City, respectively.

The other assignments are Bob Gary, Kansas City; George Gambrill, St. Louis; Vernon Gray, Washington; Jack Hellman, Minneapolis; Gavin C. Hawn, Atlanta; William Bender, Cleveland; John Callahan, New Haven; Curtis Dunham, Dallas; John P. McConville, Boston and Portland, Me.; William Mendelssohn, Buffalo; Maurice Ridge, Cincinnati; William Robson, Pittsburgh; Harry Swift, Los Angeles; Charles E. Wagner, Columbus; Irvin A. Waterstreet, Indianapolis; Donald McLoud, Milwaukee.

"Gulliver's Travels" to Be Universal Film

DEAN SWIFT'S familiar story, "Gulliver's Travels" will be filmed by Universal with a company of tiny actresses and actors and a giant or two.

Preliminary conferences were held during the week between William Koenig, general production manager, and James O'Neill, who visited Universal City with his entire troupe of Lilliputians—known in vaudeville as "Irving's Midgets."

There are twenty-five little men and women in the company, none over a yard tall, and ranging in age from sixteen to forty. They are now on a vaudeville circuit, but plan during the summer, if the plan now under discussion is carried out, to return to Universal City for several weeks to film the allegory.

Madame de Bodamere Has Role in "Tess"

Marshall Neilan has engaged Madame de Bodamore, personal attendant to Mary Pickford for many years, for a role in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," which he is making for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.

This is said to be the first time that the Madame has appeared in a picture other than those starring Miss Pickford.

James R. Grainger Coming From Los Angeles

With several stops scheduled in some of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan southern exchanges, General Manager J. R. Grainger left the Goldwyn West Coast Studios for New York City last week.

First of the Series of Jack White Comedies for Educational features Lige Conley and is entitled "Midnight Blues."

Meeting to Discuss Program Policies

Congress of First National Executives, Exhibitors Set for New Orleans

MOTION picture history will be made in the South when a congress of leading film exhibitors, distributing and producing executives gather in New Orleans on April 16 to adopt new policies and plans governing the program of cinema entertainments.

The congress, which will be in session in New Orleans for about a week, will be in connection with the annual meeting of the executives and exhibitor members of Associated First National Pictures, Inc. The delegates will be guests of E. V. Richards, Jr., and the Saenger Amusement Company.

Selection of stories for the screen, action on reports submitted in a nation-wide check-up of the public taste and the formulation of plans in an attempt to so operate that the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures shall be placed on a higher plane, are among the chief objects of the meeting, according to Robert Lieber, president of First National

Approximately 100 exhibitors from the principal cities of the United States and Canada will attend along with the New York home office officials of First National. A number of important sub-franchise holders and branch office managers from the North as well as South will also be in attendance.

These exhibitors represent not only themselves but also some 5,000 smaller theater owners in whose houses in America and Canada First National pictures are shown.

Those who attend the First National meeting in New Orleans are going to exchange opinions on the feelings of audiences with a view to guiding them in the selection of proper stories for production.

Among the original 26 founders of First National who will have an important say in these matters are the following well-known Southerners:

E. V. Richards, Jr., New Orleans; Spyrous P. Skouras, St. Louis; Colonel Fred Levy, Louisville, Ky.; Frank Ferrandini, Richmond, Va.; R. D. Craver, Charlotte, No. C.; Tom Boyand, Oklahoma City, Okla.; and Harry Crandall, Washington, D. C.

Lasky Appoints Four New Directors

Paul Bern, Paul Sloane, R. H. Burnside and Frank Tuttle Win Advancement

FOUR new directors have been elevated from the ranks of Famous Players-Lasky employees, according to announcement by Jesse L. Lasky. This is in line with the announced policy of the organization that it intended to inject new blood and new ideas into picture production.

The four men who win promotion to directorship are Paul Bern, Paul Sloane, R. H. Burnside and Frank Tuttle.

Mr. Lasky had the following to say regarding the new directors:

"Paul Bern, who recently became associated with our organization and wrote the scenario for the next Pola Negri picture, 'Men,' has had a wealth of experience in his chosen field. Three years of intensive study of film cutting, titling and scenario construction followed a brief experience as an actor on the legitimate stage. Then he became assistant to Hugo Ballin, and later editor-in-charge for Goldwyn, during which period he wrote the scenario for 'The Christian.' More recent productions of his pen are 'Name the Man' and 'The Marriage Circle.'

"Paul Sloane is possessed of equally valuable experience. He it was who wrote the unforgettable 'Over the Hill' and the perfect adaptation of 'If Winter Comes,' and more recently wrote the scenario of 'Big Brother' and the latest Thomas Meighan picture, 'The Confidence Man.'

"Our opportunity of availing ourselves of the talent of Mr. Burnside is particularly gratifying. Known far and wide and for his wonderful spectacular presentations at the New York Hippodrome and as stage director for Charles Dillingham, he knows the mechanics of lighting and scenic effects as few men do. For the past two months he has been at our Long Island studio learning the technique of screen production.

"Frank Tuttle, one of the organizers of the Film Guild and a keen student of the drama as well as the photoplay, has been associated with us for some time at the Long Island studio, his first work for us being the adaptation of 'The Conquest of Canaan.' He recently wrote the adaptation of 'Manhandled' for Gloria Swanson.

Ralph Ince Chosen To Direct Ray

Brother of Producer to Make Star's First Under His Renewed Affiliation

THE first Charles Ray picture under the arrangement by which he returns to the Thomas H. Ince banner will be directed by Ralph Ince from a C. Gardner Sullivan story, it is announced this week.

In connection with this, Thomas H. Ince issued a statement in which he expressed gratification over the fact that he had been able to induce his brother, Ralph Ince, to direct in California, adding that "under his direction I am definitely certain that the success of Charles Ray's return to my organization, and to the type of picture which first gained prominence for him, will be made under the best auspices."

The Charles Ray studios in Los Angeles have been permanently closed, so far as Ray is concerned, and the star will transfer his activities at once to the Ince plant at Culver City, where he will once more work under the guidance of the producer who discovered him and developed him as an outstanding star.

Details as to the new Charles Ray features have not been definitely shaped up, but both Ray and his producer agree in declaring that they will be made along the line demanded by the public, with Ray as the happy, wholesome American youth which created his popularity.

Eleven years ago Charles Ray entered pictures as one of a mob at Inceville in Santa Monica Canyon, while still attending Los Angeles high school. He continued under the Ince banner uninterruptedly for eight years.

The picture which brought him prominence practically overnight was "The Coward," an early Ince-Triangle picture in which he appeared with Frank Keenan, and one which is still remembered as an outstanding picture of that day. Ray was then given an opportunity to create other characters of a similar sort, and his pictures came to stand for a definite type of human, homely entertainment, featuring the bashful, awkward American youth. Among the pictures made in association with Ince were "The Clod Hopper," "The Pinch Hitter," "His Own Home Town," "The Hired Man," "Alarm Clock Andy," "String Beans" and others.

Ray then went on his own as an independent producer, and released through First National a number of pictures, including "Gas, Oil and Water," "Smudge," and others. He then changed to a more elaborate type of production, bringing out "The Girl I Loved," "A Tailor Made Man," and "The Courtship of Miles Standish."

Parisian Danseuse For Valentino Picture

Paramount's production of Booth Tarkington's story, "Monsieur Beaucaire," starring Rudolph Valentino, will witness the debut of Paulette Duval, Parisian danseuse, in pictures.

"La Belle Duval" came to America five months ago and danced with Ziegfeld's Follies for three months.

Distinctive Cameraman Gets Ship Arrival

No Contract With Lloyd Emphatically Stated

J. D. WILLIAMS, President of Ritz Carlton Pictures, again takes the opportunity of emphatically denying the rumor that recently bobbed up again in Los Angeles anent Mr. Williams having Harold Lloyd under contract as soon as Mr. Lloyd completes his existing contract with Pathe.

At a luncheon given last week at the Ritz to the trade paper representatives Mr. Williams stated most vigorously, in answer to a direct question, that he positively had no contract with Harold Lloyd.

In order that this persistent rumor may be throttled Mr. Williams concludes with the following in his statement to the trade press:

"In view of the fact that it is very unfair to Harold Lloyd and Pathe, as well as to myself, to print such rumors when there is no truth whatever in them, I sincerely trust that you will co-operate in putting an end to same by publishing this."

Paramount Plans Production Drive

Eighteen Units Will Be Actively at Work Within the Next Two Months

PARAMOUNT is planning the most extensive production drive in its history, according to a statement given out by Jesse L. Lasky at Hollywood on his arrival there following a series of conferences with Adolph Zuker and S. R. Kent in New York.

It is planned to have 18 production units at work within the next two months. Thirteen of these companies will be engaged at the Lasky studio in Hollywood and the other five at the Long Island studio. Early in the Summer three additional units will be added at the Long Island studio. These will provide the Paramount releases for the coming Fall and Winter.

Mr. Lasky said: "We are launching this tremendous drive, entirely unprecedented in the history of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in order to properly prepare for what we confidently believe will be the greatest season ever enjoyed by the motion picture industry. Never since the day when I first decided to cast my lot with the pioneers of the photoplay have I been so enthusiastic as today, not only over the healthy prosperity facing the industry as a whole but also over the high standard and large number of pictures scheduled for production and release by this corporation.

"A large part of my time in New York City was spent with Adolph Zukor and Sidney R. Kent working out the details of the most elaborate program we ever have attempted. We set about carrying out a determination to give exhibitors the greatest product in our history and my enthusiasm is engendered by my confidence that he have succeeded. We have marshalled new stars of undisputed popularity, new directors of ability, new authors and scenario writers and additional supporting artists, and I may say that our good fortune in obtaining all these has exceeded even our expectations."

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

YOUR IDEA

TAKING advantage of an apparent handicap, Capt. Frank Goodale, manager of Loew's theatre, Ottawa, capitalized on the final play-off in the National Hockey league, the major league of professional hockey in Canada.

This was obviously strong competition, but Manager Goodale arranged with the local telegraph office to have a running report of the game dispatched to the theatre by special messenger service, and advertised this heavily in the newspapers and at the theatre.

Thousands of persons came from the surrounding country, and many of these could not gain admittance. These, together with disappointed local fans, naturally went to Loew's, where they could see a show and get the returns on the game.

Remember that motion is the most arresting angle you can give a display—and a small electric motor for this purpose is a good investment.

OUT in Denver is an organization called The Film Writers' Guild of Denver which is promoting a good bit of healthy interest in the screen and its ways. Every third Wednesday morning this organization, composed of photodramatists and those who would be, meets at the Ogden theatre for a pre-view. Manager Weisbaum of the local F. B. O. exchange furnishes a picture. Other meetings are held regularly, at which talks are given and stories talked over.

This stunt brought great publicity to the run of "Where the North Begins" (Warner Bros.) at the Marble Arch Pavilion, London, when police dogs were guests at a showing.

Recently the organization has started its own publication, The Inspiration, which is to be gradually enlarged, and will ultimately be used as a section of several newspapers in that part of the country.

This sort of constructive work, which promotes an intelligent understanding of the problems of the film producer, is a healthy sign for the future. If it is purused consistently, Denver theatre managers will profit by it.

THE showing of "Yolanda" at the Cosmopolitan theatre, New York City, is being preceded by an elaborate prologue conceived and produced by Joseph Urban, who also did the settings for the picture itself.

More than 25 persons appear in the presentation, headed by Frederick Wheeler, concert baritone. He appears in the guise of a ballad singer of the XVth century who tells a story of medieval romance to a group of children.

The story, of course, is that of Yolanda, in which a beautiful princess masquerades as a burglar maid to test the love of the prince. At the climax of the ballad, the curtain rises upon a tableau showing the princess on horseback, with a group of loyal knights and children of the realm about her. The song is titled "Yolanda."

Decorated in dark green, the Urban setting depicts a massive foyer in a XVth century Gothic castle. It is illuminated by soft lights reflected through narrow windows.

IN connection with the recent showing at Loew's Palace theatre, Washington, D. C., of "In Search of a Thrill," an elaborate spring fashion show was staged, which had several unusual features. Trained dancers were used for the models, which obviated one difficulty often met with.

The show was described as follows by Marjorie A. Kennedy, feature writer on The Washington Times:

"Ever since Eve conceived the idea of using fig leaves to enhance her charms, clothes have been the paramount issue in woman's mind, and since quite the most interesting thing to man is said to be woman, the place for both of them this week is Loew's Palace, where the Hecht Company is putting on a spring fashion show with a score of beautiful girls selected from the Pemberton Dancers as the models. Three times daily at 3:35, 7:25 and 9:25—for the ladies—beautiful clothes on women; for the men—beautiful women in clothes.

"And here's a word to the wise—gentlemen, if you are really serious in your desire to pay off the mortgage this spring, keep your wife away from this fashion display; and ladies, for love of your children don't take your husband—but don't either one of you miss it.

"The offering ranges from simple chic morning wear through chic street wear, afternoon gowns, sport costumes of every description and dinner dresses to a gorgeous display of evening wear. From sweet girlishness to a display that is daring and exotic the presentation wanders. The display is said to represent $50,000 in gowns, and where is the mere woman who would deny it?

"There is only one trouble—their stay is too short—especially for the women who are trying to see how the darn things are made, which I suppose is the same trouble the men found with it—especially when the bathing girls came out.

"The presentation is graceful and well worked up—the first scene, one of sheer beauty, is a glance backward at the crinoline gowns of long ago—from then on the action is forward—the climax is a breath-taking vision of June and wedding bells."

One noteworthy feature of the show was the high class advertising used—distinctly out of the beaten track for this sort of thing. One of the series of ads is here reproduced.

EVEN the banks—once regarded as the most conservative of institutions—are coming in on motion picture exploitation, having found it worth while to utilize the personal popularity of movie stars. All of which is suggested by a savings bank tie-up just made by Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, whereby through Elliott Service company, a window card publicizing Conrad Nagel will be sent out to banks everywhere.

The window card bears a photo of Nagel at the top and beneath it an appeal to the public to save its money. The copy reads: "What could you buy if you had all the dollars you spent foolishly last year? Will you let money drip through your fingers this year, or will you save all you possibly can and buy something really worth while? Make friends with the savings bank."

AND OURS

WITH the advent of the national exploitation tie-up, in an organized way, on motion pictures comes what is virtually a new era in photoplay promotion. No longer is it necessary for the local exhibitor to go out and find a merchant to co-operate with him on a picture tie-up—in fact, in many cases the merchant will now come to the theatre to find out the play dates on a given picture.

The quality of window displays, too, will improve as the manufacturer issues special material to the dealer for the express purpose of picture exploitation.

These tie-ups are not entirely new, but they are just beginning to come into their own. First National made exploitation history with its Penrod suit tie-up, as well as many others. Famous Players is getting great results just now from the Humming Bird hosiery hook-up.

An impressive exhibit just what is being done in this direction, however, is contained in a chart just issued by Metro, detailing the tie-ups made by the organization on current and forthcoming releases, credit for which is given to Bert B. Perkins, Metro manager of exploitation, working under the supervision of J. E. D. Meador.

One of the dolls gotten out by Metro, and described in the accompanying article.

On five releases, Metro has made 24 national tie-ups, each a completely planned campaign. Popular Science Monthly has been hooked up on the volcano scenes in "The White Sister." The Vivaudou toilet preparations tie-up was described in this department recently.

One of the most interesting is the series of movie celebrity dolls, one of which is shown here. These will be issued on each Metro star and featured player, the Jackie Coogan and Laurette Taylor dolls being now ready.

And biggest of all, of course, is the arrangement calling Jackie Coogan's nominal leadership of the Near East Relief Drive for one million cans of milk for the destitute children of Syria, Greece and Armenia, at the end of which he will embark on the milk ship to personally present the gift to the orphan children in the stricken area.

AMONG prominent managers who have learned the value of local news specials is Frank Steffy, manager of the Coliseum theatre, Seattle. Whenever a big news event comes off in Seattle, or nearby, Steffy sees to it that the Coliseum is provided with the film while it is still "hot."

Just the other day, when the U. S. Army around-the-world fliers landed in Seattle, preparatory to shoving off, pictures of them were on the screen of the Coliseum just four hours and thirty minutes later.

The pictures were taken at Sand Point Field, the official landing place, and rushed to the theatre, via the laboratory, by Charles R. Perryman, retained as the official Kinograms representative by Manager J. A. Gage of the local Educational exchange.

The astounding success of the pictorial newspaper has shown that people like to SEE current events, as well as read about them, and the exhibitor who offers live local news on the screen will find plenty of patrons for it.

ANOTHER house organ makes its appearance this week with the advent of The Bell Ringer, a publication designed to go to all the employes of the Schine Theatrical Co., Inc., of Gloversville, N. Y.

As set forth in a letter from the Home Office, the purpose is as follows: "This is a modest attempt in bringing about closer contact between employes throughout the chain and the Home Office. The first number being introductory, it was impossible to bring out all the features intended. The subsequent issues will have special departments for discussing exploitation of pictures, house management, comparative standings of the various theatres from an angle of quota and business done, suggestions for house betterment, suggestions for eliminating waste, exploitation suggestions on coming pictures, projection troubles and cures, question box, and general theatre news and good will building."

If the employes of an organization can be made to feel that such a publication is really their own, and will take a genuine interest in it, the benefits are tremendous. A good start has been made in this instance, and the organ promises much of interest.

Some excellent Spring suggestions, well worth quoting here, are printed in the first issue:

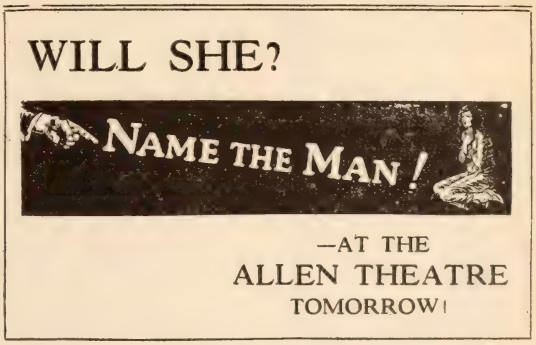
"Watch your electric light bills. See that all unnecessary lights are eliminated. Check up your meter to see if it creeps.

"You invite the public to leave their nice clean, comfortable, warm homes to come to your theatre. Is your theatre attractive, clean, comfortable and inviting so as to entice the public to leave their firesides?

"Be courteous in handling your public. Courtesy, patience, and cleanliness go a long way towards building up good-will.

"Do you feel that you make a nice appearance when meeting your public? This is a wonderful asset.

"Spring is here. Your florists have Spring flowers. Give your theatre a touch of the season. Have some cut flowers in your box office. Have your ushers wear a flower in their coat lapels. Have some potted plants in your lobby. These should cost you nothing. Exchange courtesies with your local florist by giving him a slide on the screen in return for a supply of fresh cut flowers daily, and potted plants in fresh bloom.



"Arrange with your florist for a Spring Flower Show by banking potted plants on your stage and in your lobby.

"Now is the time to give your lobby your best and greatest attention.

"Cleanliness and artistic displays are great assets.

"Avoid making of your lobby bill-board fences.

"Now is the time for your musical director to pull out his snappy, jazzy Spring Songs for use for overtures, and music with the pictures."

One of the series of teaser ads on "Name the Man" (Goldwyn) at the Allen theatre, Cleveland.

EXPLOITATION in the Dominion of Canada was given an added stimulus recently through a tie-up made on "Boy of Mine" with the McCormick Company, candy manufacturers. Through this hookup, a new candy bar will be placed on the Canadian market, to be called "Boy of Mine."

A strong advertising campaign accompanies the tie-up. Reduced stills from the photoplay are being enclosed in each bar. Arrangements have been made so that theatres holding children's matinees on the picture can obtain the bar at cost for free distribution.

Exhibitors Box-Office Reports

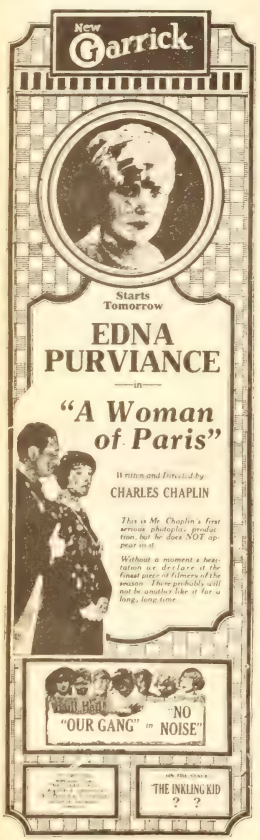
PARAMOUNT

Bella Donna—

The second run showing did fairly well. Not above the average. (Middle West).

The Fighting Coward—

Fairly well produced picture drawing fair crowd because of special advertising and musical program. (West).



Heritage of the Desert—

Story is poor but scenery and direction splendid. It didn't do any business for us. (Middle West).

Singer Jim McKee—

Old style melodrama of the William S. Hart type. A little out of tune to present tastes but we did a fair business with it. (Middle West).

Bill Hart has apparently lost his power here, and in addition this picture was in the wrong house. The result was quite poor business, and the picture was pulled after three days of the week. (West).

Ad on "A Woman of Paris" (United Artists) by H. W. Lawrence, of the New Garrick, Duluth.

Shadows of Paris—

With sufficient seating capacity could have accommodated twice the crowd that greeted Pola Negr. (East).

Strong and well acted dramatic picture. Held up well all week. (Middle West).

A Society Scandal—

Played to good business and pleased large audience in spite of panning by some press critics. (Middle West).

Played to a good weekly attendance, Gloria Swanson being a favorite here. (Middle West).

Mighty good value. Played to good returns. (East).

Very good. It averaged with former Swanson pictures which is good business here. A sure thing at this house. (Middle West).

Women like it because of gown displays. Not up to star's past efforts. Receipts held up very good. (Middle West).

Business close to record breaking because of fashion show put on at same time. (East).

FIRST NATIONAL

The Dangerous Maid—

Constance Talmadge is no longer a big attraction here, and the patrons considered her present vehicle mediocre. Business was only fair, despite strong advertising. (West).

The Eternal City—

Good picture and good acting but many were disappointed, expecting plot with some moral attached to it. Crowds drawn by name and special features. (West).

Flowing Gold—

Good picture; business good. (Middle West).

Audiences considered this fair entertainment. Business was fair. (Middle West).

Galloping Fish—

Heavy advertising and the title drew good houses the first of the week, but audiences for the most part have not cared for the picture and business fell off the last of the week. (West).

Lilies of the Field—

Entertaining feature with strong cast. Pleased large audiences. (Middle West).

Very pleasing audience picture. Did well with it. (Middle West).

Painted People—

A good picture that will do business for any exhibitor if properly exploited. We did well with it. (Middle West).

When a Man's a Man

A knock out. Did very fine business. The men liked it and the women talked it to their friends. (Middle West).

Playing up Harold Bell Wright's name with the picture, it drew good. (Middle West).

Backed by generous advertising went over big. Patrons uniformly pleased. (Middle West).

Why Men Leave Home—

Struck a popular chord. (East).

FOX

Big Dan—

Patrons of this house like this sort of material and consequently it did a nice business for four days. (West).

Eyes of the Forest—

Good picture; business good. (Middle West).

The Governor's Lady—

A good presentation of a famous success. Business good. (East).

A picture rich in heart appeal. Well liked by audiences. Business capacity for week run. (East).

The Net—

Dyed-in-the wool melodrama, with all of its faults and few of its virtues. Our patrons like highly colored stuff and we did average business with it. (Middle West).

The Wolf Man—

An excellent picture of its type. Plenty of action. Attendance fair. (Middle West).

GOLDWYN-COSMO.

Three Weeks—

Very well produced picture. Acting and scenery both good. Drew big crowds because of name and special advertising. (West).

Under the Red Robe—

A very good picture, coming a little closely upon the heels of other French Revolution pictures in this city, however. Business, for that reason, was not as strong as it might have been, although it was satisfactory. (West).

ALLIED

The Hill Billy—

The attendance for the week with this one was about the usual average. (Middle West).

Loving Lies—

Fair picture but considered not strong enough by management. Crowds drawn by special advertising and musical program. (West).

Suzanna—

Attracted fair business because of publicity given Mabel Normand and the fine exploitation given picture. (East).

VITAGRAPH

The Man from Brodney's—

A fairly entertaining picture and it registered as a fair box office attraction. (Middle West).

Fair picture; business fair. (Middle West).

This one has been quite pleasing to most of the patrons, and business has been good. (West).

WARNER BROS.

Little Johnny Jones —

Star pleasing and production nicely done but it only played to fair houses. (Middle West).

HODKINSON

Love's Whirlpool—

Story lacks interest but good acting helps this feature. Played to fair business. (Middle West).

Fair picture. Average receipts. (Middle West).

UNIVERSAL

Hunchback of Notre Dame—

Wonderful picture, but fell off during last week of a four weeks run. (Middle West).

The Law Forbids—

One of the best drawing cards in several weeks. (Middle West).

The Night Message—

Average program picture that did as well as could be expected. (Middle West).

METRO

Happiness—

Too much Pollyanna stuff, and not enough thrills. Well acted and well produced. Did only moderate business. (Middle West).

Went over well. (Middle West).

A delightful bit of screen entertainment that was well received by overflow audiences. (East).

Scaramouche—

This one made money for a week's run. (Middle West).

The White Sister—

A beautiful production of broad appeal. It proved a first rate drawing card and returns were very good. (Middle West).

All that has been claimed for it. Did very good business at advance prices. (Middle West).

ASSOC. EXHIBS.

The Extra Girl—

Mabel Normand has lost none of her charm and drawing power. It is a very clever comedy that has been doing a very pleasing business here, and is being held over for a second week. (West).

Going Up—

Went pretty well. Just fair week on second run showing. (Middle West).

The Madison, Detroit, used this on "A Society Scandal" (Paramount).

Our Gang Comedies

Two Reels

Countless Times They've Saved the Show!

Hal Roach's little rascals are actually bigger box-office attractions today than nine-tenths of the feature stars.

The kids are wild over them; older persons chuckle, giggle and roar at them; and exhibitors are sending in more favorable reports on them to the trade papers than are received on any other two reel comedies.

Time and again they have saved the show for exhibitors. They'll do the same for you.

BOYS TO BOARD (Pathe), (two reels). Although this is a good comedy, it is not as good as GIANTS VERSUS YANKS or CHAMPEEN. If they see Our Gang once, you can't pay them to stay away. Try it and see. The film was in good condition.—H. B. Lindblad, Grand, McIntosh, Minn.

CHAMPEEN (Pathe), (two reels). We will recommend these Our Gang comedies as 100 per cent to any showman. The film was in good condition.—Noreen & Fried, Rex, Hutchinson, Minn.

COBBLER (Pathe), (two reels). This one is no different from the rest of the Our Gang comedies. They are all good. The film was in good condition.—H. B. Smoots, Lowell, Little Falls, Minn.

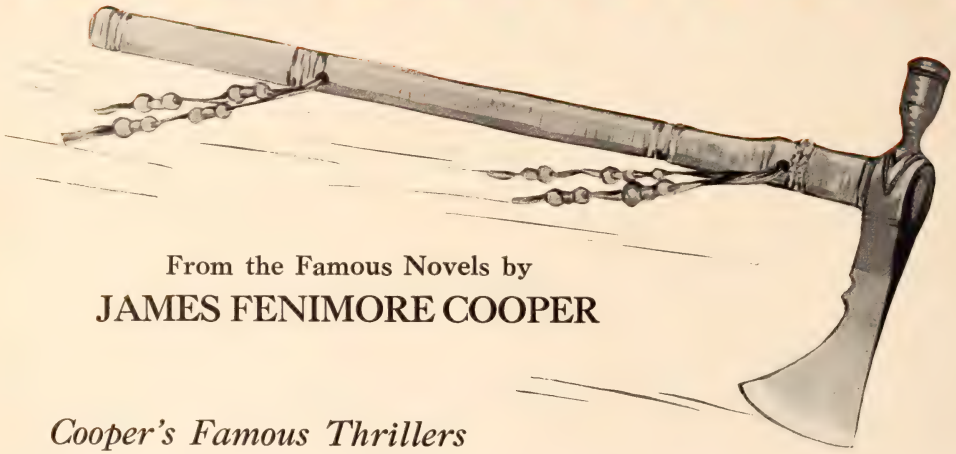
DERBY DAY (Pathe), (two reels). Our patrons are asking for more Our Gang comedies. They are wonderful. The film was in good condition.—M. D. Gowan, Orpheum, Ortonville, Minn.

FIRE FIGHTERS (Pathe), (two reels). This is a very good comedy which pleased our patrons 100 per cent. Our Gang comedies are all good. The film was in good condition.—K. Raddatz, Opera House, Drake, N. D.

FIRE FIGHTERS (Pathe), (two reels). This Our Gang comedy absolutely is a knockout. They can't make them better. These comedies are the best on the market. —M. D. Gowan, Orpheum, Ortonville, Minn.

OUR GANG COMEDIES (Pathe), (two reels). These comedies are always good and can't be beat. They get many good comments from patrons. The film was in good condition.—N. Fisher, University, Minneapolis.

OUR GANG COMEDIES (Pathe), (two reels). These are the best two reelers on the market. Every one is good. The film was in good condition.—Fred Beecher, Orpheum, Sioux Falls, S. D.



OUR GANG COMEDIES (Pathe), (two reels). We have used about a dozen of these to date and haven't had a bad one. They will hold up a poor feature, for they've done it for us.—C. N. Bontecou, Grand, Howard, S. D.

Cooper's Famous Thrillers
at Last Brought to Life!

Every chapter of Cooper's famous romances was filled with the warwhoop, the sound of rifle shots, the delightful tremors of narrow escapes.

No more exciting stories of the old frontier were ever written.

Now you may see in a splendid Patheserial all those well-loved characters of Hawkeye, Uncas, and all the rest; now you may see all those wonderful adventures!

THE SPAT FAMILY

Two Reel Comedies

The Beautiful and Dumb

J. Tewksbury Spat married her because he thought her beautiful.

She married him because he had such a lovely mustache, wore English sport clothes and said "hahlf" for half and "ahnt" for aunt.

She may have been beautiful but she is very, very dumb; and as for J. Tewksbury,—well, he has to use a soft rubber comb for fear of the splinters.

When the Spats and brother Ambrose get to talking, they can start a fight on the weather. They are thick, and they are very funny.

Introduce the Spats to your audiences for more laughter and happier hours.

Shows 24-Sheet on Stage to Aid "Tiger Rose"

During the short intermission between shows, E. D. Turner, manager of the Imperial, Asheville, N. C., announced his coming attraction, "Tiger Rose" by mounting a twenty-four sheet cut-out behind a gauze scrim and exhibiting it from the stage illuminated by flashes of lightning.

Turner's big stunt, however, was his lobby display, but the photographs aren't quite distinct enough for publication.

Together with his art director, Fred Tipton, Turner built a real cataract in the lobby. He used a small tank and pump which required only one filling of water. The sides of the waterfall which was made of canvas were masked off with spruce boughs and leaves. Over the top of the falls a stuffed cougar was perched in a realistic attitude.

The display was balanced by smaller exhibits on the sides of the lobby consisting of three-sheet cut-outs framed in front of foliage and flowers. It was a one hundred per cent display, and while inexpensive, it required no little work. The work was well repaid by the attention that it brought.

Advanced "Brummel" Campiagn

Valuable Hook-ups Are Made Prior to Showing of Picture in San Francisco

WHEN "Beau Brummel" comes to the Imperial theatre, San Francisco, shortly, it will have the benefit of an unusually through advance campaign, embracing city officials, clubs, business associations and department stores.

Last week, George A. Oppenheimer, Inc., fired the opening shots of the campaign by showing the picture to the president, general manager, chief publicist and chief window trimmer of the Emporium, City of Paris, the White House, Liebes & Co., Livingston's and O'Conner-Moffatt, who are the biggest and finest stores in San Francisco. The picture is also to be shown to the President of the Chamber of Commerce, the President and Secretary of each of the following clubs: Downtown Association, Retail Men's Association, Lions, Retail Clothing Men's Association, Chief of Police and the Mayor.

The purpose of the above is to institute a voting contest in each one of the clubs so that they may elect one of their members as the Beau Brummel of their club. Then prizes will be given to the champion Beau Brummel of the various clubs. All the big department stores and retail clothiers have agreed to cooperate by window displays and special advertising for the Beau Brummel week.

The Emporium has agreed to put on a Men's Fashion Show, at which they will display golf clothes, tennis clothes, hunting clothes, camping clothes, evening clothes, business clothes—in fact, every type and kind of clothing worn by men.

The mayor is expected to declare a Dress-Up Week or Beau Brummel week during the opening week of the picture. The Police Department will also hold a contest for the Beau Brummel of the San Francisco Police Department.

Further, arrangements have been entered with one newspaper to carry a series of sketches of several prominent men in San Francisco, showing them as they are today and as they would have looked during the period of George the Third, when Beau reigned supreme.

Couldn't Get 10 Steers—But It Was a Good Idea

When George Schade of the Schade theatre, Sandusky, O., came to play First National's "Black Oxen" he had a great idea. He would get ten steers or oxen and parade them in single file down the main streets. Each one would have one of the letters of the title painted on his sides. There were only nine letters but an extra steer would be necessary for the spacing between the two words.

The slip-up in the stunt was the fact that ten steers were not obtainable.

Schade finally managed, after much bargaining, to get two steers from a neighboring packing house and he made these do for ten. They were appropriately bannered and had a boy announcer with them. With his public trained to expect something new from the enterprising manager of the Schade treatre, it was a simple matter to connect the phenomenal street sight with a coming picture.

Real "Big Top" Exploitation for "Circus Days" Show

For its engagement of "Circus Days" the Hippodrome, York, Pa., sought every form of co-operation and was successful to the point of making the campaign almost a town celebration.

At a moderate expense the house built a circus front with tent awning. It featured the line "The Greatest Show on Earth," and also advertised as a side show, a dancing dog and a victrola. Witnesses testified that the victrola positively was there. The stunt which captured the imagination of the town, however, was a circus parade, which enlisted the services of 298 kids, the majority of them wearing Jackie Coogan costumes.

Silhouetted Shadow Box on "Her Temporary Husband"

One of the latest houses to employ the silhouetted shadow box effectively is the Coliseum theater, Seattle, Wash., which used it on "Her Temporary Husband" on the outside entrance of the theater. A hand drawing of the invalid and his supporting leading man and woman were put in the center of the square box. They were used in cutout effect, a slight variation from former methods. This box could be illuminated at night and furnished an interesting and certain guide light to pedestrians.

"Her Temporary Husband" was advertised along comedy lines by the Coliseum. Emphasizing the fact that feature length comedies are rare and the hardest things to produce in the picture world, it promised its patrons that it had a real one.

Town Hunts While Little Brother Dozes in Dark

The fickle dame who governs events played one of her unusual tricks, with the result of first page publicity for William M. James, owner of five theaters in Columbus, O. The story was given special treatment in papers of the city.

The State theater, owned by Mr. James, [illegible] located in the Ohio State University district. A family nearby attended the last show. The daughter took charge of her seven-year-old brother and told him to wait while she entered the rest room to powder her nose and put on a hat.

The little brother waited. He decided to find a seat and watch the last few flickers. The sister came out later and found no brother. She believed that he had gone home, and she went there also.

No brother at home. A nervous family. The police were called. Visions of an accident. University students of many fraternities and sororities enlisted in the hunt. A party passed the lobby of the theater. Cries issued from there. Behold, there was the little fellow locked behind the glass doors of the foyer, raising Ned. Joseph Wilson, manager, had locked the theater for the night.

The lad explained when rescued that he had grown tired of waiting for his sister, seated himself and when he awoke the theater was dark.

A three-story cut-out with a special background was used in the lobby of the Mc-Jeska, Augusta, Ga., by Manager I. L. Shields on "Tiger Rose" (Warner Bros.)

Animated Lobby Display Made From Poster

Inspiration for a unique lobby for "Conductor 1492," at the Strand, Knoxville, was supplied W. F. Brock by the stock 24-sheet on this picture.

This piece of paper has a large reproduction of a trolley car with the heads of passengers in the windows. Brock cut the heads off, mounted them individually and then collectively on little rockers which were belted to a motor. When the motor turned over the faces in the windows of the trolley car bobbed back and forward. It made one of the best displays that Brock has ever installed in the Strand.

Names Stars as Rivals in Newspaper Contest

Fred Jackson, manager of Loew's theatre, London, Ontario, drew himself into an interesting controversy in offering a prize of $10 for the best essay which told of the preference by a picture fan for either Rodolph Valentino or Ramon Novarro, the offer being made under the question, "Which do you prefer, Rodolph or Ramon?" Complimentary tickets were given to the writers of the next 12 best essays of 300 words. The competition was arranged as a stunt for "Thy Name Is Woman," starring Novarro, at Loew's London house.

Fay Tries Radio Publicity for "By Divine Right"

Radio publicity was used for "By Divine Right," at Fay's theatre, Providence, R. I.

Edward Fay had the announcer for station WJAR, Providence, appear at each performance the week prior to the showing of "By Divine Right." In a three minute talk, Whalen told those present of the "Unusual Picture" that was coming the following week. This was followed by a short synopsis of the story. The same speaker was heard over the radio each night from station WJAR, where he repeated his talk between announcements.

"Reward" Poster Issued on "The Humming Bird"

The "Reward" poster was used appropriately and effectively on "The Humming Bird" recently by Raymond B. Jones, of the Howard theatre, Atlanta.

Across the top, in big letters, was the single word Reward! This copy followed:

Description — A beautiful and dangerous woman. Prepossessing in appearance with a distinct personal charm. Equally at home in highest and lowest society. Height, 5 ft. 2 in. Hair, black. Eyes, dark blue, with a gold sparkle when excited. Teeth, even and pearly white. Complexion, fair. Figure, slender but well rounded. Last seen — January 21, leaving Pier 54 as passenger on Aquitania arriving from France. Entered cab for Waldorf-Astoria with tall, well-built, handsome and well-dressed man, who was booked as Randall Carey with the ship's purser. Later reported at real estate office when pair inquired rental of exclusive Fifth Avenue house, furnished. $1,000 will be paid for the capture of beautiful Gloria Swanson, alias Mlle. Toinette, alias "The Humming Bird." Last seen New York. Reported to appear at Howard, week Jan. 28.

Airplane Stunt Used on "Mailman"

Extensive Publicity Gotten Through Special Flight Made at Santa Rosa

THE management of the Strand Theatre Santa Rosa, California, not only secured front page publicity in the local papers, but in all the San Francisco papers as well, and at the same time helped to create postal history, as he arranged to have an airoplane deliver a bag of mail to the San Francisco post office, and return with another bag of mail and the film can containing "The Mailman."

Moving pictures were taken of the plane and the pilot, George Powers, and the departure of the big machine. These pictures were developed at once and shown during the run of "The Mailman."

Miss Corinne Fristram, organist of the Strand Theatre, made the flight in the mail plane and was known as "Miss Santa Rosa." She personally delivered letters to Mayor James E. Rolph and Postmaster James E. Power of San Francisco and received letters in reply from them. Mayor Newton B. Kinley of Santa Rosa, wrote to Mayor Rolph, extending his greetings by the first airplane mail to be conducted in the state of California outside of San Francisco. The trip was first authorized by C. F. Egge, General Superintendent of Air Mail, at Washington.

Passengers Sworn In

Postmaster Mobley swore in Pilot Powers and Miss Fristram as postal employees, this being an absolute necessity, no one being permitted to handle Uncle Sam's mail without first having become a postal employee.

Henry Engel of the Middlesex theatre, Middletown, Conn., grabbed off a great deal of free publicity in the newspapers when he arranged a social in the "swing room" of the post office. Whist favors were awarded to mail carriers and luncheon served after the card playing.

Frank Parmelee, state president of the clerks' association, Andrew A. McConochie, president of the Middletown Association of Letter Carriers, and Clark Dickinson, secretary of the rural carriers' association, gave addresses. Letters from Senators McLean and Brandegee and Congressman Freeman, pledging their support for the betterment of conditions for postal employees, were read. "The Mailman" was then shown, supplemented by a radio program received on a set furnished by a local merchant, who tied up with the theatre on the publicity and advertising.

Double Campaign is Staged on "When a Man's a Man"

"When a Man's a Man" was played and advertised day and date alike by the Regent and Blackstone theatres, Pittsburg. With simultaneous play dates there was no reason why the advertising expenses should not be distributed two ways and the theatres cooperated on their exploitation. The sign painted street car ballyhoo was used to advertise the joint run and millinery window displays gave each theatre an even break.

The Blackstone theatre had an original idea for its lobby magnet. Above the front entrance it hung its chief display, an open book above which was a three-sided panel. Written prominently across the center was the title while the scene above showed a Westerner, reclining on the edge of a cliff and looking meditatively over the distant valley.

Vivid colors and sharply outlined drawings helped to intensify the display.

Pleasing Lobby and Stage Art on "Song of Love"

Artistic displays both in the outside lobby and the stage prologue marked the presentation of "Song of Love" at the Rex theatre, Eugene, Ore.

The outside lobby was decorated with a painting of the desert in three panels. The center one, which was three times as large as the other two, showed the approach to an Arabian city. Underneath the painting hung a sign advertising the star and title.

In the center of the lobby a huge cutout of lovers in embrace, showed Norma Talmadge and Joseph Schildraut, her leading man.

The desert atmosphere was carried out in the prologue staging. A night background of a shadow tent and a shining moon were used for the soloist who followed a vocal number with "The Song of Love," from "Blossom Time" as an encore.

Newspapers Co-operate on "When a Man's a Man"

For the opening of "When a Man's a Man" at the Palace theatre, Wichita, Kans., a strong exploitation campaign was put over with the assistance of Al Sobler, First National exploitation man in that part of the country.

The Wichita Beacon hesitatingly consented to co-operate in an "ideal man" competition. Under the heading of "When a Man's a Man," essays were asked for describing the ideal type of man. The replies came in in bales and the result was that when the competition ended the Beacon, which heretofore had never co-operated in motion picture exploitation of this nature, left no doubt as to what its future policy would be when it was asked to tie up with a suitable picture.

The Wichita Eagle handled its "When a Man's a Man" column along slightly different lines. It ran a series of brief biographical sketches of leading men of the city. The First National publicity man got the photographs and interviews and the paper stretched the special biography section out for ten days.

With a special stock and cattle show in town the theatre seized the opportunity of selling the show officials the idea of a float announcing the coming of "When a Man's a Man." The tie-up of the common idea of cattle raising and manhood raising furnished the sympathetic bond between theatre and show. The stunt furnished a free band and parade for the theatre which only had to stand the comparatively small cost of the float.

Another parade was insured by a Saturday morning showing for boy scouts. Four bookstores gave windows to a Harold Bell Wright display.

Local Choir Enlisted for "The Hunchback" Showing

When "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" showed at the Rialto theatre in Charleston, W. Va., Louis R. Brager, Universal exploiteer, worked with the management in putting over a number of effective stunts.

Among these the most notable were the securing of the mixed choir of St. Ferdinand's Church for the rendering of the prologue, and the endorsement of the chief executive of West Virginia.

St. Ferdinand's Choir is a group of singers well known throughout the South and their presence proved a strong drawing card. Brager arranged a special showing for Governor McCorkle and his staff. His excellency was so favorably impressed with the production that he wrote an open letter advising the entire community to see it. So too, did Father Ferdinand, and the result of these letters, in conjunction with the other efforts exerted in the picture's behalf, was widespread interest.

Teaser Ads In Campaign On "The Bad Man" Showing

Prior to the opening of "The Bad Man" at the Knickerbocker theatre, Nashville, Tenn., Manager Dewey Mousson aroused interest by a series of teaser ads defining a bad man.

"If you can give the woman you love to a friend and still smile——"

"If you can ride a horse much better than this (illustration)——"

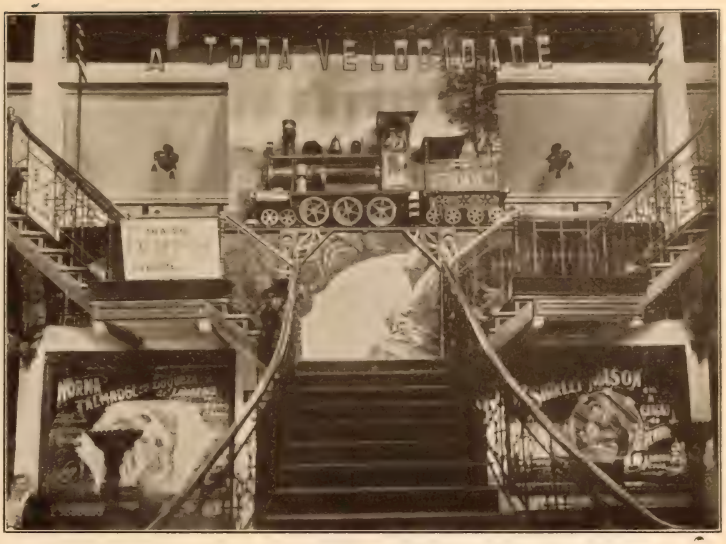
"If nothing can stop you when you're rarin' to go——"

"If you could kill and never fear the blame——"

"If you could love a woman be she married or no——"

No theatre was mentioned. The public was simply admonished to look out for the bad man, that he was heading towards Nashville.

The idea, taken from the press sheet, was adroitly executed.



Striking department store window, based on the gowns worn in "Black Oxen" (First Nat'l), obtained during the run of the picture at Loew's State theatre, Los Angeles.

Puppies Perform in "White Tiger" Window Stunt

A variation of the "trained turtles" which supplied window displays for "Tol'able David" was responsible for some exceptionally successful exploitation on "The White Tiger" on the part of Loew's Ottawa Theatre, Ottowa, Canada. Puppies wearing blankets each sporting a letter in the title of the picture were displayed in a drug store window, and the challenge "what do the puppies say" is reported to have had crowds about the window all day. A prize was offered to those solving the question.

The stunt was started a week in advance and the following week a full announcement of the show at the Ottawa occupied the space. The doggies were supplied by a dog fancier, whose reward was a credit line for furnishing the talent which appeared in the circus.

A shadow box lobby display also drew attention to "The White Tiger." This was constructed of a cutout arrangement of the stock six-sheet, some flashy paste jewelry, a broken mirror and a black cat in cutout form. The display was illuminated by a baby spot, which threw a beam of light resembling the illumination from a burglar's lantern.

Lobby display on "The Fast Mail" (Fox) at the Isis theatre, Rio de Janiero, Brazil, when that picture was recently shown in the South American City.

Many Tie-Ups in Campaign on "When a Man's a Man"

Several excellent mercantile tie-ups were obtained for the showing of "When a Man's a Man," at Loew's Victoria theater, New York City. The Harlem and Bronx section of the New York Evening Journal was used as the medium for an essay contest, the subject being "When Is a Man a Man," open to all residents of Harlem with cash and theater tickets as prizes. Several stories were hooked up for the Harlem Home News, the best one being a story of Harlem girls who described their "ideal man." Photos of the girls were used for what brought a three-column layout.

Another good tie-up which attracted attention was one with the Harlem Board of Commerce which is making a drive for new members. A banner, 40x5 feet, in front of the Board of Commerce offices at 125th street and Lenox avenue, read: "When a Man's a Man" he takes pride in his community. Join the Harlem Chamber of Commerce. See Harold Bell Wright's "When a Man's a Man," at Loew's Victoria theater.

Cards, stressing community spirit as denoting "When a Man's a Man" were also sent to the most prominent business men of Harlem. Among other tie-ups were those on window displays, about fifteen merchants on 125th street using such hook-ups. Liggett's stores at 125th street and Lenox avenue, and 125th street and Eighth avenue, and Koch & Co. used window displays on the book "When a Man's a Man."

Original Designs Feature Lobby Displays at Rex

Lobby displays for "The Wanters" and "Where the North Begins" recently used by Oscar White at the Rex, Sumter, S. C., have been given a high place among the unusual frontal decorations for which this house is gaining a wide reputation.

In his display for "The Wanters," White had two ladders, built of compo board, which he stood on either side of the lobby. On each rung of the ladders was a different sign such as "Some want beautiful clothes," "Some want society," "Some want pleasure," "Some want money." Between the ladders he suspended a sign announcing "The Wanters" with the invitation to "Come inside and see what you want."

To feature "Where the North Begins" White built a pine slab cabin, allowing one of the windows for the box-office, and balanced the sides of the display with pine trees covered with cotton for snow. The floor of the lobby was covered ankle deep with pine needles, and a ragged pine board bearing the title of the picture was hung in the front of the lobby.

Reproductions of "Magic Skin" Feature Displays

Several painted reproductions of "The Magic Skin" formed the lobby display designed by Fred Normand for the Circle theatre, Portland, Ore., during the presentation of "Slave of Desire," screen version of Balzac's "The Magic Skin."

The focal point of the display was a large painting of the skin suspended over the entrance. This was illuminated by indirect lights from above, while immediately below it were cutout figures of characters in the play. The line "are you a slave for love, pleasure, fame, money, youth?" was featured in a strip placed near the display. The same idea was carried out in panels on three of the four doors leading into the auditorium.

Short Subjects and Serials

Plan New Two-Reel Western Series

Universal Will Resume the Making of This Type of Short Subject Film Entertainment

ALTHOUGH production on two-reel Westerns stopped last season at Universal City, it was later resumed at the request of the sales force and on May 10th the first of a new series will be released with one each week to be distributed thereafter.

A tentative schedule for the first six weeks' supply of two-reel Westerns has been arranged. Several of them already are nearing completion.

In the order of their release, they will be "The Bull Tower," starring Pete Morrison; "Love's Round-Up," starring Jack Daugherty; "The Honor of Men," starring Neal Hart; "Boss of Bar 20," starring William E. Lawrence; "Blue Wing's Revenge," an Indian picture and "Winning a Bride," starring.

Among the well-known Western stars who have graduated from these pictures into features the names of Hoot Gibson and Harry Carey are most prominent. Mary Philbin, Laura La Plante, Gladys Walton, and many other actresses got their early screen training playing the feminine leads in Universal Westerns.

Jack Daugherty, who is to be starred in a number of the forthcoming Westerns, is the husband of Barbara LaMarr. He played in several two-reel Westerns last fall, but left Universal City to accompany his wife to Europe. He has just returned to the Universal lot.

Pete Morrison, also slated as a Universal Western star, was recently starred in a Universal serial "The Ghost City." Before that he made a number of two-reel Westerns for Universal release last fall.

Curran to Direct Gribbon in Slang Classics

William Hughes Curran has been engaged by Glavey-Dunaway Productions, Inc., to direct Eddie Cribbon in a series of twelve two-reelers they will produce for Grand-Asher relase on H. G. Witwer's "Classics in Slang."

Edward J. Montagne will adapt and write the scripts of these Witwer stories which are being syndicated in the daily press. Mildred June will be leading woman, William Daniels is cameraman and John J. Glavey director-general. Work on the first of the series started this week.

Eighth "Telephone Girl" Episode Started

The eighth episode of the H. C. Witwer "Telephone Girl" series for F. B. O. has been started under the direction of May St. Clair. Alberta Vaughan is again featured as the switchboard queen, Gladys Murgatroyd. Al. Cooke, Kid Guard and Gertie Short remain in the cast.

There are to be 12 episodes in the series based on the Cosmopolitan Magazine stories.

"Friend Husband" is Snub Pollard's Pathe Comedy of married life.

Will Rogers in Series of Political Satires

"Congressman" Will Rogers, elected on a fourth party ticket will be featured in a series of three two-reel comedies which will be screen satires on the political situation. This is the decision of Hal Roach, who feels that with presidential campaigns imminent, the subject is a timely one.

The first of these comedies has been completed and resulted in the election of Rogers to Congress. The second, it is said, will show him as a lion in Washington's social set and the third at the court of St. James. Political partisanship will be eliminated in all of the pictures.

Gertie Short Returns to "Telephone Girl" Cast

Gertie Short, comedienne, is back in the cast of "The Telephone Girl" series which Mal St. Clair is making for F. B. O. from the H. G. Witwar stories. Miss Short recently suffered a broken nose as the result of being kicked by a horse while filming a scene in this series.

Mack Sennett Launches New Comedy Unit

PATHE finds it necessary to launch another two-reel comedy unit to those already functioning at the Mack Sennett studios. Sid Smith and Vernon Dent will be co-featured under the direction of Harry Edwards. Charlotte Mineau will have the leading feminine role.

Camera work has already started on the first production, titled "The Lion and the Souse."

Barney Oldfield's Debut in Roach Comedy

Barney Oldfield, once speed champion of the auto racers is to make his screen debut in a new Hal Roach comedy for Pathe, in which Charley Chase plays the featured role.

Just what Barney's role will be is not yet divulged, but the comedy is built about Chase's exploits as an auto racing driver. Leo McCarey is the director. Aside from the news weeklies, this will be Oldfield's first appearance on the screen.

C. B. C. Closes Deal With Boston Concern

C.B.C. Film Sales Corporation has concluded a deal with Certified Screen Attractions of Boston whereby that concern will handle the distribution of "Pal O'Mine" and "Discontented Husbands" in that territory. The pictures will be shown in Boston in the near future.

Seven Educational Comedies Listed

April Releases of Educational Also Provides Many Novelty Offerings

WITH a Hamilton comedy, two Christies and a Mermaid comedy, all in two reels each, and with two single reel Cameo comedies, all to be released during April, Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., provides a selection where comedy predominates.

The novelty films such as Bruce Wilderness Tales, "Sing Them Again" series and the "Secrets of Life" series and the twice-a-week Kinograms, complete the program for the month.

Under a contract negotiated last year the first of the Jack White comedies will be released in April. It features Lige Conley in a two-reeler entitled "Midnight Blues" and Mr. White declares that his first offering under his own brand is exceptional slapstick comedy and will surpass any of his previous efforts.

Lloyd Hamilton's "Killing Time," with Christie's "Safe and Sane" comprise the releases for the opening week of the month. Hamilton is supported by a large cast, with Dick Sutherland in a prominent role. Ruth Hiatt is the feminine lead.

Jimmie Adams is starred in "Safe and Sane," a "crook" story with several angles, one of them being a college of burglary where ambitious safe-crackers are taught the finer points of their trade, the etiquette of the blackjack, and how to handle nitroglycerine "soup" without spilling it on the vest.

The Cameo Comedy "Dusty Dollars" with Sid Smith, Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance and Louis Tolhurst's microscopic motion picture study of "The Fly," one of the "Secrets of Life" series, with "Midnight Blues" complete the releases of the second week of the month.

Three single reel subjects and one two-reel comedy are released during the week starting April 20. The two reel subject will be "Dandy Lions," a Christie Comedy with Neal Burns. This is a "Lion" comedy.

"The Trader Keeps Moving," Bruce's "Wilderness Tale," the Hodge-Podge "Realm or Sport" and "Heart Throbs" of the "Sing Them Again" series round out the week.

The Mermaid Comedy, "There He Goes" will be released the last week of the month. Lige Conley, Lillian Hackett and Otto Fries have the leading roles. "Fold Up" the second Cameo of the month features Cliff Bowes, Sid Smith and Virginia Vance.

Successor to Bernard Being Discussed

Since the return to New York from Hollywood of Samuel Goldwyn he has been in conference with Al Woods and Montague Glass discussing the possible successor of the late Barney Bernard for the role of Potash in Mr. Goldwyn's forthcoming production, "Potash and Perlmutter In Hollywood."

Mid-West of Milwaukee Buys Eight Pictures

A. J. McAllister of Lee-Bradford Corporation has sold eight productions to the Mid-West Distributing Co., of Milwaukee, Wis. and is returning to New York, with stops at Cleveland and Pittsburgh, after placing the Lee-Bradford product in many of the leading state right exchanges of the country.

Sweet to Direct Langdon in Pathe Special

Harry Sweet has transferred his screen activities from featured comedian to director and will direct Harry Langdon in a comedy special for Pathe distribution. Richard Jones, supervising director for Mack Sennett is responsible for this move. He feels that with the experience Sweet has had as a comedian he should get good results with the direction of another comedian.

The title of the new subject has not yet been determined, but prominent among the cast supporting Langdon will be Alice Day, Madeline Hurlock and Andy Cylde.

Newspaper Critic Lauds Short Subject

Grace Kingsley of Los Angeles Times witnessed a program at the Metropolitan in that city and after expressing dissatisfaction with the feature length production she stated that the educational short subject saved the show in the following paragraph:

"Thank the heavens, there is Dorothy Devore in a Christie Comedy! She refreshes one's joy in life, this elf of comedy; she makes it possible to sit through such painful wearinesses."

Jimmie Adams in the current Educational-Christie Comedy, "Safe and Sane."

Smith's Century Comedy Now "Lost Control"

Although "The Runaway Car" was the working title of Noel Smith's latest Century Comedy for Universal release it has finally been named, "Lost Control."

Three Century stars appear in the leading roles, Jack Earle, Harry McCoy and Hilliard Karr. Each one of them had been appearing in featured roles in their own comedies up to the time Smith commenced "shooting" the fun-film.

Jimmy Kelly, Bartine Burkett, Marjorie Marcel and Bessie Welsh, well-known comedy folk, appear in important parts in the comedy.

Colored Comedy Child Is Signed by Century

AFTER appearing in two Century comedies released by Universal, James Berry, five year old colored comedian has been signed by the Sterns for ten two-reel comedies.

Before little Berry joined the Stern Brothers outfit, he had appeared in comedies for many of the producers on the coast.

In a recent Buddy Messinger subject a little colored boy was needed and the casting department sent for Berry. His work won for him a part in another Century, and following his part in this Century's president Julius Stern requested that Berry's parents allow the boy to appear in more comedies.

Pathe Offers Evenly Balanced Bill

Two Dramas and Two Comedies Head Regular Release List for April 13

SIX subjects are offered by Pathe for week beginning April 13 in addition to the regular weekly releases of two news reels, Topics of the Day, Pathe Review and the fourth episode of the current serial, "Leatherstocking."

Heading the six additional subjects is "The King of Wild Horses," described by Pathe as the love story of an untamed stallion, featuring Rex, an equestrian find of the producer, Hal Roach.

The story is built around the efforts of a ranchman to capture and domesticate the leader of a band of wild horses. The great black stallion remains unresponsive to the friendly approaches of the man until the roaring flames of a forest fire encompass them both.

Leon Barry, Edna Murphy, Frank Butler, Charles Chase and Sidney de Grey are presented in the cast. Fred Jackman directed.

"Brothers Under the Chin" presents Stan Laurel and Jim Finlayson in a comedy of the sea with the action starting in an orphanage and the two principal players in the role of twin babies.

"The Medicine Hat" visualizes an incident in the life of an Arapahoe medicine man, Long Hair, who was chosen to act for his people at the first great conference held in Washington between United States Government officials and representatives of Indian tribes from all sections of the country.

"Our Little Nell" is another of the Hal Roach "Dippy Doo Dads" series, in which an all-animal cast portray various types of conventional roles. The present subject burlesques the traditional plot of the philanderer who turns out to be a crook. A pool tournament with two monkeys handling the cues is among the features of this comedy.

"If Noah Lived Today" is an Aesop's Fable and portrays with highly imaginative touches how Noah and his complement of animals might have provided for the flood with such modern inventions as airships and the radio to assist them.

Pathe's current Dippy Doo Dad comedy is "Our Little Nell," portrayed by members of Hal Roach's Zoo.

Indian Stories Filmed by Universal

William H. Craft is directing a series of historic plays for Universal based upon the adventures of early settlers and old Indian legends.

The first of the series of short subjects will be "Blue Wing's Revenge," with Ruth Royce playing the lead. Lola Todd, William E. Lawrence and Albert J. Smith appear in her support as she portrays the role of an Indian heroine.

Gallagher in Series for Grand-Asher

After moving the home office to larger quarters at 1650 Broadway, Mr. Grand of Grand-Asher leaves for the West Coast to start the studios working on twelve new features to be supervised by Roy N. Neal.

Richard Skeets Gallagher will be featured in a series of two-reelers after he finishes his present contract with William A. Brady. The new Gallagher series will be based on stories taken from interesting newspaper scoops.

Gus Edwards' "Proteges" in the Films

Century Comedies has Harry McCoy, Hilliard Karr and Al Alt in its studios producing regularly and these players all formerly appeared in Gus Edwards' shows.

Sadie Campbell appeared opposite Buddy Messinger for a year and also had her schooling with Gus Edwards. She will return as Buddy Messinger's leading lady again in May.

"Camping Out" Next Film for Buddy Messinger

Arvid Gillstrom will direct Buddy Messinger in his next Century comedy for Universal release and the title is "Camping Out."

Martha Sleeper again appears opposite Buddy as his leading lady, while James Berry, the colored boy-comedian, is cast for an important part.

Donald Hughes and Tommy Hicks also appear in the cast.

Three Title Changes on F. B. O. Picture

Originally known as "Born of the Cyclone" and later as "Beware the Woman," a picture in which Derelys Perdue, Lloyd Hughes, Ralph Lewis, Emily Fitzroy and Joseph Swickard will appear in under F. B. O. auspices will finally be known as "Untamed Youth."

"The Medicine Hat" is one of the Indian Frontier series being distributed by Pathe.

London Sees Demonstration of Colour Process

A demonstration of the new British Colour Film Process invented by Claude Friese-Green was given in films taken by this process at the Holbron Empire in London recently by Spectrum Films, Inc. It is said the films are taken in pleasing colors at a price only slightly advanced over the ordinary black and white.

Considerable interest was evidenced in the showing. Among the notables present were the Prime Minister, Minister of Labour, Sir Joseph Cook, High Commissioner for Australia and many others.

Hodkinson Appoints New Western Manager

To fill the vacancy caused by the recent resignation of S. J. Vogel, the Hodkinson Corporation announces the appointment of L. W. Weir as their Western Division manager, effective March 29th.

Mr. Weir is well known in the western territory as the former personal representative of Al. Lichtman and the Universal Film Company.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Three Weeks"—Goldwyn, Capitol, New York

Louella Parsons, American:—"From a technical standpoint, 'Three Weeks' leaves little to be desired in the way of photography or direction. The sets are beautiful and so is the scenery; as for the romance, it is there, all right. 'Three Weeks' is going to have its followers."

Rose Pelswick, Evening Journal:—"Elinor Glyn's best seller of thirteen years ago is a sensational affair on the screen. It will undoubtedly have a tremendous box office pull. The settings by Cedric Gibbons are very beautiful.

Don Allen, Evening World:—"A beautifully mounted picture, very well acted by Conrad Nagel and Aileen Pringle. Goldwyn, who produced it and Alan Crosland, who directed, have cause to be right proud of their efforts and work."

Evening Post:—"The superabundance of present day sex novels doesn't seem to have dimmed the popularity of Elinor Glyn's 'Three Weeks,' judging by the crowds that flocked to the Capitol yesterday to see the screen version of it. It has been dressed up in glittering garments and given an elaborate screening. The people in the large cast handle their parts very capably."

The Times:—"Has all the flavor of the book. It is well produced and the acting suits the narrative."

Dorothy Day, Telegraph:—"This photoplay may look forward to a prosperous career, for there are many that will be pleased and entertained with the proceedings."

The Times Square Daily:—"Goldwyn's 'Three Weeks' jammed the Capitol all day yesterday. The sets are gorgeous, especially the palace and the hotel. 'Three Weeks' is a good picture and will stand the scrutiny of those who come there panting and hungry for the famed spice of the story. A box office winner."

"The Extra Girl"—Associated Ex. Ideal, Winston-Salem

Sentinel:—"'The Extra Girl,' starring Mabel Normand, is a winner. It is proving one of the most enjoyable features seen in a long, long time, and Mack Sennett and Miss Normand deserve unstinted praise."

"The Extra Girl"—Associated Ex. Columbia, Portland, Ore.

Oregonian:—"Back again with her old-time vivacity and her particular brand of spontaneous humor that usually sparkles through her pantomime, Mabel Normand is winning the plaudits of the Columbia theatre's patronage this week. 'The Extra Girl' is a distinctive Normand picture. It has the true Mack Sennett touch, not to the point of slapstick, but carefully emphasizing the situations which Sennett's years have taught him are the effective short cuts to laughs."

"Beau Brummel"—Warners Strand, New York

Times:—"One of those artistic celluloid efforts that come along none too frequently is to be seen this week at the Strand. . . . .John Barrymore, who is singularly well suited to the role of the dignified, blase, bumptious dandy, delivers a performance that is a delight to the eye. . .Barrymore's acting as the Beau, is the best thing he has ever done for the screen."

Daily News:—"Devastating is the proper word for Mr. Barrymore's Beau Brummel, bowing himself gracefully through life at the Strand this week. . . . It is a polished and a flawless performance.'

Herald Tribune:—"And now comes something pleasant to record 'Beau Brummel' at the Strand. . 'Peter Ibbetson' is the only other love story we know which is so beautiful, and we enjoyed "Beau Brummel" much more."

Thomas B. Hanly, Telegraph:—"From expressions and comment caught as the audiences changed, it may be given as the opinion of the vast majority of those who were present that Mr. Barrymore has given to the screen a picture worthy to stand at the side of the classic Richard Mansfield first gave to the stage."

Louella Parsons, in American:—"If Richard Mansfield had lived to see 'Beau Brummel' put into motion pictures, I feel sure that he would have nominated John Barrymore for the engaging role that he himself created on the stage."

"Woman To Woman"—Selznick, Rivoli, New York

Telegraph:—"The story is a melodrama that provides good entertainment and marks the return of Betty Compson to her rightful heritage, that niche in the film hall of fame reserved for real troupers."

World:—"Betty Compson, who plays the part of the dancer, is an alluring bit who gives a winsome performance."

Louella O. Parsons, American:—"Miss Compson justifies the faith in her, for not since the day when she gave everyone a surprise in 'The Miracle Man' has she had the situation so well in hand."

"Courtship of Myles Standish"—Associated Ex., Merrill, Milwaukee

On the contrary, it is filled with fighting, excitement, thrills, elaborate sets—everything that the moving picture fan of today requires."

Leader:—"The Courtship of Myles Standish" is the finest picture in which Ray has appeared. A thrilling historical narrative filled with fighting and excitement."

"Unknown Purple"—Truart, Leland, Albany

Times:—"It has been a long time since such a gripping picture has held the Leland screen or any other screen in this section of the state. From the very first shot the audience is held like in a trance until the mysterv unfolds itself near the end of the film."

News:—"Several reels of effective melodrama that are calculated to give the creeps to anyone."

Journal:—"The Leland audience was held spellbound during the showing of the picture, as the interesting story unfolded itself. There is not a dull moment in the entire picture."

Knickerbocker Press:—"Henry B. Walthall acts Peter Marchmont and the rich Victor Cromport, in his quiet forceful way. 'The Unknown Purple' is good movie shiver stuff."

"Unknown Purple"—Truart Capitol, New York

Journal:—"The element of mystery is smoothly sustained and action, which means everything to a theme of this type, moves rapidly."

Telegram:—"Keeps the onlooker at a high pitch of excitement."

Times Square Daily:—"It has been excellently handled, and so far as that goes is definitely favorable to the author-director. Henry B. Walthall is the central figure and has turned in a performance equalling the responsibility. The picture is among the best of its type."

American:—"I want to say those of us who remember the Henry Walthall of 'The Avenging Conscience' and other Griffith productions are going to be greatly pleased with him as Peter Marchmont. It is by far the best thing he has made since those early Griffith days when he undeniably was considered the greatest male star."

"After Six Days"—Weiss Bros. Tremont Temple, Boston

Ed. H. Packard, Cambridge Tribune:—"A picture that ranks high in solidity and trustworthiness of settings, costuming and historical delineation, and which exhibits an art, culture, refinement and dramatic power apparently unknown in the American motion picture business. It might pay American movie producers to sit at the feet of this production and learn from it."

"Thief of Bagdad"—United Artists, Liberty, New York

"Of The Thief of Bagdad, the Fairbanks' picture which Gest sponsored at the Liberty Theatre last night, we venture the opinion that it is the greatest picture we have ever seen or ever expect to see."

Brooklyn Times—"It is needless for the reviewer over whom a magic spell has been cast to try to devote a lot of space to Mr. Fairbanks' new film, "The Thief of Bagdad." Here is the best picture in which the prince of American film actors has ever appeared, and here also is one of the best ever filmed."

Norman Kerry In First National's "Cytherea"

New York Commercial:—"The world's greatest 'movie' arrived at the Liberty Theatre last evening * * * 'The Thief of Bagdad' challenges description."

Times:—"It is a picture which reminds one of Barrie, of Kipling; of Hans Anderson, and for the time that one is beholding the miraculous feats of the photographer, the remarkable sets and costumes that are a feast for the eye, one forgets all about the humming, buzzing, brillantly lighted Broadway, and for the time being, if you will, becomes a child again."

New York Post:—"Once again Douglas Fairbanks—for it is his new production—has taken a decided step forward in showing what can be done with intelligence and a camera."

American:—"Mr. Fairbanks has given us his finest picture and his finest work in "The Thief of Bagdad." To miss seeing it will be to miss a chance to renew your youth and to take a journey into a land that heretofore no one has brought to the screen."

Journal:—"A fantastic screen symphony—fifteen reels of rhapsodic rhythem. Fairbanks is superb in his characterization."

New York Journal of Commerce—"Douglas Fairbanks and his newest feature photoplay 'The Thief of Bagdad' actually took New York by storm last evening.

World:—"It is from its opening scene to the final second finely woven fantasy of a grade so far superior to anything of its general character ever done before that comparison is rendered impossible."

Some of the "beauty and amazement of 'The Thief of Bagdad' there is no possible doubt whatever. Gloriously built and peopled scenes march down the evening, as incitive of thrill and imagination as they are deferential to artistic sense."

Daily News:—"The Thief of Bagdad" is a film which will exhaust fans' superlatives for some time to come."

Herald & Tribune—"The Thief of Bagdad" is indeed a glorious fantasy."

Telegraph:—"As if by the waving of some magic wand or the scattering of the magic powder he used in his play, Douglas Fairbanks, at the Liberty Theatre last night, transported a blase first night audience of New York back to the wonderful days of Scheherazade and the Arabian Nights."

"Poisoned Paradise"—Preferred, Garden, Milwaukee

News:—"The most interesting thing about the picture is the adorable Clara Bow's advent as a star. Carmel Myers in a set of stunning new gowns brings in the vamp element in such a way as to proclaim her queen of seduction.

Sentinel:—"It is more comedy drama than melodrama. There is a good cast of seasoned players, most interesting among them being Clara Bow."

"The Virginian"—Preferred Grand, Pittsburgh.

Chronicle-Telegraph:—"'The Virginian' is possibly one of the best loved characters ever created by fiction and the photoplay presents him just as he lived in the reader's mind. Kenneth Harlan lives the part anew."

Constance Bennett who has a leading role in First National's "Cytherea."

"Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall"—United Artists, Million Dollar, Los Angeles

Examiner:—"Mary Pickford as 'Dorothy Vernon' is delicious with all her traits matured. Those certain Mary Pickford mannerisms which endear this lovely young star to her public are all in this picture. There's comedy, there's temper, and tears and a clandestine love affair, too. There's sparkling action, there's plot and counterplot, deception and intrigue."

Herald:—"You heard naught but praise, and fulsome praise at that, for 'Robin Hood' and two or three other recent pictures for the reason that these photodramas bespoke the last word in costume play expression; and now we have another equally great as those mentioned—and which many will say is even greater—Mary Pickford's 'Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall.'"

Times:—"Miss Pickford has not made a picture as diverting as this for a long time and it is sure to prove one of her most magnificent triumphs."

Daily News:—"'Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall' is a most distinctive contribution to the worthwhile cinematic offerings which have come to the screen so far this season, and is unusually noteworthy because it combines cleverest acting and magnificent photography."

"Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall"—United Artists, Mary Anderson, Louisville

Herald:—"Mary Pickford gives to the story of 'Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall' the zest and youthful buoyancy that the hoydenish Dorothy really had."

Post:—"Mary Pickford's 'Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall' brings to the screen a vivid and distinct personality from the pages of fiction."

Times:—"The delightful Mary Pickford will long be remembered for her part in 'Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall.' Miss Pickford is at her very best."

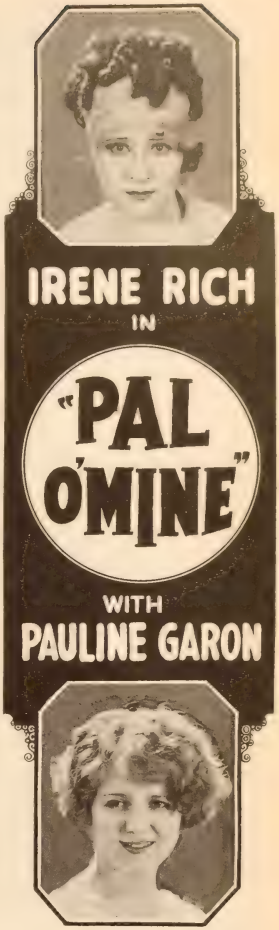
Courier-Journal:—"Mary Pickford never was more beautiful, never more clever, than in her new film offering, 'Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

"His Darker Self"—Hodkinson Cameo, New York

American:—"To judge by the chuckles of laughter that greeted Lloyd Hamilton, who substituted for the missing Mr. Jolson, the motion picture patrons have no grievance against the famous comedian for his desertion."

Evening World:—"If you enjoy an evening of good fun, and most of us do, don't fail to take a dash up to the Cameo. You won't regret it."

Telegraph:—"A good series of fights between the bootleggers and the revenue officers take place."



Times Square Daily:—"Lloyd Hamilton, in 'His Darker Self,' his first full feature length comedy, gives a lot of laughs."

Post:—"The story is about negroes, bootlegging, and an amateur detective, all of which supply material for hearty laughs and an accompanying staff of chuckles, enlivened by some of the funniest and cleverest titles seen in many a day."

Tribune and Herald:—"The producers have done an excellent piece of work and must be credited with being the sponsors of one of the most amusing comedies of the season."

The Galloping Ace

(Universal—4561 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

BILL HART started the fashion several years ago of giving his horse a prominent place in his stories. His pinto pony was given several sequences of his own so that the patrons looked forward to seeing the painted steed in every picture of Hart's. Now most every star of westerns has a "hoss" which is featured. Tom Mix, Fred Thomson — and Jack Hoxie are but a few of the cowboy actors who have capitalized their mounts.

The last-mentioned employs his steed for the expression of his daring horsemanship — and truly the animal saves the story from becoming just another western. Its plot is old and the incident has been used a score of times. Boasting of no originality the director has wisely featured the horse — and with Hoxie riding like the wind the picture takes on an appeal — which is summed up in its lively action.

The idea revolves around that ancient formula presenting the villain attempting to cheat the heroine out of her estate. He claims an option on her ranch and intends to seize it because of the valuable black marble deposits. The returned soldier, unable to get back his old job, takes the next best thing. He is hired by the heroine. And when he frustrates the villain and beats him up in a hand-to-hand fight, the property is restored to his fair employer. Of course getting the job entitles him to have a romance — but the love interest is really secondary to the action featuring the hero's horsemanship and the melodramatic moments involving the villain. There is some comedy relief, but it is of no great importance.

The director having an obvious plot, plays safe — and turns out a conventional western. His fight scene is overdone — so much so — that the realism, striven for, appears ridiculous. The participants grip each other like a couple of bulldogs and mill around from a hillside, jump into a stream and, after swimming about, continue the brawl until the bad man is vanquished. The mechanics of this production, lighting, photography and atmosphere — are satisfactory. And so is the acting — with the star at his best when in the saddle. The best performance? We'll hand it to the horse.

THEME. Western melodrama of a war hero who is unable to get back his old job. He hires out to heroine and saves her land from being stolen from her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The lively action. The heart interest. The fight between hero and villain. The good performances by star and Robert McKim. The first rate atmosphere. The horsemanship of Hoxie—and the good work by horse.

DIRECTION. Follows conventional lines, but manages to build interest in lively action and incident pertaining to hero's horsemanship. Overdoes the fight sequence. No suspense owing to familiarity of plot and incident. Gets fine results from horse episodes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Your best angle is Hoxie and his horsemanship. Play up the horse as highly trained. Exploit with a ballyhoo stunt, featuring rider in western attire. Tie up with American Legion posts—exploiting the hero as returned soldier.

DRAWING POWER. For program houses.

SUMMARY. A fairly interesting western modeled after conventional pattern. Carries some good incident, particularly in scenes featuring horse. Hero extracts sympathy and the action is quite genuine aside from over-stressed fight.

THE CAST

Jim Jordan	Jack Hoxie
Anne Morse	Margaret Morris
David Kincaid	Robert McKim
Kack Williams	Frank Rice
Louise Williams	Julia Brown
Susie Williams	Dorothea Wolbert
Fred	Fred Humes

By Jacques Jaccard. Scenario by Isadore Bernstein. Directed by Robert North Bradbury.

SYNOPSIS. War hero returns home to find his old job gone. Applies for work at neighboring ranch, owned by girl—and discovers villian is preparing to seize the property because of its value in holding rich marble deposits. He beats the villain and saves the ranch for the girl with whom he has fallen in love.

True as Steel

(Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

ONCE more Rupert Hughes deals with a subject close to the hearts of many men and women, what to do when you lose appeal for your husband or vice versa. Mr. Hughes has taken a thred from our modern social fabric and woven it into an entertaining screen play. This time he deals with husbands who grow rich, but keep young, who neglect their wives when they are unable to keep the pace and get mixed up in affairs with young, attractive, magnetic women in the business world. We are sure Mr. Hughes' theme is going to hit a lot of folks right between the eyes.

The production has been richly mounted, its interiors being of unusual lavishness. The lighting effects are also artistic and the photography excellent. There are some interesting shots of New York's great skyscrapers and canyons and one is taken into the cabaret life with some very elaborate sets.

Dominating the entire picture, however, is the new screen beauty, Eileen Pringle, heroine of "Three Weeks." In this feature she is equally as alluring as in the Elinor Glyn work and we're sure she is going to create a following because of her excellent work. The rest of the cast is capable, especially Huntley Gordon, Eleanor Boardman, Cleo Madison, Louise Fazenda, Norma Kerry, William H. Crane and other bright luminaries.

"True as Steel," looks like a box office picture. It is decidedly "in style" these days.

THEME. Domestic drama setting forth the temptations of dealing with woman business managers especially when they are young and beautiful. Showing how a man fell, reached the abyss, but regained his feet in time to save his honor — and family.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting and personal appeal of Eileen Pringle. The love scenes between Huntley Gordon and Miss Pringle. The elaborate interior sets. The fine supporting cast. The New York cabaret interior.

DIRECTION. Has kept up the interest through snappy action and peppy situations. Has kept Eileen Pringle before the camera most of the time which is commendable. Has brought the tale to a very satisfactory close.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of Eileen Pringle and don't forget the other players. Put over a steel display in your Main street hardware store, using the black and whites from the picture and appropriate cards.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for first class downtown theatres.

SUMMARY. As soon as "Three Weeks," becomes more generally shown everyone will be wanting to see more of Miss Pringle. Well here is your chance to make good. But in addition you have a picture of the type that is in style nowadays, a feature that is distinctly high class in every way and written by an author known to everyone. There is a good moral to the tale and a highly pleasing ending.

THE CAST

Frank Parry	Huntley Gordon
Mrs. Frank Parry	Cleo Madison
Ethel Parry	Eleanor Boardman
Jake Leighton	Louis Payne
Gilbert Morse	William Haines
Mrs. Eva Boutelle	Eileen Pringle
Harry Boutelle	Norman Kerry
Commodore Fairfield	William H. Crane
Secretary	Lucien Littlefield
Stenographer	Louise Fazenda

By Rupert Hughes. Directed by Rupert Hughes. Scenario by Rupert Hughes. Photographed by John J. Mescall.

SYNOPSIS. Manufacturer has set a pace too fast for his wife. On a "business" trip to New York he meets Mrs. Eva Boutelle, manager of the Swansea cotton mills and is infatuated with her. The "business" trip lengthens until Parry, wildly in love with the beautiful woman, asks her to divorce her husband and marry him. He offers to divorce his own wife. But Mrs. Boutelle proves "true as steel," and makes Parry see the evils of his way. He returns home and his remorse brings forgiveness from his wife.

Girl Shy

(Lloyd-Roach-Pathe—7600 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

CLIMAXES have come and gone — and the climax featuring the chase or pursuit of the youth who must reach his sweetheart in time to interrupt a wedding ceremony has been exploited in comedies and dramas for years. Griffith being one of its leading exploiteers — yet no picture has ever presented such a novel and exciting climax as Harold Lloyd's latest.

All the ingenuity of striving for original gags and incident is on display here. Lloyd hasn't been prodigal, but has expended his money wisely and well in creating the most rousing finish ever screened. He has distanced his rivals in dishing up spontaneous fun and excitement — with scenes which cause one to gasp with astonishment and suspense. You unconsciously shiver with suspense as you shake with laughter.

The picture offers suggestions of "Grandma's Boy," and "Safety Last." But the sky-scraping episodes of the latter do not approach the high speed action and gags involved in the grand pursuit of the meek hero who had discarded his rich sweetheart when the publishers rejected his manuscript. He is a bashful boy — is Harold — and he writes a book of his romantic conquests, which he offers as advice to young men in how to conquer certain types of women. The introduction is a trifle slow, but it soon picks up momentum and finishes at a dizzy pace. The idea — an old one, incidentally, has been treated so that it looks refreshingly new. It exploits the would-be author who has his manuscript rejected, only to have it published when the publishers appreciate its comedy merits. Pathos enters here and there — which reminds us of the incident that Charles Ray puts over.

So Lloyd uses a bit of each picture in making the best one of all. The gags are bright and new — such as the scene at the brook when Lloyd takes a ride on a turtle's back. And the business in the publishing office carries a kick. But the big kick is the finish when he would stop his sweetheart from marrying a mercenary bounder. What a mad race it is as he commandeers a trolley and dashes through the city streets, and climbs the pole — and jumps into an auto. He uses a dumping cart, a few horses, a motor-cycle — and numerous props in reaching his destination. And there is no pause in the action. One thrill is succeeded by another — and yet no opportunity is lost to keep it moving with mirth. And keeping pace with the high speed gags is a scintillating line of captions. The authors, directors, title writer and star deserve fulsome praises for hitting the bulls-eye again. Come to think of it, Lloyd always hits it. "Girl Shy" will bring out the S. R. O. sign as usual.

THEME. Romantic comedy treating of youth who overcomes his bashfulness by writing a book of his romantic conquests. When it is finally published he is determined to save the RIGHT GIRL from an unhappy marriage.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The thrills — the new gags, the fact action in scenes leading to the rescue of heroine. The rich humor all the way. The excellent titles. The excitement and laughs in the hero's mad race.

DIRECTION. Keeps it going at terrific pace after introductory scenes. Gets every ounce of humor from story which is rich in novel gags. Puts over the most exciting action ever recorded in hero's race to reach his sweetheart.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put it over as Lloyd's best. Tell 'em that it packs the most exciting action ever recorded in latter reels. Use teasers of how the hero treats the vampire and the flapper. Go the limit.

DRAWING POWER. Dust off the S. R. O. sign. You can't keep them away.

SUMMARY. This is Lloyd's most exciting picture — the chase eclipsing anything ever done before. It has new gags and incidents, sparkles in its titles — and measures out heart interest. Carries pathos of "Grandma's Boy" — with more exciting thrills than "Safety Last."

THE CAST

Poor Boy ..... Harold Lloyd
Poor Man ..... Richard Daniels
Rich Girl ..... Jobyna Ralston
Rich Man ..... Carlton Griffin

By Sam Taylor assisted by Ted Wilde, Tim Whelan and Tommy Gray. Directed by Fred Newmeyer and Sam Taylor.

SYNOPSIS. Poor boy is afraid of girls, but assumes he is a conquering hero by writing book telling how to win a woman's love. Meets rich girl and has romance. When his book is rejected he casts the girl aside. So she becomes engaged to rich bounder. With the announcement that the book is to be published the boy is determined to win back his sweetheart—and has to commandeer trolleys, trucks, autos and horses to save her from unhappy marriage.

Virtuous Liars

(Whitman Bennett-Vitagraph—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS marital drama presents many gaps — which may be the fault of direction or poor editing. Of course the theme does not carry any invention, it being the oft-told tale of a wife who, unable to tolerate her worthless husband, goes to the city and masquerades as a widow, telling "white lies" in order to interest guileless men of wealth. In looking for entertainment one must not scrutinize this plot too closely — particularly in the matter of conveniences.

These scenes are well mounted and they carry most of the interest insofar as planting the heroine's deception. Meanwhile there are a few inserts of the intemperate husband having a gay fling in Havana where he comes under the influence of an adventuress and her associate. The action drags most all the way, but has its moments of appeal in the development of the romance between the art patron's nephew and the heroine. There is a counter romance which suggests a faint note of conflict when the youth discards New York's richest heiress for the fair artiste.

The drama enters when the husband reads of his wife's inheritance. He will come back and effect a reconciliation if possible — and his wily scheme prompts him to seek out his child. Sure enough he locates her in the park — and when she disappears a frantic search is made for her. He returns her to her mother and discovers her fiance. This is some predicament, as they are not divorced. Then comes a weak climax — a scene which defies logic and only shapes the convenience of establishing a happy ending. The Havana temptress has followed the husband right into the home of his wife—while her jealous lover awaits outside. When the husband is bought off with fifty thousand dollars and departs, a bullet from the Cuban secreted in the shadows kills him.

The next caption acquaints us with the triumph of romance — with the attending scene, a happy embrace. The wife has made a confession of her "white lies." The picture is well mounted and competently played by Edith Allen, Burr McIntosh, David Powell and Maurice Costello — with the latter giving the most natural performance.

THEME. Domestic drama revolving around forsaken wife who is encouraged to tell "white lies" in order to win fame and fortune. With the death of her benefactor his son has romance with her—and husband is killed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The good mounting given picture. The natural performances by Maurice Costello. Burr McIntosh, David Powell and Edith Allen. Scene when benefactor dies. Scene when husband surprises his wife.

DIRECTION. Allows action to drag considerably. Doesn't establish break-up of home clearly enough—and introduces convenient sequence at climax in eliminating the husband. Handles players in capable manner and gives picture good mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Here is a title to exploit with teaser campaign. Start a series of pertinent questions whether it is advantageous for one to tell "white lies," or masquerade under false colors. Mention the leading players. Bill it as a domestic drama.

DRAWING POWER. For neighborhood and community houses.

SUMMARY. This domestic drama exploits the theme of sailing under false colors by a woman who resorts to "white lies." It drags considerably — and too much latitude is allowed in captions in pointing important sequences. Has a weak climax. Adequately mounted and played in competent fashion

THE CAST

Norman Wright ..... Dav'd Powell
Josiah Wright ..... Maurice Costello
Edith Banton ..... Edith Allen
Jack Banton ..... Ralph Kellard
Julia Livingston ..... Naomi Childers
Livingston ..... Burr McIntosh
Juanita ..... Dagmar Godowsky

By E. C. Holland. Scenario by Eve Stuyvesant. Directed by Whitman Bennett.

SYNOPSIS. Married couple have quarrel and separate, the wife moving to city to pursue art, while husband flees to Havana. Wealthy art patron becomes interested in her, thinking her a widow as she has represented herself — and leaves her his fortune. His nephew falls in love with her and marries her when the husband returning home to effect a reconciliation, is killed by jealous admirer of Cuban adventuress.

The Storm Daughter

(Universal-Jewel—5303 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A MELODRAMA of the briny deep from which is projected a character study of a brutal skipper who undergoes a transformation of character when he comes under the influence of romance has its expression here — and aside from the characterization, the details of atmosphere aboard a four-master, and a storm climax it does not measure up to the usual pattern of its kind. The idea, being more or less familiar, might have had its conflict treated more briskly insofar as its romance is concerned — and the censors might have left the fight episode alone. By eliminating it they have robbed it of considerable vigor.

With Tom Santschi in the role of the brutal skipper, we expected much realism in the shape of a hefty fight. Yet it is merely suggested. The villainous first mate, determined to assume command, stages the mutiny, but when the captain attempts to suppress it we see him being carried to his cabin a helpless victim. It is suggested that he put up a good battle. Meanwhile in running down the fair skipper of a fishing smack, he places her at work — and constantly airs his opinions of his hatred for women. Here was the opportunity for the heroine to match her wits with him — but instead the majority of scenes present them venting their anger or registering retrospection.

The idea is to show the captain's transformation. And it comes when he reads over his mother's letter. The villainy is not very emphatic, the first mate showing his true colors once the skipper is overpowered. The latter has been saved a watery grave through the intervention of the heroine. The punch having been trimmed in the fight is reintroduced at the climax when the schooner, caught in a storm, strikes a reef. The survivors are the skipper and the girl.

The scenario of Edward Montagne's is compact enough and carries typical incident. And he has colored the characterization sufficiently to make it vivid. The director is at his best with the details of atmosphere — the cast and types being well selected too, aside from William Davidson who is too sleek of manner and too refined of speech for his role of first mate. Miss Dean doesn't have many emotional opportunities, so the acting honors go to Santschi.

THEME. Melodrama of the sea—with brutal skipper having transformation of character through the influence of girl—whose spirit enables her to match her wits against his brutality.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The atmosphere aboard the schooner. The character study by Tom Santschi. The appealing work of Priscilla Dean. The suspense of the climax showing a storm at sea. The mutiny. The romantic conflict.

DIRECTION. Handles details in good fashion, but his punch scenes in mutiny and fight have been trimmed. Provides good atmosphere. Fairly effective climag. Might have developed more conflict between central characters instead of establishing much of it in captions.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. An elaborate campaign book has been put over for this picture. It offers punch teasers, slogans, lobby effects — such as props, signal flags, etc. Also considerable ideas offering stunts and ballyhoos.

DRAWING POWER. For action lovers. Good for average house in any locality.

SUMMARY. Characterization is vigorous enough, but plot fails to establish romantic conflict. Censors have trimmed important punch scene showing a fight—So the picture depends upon the storm for its highlights. Competently played by Santschi and the star. Atmosphere is good. Titling not always convincing.

THE CAST

Priscilla Dean ..... Kate Masterson
Tom Santschi ..... Brute Morgan
William B. Davidson ..... Rennert
J. Farrell McDonald ..... Con Mullsley
Cyril Chadwick ..... The Duke
Bert Roach ..... Olaf Swenson
Alfred Fisher ..... Hoskins
George Kuwa ..... Ah Sin

By Leet Renick Brown. Adapted by Edward J. Montagne. Directed by George Archainbaud.

SYNOPSIS. Girl sailing a fishing smack is run down by brutal skipper of schooner. She is rescued and impressed into service. Skipper is woman hater and makes life miserable for her. Meanwhile the first mate is plotting a mutiny so as to assume command. The skipper is overpowered — and the first mate is helpless when he loses control of boat during storm. The girl rescues the skipper — and they prove to be the only survivors. Love triumphs.

Why Men Leave Home

(John M. Stahl-First National—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

AVERY HOPWOOD and his intimate bedroom stuff have come to the screen. The public flocks to see his stage boudoir dramas; they'll probably do the same when they are shown in pictures. This is an "intimate" picture. It opens with views of a bridal chamber, showing the marked attention given a bride by the husband. In the last reel there is more bedroom "shots" showing the same husband but another wife and the end comes with some view of the first couple enjoying their second honeymoon breakfast in their Pullman berth a la pajama.

As a picture of modern married life, "Why Men Leave Home," is a credit to its producer John M. Stahl who has wisely picked a A No. 1 cast to interpret the various characters and he sure did choose two ideal players when he selected Lewis Stone for the husband and Helene Chadwick for the wife. Mr. Stone contributes some excellent acting, including a lot of subtle comedy while Miss Chadwick brings both charm and talent to the role of the "Mrs."

Rich comedy runs all through the picture and this humor is handled with clever artistry. There is drama, too, especially when hubby arrives home following a party with his "stenog," and finds his wife unexpectedly awaiting him. Embracing him she smells the ever-present perfume on the lapel and divorce is the result. There is a clever situation toward the close when the grandmother, learning of the marital troubles, lures the couple to her home, not knowing John is married again and then has the place quarantined. There are some stirring scenes when Wife No. 1 meets Wife No. 2 in the quarantined home. We believe "Why Men Leave Home," will entertain the great American motion picture audience.

THEME. A comedy drama setting forth just what the title says. Once the wife becomes "the other woman," things change. Before that condition arrives, however, the wife decides to provide her own entertainment and the hubby does likewise.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The wedding scene. The intimate boudoir scenes. The unexpected meeting of husband and wife as the former arrives home, perfume-laden, from a theatre party with "the other woman." The scenes showing the "quarantining" of the house and the meeting of the two wives. The subtle comedy contributed by Lewis Stone.

DIRECTION. Has put the Avery Hopwood comedy on the screen in first rate style. Has injected a number of dramatic as well as novel situations. Has been fortunate in having a fine and able cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title. The names in the fine cast. Innumberable tie-ups with various stores.

DRAWING POWER. Will be a good box office picture if properly and widely exploited. Suitable for downtown first runs, neighborhood in some sections and the towns.

SUMMARY. A diverting comedy drama. All your patrons will enjoy the work of Lewis Stone as the wayward husband and the charm of Helene Chadwick as the patient, suffering wife. The feature is distinctly a high class one and is artistically mounted and beautifully photographed. It possesses the required snap and pep to attract the younger folks.

THE CAST

John Emerson ..... Lewis Stone
Irene Emerson ..... Helene Chadwick
Grandma Sutton ..... Mary Carr
Grandpa Sutton ..... William V. Mong
Jean Ralston ..... Alma Bennett
Nina Neilson ..... Hedda Hopper
Sam Neilson ..... Sidney Bracey
Betty Phillips ..... Lila Leslie
Arthur Phillips ..... E. H. Calvert
Dr. Bailey ..... Howard Truesdell

Adapted by A. P. Younger from the Avery Hopwood stage success. Directed by John M. Stahl. Photographed by Sol Polito.

SYNOPSIS. John Emerson starts his married life by paying every attention to his bride, but on his first anniversary he forgets to buy her present until reminded of the occasion by a gift from his wife. At the office John shows marked attention to his stenog and when his wife goes away, he takes her to the theatre. The wife, arriving home unexpectedly, discovers the affair. There is a divorce. John marries the stenog. However, Grandma Sutton gets John and his former wife into her home and then with the aid of the doctor has the place quarantined. The old love wins out. John divorces the stenog and starts on a second honeymoon with his first wife.

Why Get Married?

(Laval Photoplays-Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HERE we have Mlle. Andre Lafayette who so ably portrayed the role of Trilby in the recent film of that name, interpreting the character of a young wife who cares more for the business world than the home. The French actress has a role of much heart appeal, widely different from her former screen effort, and proves that she possesses real versatility. The story seeks to show that no woman can be a success both in marriage and business. This theme is well developed by an adequate cast, including Helen Ferguson, who shares honors with the star in the character of a young wife who finds real happiness in her husband, home and baby.

The picture has several dramatic situations. The first comes when a gang of bandits seek to hold up a railroad freight office but are thwarted in their efforts by the hero who puts up a real fight with the ruffians and wins promotion as a reward. Another good fight is staged when the husband receiving an anonymous letter setting forth that his wife is untrue, senses who the sender is, and rushes forth to the apartment of the son of the manufacturer employing his wife and proceeds to wipe up said apartment with said son and his Japanese butler. There is more drama, when another family receives a similar anonymous letter declaring the husband is becoming too attentive to another woman and disaster looms but is cleared away by explanation.

"Why Get Married?" is artistically mounted, although the story does not call for elaborate settings. Jack Perrin does well in the role of Wainwright, husband of the business woman. Max Constant is satisfactory as the other husband. The picture has a good box office title for certain houses and because of Mlle. Lafayette's fame as "Trilby," will undoubtedly attract good business.

THEME. A domestic drama setting forth the efforts of a young woman to become a success both in business and marriage and failing in the former.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Mlle. Lafayette's work in the role of Marcia Wainwright. The fight with the railroad thieves and the battle between the hero and the villain in the final reel. The good supporting cast, especially Helen Ferguson. The attractive interiors.

DIRECTION. Has done well with the material at hand. Has kept up the interest uniformly well throughout the entire six reels. Has planted a couple of good fights. Has brought the plot to a satisfactory close.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title. The star. Tell them of Mlle. Lafayette's success in "Trilby." Tie up with your local business women's clubs, which are now flourishing in most cities. Might start a newspaper campaign on the title.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for second-class downtown houses, community theatres and the towns.

SUMMARY. Much interest will probably be aroused in this production because of the star's success in "Trilby" as it is her first work since her appearance in that feature. The story has a good box office title for certain houses and is interestingly told by an adequate cast. There are several thrilling sequences and a bang-up fight as a climax.

THE CAST

Marcia Wainwright	Andree Lafayette
Jack Wainwright	Jack Perrin
Janet Carroll	Helen Ferguson
Rodney Strong	Bernard Randall
James B. Allen	Max Constant
Mr. Carroll	William H. Turner
Mrs. Carroll	Orpha Alba
John Strong	Edwin B. Tilton

By William H. Conselman. Directed by Paul Cazeneuve. Photographed by Georges Benoit.

SYNOPSIS. Determined to rise in the business world, Marcia Wainwright under the name of Miss Heming breaks with her husband when she is promoted to business manager of a large firm. The husband, eventually, rises to a good position and is about to leave for a distant city to assume his duties when he receives an anonymous letter telling him his wife is untrue. He finds and thrashes the sender, the son of the manufacturer employing his wife. They leave for the distant city together and happy. The married life of a poor family is also portrayed, showing how the same worthless son sought to wreck their marital bliss.

The Breaking Point

(Paramount—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

A WELL-KNIT, tense, absorbing story; a cast that approaches perfection, a setting that is artistic, at times elaborate, at times thrilling and at all times realistic; direction that brings out heretofore unsuspected histrionic ability on the part of some of the players. These are the things that stand out in the mind after a view of this very entertaining production.

There are many points of appeal in "The Breaking Point." It is a combination of society romance, mystery and western, with a bit of the scientific interspersed through the latter reels.

The picture opens with some very fine interior theatre shots in New York and then quickly shifts to a small town in the west, where in a hotel, there is staged a mystery murder. Everyone, including the hero himself, thinks he killed the man and so he dashes into the night, fleeing through one of the best staged snow storms of the season, to a cabin, where a doctor from the East, is stopping. This doctor saves the hero's life, but not his memory, and he takes him home with him as his nephew.

There is strong drama, when ten years later, the wife of the murdered man, an actress, stages a revival of her stage success, and comes face to face with the man whom she believes to have slain her husband and whom everyone thinks was lost in the storm.

Matt Moore does some of the best work we've ever seen him register on the screen, and he is given admirable support by Nita Naldi, Patsy Ruth Miller, George Fawcett, Theodor von Eltz and others. "The Breaking Point" is very fine screen entertainment. It should find a place on every shadow stage.

THEME. A society drama, murder mystery and scientific feature all rolled in one. Dealing with the stirring adventures of a ne'er-do-well who, afflicted with amnesia, is "made over" into a new man by a skillful doctor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The opening theatre scenes and the back stage shots. The shooting in the darkened inn and the escape of the supposed murderer. The scene in which the young doctor discovers the letter. The second escape from the sheriff following a series of dramatic scenes. The acting of Matt Moore and the entire cast. The well mounted production.

DIRECTION. Has sure built suspense into this picture and a series of dramatic punches that will connect with the most jaded fan. He has inspired his players to put over some real acting and has been successful in making you believe that some of the situations actually could occur.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of the author and the famous stars in the cast. Get the physicians in town to indorse the possibility of the amnesia condition. Tell the folks of the great storm scenes, the gowns worn by Miss Naldi. Arrange for a book display of Mary Roberts Rinehart's work.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the first runs in the downtown section, the best neighborhood houses and the towns.

SUMMARY. It is a picture that holds you from first to last scene. You'll be able to create a lot of interest in the feature through exploitation. Nita Naldi and Matt Moore both do excellent work and they are given excellent support by real actors and actresses. There is something doing every minute and as a whole this is one of the best Paramount has offered this season.

THE CAST

Judson Clark	Matt Moore
Beverly Carlysle	Nita Naldi
Elizabeth Wheeler	Patsy Ruth Miller
Dr. David Livingstone	George Fawcett
William Lucas	John Merkel
Lucy Livingstone	Edythe Chapman
Fred Gregory	Theodor von Eltz
Sheriff Wilkins	W. B. Clarke
Louis Bassett	Cyril Ring

By Mary Roberts Rinehart. Directed by Herbert Brenon. Scenario by Edfrid Bingham and Julie Herne. Photographed by James Howe.

SYNOPSIS. Thinking he has killed the husband of the woman he also loves, Judson Clark flees through a terrific blizzard to a lonely cabin where he hovers between life and death for several days. When he recovers he has lost his memory. Everyone believes Judson Clark dead until an actress comes to town in a revival of her old success and recognizes the supposed young doctor in the audience. After many stirring adventures, the real slayer confesses and Clark regains his memory and wins a bride.

Rough Ridin'

(Approved Pictures—4650 Feet)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

NO pretentions beyond those which have long distinguished the conventional "western" are attempted in this five-reel production offered by Lester F. Scott, Jr. All the devices and turns of plot associated with cattle rustlers, crooked ranch foremen and heroes whose eminently honest intentions are misunderstood are employed to sustain the pace and action regularly sought in these stories of the great and expansive West. "Rough Ridin'" does not attempt pictorial magnificence, unusual story values or characterization. It is content to stand or fall upon its merits as a fast-moving, melodramatic "western," its familiar plot, implausible situations and characters taking second place to action, intense heroism and deep-dyed villainy.

It was never designed for first-run presentation but particularly and specifically for the less pretentious palaces of cinema entertainment and for the audiences which have never lost their enthusiasm for cowboy melodrama. "Rough Ridin'" introduces some thrills — notably the rescue of the heroine stranded in the middle of a bridge with a fast express approaching — gun fights, fist fights and many exhibitions of daring horsemanship.

The photography is especially good. Some long shots give the required touch of atmosphere and while no extraordinary scenic effects are required for the story there is sufficient in the way of realistic backgrounds to serve the purposes of the play.

There is little or no opportunity for "characterization" and the players do not attempt any. Besides possessing a name which will probably be the subject of some big letters on certain of the much be-bannered movie house fronts, Buddy Roosevelt, the star of the picture, does some good riding and does not spare himself in the numerous fights with the villain, a role which by contrast is especially well drawn by Joe Rickson.

THEME. Western melodrama with the usual allotment of fights, gun-play, hard riding and plotting ranch foremen. The comedy relief also follows the traditional line and is provided by the bashfulness of the hero when it comes to telling the girl he would like to marry her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Good photography and several exhibitions of daring horsemanship. A thrill stunt in which the hero rides his horse over a bridge and sweeps the girl into the saddle just before an express train thunders up to her.

DIRECTION. Stresses action by incessant physical movement. There is a swift shift of scene from one incident to another. This makes a sketchy story with only the characters serving as the element connecting one scene with another, but there is plenty of movement. The fights and the thrill stunts are rather well done.

EXPLOITATION. Should be billed as a western thriller dealing with cattle rustlers and revealing authentic backgrounds and ranch customs. A street worker in cowboy costume.

DRAWING POWER. Good for the subsequent run houses where there is a marked appetite for the western and enthusiasm for the serial type of melodrama.

SUMMARY. A highly conventionalized melodrama providing the familiar plot and incident in a fast-moving form. Especially well photographed for a picture of its class and played with an earnestness which gives it a certain appeal.

THE CAST

Buddy Benson	Buddy Roosevelt
Mary Ross	Elsa Benham
Dick Ross	Richard Thorpe
Nate Wells	Joe Rickson
Rosalind Nolan	Frances Beaumont
"Old Man" Nolan	Mike Ready
"Tubby"	Arthur Detloff

By Elizabeth Burbridge. Directed by Richard Thorpe.

SYNOPSIS. Fearless and courageous cowboy is in love with sister of man who owns adjoining ranch. The girl is sought by her brother's ranch foreman, who threatens his boss with exposure of a murder which is supposed to have been committed by him. The foreman is also a cattle rustler and the hero cowboy catches him practically red-handed. The foreman is mortally injured in a fight and then confesses his guilt of the shooting for which he accused the ranch owner. This clears up the atmosphere entirely and the cowboy and the girl are free to marry.

The Hoosier Schoolmaster

(Whitman Bennett-Hodkinson—5600 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE is material enough in Edward Eggleston's famous story to provide interesting screen entertainment and most of it is taken advantage of here. The background is a rural Indiana community of ante-bellum days and the plot takes up with creditable simplicity the efforts of the new schoolmaster to save his reputation and take a girl from bondage. As a medium of rustic drama the picture does not follow any customary standard — it being more of an exposition of native characters and customs as they flourished in 1850.

The schoolmaster, in following the system then in vogue of visiting the various homes wherein dwell his charges, meets a girl "bound out" to a harsh mistress. Because he is a stranger, it is easy for the night riders to fasten him with the guilt of being the leader of the bandits. The plot — which is really a series of episodes strung together on the romantic thread — features a colorful spelling bee in which the teacher magnaminously allows the heroine to out-spell him — and several bits of detail characteristic of the natives and their customs and habits.

The director does not forget the rural touch — and not a single scene is out of its atmosphere. He presents some good incident in the attacks made upon the schoolmaster — and balances the melodramatic moments with the romance — so that the thread of the story is always in front of us. No footage is wasted to plant irrelevant hokum. The only criticism we make of the direction is in planting the hero as too easily victorious in his single-handed fight against forty or fifty men — and allowing too many close-ups. It is well acted by Henry Hull and Jane Thomas as the central characters. A large cast supports them. A picture with a good title and carrying an audience appeal.

THEME. Homespun romance of schoolmaster who comes to Indiana community and finds himself accused of highway robbery. Tries his own case and saves sweetheart's honor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The atmosphere. The spelling bee. The courtroom scene. The good performances by Henry Hull and Jane Thomas. The lighting and photography.

DIRECTION. Has taken series of episodes and built up an interesting plot which, while slight, has moments of appeal. Picture shows evidence in some scenes of poor editing. Has wasted no footage in reaching a climax. Good with his detail and his major incident. Is best with atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. This widely read book should present many angles of exploitation. A lively campaign can be put over with title and the period of the story—also featuring the author. Distribute teasers printed in the form of slates. Tie up with schools. Put on atmospheric prologue featuring spelling bee.

DRAWING POWER. For community and neighborhood houses.

SUMMARY. This carries slight plot—and much incident—but it holds the interest in most of its scenes because of the detail, atmosphere and romance. There are too many characters. Should be re-edited. Extracts sympathy for characters.

Buffalo

MARTINA BROTHERS who operate theatres in Mount Morris and Dansville, N. Y., have taken over the Star theatre in Middleport. The Star was formerly owned by J. Crowell. The owners plan extensive improvements in the house which will be redecorated inside and out.

J. H. Michael, manager of the Regent theatre, and chairman of the executive committee of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y., Inc., and Morris Slotkin, president of the Monument Theatre corporation, operating the Lafayette Square theatre, who is vice-president of the state exhibitor organization, attended the conference in New York last week end at which the legislative situation in Albany was discussed.

L. G. Barger, general manager of the Border Amusement company, has resigned. There are rumors along the Film rialto that Joseph A. Schuchert is about to take over the Marlowe and Ellen Terry, now two of the houses in the Border chain. It is reported that John Maxwell, assistant general manager, has also resigned.

Catherine Campion, formerly at First Graphic, is the new biller at the Fox exchange. Frances Koch is the new bookkeeper. Johnny Bykowski and Carl H. Fahrenbolg are both dizzy putting down the many dates secured by Salesman J. Emerson Dickmon.

G. K. Rudolph, manager of the Fox exchange, put over a good publicity stunt last week when he arranged to exhibit one of Tom Mix's big sombreros in the Main street window of the Hudson clothing store and then sent stories to all the newspapers setting forth the trouble Mix went to in coming east to have his hats especially made to order by one of the big manufacturers. All the papers printed the story.

Billy West, former manager of several local picture houses, who is also a comedian of note, is now touring the community house circuit at night with a partner and putting on a comedy act which Bill admits is the greatest thing of its kind in the world. Manager George Keating presented Mr. West at the Jubilee last week. There were no casualties.

Clayton P. Sheehan, district manager for Fox, who has been in Europe on a special mission for his company for several months, is expected back in Buffalo on May 10.

G. W. Croucher has opened the new Crescent theatre in Newark, N. Y.

The Film Board of Trade of Buffalo had a radio receiving set installed in the Root building headquarters last Saturday night to "listen in" for the T. N. T. dinner in New York. All the exchange managers attended. The program came in excellent manner.

William Bernstein now operating the Strand and Majestic in Elmira, the Colonial in Albany and the Palace in Troy, has taken over the Liberty in Corning. The purchase price was $100,000. Mr. Berinstein will take possession on July 1. This brings the Schine, Dygert and Berinstein circuits all into competition in Corning.

Walter Dion, motion picture operator is passing around the cigars, It's a baby girl. Congratulations, Walter.

Funny thing. Exhibitors complain to the exchange managers about rotten business and then drive up in new automobiles. No wonder the exchange managers laugh up their sleeves. Ed. Laczynski of the Park theatre, Tonawanda; Sidney C. Allen of the Allen; Medina; George E. Williams of the Olympic, Buffalo, etc., are all sporting new gas wagons. And Frank Young, Universal booker, has a new Dodge sedan.

The radio bug has hit Film Row. Manager C. W. Anthony of Vitagraph has had a four tube set installed in his home and now sits up all night trying to get MacMillan at the North Pole. He thought he had him about 4 A. M. the other morning but it turned out to be just plain static. However C. W. did get Claysville, Pa., his home town. Now he's satisfied.

John E. Carr is sure packing 'em in these nights at Shea's North Park. If you want to park near the house it is a case of getting there right after supper or you face the necessity of leaving the old benzine buggy a mile from the box office. John gets all the Shea Hippodrome shows the following week and patrons know that they will always see a good show. And they'll also see John in the latest word in evening clothes. Which is worth something.

J. D. Parmalee has a very attractive house in his new Unity theatre at Grant street and Military road. The lighting fixtures are especially artistic. They are all in wicker work and will help to make the house look cool this summer. The Link organ is providing music.

There was a time when Syd Samson, manager of the Band Photoplays corporation bought his cigars. But them times is over, as they say, Syd finds that he can keep himself well supplied cheaper. When the cigar salesmen enter the exchange, he usually consents to take a sample. And, gosh, you'd be surprised at the number of salesmen entering the George Hall and George Hanny will soon be forgetting about the troubles of theatre life and putting their efforts into getting Crystal Beach in shape for the season. Both are interested in the new company operating the new Canadian shore resort. In fact, Mr. Hall is no less a personage than president.

WITH the enthusiastic good wishes of over 200 friends and admirers ringing in their ears, Mr. and Mrs. Oral D. Cloakey, the former being the recent manager of the Ottawa Regent Theatre, bade a formal farewell to Ottawa, Ontario, at a good cheer party in their honor in the Elks club rooms at the Loew Theatre Building on March 26. On behalf of those present, Sam Roy, assistant manager of the Regent who acted as master of ceremonies for the lively function, presented Mr. and Mrs. Cloakey with suitable gifts, the former receiving a steamer wardrobe trunk and Mrs. Cloakey a beautiful lady's tray club bag. A great dance followed. Mr. Cloakey played the xylophone in a farewell appearance before his many friends and various acts from other theatres provided a splendid programme until an early hour. Representatives of the Elks, Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis, One Hundred and other community clubs were present as well as the staffs of all local theatres. The Regent Theatre orchestra played the music for the dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Cloakey left the Canadian Capital on Friday evening, March 28, for Los Angeles, Cal., where he is taking the position of director of theatres and exploitation for the Universal Pictures Corporation. Their departure from the city was the occasion for another demonstration of enthusiasm on the part of local friends, the couple being given a noisy send-off at the depot.

Announcement has been made at Ottawa, Ontaria, of the appointment of Joe O'Leary as manager of the Russell Theatre, one of the long established houses of the Canadian Capital, in succession to J. T. Moxley, who, at one time, had both the Regent and Russell Theatres in Ottawa. Mr. O'Leary was manager of the Imperial Theatre under Harry Brouse for eight years but has lately been with Loew's Ottawa Theatre. The policy of the Russell is to present both legitimate attractions as well as special moving picture productions.

For the formal opening of the new broadcasting station "CKCO" at Ottawa, Ontario, under the auspices of the Ottawa Radio Association, on March 27, the orchestra of the Eden Theatre, Hull, Quebec, provided all the orchestral and instrumental numbers under the direction of M. Rene Marier, conductor of the Eden Theatre.

J. M. Franklin, proprietor of the Franklin Theatre, Ottawa, made a special trip to Hamilton, Ontario, during the week of March 31 for the purpose of looking over the Lyric Theatre at Hamilton with a view, it is understood, to taking over the house. The Lyric has a combination policy, playing a picture programme along with B. F. Keith family time.

Joe Franklin has had marked success with the Franklin at Ottawa since last September, having a standout every night.

In connection with activities around the Franklin Theatre, the interesting story is being told how Harry Brouse, who is the proprietor of the Imperial Theatre and the owner of the Franklin Theatre property as well as being one of the most wealthy business men in Ottawa, decided one evening recently that he would like to see the Franklin show. Arriving at the theatre wtih Mrs. Brouse, he was quietly ushered to the very last row in the balcony where the last two available seats remained. Thus, the owner of the theatre sat in the very back row upstairs in order to take in the performance.

The Rotary Club of Hull, Quebec, took over the Laurier Theatre, the largest moving picture theatre in Hull, for the one evening, Tuesday, March 25, for the presentation of the club's annual theatre performance. One of those appearing on the bill was Oral Cloakey, retiring manager of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, who provided a xylophone specialty.

Considerable improvement is being effected with the Strand Theatre, Uxbridge, Ontario, in structural changes that are now under way. Manager Shulman has operated this house for some years with rather primitive facilities for the accommodation of the public. The level orchestra floor is being replaced by a sloping floor and the plain hardwood seats of the bench type are giving way to modern opera chairs. The back wall of the theatre has also been torn down to allow for an extension of the building, thus giving a much larger seating capacity. Uxbridge is some 40 miles from Toronto.

The Film Exchange Girls' Association of Winnipeg, Manitoba, conducted a special dance at the Alhambra Dance Gardens, Winnipeg, on March 25, as a benefit for members of their association who were sick or out of work temporarily. Arrangements for the dance were under the direction of Sam Swartz, manager of the Rialto Theatre. There was a large attendance.

Albany

J. H. MacINTYRE, who recently came here from Portland, Maine, to manage the Famous-Players exchange, has been elected vice-president of the Albany Film Board of Trade, to fill out the unexpired term of Frank Bruner, who recently resigned as manager of the local Pathe exchange, to become special representative for the Harold Lloyd productions. Mr. MacIntyre was also elected to the board of directors.

As busy as the proverbial bee, Ben Apple, of the American, in Troy, managed to squeeze in enough time the other night to attend the Chamber of Commerce dinner in his home city.

On orders from the state department of labor, Music Hall, in Norwood, was closed until such time as proper exits and fire escapes have been made to the building. The Hall has been used for some time past by Arthur Pearson, of Winthrop, and doing well.

Jake Rosenthal is getting ready to celebrate the first anniversary of The Rose theatre. It will occur during Easter Week, and Mr. Rosenthal will decorate the theatre and hand out souvenirs to all who attend. There will be a special program, including solo numbers. The lobby of the house has just been beautified by the addition of a cut glass chandelier and other features.

Walter Hays, of Buffalo, and Morris Scharaf, of Boston, dropped into town one day last week, for a few hours on their way to New York. They spent the greater part of the time at the Mark Strand theatre discussing business conditions with Uly S. Hill, manager of the Strand and also of the Troy.

The Leland has taken on a spring-like freshness these days through painters busily engaged in going over the electric signs, marquee, frames and the interior lobby

The Girl Scouts, of Albany, who have been doing the ushering this winter at the Mark Strand theatre, in connection with the Junior Movies are now to be tendered a benefit at the theatre on April 26.

Dr. J. Victor Wilson, manager of the Robbins theatres in Watertown, is becoming a regular orator these days, and is much in demand. On March 25, he spoke at a meeting of the Women's Club of Watertown, and on another occasion, at the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian Church. During his active career, Doctor Wilson has been a Red Cross surgeon in the Russian War, a Rough Rider with Buffalo Bill, a member of the Royal Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, a newspaperman and theatrical manager.

J. H. MacIntyre, new Paramount Albany Exchange Manager.

John Hamil, new district manager for Paramount, was a visitor in town last week. Phil Markell, of Adams, Mass., was also in Albany.

One of the best orchestras in any of the theatres in this section is at the American, in Troy. Mr. Apple believes that there is nothing like good music with his pictures, and is leaving no stone unturned to provide an orchestra beyond criticism.

Business continues to be good in practically all of the theatres, and the effects of the Lenten season are not apparent. In fact, some of the houses report double receipts of a year ago this time.

Although Jack Perrin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Perrin, has recovered from an attack of diphtheria, Keyes Perrin, aged eight, is now down with the measles, and his father, busy with his affairs at the Leland and Clinton Square theatres, is wondering what is coming next.

That veteran, Jimmy Rose, as president of the newly organized film salesmen of this city, is planning a lot of stunts for the coming summer, and which will include baseball games and a clambake. Nat Marcus is vice-president of the society, while Dave Lake will look after the finances, and Vic Bendell will act as secretary.

With vest unbuttoned, C. W. Stombough, new manager of the Pathe exchange here, is right on the job these days. When Mr. Stombough arrived in town he found the hotels filled with plumbers and legislators, making it a rather hard matter for him to locate a room. Mr. Stombough was formerly in Omaha, but during the past seven years has been associated with Pathe product.

Shaul's theatre, in Richfield Springs, is doing well these days on a two-day-a-week policy and does not plan to operate the entire six days until the summer resort village takes on a livelier appearance. The theatre in Morris, N. Y., will open on April 26. The house in Unadilla has been closed for the last five weeks, and it now looks as though it would remain so.

Plans for a community theatre in Stamford failed to pan out last week, and the deal has apparently fallen through. William Smalley maintains a house there.

Film salesmen in town for the week end, and who travel by automobile, declare that the roads are in very poor shape.

F. L. Davie, new manager at the F. B. O. exchange, was pretty sick during the past week, from an attack of ptomaine poisoning. Mrs. Davie arrived in town from Philadelphia on Saturday. Owing to the scarcity of houses, they are having a hard time to locate an apartment.

Charles Walder, of the Goldwyn exchange, is wearing a broad grin these days and with good reason, having booked Nate Robbins for the Goldwyn product in the theatres in Syracuse, Utica and Watertown.

Sam Slotnick, who runs the Strand in Mohawk, and has another house in Syracuse, was in town the past week, his brother driving down with him.

Gilbert L. Becker, a booker in the Goldwyn exchange, is ill with the grippe.

Edward Silberstein, of the Community theatre in Catskill, was along Film Row last week.

The Sans Souci, in Watervliet, owned by Maurice Sullivan, has dropped its admission price from 15 cents to five and ten cents.

Frank Borzage, who has just signed as a Metro Director.

Elmer Crowninshield, of Troy, a machine expert, is reported to have purchased the Independent Movie Supply House in this city, as well as the Buffalo branch.

Following the introduction of the latest censorship bill in the legislature, Samuel Suckno, of the Albany theatre left for New York to attend a conference of the board of directors of the M. P. T. O.

Ben Stern, assistant manager of the Troy theatre, received a surprise last week, when he found himself $500 over as he was making up the payroll. It turned out that the bank had given Mr. Stern $500 too much, and was overjoyed in learning that Mr. Stern had located the amount.

A Shrine Circus in Troy, last week, put the crimps in business at several of the houses.

It has been finally decided by "Doc" Hall, owner of the Strand, in Troy, to convert the former theatre, damaged by fire, into a store

Miss Proctor, cashier for Jake Rosenthal, for the last ten years or more, first at the Majestic, and later at the Rose, is back from a visit to Westport.

Kansas City

TOPEKA, KAN., is to have a new 1,500-seat theatre, which probably will be named the National theatre, after the National Theatre Corporation, by which it is being erected. Work on the new house, which will be modern and fireproof throughout, will start immediately. The house will occupy the site now occupied by the old Grand theatre on Jackson street. The lower floor and balcony each will accommodate 700, while loges and boxes will be installed to give the house a total capacity of 1,500. Carl Boller and Brothers of Kansas City are the architects. A 75-foot front on Eighth street in Topeka also has been acquired by the corporation as a future site for a theatre when business conditions warrant it.

George W. Hinton has been succeeded as branch manager of the Kansas City Hodkinson office by Charles Knickerbocker. Mr. Knickerbocker, who formerly was affiliated with Goldwyn for five years, represented that company at St. Louis, Chicago and Salt Lake City.

Coolness on the part of F. J. Becker, manager of the Strand theatre, Kansas City, prevented what might have been a stampede Monday night when a film caught fire in the projection booth. Mr. Becker calmly warned the audience and the unconcerned note in his voice caused patrons to file out orderly. Fortunately the blaze did not spread and little damage was done, the house opening the following night as usual with a good crowd.

With the arrival in Kansas City last week of R. C. Cropper, special Pathe representative, a special meeting of the Pathe force was called. Mr. Cropper and Cecil Vaughan, local branch manager, left Wednesday for Omaha and a visit to the towns of the territory. Mr. Cropper formerly was district manager for Universal in the Kansas City territory.

Several new openings and changes in management of theatres have occurred in the Kansas City territory the last week. The Empress theatre, which formerly was the Electric, at Conway, Mo., and the Empire, Ladonnia, Mo., reopened last week, while the opening of a new house in Salina, Kas., was announced by Michael Curry. The house at Augusta, Kas., owned by Jack Johnson, has been sold, but Jack neglected to mention to whom. A new house will be opened in Independence, Mo., soon by A. E. Elliott.

As conclusive proof of good business conditions in the Kansas City territory, H. E. Corbyn, representative of the A. H. Blank Enterprises, points to the fact that the fire marshal of Topeka, Kas., was forced to stop the sale of tickets at the Crystal theatre on the second day of the presentation last week of "The Santa Fe Trail." And the Crystal theatre is no fire trap.

E. H. Griefe of the Opera House, Windsor, Mo., was one of the busiest exhibitors along movie row in Kansas City last week. He doesn't come to market very often, but when he does he hesitates not one whit about buying.

Asher Levy, general manager of the Junior Orpheum circuit, was in Kansas City last week to attend the opening of the Mainstreet theatre under its new motion picture policy, that of being a First National franchise holder exclusively on first run productions. The opening day broke the house record, according to Mr. Levy, who departed shortly afterward for Des Moines, Ia. L. Sobler, special publicity representative for First National, also was on the job.

E. A. Westcott, formerly with the Educational branch at Omaha, has been transferred to the Kansas City branch. At the Fox exchange office, Ray Houston is the new poster clerk.

Kansas City appeared to be a mecca for general sales managers, district sales managers and other officials last week. R. W. White, general sales manager for Fox, and W. J. Kupper, his assistant, visited the local Fox exchange, while Jacques Kopfstein, general manager of Bray Productions, Inc., and vice-president of Jimmy Aubrey Productions, was busy with a routine of affairs. Lewis J. Selznick of Selznick Distributing Corporation, who is making a tour of the key centers, paid the local exchange a visit. Cecil Maberry, district manager for Hodkinson, was in town for the purpose of installing the new branch manager, Charles Knickerbocker. Sam Morris, general sales manager for Warner Brothers, was here for a conference with Al Kahn of Film Classics, Inc., distributors of Warner product. Mr. Morris is making a tour in the interest of Warner Brothers' next year's product, he said.

H. J. Bailey, who is being transferred from the New Orleans Pathe branch to the Minneapolis branch, to succeed Charles Stombaugh, stopped off in Kansas City between trains last week, remaining long enough to visit the force at the local office.

John Howard, exploitation man for Mary Pickford, spent most of last week in Kansas City.

New musical numbers of Louis Forbstein, director of the orchestra at Frank L. Newman's Royal theatre, Kansas City, are being introduced by the Royal orchestra at "Nighthawk" radio programs of the Kansas City Star, the orchestra, as well as the theatre, each receiving liberal space.

St. Louis

GEORGE Sommers owner-manager of the Opera House Theatre, Green City, Mo., plans to erect a new motion picture house in that city. He has selected the southwest corner of the square as the site for the new house. Construction will start soon.

The picture theatre at Perry, Ark., conducted by Jeff Roy Holmes was destroyed by fire on March 22, with a loss estimated at $15,000. The flames spread to two adjoining residences and the power house, the total loss being approximately $25,000.

The fire started from a film igniting and exploding during a performance. About one hundred patrons were in the house at the time, but filed out in an orderly manner, no one being injured.

The volunteer fire department were unable to check the flames and the theatre building was completely destroyed.

A stock company is being organized at Rosendale, Mo., to rebuild the opera house recently destroyed by fire.

Marcus Loew, accompanied by E. A. Schiller and Thomas Lamb, prominent New York theatre architect, was in St. Louis from Sunday to Wednesday of last week. They came here to inspect the Loew State Theatre at Eighth street and Washington avenue now rapidly approaching completion.

Members of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade attended the Naked Truth dinner in a body by air on the evening of Saturday, March 29. A large radio receiving set was tuned in to get all the hot stuff put out by the New York orators and entertainers. The set was installed in the club rooms on Olive street.

Sam Werner of the United Film Service Exchange departed for New York City on March 25. He plans to announce release dates on some important product upon his return to St. Louis.

Harry Graham, manager of the local Pathe office visited Springfield, Quincy and other Illinois key towns during the week.

Tom McKean, manager for F. B. O. made a flying trip through Illinois and Eastern Missouri. He visted Cairo, Duquoin, Springfield, Quincy, Hannibal and other points.

George T. Chester who formerly operated the American and Ark Theatres in Orlando, Florida, has accepted a position in the sales organization of the local Enterprise office.

Sullivan & Gray who have been operating the Roland Theatre, Marion, Ill., at 10-cent general admission report that business has been excellent. They were in town during the week booking product for future shows. They formerly operated a house at Pittsburgh, Ill., but closed it because the mine there stopped working.

as a first run picture house.

Maurice Fox formerly with the Indiana Theatre in Terre Haute has gone back to the American Theatre and will operate it as a first run house.

Out-of-town exhibitors seen along Picture Row during the week were: Frank Leitz, Strand Theatre, Mascoutah, Ill.; S. E. Pertle, Jerseyville, Ill.; Jim Reilly, Princess, Alton, Ill.; Mike Doyle and wife, Cape Girardeau, Mo.; George Newsume, Mount Vernon, Ill.; Bob Cluster, Belleville, Ill.; C. E. Brady, Cape Girardeau, Mo.; J. W. Schuckert, Chester, Ill.; Jack Hoeffler, Quincy, Ill.; and J. Spaulding, Capital, Litchfield, Ill.

John Pratt of Fulton, Mo., and Billy Sohm of Quincy, Ill., attended the Rotarian convention held in Hannibal, Mo., last week.

Buddy Paul of Mexico, Mo., plans to open a new 800-seat combination vaudeville and motion picture house in that city shortly. He will probably call his house the Grand Theatre and expects to open the doors in about six weeks.

C. D. Hill, manager for the Hodkinson exchange made a very successful trip to Indiana during the week.

The Liberty Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind., has been sold by the Consolidated Theatre and Realty Corporation to John McFall of Terre Haute.

San Francisco

EVERY film concern in the San Francisco district, has within the past two days received wires from their salesmen that because of the rains and prospects for good fruit and vegetable crops, the motion picture theatre owners are enthused and desirious to purchase films. For a while theatre owners held back their screen purchases contemplating the closing of their houses as many farmers were pessimistic regarding the future conditions.

The movement launched by the Fire Commission, the Fire Prevention Bureau and Chief Murphy to provide maximum protection for patrons of theatres has been indorsed by prominent picture theatre owners as well as men prominent in local fire prevention work.

Charles Pincus, known as "Dr. Pincus" to many as he helped two theatres "recuperate", has left the Loew's Warfield theatre where he was managing director to become the managing director of the Imperial theatre. No successor will be appointed to Pincus at Loew's Warfield, as it has been decided by General Manager A. M. Bowles of the West Coast theatres in Northern California, that the house's policy would be directed from his office. Leo Laughlin, who has made a name for himself, will remain as house manager.

Al Oxtoby and Newt Levi were seen on the Row last week, the reason for them coming in being the regular monthly branch meeting held in First National's San Francisco office. This meeting was held in order to get an understanding of exhibitor problems and how service selling end, but in all branches of exchange work.

Among those registering at the First National office recently were: W. J. Kulan of the Strand theatre, Los Gatos, Calif.; George E. Rust, Georgetown theatre, Georgetown, Calif. and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Mables of the Reel Joy theatre, King City, Calif.

Jack Brower, of First National, startled Film Row last week by appearing in a new coupe, Maxwell breed, four passenger capacity. He said it had to be done as the Ford was getting in the same shape as the famed "one hoss shay".

A. M. Ayre, formerly managing director of the Coliseum, has just been appointed president and manager of the Gille Show Print Co. This company was recently purchased by the Herman Wobber interests. Mr. Wobber is District Manager of the Famous-Players Lasky Corporation.

H. M. Hollinsworth, assistant manager for Hodkinson in the San Francisco office, has returned from a trip to the south coast where he closed some important deals.

James Kirkwood and Lila Lee recently were honor guests of the Press Club of Oakland.

W. J. Cross, formerly connected with the Universal exchange at Salt Lake City, is now connected with the San Francisco office of Universal and at present covering the San Joaquin Valley.

Hugh Bennett, formerly salesman with Universal at Des Moines, has been appointed special short subject salesman in the San Francisco district.

Film men and theatre owners were sorry to hear of the death of George Breck. Mr. Breck was one of the oldest and best known men on the Pacific Coast dealing in motion picture supplies. He was the founder of the well known Breck Photo Supply Company and the Vitaslide Company. He was the personal representative of the Edison Manufacturing Company on the Pacific Coast for many years.

G. K. King of the Orpheum theatre, Red Bluff was on the Row this week where he purchased films for Spring.

Gerald Hardy, Goldwyn-Cosmo salesman, has returned from a successful trip in Northern California.

George Oppenheimer, has returned from a business trip to Southern California.

M. N. Zar, one of the oldest salesmen from the point of service in California, and up to recently connected with George A. Oppenheimer, Inc., is now with F. B. O.

John C. Ragland, personal representative of Harold Lloyd, visited San Francisco manager Walter W. Kofeldt of the Pathe last Friday and Saturday.

Edward Stark of the Opal theatre, Hollister was a recent visitor on Film Row.

Following a three months' visit in San Francisco, Jack Retlaw, special representative of the West Coast Theatres Company, returned to Los Angeles.

Fred Woldenberg of All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., has been forced to cancel his contemplated ten weeks business trip.

George Roy, salesman for All Star, expects to leave for a three weeks' trip in the San Joaquin Valley in his newly purchased Oakland machine.

Mr. Byard of Arcade, it has just been announced, is planning to open a new theatre at McGee, California.

Cleveland

J. A. KOERPEL, Goldwyn central division manager, is just back from his spring tour of exchanges covering Ohio, western Pennsylvania, Kentucky, and West Virginia. Koerpel says that business is normal for this time of the year, wherever he visited.

Norman Moray, First National Exchange manager here recuperated from an attack of grip just long enough to eke out a trip to New York. When he reached home he came down with quinsy. H. A. Bandy, division manager, is acting exchange manager until Moray gets back on the job.

T. Connors and W. C. Bachmeyer, Metro assistant general sales manager, and central division manager, respectively, paid the Cleveland Metro exchange one of their semi-annual visits last week. They are visiting all exchanges in the east and central states.

There will be a Skirboll Week in Ohio in May. It means an intensive sales drive both on the part of R. H. Skirboll, manager of the Ohio Exchange for Educational Films and for Bill Skirboll, head of the GoldsealProductions.

Changes are taking place in the Cleveland Hodkinson Exchange. Sherman S. Webster has resigned as manager of the exchange. Jack Mooney, brother of Paul Mooney, has been appointed as his successor. Jack Mooney was formerly with a local film exchange. He left the picture business to go into the garage business. But the call of the screen was too much for him, and now he's back in harness again, starting last Monday.

G. Charles Gray, general sales manager for the American Motion Picture Company, distributors of non-theatrical films, was in Cleveland last Tuesday, the result of which was the appointment of Chester J. Loewe as manager of the Cleveland branch exchange. Mrs. O. J. Curwell was appointed assistant branch manager. Both Loewe and Mrs. Curwell have been associated with the company ever since it opened its local office.

George Jacobs, personal representative for Al Lichtman, is just back from a tour of the territory.

Harry Carl, who controls the Rex theatre at Ashland, has just taken over another Ashland house, namely the Opera House.

Mrs. H. C. Horater of Toledo, wife of the manager of the Temple theatre, has joined the army of out-of-town exhibitors who pick their own pictures. Mrs. Horater came down last week to look over some of the new spring styles in pictures and sign up for them, while "Doc" stayed at home raking in the shekels.

George Shencker, manager of the Pearl theatre, Lorain, spent Friday in the various screen rooms, looking at the new pictures and signing up for the good ones.

R. C. Steuve, of the Orpheum theatre, Canton, having been on the job several weeks after a trip to Bermuda, felt that he needed a change, and came up to spend a few days with his Cleveland friends.

CULLEN LANDIS visited Washington on Sunday, March 23, and stayed with the family of a pioneer Washington banker's son until late Thursday or Friday of the past week. During the week he dropped in on Lawrence "Larry" Beattus and saw himself in "The Fighting Coward," as guest of Famous Players, Marcus Loew theatre, the Palace, and Larry.

Frank F. Sanford, of Los Angeles, Cal., has been touring the southern and east coast states, visiting the state-rights trade in southern, southeast and mid-Atlantic exchange centers. In Washington he called at Liberty Films, and in Baltimore was the guest of Harry C. Robbins of Art Films.

J. O. Brooks, of New York City, representing the home office organization of Fox Film Corporation, was a week-end visitor at the Fox-Kirby film center on New Jersey Avenue. He stated to a MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative that Manager Roberts, who recently received a three weeks' furlough from his duties as manager here, would return early in April to the tasks temporarily handled by Special Representative Melvin of the Baltimore zone of Fox Films.

Jack Bonner, F. B. O. salesman in the Chicago region, has been a visitor at the new F. B. O. executive suite in rooms 703-702 Mather Building, which were used by F. B. O. in the old Robertson-Cole days of 1922. The former suite on the east side of floor 7 is still used as poster room, booking, shipping, and inspection departments of F. B. O.

Exhibitors in the territory have recently had some experience with fires in Eastern Shore Virginia, Maryland and Delaware towns, and in western Maryland. Chincoteague, where two fireproof theatres were projected, had its old frame opera house burned down in such a mid-winter conflagration, and Pocomoke and other Shore towns had fires in their business sections that endangered the theatres. Western Maryland towns and nearby coal towns in the Virginia's were also hit. Then came the heavy late spring snows, followed by rains and melting snows feeding the mountain torrents, creeks, brooks, open sewers and rivers. And how can folks get to a show when the old "lizzy" is rusting its motor in three and a half feet of water? Week-end reports from Cumberland, Hagerstown, Frostburg, Lonaconing, Westernport and neighbooring points in the Virginias, are badly flooded, with six feet of water in some streets, and boats at the current quotation are at a premium.

Ray Barnett, Los Angeles film attorney, is still selling Warner Bros. product here as a special representative of Norman J. Ayres, local manager of Independent Films, Philadelphia, regional franchise holders for the "W-B." product.

Harry Robbins of Baltimore has relinquished his Washington desk-room for Liberty Films, 9th floor of the Mather Building, for Art Films of Baltimore.

Emanuel J. Stutz, Chevy theatre magnate, has recently celebrated his anniversary. The Chevy Chase theatre opened February 23, 1923. So the second year of the pleasing suburban house has now started.

The Tivoli opening is to be followed shortly by the opening of its nearest outlying competitor, the new Hoffman Park theatre at 14th and Crittenden streets, which will draw from the existing patronage of the Tivoli theatre. Although the Tivoli seeks to appeal to all Washington, and to the tourist in the gates, it is still a neighborhood house. Not only will it draw from Mr. Crandall's Savoy and York theatres, but it will cut into the Takoma Park trade as much as the Hoffman Park does. The opening of 14th street through Walter Reed Hospital reservation may increase the carriage trade to these Mount Pleasant, Petworth, Brightwood and Takoma theatres, however.

Confirmation has recently been obtained of the recent purchase by Jake Wells of the Victoria theatre, South Richmond. A new Suffolk, Va., independent theatre was recently erroneously printed "Suffolk, Pa.," in these columns. Suffolk, Va., was meant.

Construction on the Cosmopolitan theatre, 13th at E streets, facing Pennsylvania Avenue, still draws the curious crowd of busy folk and idlers. No interior contracts for seating fixtures have as yet been let. Bids for such details may still be submitted to the Brylawkis at the Cosmos theatre, it is said.

Eugene Emmet Jasper, pioneer salesman for the old General Film company, has severed his connection with Famous Players-Lasky, and is reported as very active in the local sales force of Universal Pictures, succeeding Maynard Madden, recently resigned.

Maynard Madden, new special representative of the United Artists exchange, Washington, in the Carolinas, returned Saturday from an extensive tour of some three weeks, in the cotton belt. Madden was recently selling for Universal, having been promoted from Booker, and assistant booker to salesman in a few months.

Daniel P. Dolan, now advancing "The Hunchback of Notre Dame", for Universal is expecting to shift his grips to new office suites, as special representative with similar duties, in connection with Washington regional showings of "The Thief of Bagdad".

Norfolk, Va., is revising its building code to increase the building permit fees and make stricter zoning regulations. When Otto Wells and competitors wish to build they will have to watch their step.

Ed Heiber is now special representative in Baltimore for Universal Pictures.

MR. AND MRS. WILLARD Patterson will leave Atlanta on Saturday, April 5th for a month's trip to the Pacific Coast, going to St. Louis first, from there to the Grand Canyon, their trip also to include visits to San Diego, Tia Juana, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Denver and Colorado Springs. They will spend some time in Los Angeles. Mrs. Patterson is editor and owner of the "Weekly Film Review" which in her absence will be operated by the associate editors, Jacques Futrelle, Jr., and Margaret Iles, with Miss Hazel Love, secretary.

Employes of the Saenger Amusement Company, of New Orleans, from their seventy-nine theatres celebrated last week with a gorgeous Employes Carnival Ball, as one of the brilliant events of the annual Mardi Gras season, the entire affair being handled by employes of the Saenger circuit but being open to the general public. Maids, Queens, Dukes and King were selected from among them and the Athenaeum, where the affair was held, was a blaze of electric lights and scenic beauty. The Saenger Ball will hereafter be an annual event in connection with Mardi Gras.

The New Orleans Film Board of Trade probably has the most representative Joint Board of Arbitration of any in the Southeastern states, the exhibitor members not only being leading theatre owners but men with business ability in other lines as well. The three exhibitor members are E. M. Gordon, of Westwego, La., who in addition to operating his theatre, is a councilman of his city; Harry Lazarus, operating the Crown theatre, New Orleans, is also in the crockery business, and R. Brunet, of the Imperial, New Orleans, who is also in the insurance business. The exchange representatives are M. W. Osborne, Vitagraph; B. Dudenhafer, Fox, and P. M. Desbon, Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.

New Orleans is to have a new film building, now in course of construction on Saratoga street, which will house the Southern States Film Company and Southern Theatre Equipment Company.

A. Juran of the Casino theatre, Ybor City, Florida, made an effective tie-up with the Business Booster Club of his town. The theatre is sold out to the business men for every Saturday afternoon and coupons good for matinee admission on that day are given with all purchases in the Ybor City stores.

Oscar White, of the Rex, Sumter, S. C., has just completed extensive improvements to his house. The lobby, foyer and auditorium have been completely redecorated, the installation of an art glass ceiling and lighting fixtures make it look mighty good.

K. O. Renaud, Paramount Exploiteer in the Atlanta office will leave next week for Detroit. His successor in this territory has not yet been appointed.

N. W. Hensley & Company, of Tampa, Florida, have purchased the old Greensbo theatre on Tampa street for $100,000, purely as an investment, it is stated.

J. F. Burke, travelling auditor for Educational is in the Southeastern territory.

C. W. Maxey is operating the Royal theatre, Summerville, Ga., and was in Atlanta the past week.

Mrs. Merle Hanson, who has been in the Atlanta First National office for more than three years, has gone to Orlando, Florida, her former home, where she is to be married to E. F. Walker, a railroad man.

Mr. and Mrs. DeSalles Harrison of Atlanta are receiving congratulations upon the arrival last week of DeSalles, Jr. Mr. Harrison is Southeastern representative of the public relations department of the Hays organizations.

J. D. Jernigan, Vitagraph auditor is paying his usual visit to the Atlanta office this week.

Among the visiting film men on New Orleans Film Row during the past week were the following: W. E. Callaway, district manager of First National; Ned E. Depinet, of Dallas, district manager of Universal; Charles E. Kessnich, division manager of Metro.

Al Hicks, formerly public relations representative for Colonel Henry B. Varner's Carolina theatres has resigned that position to go on the road with the Atlanta Universal office.

LaBelle, Florida, reports a new theatre to be opened there, the LaBelle. Miss Mary Hayes will be manager.

Jimmy Hanlon, booker in the Atlanta Select office has gone to Metro in a similar capacity. J. B. Warde, of Metro succeeds Mr. Ennis, of Goldwyn, and L. T. Boston of Lichtman, goes to Select. All bookers.

Seattle

GEORGE P. ENDERT, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange was host for a number of days last week to none other than Barrett C. Keisling, personal representative and general a'de-de-camp to Cecil B. DeMille. Mr. Keisling is making a short tour of the Coast, and from here was scheduled to visit Vancouver, B. C. The purpose of the trip was not disclosed.

Announcements made at Manager Seth D. Perkins' Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exchange were to the effect that Kelso, Kalama, Vader, Winlock, Napavine and Tenini, cities in the Southern part of Washington, have been transferred from the local office to Manager A. A. Schayer's Portland exchange, and will hereafter be under the jurisdiction of that exchange.

Mike Rosenberg, secretary of the Principal Pictures Corporation, paid a visit to his old home town last week and spent a number of days with his brothers, Al and Jack Rosenberg, of the De Luxe Feature Film Company, which Mike founded a number of years ago. After a few days of combined business and pleasure, he returned to his offices in Los Angeles.

A. H. Huot, manager of the Film Booking Offices, was out of town for a number of days last week on a trip to Spokane, Missolua, and other key cities.

R. C. Hill, manager of the Hodkinson exchange, was out of the city for a number of days last week, on a trip to Spokane where he was working on first run bookings for the new Hodkinson product for the coming season.

H. A. Black, manager of the Vitagraph exchange, returned last week from a sales trip to Portland and a few kev cities of this state.

Guy F. Navarre, Fox exchange manager, has been out of the city for a few days recently, visiting a number of the exhibitors in some of the larger cities of Washington, following his return from a trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles recently.

A. E. Barry last week was installed as new house manager of the Jensen-VonHerberg Strand theatre in this city, replacing Dana Hayes, who returned to California after having been in charge of the house for the last two seasons. Mr. Barry has been associated with the Jensen-VonHerberg organization for more than three years, having held the position of purchasing and equipment agent, with offices in the Liberty Theatre building. He was directly in charge of the building of Jensen-VonHerberg's new theatre in Astoria, Ore., which was constructed completely in less than two months, following the fire which destroyed the entire city a number of seasons ago. Mr. Barry will still handle a majority of the purchasing work for the circuit, and will be aided in his work at the Strand by Robert Kincaid, house superintendent.

George Bessenger, former owner and manager of the Union Theatre in this city, now called the Princess, has returned from a trip to California and the South, and is at present looking over the local field for an opening in the exhibiting phase of the industry. Mr. Bessenger is well known among the theatre men of this territory, having, in addition to managing the Union Theatre for a time, built and operated the Gem Theatre several seasons ago.

W. D. Ingals, a former operator of the American Theatre at Condon, Oregon, and the Kalama Theatre at Kalama, spent a number of days here late in March, before leaving the territory for Condon again, where he will re-enter the exhibiting field.

Mr. Ingals has been in the South and East for the last few seasons, but declared the lure of the theatre was too strong for him to withstand, so he is returning to the scene of his former ventures.

The first warm spring weather of the season visited Seattle shortly after the middle of March, and theatre attendance as a result dropped off to quite a noticeable extent. Seattle this year had the mildest winter in a number of years, and the exceptionally early and warm spring weather has begun to cause little wrinkles of worry upon the brows of exhibitors.

Salt Lake City

W. B. CORBY, manager of Hodkinson exchange in this city, who took over his duties the first of the month, is now comfortably installed.

Sol Vogel, Western Division Manager for Hodkinson, is expected in this city within the next two weeks, coming from his headquarters in San Francisco, to confer with Manager Corby on the policies governing the new releases scheduled on the Hodkinson program.

W. S. Wessling, Western Division Manager for Pathe, was in this city two days last week spending his time with W. S. Seib, local manager for Pathe.

Vete Stewart, salesman working out of the local Pathe office is at present covering the Wyoming territory.

R. S. Stackhouse, manager of the Vitagraph exchange, had his automobile stolen last week while attending a performance at the Wilkes theatre. It was recovered, however, Sunday night by the police, but was damaged to the extent of two or three hundred dollars.

The Paramount theatre at Helper, Utah, changed hands in a deal which was consumated last week, whereby the former owner Mel Stringham disposed of his interests to M. G. Cotradakis. Gene Ressler, who formerly managed a house at Smithfield, Utah, will have managerial duties at the Paramount. The new owner was a visitor to film circles this week, selecting productions to be used this season at his house.

F. T. Duvall, part owner of the Iris theatre at Midvale, Utah, will open a new house at Murray, a suburb of Salt Lake City, within a few weeks. The theatre which is in the finishing course of construction, will have a seating capacity of two hundred and ninety, and will cost in the neighborhood of twenty-five thousand dollars.

Abel Davis, local manager for Film Booking Offices, has gone to Montana to visit the key centers and close on the new features listed on this season's program.

Barney Rose, covering Idaho, and Joe Solomon, working Utah for Universal are in the city for a few days before returning to their territories. Not to be outdone by the film managers who have recently come into possession of new speedsters, Solomon has blown himself to a new Dodge, and is burning em up over his territory.

E. C. Collins, special publicity man from Universal headquarters in Los Angeles, arrived here Saturday, and will go to Boise, Idaho, to do special exploitation work on the "Hunchback of Notre Dame".

M. Cohn, manager of the local Universal exchange, will make a short trip to Provo, Utah.

The American theatre management announces the engagement of the Louisiana Syncopaters jazz band at that house for several weeks beginning next Saturday. They will give special concerts between pictures on the stage. This aggregation is a country-wide tour, filling engagements at picture theatres.

Joe Samuels, salesman for Metro, returned from a successful selling trip to Montana. He left for the Wyoming territory.

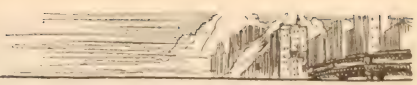
W. L. Halley, architect, is preparing plans for a new theatre at Warren, Ark., to cost about $15,000.

Jake Shaeffer, formerly Hodkinson manager at Dallas, has gone to California where he will make his future home.

Arthur Bromberg, Atlanta, president of Progressive Pictures, was a Dallas, visitor.



A new theatre will be erected at Hoxie, Ark, in near future.

C. E. Boyette has opened his new Gem theatre at Brownwood, Texas.

An open air theatre with a roofed-in stage, and an enclosed auditorium equipped for motion pictures and stereoptican work are the new features for the International Petroleum Exposition to be held at Tulsa, in near future.

Chicago

THE sale of Aryan Grotto to the Stevens Hotel Company, which owns the La Salle Hotel, and plans to erect the biggest hotel west of New York on Michigan Boulevard, was recently consummated, and it is understood that the new owners of Aryan Grotto are seeking to rent it to motion picture interests for a movie theatre.

Edward Philion has taken over the Century Theatre at Mishawaka, Indiana, and starting on April 15th, will give a show each night of the week instead of three nights as in the past. The Lincoln Theatre of Mishawaka will close this week, after which it will be dismantled to make way for a five and ten cent store.

Herbert Washburn, popular film salesman, has joined the Universal sales staff and has been assigned to cover Peoria territory.

S. W. Miller, who has been connected with a film exchange in Milwaukee, is now buying pictures for Frank Fischer and will in the future, be found at the North American Building headquarters of the Fischer organization in Chicago.

C. Bailey has purchased the Lincoln Theatre at Valparaiso, Indiana, from W. Bush and hereafter will operate the house. Mr. Bailey formerly owned the Lincoln and ran it for several years so that he will be back in familiar territory.

Jean Quigley is convalescing from a severe illness at 1307 West Madison street and wants his friends to know that he would be glad to see any of them. He has had a long, hard siege and visits will do a lot to cheer him up. Go to it, boys.

Feature Sales Manager Harry Scott, of Pathe, and W. B. Frank, vice-president of Hal E. Roach studios, were in Chicago this week for a conference with Manager Aiken and other local Pathe officials. Before returning to New York Mr. Scott will visit Des Moines and Detroit.

Berve and Allaban, who operate the Majestic at Rochelle and the Pastime at Ashton, have purchased the Star Theatre at Oregon, Illinois, from C. A. Mendenhall and have also made arrangements to operate the Gem at Mount Morris, Illinois.

W. G. Sturdevant, who is soliciting memberships for the Illinois Automobile Club, called on many of his old friends along film row last week. He was formerly manager of the Hoyburn Theatre in Evanston.

Sigmund Decker, who had a record of nine years' continuous service with Universal as county salesman, is now connected with the Hodkinson exchange and Manager Harry Lorsh has assigned him to Wisconsin territory.

Eddie Barrett has resigned as manager of the Pastime Theatre on Madison street, and left for California where he intends to remain. It is understood that he will become associated with the Thompson interests after taking a month's vacation. Mr. Barrett was connected with the Pastime Theatre for fourteen years and is one of the most widely known and popular of Chicago managers.

O. H. Lambert ,of Goldwyn Cosmopolitan, is back on the job after having been home for several days suffering from a light attack of appendicitis.

The Mullen Building Corporation, of Belleville, Illinois, which operates the Playhouse of that city, held its annual meeting last week and re-elected as directors, P. K. Johnson, Dominic Miller, B. E. Twitchell, Harry Wangelin, Walter Rhein, Adolph Knobloch, Richard Hilgard and Walter J. Kohl. It was announced that Oscar Beck will continue as manager of the house.

John Voumvakis, who is interested in theatres on Eighteenth street, is at present on the ocean, bound for Athens, Greece, where he will visit his family.

Chicago Loop Theatre
can be had for Summer picture run—Seating capacity 1,800. See Ed. Hurley, care of Motion Picture News, New York City.

Des Moines

A H. Blank, who went to New York to attend the executive meeting of the First National officials, stopped over in Philadelphia, to attend the opening of Philadelphia's newest big theatre, the Earl Theatre. Blank remained in New York to attend the "Naked Truth" dinner.

S. M. Fangman, booker for Goldwyn, has been ill the past few days.

W. W. Booth of Belle Plain was in last week and brought with him a less frequent visitor to Des Moines, his brother, Robert Booth. The brothers have theatres at Nebraska City, Nebraska as well as at Belle Plain, Robert Booth being in charge of the Nebraska house. It has been some years since he visited in Iowa terrritory.

Dan Burgum has purchased Atlantic's leading picture house and will start in business on his own after having been associated for many years with the A. H. Blank houses. The transfer of the theatre at Atlantic, Ia. was concluded last week. Burgum will remain at the Rialto Theatre of which he has been the manager for the past year until in May. He will not open his new theatre until in July as redecoration and remodelling will be done to turn the house into a most attractive theatre.

George Miller, special exploitation man from New York with "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," is in Clinton where the picture is now showing.

Eddie Folk, who was the operator at the Capitol Theatre, is now at the Royal Theatre. The Capitol is showing vaudeville for three days of the week.

Visitors at the F. B. O. offices were Mathews of Boone, Widman of Boone and Maler of Montezuma.

The new salesman for F. B. O. out of the Des Moines territory is Riggs who was formerly with F. B. O. in Omaha.

The Opera House at Ayreshire is opening up again after having been closed for a time while repairs were made to the house following a fire in the operating booth. The theatre was damaged somewhat outside of the booth and considerable repair work was done. The Opera House is owned by C. H. Cookingham.

Mrs. Van Dyke, wife of Manager Van Dyke, of the Royal Theatre, Des Moines, is still suffering some pain in her arm which was broken some weeks before Christmas.

B. B. Reingold, manager of the Goldwyn exchange, visited Waterloo last week. His statement of business conditions was that things were all O. K. and that it only needed the clearing up of the weather to make it all right.

Manager Crawford of the Famous Players office, in a visit to Ames, Webster City and Fort Dodge found business conditions good. Business is better in some parts of the state than in others, the eastern part of the state doing better as a rule than the north and western.

Mr. Ferguson, who in opening up the Temple Theatre at Mount Pleasant, states that the opening of this new house will not be for several months. Ferguson is a Chicago man.

Florida

THE motion picture operators of St. Petersburg have formed a union. They are affiliated with the Tampa local.

Mrs. Clark is building a theatre for colored folks in Lakeland. It is stated that the new house will cost $18,000, will have a seating capacity of 600 and will be completed by the middle of May.

W. L. Strawn, who operates the Central in Bradentown and the Dixie in Palmetto, is laid up with a broken foot. A heavy motor generator fell on his foot and crushed it badly.

Edward Kane, one of the old time film men of Florida, has been appointed manager of the new Capitol theatre in Plant City. Ed came to Tampa away back in 1913, when Montgomery was the King of the Florida Movies. He managed the Montgomery in Tampa until it closed and has had a couple of others since then.

E. H. Trumbull, manager of the Liberty in St. Petersburg, and his Chief Operator, Cecil White, drove over to Tampa last Sunday to see what the Tampa houses were showing. Mr. Trumbull says business is fine and to prove it, he has purchased a new Wurlitzer.

Jno. B. Carroll, manager of the Victory and Franklin theatres, Tampa, made a trip to Miami last week. Jack Frost, manager of the Strand and Grand, handled the whole string during his absence. Jack is adding to his Strand orchestra.

J. W. Phillips bought the interest of his partner, R. G. Walker, in the two houses they built, and were operating, in Ocala. Besides the two theatres, the Dixie for white patronage and the Princess for colored, there were several parcels of real estate which Mr. Phillips took over.

C. A. Sappal bought the Central theatre, on Central Avenue, Tampa, this week. This deal places Mr. Sappal once more in complete control of the negro theatres of Tampa. Mr. Sappal has had several competitors during the many years he has been operating here, and in every case it has finally wound up by Charlie taking over their houses. The Central was built about six months ago by J. E. Morris of Chicago. It is a very attractive house and was illustrated in the news shortly after the opening. Mr. Morris has taken a company upon the road.

Radio Booms Southern Theatre's Patronage

Shows How Installation Aids Rather Than Hinders Picture Popularity

By L. A. Hoskins, Mgr. Radio Dept., Iris Theatre, Houston, Texas.

SCATTERED over the United States and Canada, too, for that matter—are the motion picture pessimists who see in Radio a real competitor for the movies.

The word pessimists is used advisedly. Those who see in the Radio broadcasting that has gone on to date and that is getting better and better as greater knowledge of the newest of entertainment features is absorbed, is and can be made an ally to the motion picture theatres.

There is no guessing about this statement. It is based upon proven facts—facts gathered over more than two years of time and reflected so brilliantly back from the box office as to preclude any shadow of a doubt.

The Iris Theatre, Houston, Texas, a 15-cent house showing only high-class second-run pictures, is the case in point. Not only has Radio, conducted continuouly for more than two years, proved itself a tremendous ally financially, but has so impressed Will Horwitz, Jr., the managing owner of the theatre of its value to the extent that he has just invested $15,000 in a second and more powerful broadcasting apparatus to go on top of a new theatre he is just breaking ground for in Houston. Here is something for the "pessimists" to think about. They may believe that they have drawn correct conclusions as to the damage done to their shows by Radio entertainments, but it is more than likely that, if they will delve deeper into the situation as applied to their localities and to their theatres, they will find they have missed some important item in their calculations.

Iris Theatre is Station WEAY in the Air

The Iris Theatre, Houston Texas—Station WEAY in the air—stands alone in the United States, if not in the world, in that it is the only amusement house in the country offering motion pictures and radio entertainment to its patrons at one and the same time.

Will Horwitz, Jr., owner of the Iris, "fell for" radio when it was young. In his own words, it was the most valuable fall he ever had. Not only has his radio department, which started with a modest little station that would reach only the people of Houston and immediate suburbs, proved its worth as a business-getter for the pictures, but it has grown literally by leaps and bounds until now WEAY, his Iris Theatre Broadcasting Station, has become one of the most powerful in the South and is heard in every corner of the United States on three nights of every week.

The Iris station was one of the very first radio broadcasting stations in the South. It was opened up, on the roof of the Iris Theatre, more than two years ago. It started small, as mentioned before, with only broadcasting power enough to cover the city and immediate environs. It caught on at once. It was started in the summer time and the first effect of its use was the elimination of the usual summer slump in attendance at the picture show belowstairs. This condition looked so good to Mr. Horwitz that he immediately began the construction of a more powerful station. That produced similar results. The surrounding country, to which radio was then very new, were enthusiastic for the new form of entertainment and soon the box office receipts began to swell with an entirely new clientele — the residents of the smaller towns within twenty to fifty miles of Houston who made occasional trips to the city. They began to make their presence felt first by wanting to know more about the radio broadcasting machinery and later by letters and postcards asking for this, that and the other form of radio entertainment.

People in Suburbs and Country All Come to the Iris

Through his radio department Mr. Horwitz has furnished as nearly as possible what the people of the city and the country districts have asked for. The consequence is that those living in the suburbs and in the smaller towns still farther out never come to town without attending the picture show at the Iris. This new source of revenue has had the effect of completely eliminating the weekly, as well as the summer peaks and slumps of business and the receipts of the Iris Theatre, as a theatre, have grown steadily week by week and month by month.

Other theatrical managers in Houston can attest the success of the Iris. Mr. Horwitz gives his radio department entire credit for the results achieved. And here is the real proof of the pudding: The radio department, notwithstanding it employs five men at salaries that are worth while, has not cost a cent to maintain. He is out (if the expression can be used, which is doubtful) only the actual cost of the apparatus—and that is on the job and functioning daily.

How was the cost eliminated? Easy. When the radio was seen to be an advertising medium of great power, other advertising was cut down to care for the cost of operating the radio service. In other words newspaper space was curtailed and other items of advertising were eliminated and the money hitherto spent for that form of advertising converted to radio entertainments, to improvements in the broadcasting and the musical programs of the theatre.

New Theatre to Have Most Powerful Station in South

On his new theatre in Houston, The Texan, now under construction, will be located one of the most powerful radio broadcasting stations in the whole country. It will be a class B station—which means that "canned" music of all kinds will be taboo and that the radio concerts will be of high order. The initial cost of this station, independent of towers and outdoor equipment and the studio, which will be the last word in appointments for perfect transmission of voice and instrument, will be $15,000. This apparatus, a Western Electric set, is in course of production and will be in operation in Houston within the next five months.

Mr. Horwitz has gone even further in the matter of radio facilities for Houston. Formerly merchants and cotton concerns in Houston, vitally interested in the movement of vessels up and down the Houston ship channel as well as through the Gulf of Mexico, had to go to Houston or to Port Arthur for wireless communication. The Iris Radio Service was established for the benefit of these Houstonians and the commercial side of wireless has been developed to the point of profit. This is entirely aside from the question of broadcasting, the wireless communication between shore and ship being carried on on totally different apparatus which, however, is housed in the same rooms with the broadcasting equipment and attended by the same telegraphers.

Patronage from Unusual Source Due to Radio

Through the Iris Radio Service, however, the Iris Theatre is reaping still another reward of patronage. A great many vessels come up the Houston ship channel to load and unload cargo. Their crews, through "Sparks," the ship's operator, have learned of the Iris Theatre and its wireless and radio broadcasting station and they are our patrons during their stay in port.

The Broadway Theatre, Mount Airy, N. C., is one of the very few houses in the Carolinas that presents pictures with prologues and added attractions. The ceiling of the auditorium is treated in old ivory, the upper walls in light blue while the wainscoting is in Italian marble. This house has a seating capacity of 486, all on one floor. The Broadway is owned and managed by P. A. Boone who purchased the house last fall and submitted it to a complete renovation.

"Broadway" is Suburban Theatre Furnished in City House Style

THE BROADWAY, Mount Airy, N. C., is one of the very few houses in the Carolinas that present pictures with prologues and added attractions. As one enters the foyer, they are greeted with a pleasing and inviting combination of velour draperies of dark blue and old rose with floor lamps to match, the woodwork is in mahogany with the ceiling in old ivory while the lower walls are in French grey. The same color scheme is carried out in the lounge room and ladies' room, in which rooms the furniture is ivory and gold.

The ceiling of the auditorium is in old ivory, the upper walls in a light blue, while from the chair rail to the floor is finished in Italian marble. There are four pilasters on the sides which are also finished in marble. The manager's office is on the right, off the foyer, and a clear view of the stage and screen can be had without leaving the desk.

The seating capacity is 486, all on one floor. A large style Fotoplayer is used for music and each program is preceded by an overture or some organ novelty. The machine room is large, well ventilated, and is modern in every respect. Two Simplex machines are used and the screen is a Gardiner gold fibre. Private telephone system connects every department in the house.

The Broadway is owned and managed by P. A. Boone, who took over the house from the United Theaters' Corporation last fall and redecorated the entire house as per the above description.

The stage is set for a prologue of Paramount's "Old Homestead."

Elsmere Theatre Latest Addition to Loew String

The Elsmere theatre, Crotona Parkway and Elsmere Place, New York City, officially became an added link to the Loew chain of theatres, Thursday evening, March 27th, with Marcus Loew and a party of stage and screen stars actively participating in the opening ceremonies. Seats were reserved for that one performance only, the theatre adopting its regular policy of exclusive picture presentation the following day. Although it has been known that the Elsmere was to be an addition to the Loew chain for some time, the official recognition was withheld until the playhouse had undergone extensive repairs.

Marr & Colton Report Good Business for Past Year

The Marr & Colton Company, Organ Builders of Warsaw, New York, report during this past year a number of large installations in the United States.

The owners, David Marr & John J. Colton, report excellent business and factory is working to capacity. Just recently they have reported having received some important contracts from New York City, Philadelphia, Detroit, Allentown, Pa., Portland, Oregon and Pittsburgh.

Among the important contracts is the new Piccadilly Theatre on Broadway, New York City. The organ for this theatre, when completed, will be among the largest and finest of theatre organs. This theatre will broadcast the organ music daily by radio. An organist of international reputation will play the instrument and the organ program is planned to be a feature of this new theatre.

Service or Surface—Which?

IN the purchase of theatre chairs, the built-in qualities that make for long-time, satisfactory service are of real importance to the theatre manager. While the chairs' appearance today is important, its appearance and condition ten years from now will count for more.

Scientific construction, installation based on true architectural principles, rare beauty of design and color harmonies, skilled and careful workmanship—these are the four-square foundation of the long service value of our chairs. You cannot go wrong when you select "American" chairs for your theatre or playhouse.

Reseating can be accomplished without interrupting your business a single performance.

Balcony, Once Very Unpopular, Now In Great Demand

FOR years, the Regent Theatre at Ottawa, Ontario, had been confronted with the problem of inducing people to use the balcony of the house. Regardless of the price charged for balcony seats and in spite of the efforts of several different managers in turn, the public of Ottawa could not be generally encouraged to sit in the balcony. The tiers of seats on the upper floor were just as comfortable as those on the orchestra floor and an easy view of the screen, without straining or craning the neck, could be secured from any seat. Every person made for the higher-priced seats on the lower floor and, when that was filled, it was difficult to prevail upon the average man or woman to take a ticket for the gallery. Incidentally, the Regent has always been one of the quality moving picture theatres of the downtown section of the city and prices had always been high enough, in keeping with the standard of attractions shown, to discourage the so-called undesirable class of people from attending performances at the house.

The situation is now considerably changed, however, through the adoption of a number of technical changes on the balcony floor. After the theatre had been taken over by Famous Players Canadian Corporation along with many other houses from Allen Theatres, Limited, some few months ago, various officials of that corporation, along with Oral D. Cloakey, the new manager, held a serious consultation on the balcony question as a result of perusal of box office returns for a previous period. When these heads got together, it was the consensus of opinion that literally more light was needed on the subject. It was the judgment of the officials that people were literally afraid to go to the balcony floor because they could not see the various steps and that they could not see the empty seats when they got to them. It was also found that the aisles were not clearly marked in themselves.

The net result of the changes which were effected was as follows:

No less than 35 aisle lights, affixed with reflectors to the side-arms of aisle seats were installed. Ten of these were placed in the two aisles leading to the upper balcony from the one cross aisle; five were installed on this cross aisle, although there were no steps on this aisle; five were placed on each of the side aisles, at the walls, leading to the upper side boxes, and five were installed in the one short centre aisle intersecting the lower balcony and leading to the mezzanine boxes. At one glance, now, the patron can see every passageway even though he has just come in off the street. Another move was to take out one aisle seat from each row of chairs along the two ascending aisles of the upper balcony to widen the aisles. Because of the comparatively steep slope of the one floor, it was decided to run a brass railing up the centre of each of the two widened aisles. At the same time, a more substantial brass railing was placed along the front edge of the balcony and on the top of the structure behind the mezzanine boxes. These were high enough to afford definite protection and low enough not to interfere with the vision. Thus, the worst aisles were widened and railed, as well as lighted.

The floorways of the balcony were padded and carpeted in the same way as the orchestra floor so that the same feeling of elegance would be afforded on the upper floor as downstairs. Arm chairs of substantial type were secured for the mezzanine boxes. The latter are now patronized better than the more conspicuous stage and side boxes while the whole balcony gets its real share of patronage. Entrance to the balcony floor is made by marble stairs which lead off the foyer, just a few steps from the main entrance. Customers may leave by these stairs or make their exit by a wide stairway on the opposite side of the balcony leading direct to the main street.

Report on Theatres to Be Constructed this Year in Middlewest

The following is a resume submitted from the Middle West of some of the theatres which will be built this year, together with the estimated cost, the seating capacity and name, etc:

Canton, Ohio. — Construction will start March 1 of a $100,000 theatre in Canton which will seat about 1,000. Name and owner is withheld for the present time. G. A. Ebeling is the Architect, Newmanstern Bldg., Cleveland, O.

Mishawaka, Ind. — A modern picture theatre will be erected in this city at an early date. R. L. Simmons, Elkhart, Ind., is the architect.

Flint, Mich.—The Bijou Theatrical Enterprises, City Bank Bldg., Battle Creek, Mich., will break ground in Flint later this year for the erection of a modern picture theatre to cost $600,000 and have a seating capacity of about 2,000. Will be modern in every respect and the very finest in theatre equipment will be installed as soon as it is completed.

Bisbee, Ariz.—The Lyric Amusement Company, operating several motion picture theatres in this city, will soon erect another modern theatre here to cost about $40,000.

Construction of a new theatre at Cadiz, O., will be started soon. Will have a seating capacity of 850. H. L. Wardner, architect, Akron, Ohio.

The Star Theatre at Homer, Nebr., will soon give place to a new modern picture theatre. Fred R. Baker will erect same at an early date.

A new picture theatre will soon be erected at Raleigh, N. C.

H. Miller is installing a modern picture theatre at Heber Springs, Ark.

The new picture theatre at Eufaula, Ala., is nearing completion. It will have a seating capacity of about 600.

Plans are now under way for the erection of a modern picture theatre at Olympia, Wash. The very finest will be installed in the line of theatre equipment. Work will be started at once.

A new picture theatre was recently erected at Holly, Colo. Very best in projection room equipment was installed. Business reported to be very pleasing.

New motion picture theatre to cost $75,000 will be erected at Longmont, Colo., in the very near future. Very latest will be installed in theatre seats and other equipment.

The new $100,000 Criterion Theatre at Enid, Oklahoma, has been recently completed and is doing a very nice business.

The Grand Theatre Company will erect a new $100,000 motion picture house at Wheaton, Ill.

There are now several very large motion picture theatres under construction in Oklahoma, Kansas, Texas and Colorado. The men that are building these report that they will install only the very finest and up-to-date seats and theatre equipment. The houses are modern in every respect. There are very few store shows being built; most the theatre men are erecting fine brick buildings. The projection rooms are being built more roomy and better line of projection machines and other late equipment are being installed to give better projection. The projectionists can secure results if he has up-to-date equipment and a projection room large enough for him to work in. All the theatres are installing two machines and motor generator sets and also motor rewinds in most all the new houses now being erected.

MASSACHUSETTS

Attleboro — Owner, Max Simmons, care Rush Printing Co., 21 Bromfield St., Boston, will build theatre, hall and store building on Pleasant & Emory St. Architect not yet selected.

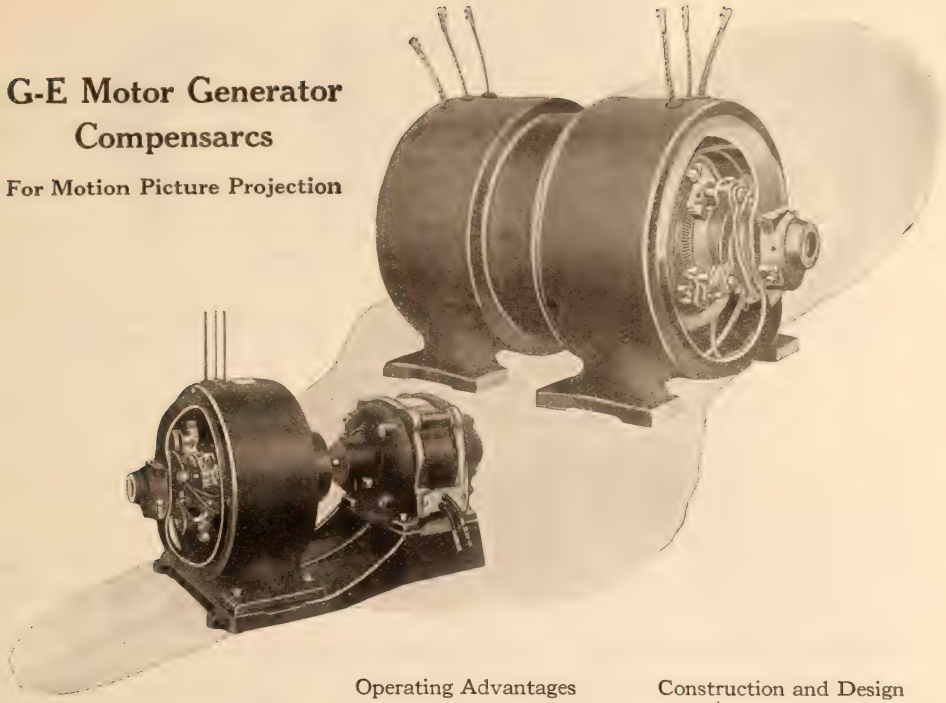
Worcester — Arch. Thos. W. Lamb, 644 8th Ave., N. Y. C. is drawing plans for 2 story brick & limestone theatre building over $2,000,000 on Southbridge St. & Burnside Court, for the S. Z. Poli Circuit, 26 Church St., New Haven, Conn. No date for taking bids.

De Forest Makes Statement on Talking Phonofilm

A statement received from Lee De Forest, inventor of the audion tube for radio use, reads:

"Since the recent showing of the Phonofilm in the Rivoli Theatre there has been much widespread comment and query as to whether or not the talking motion picture has a real future, or whether this is only another novelty. Some maintain that the Phonofilm, like its several predecessors, wherein phonograph and film-projector were synchronized — is doomed, after a passing interest, to failure and oblivion.

"I have been quoted in this connection as having said 'the Phonofilm is perfected.' This is a mistake. It is not perfected. Nothing which man has ever undertaken is perfected. But the Phonofilm is much nearer practical perfection than the motion picture was ten years ago — than itself was six months ago — and much nearer than some of its critics realize.



"The Phonofilm will never be perfected in the sense that its builders will be fully satisfied with its fidelity of recording and reproducing voice, music and all manner of acoustic effects, which can add art, and beauty, and similitude to the silver screen. But already we have worked out refinements of recording and reproducing which give a clearness and fidelity of sound reproduction equalling those of the fine phonograph records, and totally lacking that inevitable and unmistakable 'phonograph quality.'"

G-E Motor Generator Compensarcs

For Motion Picture Projection

Operating Advantages

1. Steady strong arc
2. Easily operates two arcs at the same time for change-over
3. Quiet arc strike and quick settle-down
4. Self-regulating arc voltage
5. Current stays at set value
6. Current easily raised and lowered
7. Cannot be damaged by short circuit
8. Fading made easy
9. Not affected by changes in current conditions
10. Quiet in operation

Construction and Design

1. Standard G-E construction
2. Automatic voltage regulation by generator
3. No steadying resistances
4. Oil reservoir filled once in three months
5. Closely coupled—No bearing troubles
6. Horizontal shaft—quiet running
7. No complicated parts to keep in adjustment
8. Built for long life

The General Electric Company has always realized the importance of screen illumination in the motion picture theatre. Through its engineering departments it has progressively experimented on apparatus that will furnish the most perfect control. The result of this close application to the accomplishment of "BETTER PICTURES" is found in G-E MOTOR-GENERATOR COMPENSARCS.

Radio Booms Southern Theatre's Business

The conclusion is inevitable. Radio broadcasting is an ally of the motion picture theatre. It has accomplished the impossible, for it has completely eliminated peaks and slumps; it has made the average week-day attendance at the Iris Theatre the equal of other days, spread the attendance evenly out over the week; it has developed new sources of patronage and it has been a distinct factor in keeping them tied to the theatre—something every manager in the country is constantly endeavoring to accomplish—and, through the persistent verbal advertising it is getting to the ears of the people, day in and day out—and four times every day during daylight hours—the consciousness of the existence of the Iris Theatre and the service it is rendering is kept fresh and alive and vital.

The Iris Theatre is the only amusement house in the country owning and operating its own broadcasting station.

I has proved it a valuable means of advertising more valuable than almost all other means—and it will continue to give radio concerts to the radio fans and make them its patrons when they get tired of "listening in" and want to come to town for a diversion.

Bradentown Amusements to Locate in New Building

Permit has been issued for the construction of a new theater building to be built by J. K. Singletary on the west side of Pine street, Bradentown, Fla., south of Manatee avenue, to be occupied by the Bradentown Amusements, Inc. The permit calls for a $70,000 theater, 57x130 feet, of hollow tile and concrete with steel beams and support, front to be of face brick. The balcony will have fire escapes leading down the outside of the building. Frank A. Winn, of Tampa, is the architect.

On the main floor also will be six boxes and four loges. There will be six boxes in the balcony. Exits will be on Eleventh and Ludlow Streets and through a court and passageway under the building to Market Street.

Two Story Fireproof Theatre Building for Kelso

A two story fireproof building, housing a theatre with a seating capacity of 1,500, will be built soon in Kelso, Wash., as the result of a deal closed recently by J. Brooks of the Washington Investment Company, which made the purchase of the property from Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Hutchison. The theatre, according to advance reports, will be operated exclusively under a first run policy with admission prices of ten and fifteen cents.

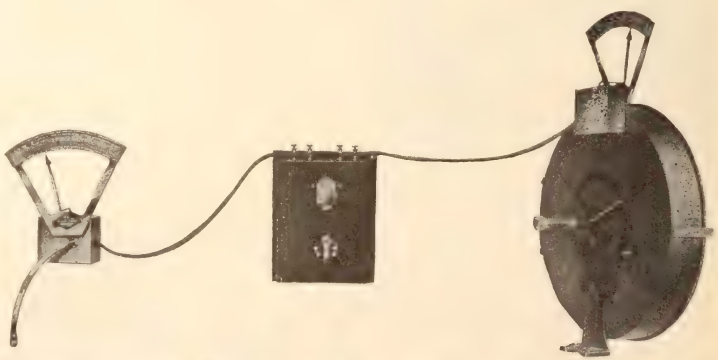
The property purchased is in the newest business section in Kelso, and covers a half block on the north side of the west approach to the Kelso bridge on the Pacific Highway. The new building will cover the entire tract. In addition to the theatre in the center of the building, there will be small stores on the street floor facing the Highway, and the second floor will be used either as offices or small apartments.

Next Year We May Be Able to See Over the Radio

Prediction that within twelve months we will be able to see as well as to hear over the radio, is made by C. Francis Jenkins, of Washington, D. C., motion picture projection machine inventor and radio expert who recently sent a picture of Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, over the radio, according to a special article by Margaret Becker Kulp, appearing in the Harrisburg, Pa., Patriot, of March 14.

Mr. Jenkins is a brother of Mrs. Francis N. Maxfield, 2830 North Second Street, Harrisburg, at whose home he has frequently been a guest, and according to the story in The Patriot, he invented, thirty-four years ago, the first motion picture projection machine of the type in use in every motion picture theatre the world over, and for which the Franklin Institute awarded him the Elliott Cresson Gold medal.

Earle Theatre Represents Last Word in Comfort and Safety

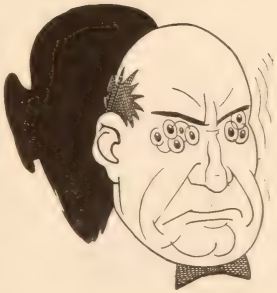


THE Earle Theatre is one of the most beautiful and most elaborately furnished and equipped playhouses in this country. Money was lavished upon every detail of the construction and upon decorations. The eminent artist, George Harding painted the magnificent murals and friezes that are part of the decorative scheme. Comfort and convenience were considerations that engaged the attention and the ingenuity of the builders so that the Earle is the last word in every respect.

There are many other features that make the Earle theatre unique in modern theatre construction. There will be a spacious promenade under the balcony while there will be two wide crossover aisles and a promenade in the rear leading to exits to the main floor, to facilitate exit from the balcony. The style of decoration is Italian Renaissance. Blocks of imported Italian marble will be shown where the floors are not covered with rich velvet carpets.

The equipment of the Earl will be such as will fit it to be used for any type of theatrical entertainment. The asbestos curtain is several times the usual thickness and is so braced as to resist any possible fire draft. The curtain is so accurately balanced that it may be raised or lowered easily and quickly by the touch of a finger. A system of counter weights will be installed for making scenic changes and the stage equipment will be operated by specially designed devices.

One of the most striking effects is in the lighting fixtures, largely in gorgeous crystal chandeliers in foreign style made in special detail at great expense. The beautiful marble lobby will prove a revelation in itself with its paneled walls devoted to the paintings. The ventilation system is also a noteworthy feature. Fans will force fresh air into the theatre over heaters and mushrooms and grills worked into the construction of the building. In the summer the heating system will become a cooling system. Duets and fans in elaborate arrangement will rid the house of foul air.



Entrance to the Earle will be from a vestibule and the lobby extending from Market Street. There will be 1,800 seats on the main floor and the balcony will have 1,164.

The above illustration shows complete set of Automatic Film Indicators and Warner. On the right is shown indicator attached to the upper magazine of a Simplex machine. On the left is shown the indicator which may be attached to another machine. pictures should be seen – not felt

IT USED to be that people not only saw movies, but felt them—in their eyes. To-day there is absolutely no excuse for eye-strain caused by poor carbons or improper light source.

Light never had a better chance to play on the emotions than it has to-day through the modern screen, but it must be good light—pure, steady, strong—the light of the National Arc.

Every house, everywhere, should use these carbons. There is a trim for every lamp and for every current supply, AC or DC, any standard voltage or amperage.

Each trim has been developed by experienced projection engineers to give you the best light for you and your audience.

Formation of Image by Concave Spherical Mirror

Lesson 2 — Part VI

THE concave spherical mirror is essentially an image forming device. Where light is to be projected over a considerable distance in the form of a beam, or, wherever a beam of small spread is desired, a special form of mirror, with a parabolic curvature, is used for a reason which will be given in a subsequent article.

The concave mirror offers a more interesting study than does the convex type since it gives a wider range of objecting-image combinations for one thing and also allows of greater opportunity for practical use.

There are, truth to tell, six principal cases which result from different positions of an object with reference to the mirror. These are:

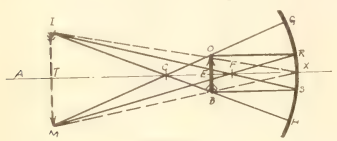

Figure 21

1. Object placed beyond the center of curvature of the mirror.
2. Object at center of curvature of mirror.
3. Object placed between center of curvature and focal point.
4. Object placed at the focal point of the mirror.
5. Object placed between focal point and the mirror itself.
6. Object placed at the mirror (at point where mirror crosses the axis).

No mention is made of the case where the object is placed an infinite distance away from the mirror since this condition, like that of a point source of light and a perfect mirror is unobtainable.

Even when an image of the sun, which is at times, more than 93,000,000 miles away from the earth, is formed at the focal point of a concave mirror, it has appreciable size and is anything but a point of light.

It is enough to know that, theoretically, when a bundle of parallel rays strikes a concave mirror having a diameter less than its focal length, the rays will be brought to a focus at the focal point of the mirror. Also when a point source of light sends light rays to such a mirror these rays will be reflected in a direction parallel to the principle axis of the mirror.

We are chiefly interested, however, in the practical operating conditions of the concave type of mirror as outlined by the six cases previously mentioned and these cases will, therefore, be described in detail.

Case 1

Any image formed by a concave mirror can be located both as to size and position by means of two or three principal rays as shown for the case of the convex mirror Thus in the case where the object is placed beyond the center of curvature of the mirror, as shown in Fig. 21, a ray of light from point 0 on the object OB, travels parallel to the axis AX and strikes the mirror at point R. After reflection, this ray of light passes through the focal point, F, and travels on in the direction RM.

Another ray of light from the same point, O, on the object passes thru the center of vurvature, C, and strikes the mirror at point H. After reflection this ray travels back over the same path over which it came and naturally crosses the first ray, OR, at point M. Consequently, an image of point 0 is formed at point M and this becomes a point on the general image, IM, of object, OB. Furthermore all other light rays from point 0 striking the mirror will be reflected so as to pass thru point M.

It would seem, at first thought, that since light ray OH passes thru point M before reflection, part MH of this ray could be cut off and an image still formed. This is not so since, if a piece of paper were placed at point M between the mirror and object, ray OM would strike one side of the paper whereas ray ORM would strike the opposite side and hence no image would be formed. The requirement for image formation is that all the light rays from any particular point on an object must, after reflection, meet again at some point to form an image of the object point under consideration.

Similarly, a parallel ray of light, (Fig. 21) from point B on the other end of the object will, after reflection pass thru the focal point F and continue on. Also another ray from the same point, passing thru the center of curvature C, on its way to the mirror, will be reflected back on its own path and intersect the first ray BSI at I to form an image of point B at that point. The image of OB is then located at IM and since

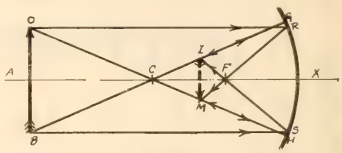

Figure 23

I is an image of point B and M an image of point 0 it can be easily seen that the image IM is inverted and real. That is, it actually exists out in space and can be received on a piece of paper or some other suitable object.

The object and image positions are interchangeable. This is similar to conjugate facii in the case of a lens since if the object is placed in the image position the image will be found at the position occupied by the object.

From what has just been said the following rule can be stated: When the object is placed beyond the center of curvature the image will be found between the center of curvature and the focal point and it will always be smaller than the object and inverted.

Case 2

If the object is moved closer to the mirror until it is at the center of curvature as shown in Fig. 22, the following will be true. According to the principles of image construction before described, the parallel ray, OR, from point O on the object is reflected thru the focus F to point M.

The only possible way however, in which a ray from O could pass thru the center of curvature, C, would be straight up to point G on the mirror and this ray comes back to meet the parallel ray OR, at M to form an image there of point O.

If another ray from point O struck the mirror at X, the intersection of the mirror, with the axis, AX, it would make equal angles with the axis and thus be reflected to point M to help form the image at that point.

Likewise, the image of point B on the object will be found at point I from which it can be seen that for this case the image is the same size as the object, but inverted, and it occupies the same position as does the object.

This principle is much used in employing Mazda lamps for motion picture and stereopticon projection. The filament of the lamp is placed at the center of curvature of the mirror and the image then formed is of the same

Device Gives Phone Conversation Privacy

Upon various occasions we have heard motion picture theatre owners state that it was impossible for them to operate their telephones in their office, which in most cases, is in direct connection with the ticket window without everybody in the lobby knowing all about their private affairs.

The Hush-A-Phone Corporation of New York has just brought out an inexpensive attachment which can be put on any telephone transmitter, by means of which the theatre executive may use his telephone in his ticket booth, lobby, or any other semi-public room in connection with his theatre without everyone in the immediate vicinity knowing what he is talking about.

This new device fits over the transmitter mouthpiece and by talking directly into it the voice is inaudible at a distance of three or four feet.

This new invention is worth the investigation of every theatre man.

Ritz Laboratories Have Fine Plant at Flushing, L. I.

The Ritz Laboratories at Flushing, L. I. is an institution of no mean size. Here is a big plant with solid buildings scientifically constructed and thoroughly well organized to make possible an output of huge proportions. Aside from the facilities for developing by hand, which are extensive, there are automatic machines with a combined output of ten million feet of finished positive a month. These machines develop, fix, wash, tone and dry the film in one operation.

Private cutting rooms are available to Ritz customers as are also a battery of twelve projectors. These facilities constitute part of the Ritz service. In the printing room is a row of Duplex printers; here also continuous printers are at work. There is vault storage for nine million feet of negative. A fully equipped machine shop in charge of a skilled mechanic is another department of the plant. A print shop equipped with presses and all the paraphernalia necessary in a modern plant of this kind is incorporated in the plant.

So modern is the construction of all buildings, which in addition are thoroughly protected by a sprinkler system, that the rate of insurance throughout the laboratory is an unusually low rate.

Contract Figures Taken for New Seattle House

General contract figures have been taken and a contract is expected to be awarded soon by Architect B. Marcus Pretica and J. Lister Holmes for the erection of a moving picture theater on the southwest corner of 10th avenue northeast and East 59th street, Seattle, Wash. Cost estimated at $90,000, 60x102 feet, mill construction. Seating capacity will be 500.

CALIFORNIA

Los Angeles—Arch. John J. Frauenfelder has been commissioned to prepare plans to represent an investment of $725,000. for a theatre and office, hotel and apartment building to be constructed at Vermont Ave. & First St., by J. J. Warrick and C. M. C. Walters. The theatre will be 90 x 145, cost $350,000, seat 900.

Los Angeles—Hulsman and Boyd are erecting a $250,000 motion picture theatre seating 2000 on S. Pacific Boulevard, Huntington Park, to be designed by Lindley & Selkirk. The theatre building will be three stories high and leased by the West Coast Theatres.

CONNECTICUT

Hartford—E. C. Horn Sons, 151 West 42nd St., N. Y. C., are drawing plans for a $18,000. alteration on a theatre on Main St. owned by Strand Theatre Co., E. J. & E. B. Hoffman, 113 Church St., New Haven, Conn.

New Haven—Jacob Weistein, architect, has drawn tentative plans for a syndicate who plan to erect a motion picture theatre at 488 Whalley Ave. bet. Boulevard & Brownell Sts. which will seat 1000, thoroughly fire proof.

MAJOR FA SYSTEM

AN OPEN SECRET

It is an open secret among the most successful exhibitors that sumptuous, colorful, lighting effects are proving an immediate Box Office asset. These up-to-date men do not depend on feature-pictures alone for their drawing power. More and more, they are proving the drawing power of a pleasing presentation, but especially of beautiful lighting.

That is why the FA Major System of Lighting Control is installed today in over one hundred of the most magnificent theaters in the country. Yet because of its unit construction, the FA Major System is practical for any house of any size. It is compact, occupying little stage space, is flexible in operation, and capable of endless variation in lighting effects—a different blending of colors every night if desired.

Moreover, it is absolutely safe.

itself. The mirror is then slightly tilted to one side so that the mirror and filament coils intermesh with each other and so apparently form a solid light source.

Case 3

If the object is moved still closer to the mirror so as to come between the center of curvature, C, and the focal point F, the result will be opposite to that found in case I. Thus, in Fig. 23, ray OR from point O, on the object is reflected thru F and thru point M. Ray OG, apparently coming from the center of curvature, C, is reflected back thru point M and point M on the image is located.

Similarly point B on the object is located at point I and IM is the image of OB. Also, say OX striking the center of the mirror will, after reflection make equal angles with the axis AX and hence be reflected to point M. Ray BX will likewise be reflected to point I over the same path.

The use of this center ray so to speak, makes possible the location of the image both as to size and position without actually constructing the figure shown since triangle IXT and OXE are similar (corresponding angles of each triangle are equal).

Thus,

$$\frac{IT}{OE} = \frac{TX}{EX} \quad \text{or} \quad IT - OE \frac{TX}{EX}$$

This means that the size of the image IM is equal to the size of object OB multiplied by the distance of image to mirror, TX, divided by the distance of object to mirror EX.

The regular mirror formula is as follows:

$$\frac{1}{u} + \frac{1}{v} = \frac{2}{r} = \frac{1}{f}$$

In other words, one divided the distance from object to mirror, plus one divided by the distance from image to mirror is equal to two divided by the radius of curvature, or one divided by the focal length (half the radius).

This same formula, in another form which is more convenient, follows:

$$f = \frac{uv}{u+v}$$

The product of the two distances mentioned divided by their sum is equal to the focal length. Also

$$\frac{1}{u} = \frac{1}{f} - \frac{1}{v} \quad \text{or} \quad \frac{1}{v} = \frac{1}{f} - \frac{1}{u}$$

As an example: A concave mirror with a focal length of 4 inches is placed 5 inches away from an object. Where will the image be formed?

$$\frac{1}{v} = \frac{1}{f} - \frac{1}{u}$$

$$\frac{1}{v} = \frac{1}{4} - \frac{1}{5}$$

$$\frac{1}{v} = 0.25 - 0.20$$

$$\frac{1}{v} = 0.04$$

$$v = \frac{1}{0.04} = 25 \text{ inches from mirror}$$

If the object was 2 inches high how large would the image be?

$$IM = OB \frac{V}{U}$$

$$IM = 2 \frac{25}{5}$$

$$IM = 2 \times 5$$

$$= 10 \text{ inches high}$$

To measure the focal length.

: : Picture Paragraphs : :

SHOULD woman propose, and kindred leap year angles are featured in the colorful press book which Distinctive Pictures Corporation has just issued on "Second Youth," which will be released through Goldwyn - Cosmopolitan. The woman proposing idea is carried out in all of the paper, in the window card and in the newspaper ads through the clever work of John Held, Jr.

The 24-sheet poster for "Second Youth," which is done in the inimitable Held style, shows a bashful young man with three young ladies on each side of him, each trying to outdo the other to please him and possibly win his favor.

IN its tie-up with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation for the combined exploitation of the film version of Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks" and the photoplay edition of the book, the Macaulay Publishing Company has just issued one of the biggest editions ever published in its series of popular price reprints of copyright novels. The edition consists of 200,000 copies and the Macaulay company anticipates that it will be entirely exhausted by the demand for it which will be aroused by the showing of the photoplay throughout the country.

The Macaulay Company has arranged to exploit the book on a big scale nationally at the same time that the film is shown.

THE Columbia Picture Corporation, a new independent film exchange in the St Louis territory, is planning out a plan of advertising their pictures through a magazine published by themselves, which contains all the information the exhibitor to know in up-to-date news form. The exchange claims almost immediate and excellent results from the very first issue on March 1, and declare they will edit further issues "now and then."

This first issue was devoted almost exclusively to C. B. C., whose pictures they are handling.

THE press book for Rupert Hughes' picture of the woman in business, "True as Steel," is now ready for exhibitors. It is in line with the big, attractive service books which Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan has been issuing for the past year.

As usual, the front cover is a reproduction of the window card and is a very attractive one. Posters are reproduced in color and have been prepared with special attention to their value as cut-outs. The 24-sheet is unique in design, showing across the upper half of the poster four seated figures, the center pair holding hands across a table. The title of the picture, the cast, the credits, etc., are given on the lower half of the 24-sheet. The 6, 1 and 3 sheets also have excellent designs for cut-out and window display purposes.

FOLLOWING a special presentation at the Opera House in Tucson, Arizona, Rex Ingram's "Scaramouche" evoked the liveliest enthusiasm from prominent people of the city. Subsequently "Scaramouche" played a record engagement at this theatre, winning the hearty support of the newspapers and the general public. Metro officials received letters from Tucson leaders complimenting them on possessing such a great production.

Miss Marion Burroughs Rhea, Society and Dramatic editor of the Tucson Citizen wrote: "I feel it a privilege to say that it is one of the best presented and the most interesting photoplays it has been my good fortune to see. 'Scaramouche' truly portrays my own mental picture of the book."

Kate B. Reynolds, County School Superintendent, wrote: "I recommend 'Scaramouche' as a picture of unusual educational merit. I can truthfully say that I enjoyed every minute of the production and I hope that every one in Tucson will avail herself or himself of the opportunity of seeing it."

THE universal popularity of Metro's "The White Sister," is evident from a report by Rev. Henry R. Rose, minister of The Church of the Redeemer, who presented it in his church in Newark, New Jersey, to a packed audience last week. Dr. Rose, who frequently presents picked photoplays to his congregation, wrote to Metro:

"I want to tell you of the splendid attendance last night when we showed 'The White Sister.' The church was so crowded we had to bring in three rows of chairs. The picture and the story made a remarkable impression. I am going to repeat it this Wednesday night in the High School of Commerce in New York. I have Metro down for three of your pictures in the series which is attracting great audiences to my church and winning enthusiastic commendation."

TWO feature comedies distributed or sold by Associated Exhibitors have places in a "recommended" list just issued by the joint committee on better films of the Illinois council of Parent-Teachers association, the Illinois League of Women Voters, and the Chicago Women's Club. Two of four pictures recommended "for the family, from high school age up" are Douglas MacLean in "Going Up" and Harold Lloyd in "Why Worry." The productions in the list were endorsed by the committee as "affording clean and wholesome recreation."

BACKING up the production with adequate exploitation is one of the things the Warner Bros. organization is noted for.

It was therefore natural that the Warner exploiteers headed by Lon Young should select the fashions and styles of today to best bring before the New York public the merits of "Beau Brummel" the traditional hero of fashion. That their work was well done is shown by the unparalleled list of store locations carrying "Beau Brummel" advertising matter in conjunction with the New York premiere at the Mark Strand.

Gray's Drug Store at 43rd St and Broadway has an entire window display containing various photos of Mr. Barrymore as "Beau Brummel in connection with a display of theatrical make-up.

A tie-up was arranged with the entire chain of 14 Young's hat stores, each store carrying an old fashioned high beaver hat in contrast with the latest model made by this firm which was named the "Beau Brummel" as a testimonial to Mr. Barrymore.

Another chain store hook-up was with the Signet Shoe stores, ten in number who made up special window displays of footwear in conjunction with advertising material for the picture.

Leighton's clothing store at 47th and Broadway was the center of attraction in Longacre Square with a special wax figure dressed in Mr. Barrymore's original costume.

Special window cards were made up for beauty parlors, each card carrying an autographed photo of one of the players in the picture wearing a striking coiffure.

A prominent jewelry store displayed the "original" snuff box owned by Beau Brummel and used by Mr. Barrymore in the picture and attracted large crowds to the store.

PRESS books have been started by the Selznick Distributing Corporation publicity department on the Distinctive Selznick picture "Twenty Dollars A week" with George Arliss, Taylor Holmes and Edith Roberts, and on "The Right of the Strongest," the Zenith production with E. K. Lincoln. The book on "Twenty Dollars A Week" is to be of twenty pages, in two colors throughout, and will contain some unusual exploitation ideas and national tie-ups.

Campaign books have just been completed by the Selznick forces on Jane Murfin's "Flapper Wives," featuring May Allison and Rockcliffe Fellowes, and on Grace Sanderson Michie's "Pagan Passions" featuring Wyndham Standing and Rosemary Theby.

"AFTER SIX DAYS," the biblical photoplay spectacle featuring Moses and the Ten Commandments, distributed by Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, now in its second week at the Tremont Temple in Boston, is having its musical program broadcasted over the Radio.

"Listeners in," have heard the augmented symphonic orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Frank S. Truda, and the beautiful rendition of selective themes by the Imperial Quartet.

The program has been broadcasted, on alternating days, both by WNAC of the Shepart Stores and station WBZ of the Boston Herald-Traveler, the latter relaying the concert to their station at Springfield, Mass.

Smashed!

Every record made by "THE HUMMING BIRD" is (and it's made hundreds of 'em) being smashed by GLORIA SWANSON in "A Society Scandal" the facts are:

At the McVickers Theatre, Chicago, "A Society Scandal" did $24,646 in one week.

At the Imperial, Charlotte, N. C., it broke all records for three days and beat "The Humming Bird" by $248.

At the Bijou, New Haven, Conn., it beat the opening night record, held by "The Humming Bird," by $77.

Spragg Amusement Co. (Ohio circuit) writes: "We are making house records with 'A Society Scandal.' THERE in every detail. Just the type they want."

And so it goes all over the country!

Help Me Solve

No. 377—Straight from the Shoulder Talks by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation

JUST AS I HAVE TRIED TO HELP YOU MEET YOUR PROBLEMS from year to year, and just as you have helped me to meet mine during the past ten years, I now again ask you to help solve the biggest one of all, because the proper solution is important to you as well as to me.

Universal is about to undertake a big thing, a revolutionary change in its production policy. Hitherto we have been making from forty to fifty-two so-called "program pictures" every year, but only from eight to twelve really big pictures, the latter being known as Jewels.

Up to this time there has been a real need for "program pictures." They have been more or less the backbone of business for many thousands of theatres. But now, according to reports from all over the world, but particularly in the United States and Canada, the "program picture" seems to have outlived its usefulness. It becomes necessary for Universal to take another step forward, and we are getting ready to take it.

Hereafter we intend to produce 36 big pictures per year instead of only eight to twelve. We have already started on this plan. In fact, the first half-dozen big pictures are completed and paid for even though they will not be offered to you until May or June for early Fall showings.

Be sure you get your copy of the April 12th issue containing Universal's Great Spring Drive Surpr ately to 1600 Broadway, N.Y. Get it.

A Big Problem

To go on with our huge new production plan will require every dollar I can get. I have no other partner except you, no other financier except you. I must operate on funds that I get from you. The only way I can get such funds is to supply you with pictures. The only way you can help me is to use the pictures I have—pictures which you have not yet played.

These pictures must have the widest possible circulation. Nothing but thorough circulation of Universal pictures in the past has enabled us to sell them to you at live-and-let-live prices. In the ordinary course of events the pictures already released would be circulated pretty thoroughly during the next six months. BUT I NEED THAT CIRCULATION FASTER THAN THAT. I NEED IT WITHIN THE NEXT TWO OR THREE MONTHS.

So I have told the sales force to use every effort to get you to help finance future Universal pictures—our big program—by GETTING YOU TO USE ALL UNPLAYED UNIVERSAL PICTURES JUST AS FAST AS YOU POSSIBLY CAN.

The money thus brought in will be used to make the newer and better Jewels which I have already told you about.

Your part is to PLAY ALL UNPLAYED UNIVERSAL FEATURES IN QUICK ORDER. MY PART IS TO PRODUCE MORE OF THE KIND OF PICTURES YOU NEED IN QUICK ORDER. If we work together it will be easy. If we don't, it will be impossible. Are you with me?

Third, it offers an opportunity for delightful musical settings and wide exploitation. Fourth, it is rich in comedy values, and fifth, it is a picture of especial appeal to children.

> "One of the real novelties of the season. Jackie contributes a characterization that is going to reach the hearts of a nation. Not only the most appealing, but the most novel role of his career. Never have there been more real comedy situations in a Coogan picture, never more heart touching moments."

AN APPEALING STORY WITH BOX OFFICE POWERS

Austin Farrol	Elliott Dexter
The Girl	Mildred Harris
The Boss	Anders Randolf
"Tug" Wilson	DeWitt Jennings

At last Elliott Dexter has been given a part commeasurate with his skill, in this, his first picture under the Grand-Ascher banner. Though perhaps the thought has not been expressed in words, the story is one in which the public has long wanted to see him starred. It has the heart appeal, vigorous and genuine; a subtle beauty, and a mighty theme—the combat of good and evil—all of which contribute to its exceptional box-office powers.

For those who demand the thrilling elements, there are embodied in the film a spectacular fire and a train wreck that is a train wreck. No fake about this one. Two locomotives, pulling a number of cars, crash head on at a breakneck speed within a short distance of the camera's lens. A more interesting and hair-raising effect has seldom been brought within such close range of the camera.

The story is based on the novel "The Way Men Love," by Adam Hull Shirk, and whether or not it has followed the book closely, comes from R. William Neill as a telling and effective story. Deftly the force of faith, represented by Elliott Dexter as Austin Farrol, known to those of his mission as "The Prince", has been portrayed in a struggle against greed for power, with faith victorious.

Many dramatic situations are introduced in the progress of the story, which moves along evenly, forcefully and surely to an uplifting climax.

Supported by Mildred Harris and a Great Cast

No scenes ever filmed carry such tremendous punches as do the scenes of the train wreck. These alone are worth the price of admission. Adam Hull Shirk's big novel wonderfully done under the direction of R. Wm. Neill. Play it for the big money.

You have convinced us of the inadequacy of the title, "Plaster Saints," although it was successfully used for a book and two serial publications of Frederic Arnold Kummer's gripping story of modern life.

You have sold us on the necessity for a title more descriptive—more specifically appealing—better understood. Such a title has been adopted. It is "The Spitfire."

Your suggestions, and those of several hundred other exhibitors, have resulted also in important changes in the plan for picturizing Mr. Kummer's book. These will be made known soon. We hope —and believe—you will approve these changes. It is your picture. You are the ones to be pleased.

Briton Demonstrates Ray To Kill From Long Distance

Can Crash Airplanes in Flight, Mow Down Armies, Inventor Asserts.

By ARTHUR F. MANN
Staff Correspondent of The World

LONDON, April 8.—This afternoon I saw the apparently successful laboratory demonstration here of a deadly new war invention, with which the inventor expects to be able to bring down airplanes in flight, to mow down armies and automobiles alike out of action, explode munitions and ammunition dumps and put warships out of action, from a long distance from the scene of action.

The discoverer of this revolutionary invention is H. Grindell-Matthews, who already has to his credit the perfection of a method to control model boats at sea by a search-light beam. For this feat the British Government after the war awarded him $125,000.

His latest invention he told me this afternoon, might be described as a ray that kills. We stood at one end of a long room behind the camouflaged secret electrical apparatus, while at the other end, clearly lit away, his assistant had started a petrol gas engine running.

DISABLING OF AIRPLANES BY RAY REPORTED BEFORE

Several times reports have come from Europe, chiefly from Paris, that Germans had perfected a wireless device that would bring down airplanes in flight. These reports usually followed the forced landing of a French plane on German soil.

Another report from Paris some time ago described a similar device by which automobiles in the streets were stopped dead. None of these reports was confirmed.

"Watch it," he said to me, and threw a switch beside him. The engine sputtered and died down almost completely. Up came the switch and it roared into life again. The second time the switch was pressed down and held there and the engine stopped.

"Imagine that the motorcycle engine was an airplane engine in flight and that the electric current available was 100 times as strong as this one," Grindell-Matthews said.

Stepping Along

First, "The Marriage Circle." Then "Beau Brummel." And now the tipsters from Los Angeles are sending us cross-country whispers, "Watch for 'Broadway After Dark!' "

The last named production, by the way, introduces a new director in the person of Monta Bell. Wid Gunning, who still ranks in our opinion as the most competent and consistently right critic breaking into type, waxes enthusiastic over his work.

It is pleasant to record the fact that the Warner Brothers are striding strongly in a cycle of successes. Those who aim high make sacrifices, tremendous sacrifices; the Warners deserve the rewards due those who give free rein to ambition and ideals.

Take a look at this 3 sheet

IF you could see this screaming three sheet in colors, and the other posters and accessories we've put behind "DAMAGED HEARTS" you would appreciate the drawing power of this picture and you would applaud F. B. O's strong arm showmanship.

The thrilling death struggle under water, as shown on this bill, is a TRUTHFUL picturization of the battle as it actually occurs in the picture.

It is not one iota exaggerated. Your patrons will see precisely what the posters show. This same thing obtains for all the other advertising material prepared for this thrilling and romantic fantasy of the Everglades of Florida, a story packed with gripping melodrama that's brand new to the public.

Add to this the fact that it is a BASIL KING story, directed by T. Hays Hunter, with Mary Carr, Tyrone Power, Edmund Breese, Sara Mullin, and huge cast, giving you mountains of advertising ammunition, you can't hesitate to book and boost —

"DAMAGED HEARTS"

A BASIL KING STORY

The Distribution Plan Contest

THE immediate response to MOTION PICTURE NEWS' prize offer of $1,000 for a new distribution plan makes it evident that a great deal of constructive good will come out of the contest.

Opinion may be divided as to whether or not distribution, as operated today, is largely and fundamentally wrong.

But, certainly no one will contend that it is satisfactory, that it meets today's exactions—that it cannot be greatly improved at least in certain very important factors that enter into its operation.

It is our profound belief, in fact it is already evident that from this concentration of thought and effort there will come forth at least some changes and additions of practical benefit.

We, for our part, while ready to admit that distribution as it exists is often efficiently managed, have always believed it to be wrong in conception, in foundation.

General Film distribution was efficient enough but it failed completely in the all important fact that it discouraged the better kind of pictures the public so evidently wanted and would continue to want.

When feature pictures came along they were distributed thru independent exchanges which then grew into the present multiple system of producer owned exchanges.

Distribution is a tremendous factor in this business. It is all embracing in its power and effect. It determines the progress of the picture and the profits of the producer and exhibitor. You may say that good pictures determine their own fate but they don't; they are dependent upon distribution. Distribution continues, just as it did in General Film days to encourage or discourage the making of the constantly better pictures the public demands. You may say that the dealing between exhibitor and salesman is a matter of ethics, of the human equation; but that is only partly true. Salesman and exhibitor are in general as fair to each other as the selling plan permits them to be.

The various high storm centers that have from time to time developed in this business have, its always seemed to us, arisen deep down from distribution. The issues of producer owned theatres, of exhibitor owned distribution, of first run control, of uniform contracts, advance deposits, booking combines, distribution mergers and the like have all come to the surface because, underneath, distribution was not functioning rightly in its fundamentals. Cures have been attempted; but it has always seemed idle to deal with the top when the trouble began at the bottom.

Then there are the important matters of percentage, playing—of national advertising. These too, are distribution factors.

Anyway, we know this, that distribution costs the industry a mighty sum. Figures don't lie. The cost is excessive. Other businesses could not stand its exactions and inequalities. And we know that better pictures must be constantly forthcoming from many sources; and that distribution must encourage them. And we know that booking combines are bad and that monopoly in distribution is equally bad.

We need, in all probability, a new distribution Constitution. But assuredly, we need some Amendments.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

THE New York World in its issue of last Wednesday presented an editorial bearing the caption: "The Right Way with the Movies." It expresses some[illegible] regarding censorship. We reproduce it as follows:

"The Assembly should pass today the new bill, introduced by the Democratic Senate leader, Mr. Walker, abolishing motion-picture censorship but providing heavy penalties for the producers of pictures held, after due legal process, to violate decency. This legislation is in line with our principles of government and consistent with the fundamental American ideal of freedom for all forms of human expression. Censorship which sets up in advance of public reception the opinion of two or three individuals as to what should and what should not be written, spoken, acted or photographed is an intolerable form of bureaucracy which is repugnant to everything underlying the American political system.

"That feature of the Walker bill which fixes harsh penalties for proved violations and imposes them upon the actual producers, as well as exhibitors, of motion pictures so convicted is, as The World has often said, the fair and proper way to protect the public welfare and punish those who transgress it. The fact as to whether a picture is indecent, according to legal standards, should be decided in a court of law, not by the opinion of a few well-meaning bureaucrats acting as a star-chamber. This is the only way not only motion pictures but books, newspapers, plays, public assemblages and all other forms of human expression should, under our system of government, be regulated."

A GOODLY gathering of film patrons, including editors, playwrights, fictionists, musicians and critics, attended John S. Robertson's preview of his new Richard Barthelmess production, "The Enchanted Cottage," at the Ritz last Friday afternoon — and sat enthralled through a tender, but moving story of romance.

The idea projected here is something new — something of an experiment because it capitalizes the illusion of love. We looked upon a perfect communion between two unfortunates who hated the world and themselves until through the illusion of love they saw each other as perfect.

Mr. Robertson, with the aid of his talented players, Mr. Barthelmess and Miss McAvoy, enabled us to see that true beauty is not of the body — but of the soul. Most of the action transpires in two or three rooms — with just a handful of characters. But so compelling are the scenes that we become dwellers in this enchanted cottage. We tread, lightly, unobserved — for we would not interrupt this romance and

It is a sensitive picture, created with feeling and understanding — and finely expressed. The simplicity and humanity of it will send the spectator away with a kind thought. And its spiritual glow will kindle sentiment and sympathy every-

THE asterisks are back — the National Board of Review awarding them for the week ending March 22, to "Ameritaly," "Which Shall It Be," and "A Boy of Flanders," — and for the week ending March 29, to "Gold Fish," "Girl Shy," and "Peter the Great." For the week ending April 5, the Board gives a little black star to "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

OTHER sponsors of Hollywood have come forward to establish the town in the public eye as a decent place in which to live. Laurance L. Hill and Silas E. Snyder have written a little book entitled, "Can Anything Good Come Out of Hollywood?" (Snyder Publications) — which is a constructive effort to set forth the beautiful side of a community that has been so much maligned. Its chapters are filled with the good work being accomplished there and its authors bring out the condemnations and then proceed to smash them.

It is profusely illustrated, the views giving the lie to its defamers. We see art galleries, colleges, libraries, high schools, and the world famous Bowl. We turn the pages and discover enchanting scenes of foliage on display. Again there are impressive views of the colonization going on there — with snug, substantial homes dotting the landscape.

These pictorial documents establish the fact that Hollywood is just like any other thriving American community, harboring people who believe in homes and children — who strive day in and day out, with real civic pride to make it a place of beauty, peace, contentment and refinement.

THE Kansas City Star thinks well of Frank L. Newman, owner of the Newman theatres in K. C. Two paragraphs were given up toward acclaiming his critical faculties. And here they are:

"It would be fine to be a movie critic if one could hibernate during long, dreary seasons of mediocre pictures and come to life occasionally to shout out the window and mail postal cards to the readers to be sure and see the rare good offering.

"That is what Frank L. Newman has managed to do and in so doing has made of himself a reviewer whose judgment of what people will like holds few equals. When he affixes his personal recommendation to a film it is well to cut out something at the cafeteria that week and sink your savings at the Newman. But then, Mr. Newman has endorsed just six pictures in ten years. Imagine what would happen to most reviewers with a record like that. He never has gone wrong, but just think how many times he has kept quiet."

SCORE one for the sake of accuracy! Walter Woods recently made a six-thousand mile journey from Hollywood to Philadelphia and back just to see one stage performance of "Merton of the Movies," which James Cruze will direct under the supervision of Mr. Woods. Mileage and money mean nothing these days when a production editor or director wishes to establish proper atmosphere and details. By seeing the play Mr. Woods will know just how to handle the screen version.

HORSES, dogs, oxen, goats and monkeys have played considerable part in motion pictures. Which reminds us that the meek and placid cow has been grossly neglected. Time was when the animal who feeds the universe displayed considerable temperament. We all know of the cow that jumped over the moon. There's a feat never accomplished by the horse! And what about Mrs. Murphy's cow that kicked over the lamp and caused the Chicago fire? That cow made history.

Now comes a cow that has kicked her way into pictures — and you will find her in King Vidor's production, "Mary the Third." A cow may not bring in so much on the hoof as a horse — but she's precious just the same — so precious in fact that Mr. Vidor had to gain special permission from the California authorities to drive the cow onto the Goldwyn pasture. There's a quarantine in existence out there against the transportation of cattle while the hoof and mouth disease is prevalent.

THE exhibitors who want to tie up with Mother's Day — which arrives May 11 — and show their respect for the hand that rocks the cradle — can book all types of picture carrying a relevant theme.

What about "Boy of Mine" and "The Frontier Woman"? There is "Humoresque" — and "Over the Hill." Other suggestions include "The Old Nest," "Mother," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Little Orphant Annie," "Only 38," "Sonny," "Driven," "Nanook of the North," "Wanted — a Mother," "A Woman's Woman," "Woman to Woman," "Your Best Friend," "Timothy's Quest," "Back Home and Broke," "Half-a-Dollar Bill," "The Town That Forgot God," and "Women Who Give."

TOM MIX is deserving of his popularity. Ever since he became a screen actor — and projected the spirit of the West in his dashing adventures afoot and in the saddle, he has given us consistently good pictures. He does not try to offer us epics of literature. While the story is important in his estimation — he depends mostly upon characterization, rattling fast action and crisp incident. The plot will naturally take care of itself.

Yet we have never seen a mediocre story forming the background of his pictures. If some of the ideas are old — he dresses them up with colorful trimmings — and makes them look like new.

The Tom Mix pictures are money-makers because he symbolizes the spirit of the West. Whether he visualizes the days when buffaloes roamed the plains and the pony express carried the mail over the mountains — or whether he visualizes the modern West — he brings us the romance of the cowboy.

Here is an instance of his popularity: During a recent poll of the schools in Bloomington, Illinois, Tom Mix was voted the favorite male actor. The school children in their replies paid special attention to the trick riding and jumping of the star.

THE censors will let this one go through — as is. Eight million bathing beauties are to be used in a short subject of Educational's — and not a stitch of clothing will be worn by any of them — not even the abbreviated costume affected by the "macksennettites."

Every one of the eight million will be annihilated in the big "punch" scene of the picture.

A special lake of unique proportions has been constructed for the setting of the big mass scene and the slaughter of the innocents.

IT WAS reasonable to believe that when Harry Hershfield, the cartoonist, considered appearing on the screen, he would take up talking pictures — for Harry is SOME talker, especially when it comes to funny stories.

HERE is a bit of kitchen "business" not written in the script. With the secret out that Douglas Fairbanks is a pastry fiend (according to the publicity agent) he might hunt up E. It's been broadcasted that Mr. Hopper can concoct dishes from over three hundred recipes — ranging all the way from fried chicken a la Maryland to apple strudel.

Elected President as Liggett's Successor — Convention Is Largely Attended

THE sixth annual convention of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas held in the Hotel Broadview, Emporia, Kans., last week, was a tribute to the progress of that organization.

The banquet, at which 250 exhibitors and their families attended, was a spectacle without rival in the history of the organization. R. R. Biechele of the Osage theatre, Kansas City, Kas., former vice-president, and one of the most ardent workers in the association, was elected president, succeeding R. G. Liggett, resigned.

The other new officers are Harry McClure, Strand theatre, Emporia, Kas.; Charles Bull, Holland theatre, Wichita, Kas.; A. R. Zimmer, Liberty theatre, Marysville, Kas., and Walter Wallace, Orpheum theatre, Leavenworth, Kan., vice-presidents; C. M. Smith, Tenth Street theatre, Kansas City, Kas., secretary, and Fred Meyn, Pershing theatre, Kansas City, Kas., treasurer. Board of directors: Stanley Chambers, Miller theatre, Wichita, Kas.; M. B. Shanberg, Midland Circuit of Theatres; G. L. Hooper, Orpheum theatre, Topeka, Kas.; E. E. Frazier, New Grand theatre, Pittsburgh, Kas.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum theatre, Leavenworth, Kas.; A. F. Baker, Electric theatre, Kansas City, Kas., and R. G. Liggett, Gauntier theatre, Kansas City, Kas.

Following an address of welcome Tuesday morning by Walter Gunsolly, president of the Emporia Chamber of Commerce and a responsive address by President Liggett, Mrs. Z. Wetmore, president of the Kansas Parent-Teacher Association, made an appeal to the exhibitors to play films approved by the P. T. Association, using a small insignia of that organization in the advertising of pictures. A resolution, approving such an action was adopted, with the reservation that such pictures would be played as much as possible. Co-operation between the welfare committees of the exhibitor and P. T. organizations also was urged by Mrs. Wetmore.

The arbitration committee, appointed by the new president, consists of A. F. Baker, R. G. Liggett, Fred Meyn and C. M. Smith, all of Kansas City, Kas. Committees on promotion and research, auditing and other duties later will be appointed. An annual report, covering activities of the M. P. T. O. K., was given by Mr. Liggett at the banquet. Samuel A. Handy, attorney for the organization, urged exhibitors to keep up the fight against payment of music tax. The central shipping project was endorsed, while unfair competition of schools and churches came in for a panning.

Music at the banquet was furnished by the Emporia Glee Club, while an address was given by Rollin Boynton, county prosecuting attorney. A gold watch was presented Mr. Liggett by Judge Hopkins as a token of appreciation of Mr. Liggett's services to the organization. A huge birthday cake was presented Mrs. Liggett by the Paramount exchange of Kansas City. Six candles, marking the anniversary of the M. P. T. O. K., were atop the cake, which was returned to Kansas City and served at a special gathering at the Paramount office, which is next door to the M. P. T. O. K. headquarters, the Kansas quarters being too small to accomodate the crowd.

Resolutions approving more economy in the production of films, opposing the playing of pictures where the stars are of questionable character, extending appreciation to senators and representatives in their work to abolish the war tax and appreciation of Mr. Liggett's services were adopted.

Riegel's Term Up as Ohio Censorship Chief

THE term of Vernon M. Riegel, censor chief in Ohio, expired April 4. His friends are urging that he be reappointed, but Governor Donahey would not discuss the matter other than to say that Riegel's work had been satisfactory.

"I am not ready to make any announcement at this time," the Governor added. Riegel will continue until he is reappointed or a successor named.

At a meeting of city superintendents of schools of the state educational conference, held April 4, Riegel was accused of playing politics by sponsoring inaccurate propaganda. Riegel was also director of the State Educational Department.

New Companies Chartered in N. Y. State

Motion picture companies incorporating and engaging in business in New York state during the past week included the following: Tex Austin's Imperial Rodeo, capitalized at $20,000, with William S. Walters, William G. Lovatt, William N. Hechheimer, New York; Sassano Film Company, $50,000, Alpedo and Antonio Sassano, Frank P. Standard Theatre, Cleveland, Is Closed

The Standard theater, Cleveland, Prospect avenue and East Ninth street, is closed. The theater will be dismantled, and it will be utilized for commercial purposes. Universal Pictures Corp. was running the Standard theater. Owners of the lease have effected a cancellation with Universal.

There's quite a bit of local sentiment connected with the Standard theater. It was built about 12 years ago by Joe Grossman and it was the first house built in Cleveland downtown district as a picture theater. The other theaters had all been storerooms first, and had later been converted into picture houses. When it was built, it was considered the last word in elegance. Grossman sold the house about five years ago.

Veteran Exhibitor Dies in Cleveland

Max Schachtel, veteran exhibitor and exchange manager of Cleveland, died suddenly at his home April 2. He was manager of the Cleveland Universal exchange at one time, about eight years ago. He was also interested in several suburban picture theaters.

At all times he was vitally interested in the advancement of the picture business, and took an active part in the proceedings of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association. He is survived by his widow and a son, Sam, who manages the "Y" theater, Cleveland.

Revival in Theatre Building in Canada

Statistics issued for the whole of Canada covering building projects for the first three months of 1924 show that there is somewhat of a revival in theater building operations throughout the country.

Projected new work for theaters, designated in construction permits and contracts during the first quarter of the year, amounted to $592,500. This included two new theaters at Montreal which have been decided upon by the Independent Amusements, Limited, which operates half a dozen other attractive theaters in that city.

Pictures Being Shown in Methodist Churches

The motion picture will invade many Methodist churches within the bounds of the Wyoming Conference, according to indications from the conference session at Binghamton, N. Y., this week. Pictures are being booked by agents of a non-theatrical concern in all the four districts of the conference.

Censorship Repeal Defeated in N. Y.

Assembly Kills Davison Bill

THE motion picture censorship law will remain on the statute books of New York state for another year at least. This became a foregone conclusion Thursday afternoon when the Davison censorship repeal bill was defeated in the Assembly by a vote of 77 to 65. There was some breaking away from party lines on the part of both Republicans and Democrats, but there were not sufficient of the former to bring about the passage of the bill which had been introduced by F. Trubee Davison, of Nassau county, a Republican. Simon Adler, the Majority Leader of the lower house, and a resident of Rochester, led the Republican delegation of seven who voted in favor of the repeal measure.

Although the Walker repeal bill will not go to a vote in the State Senate until some time Thursday night or early Friday morning, just before the legislature adjourns, the very fact that a Republican censorship repeal bill was defeated earlier in the day in a body Republican in its majority, means that the Walker bill has not a ghost of a chance once it reaches the Assembly. It is generally conceded that the Walker bill is a Democratic administration measure, even though it had been offered as a compromise between the first Walker repeal bill and the Davison bill, when complaint was made that the latter was far too drastic.

The fight on the floor of the Assembly before the Davison bill went to a vote easily became one of the features of the closing day of the Legislature. Although there had been reports from time to time during February and March that the repeal bill would go to a vote before the heetic hours that mark the close of the session each year, matters continued to drag and it was only during the final hours of the session that the bills were reported out, first in the Assembly and second in the Senate, and to a vote.

Both factions were represented in the crowd that thronged the Assembly Chamber when word went out that the Davison bill was on the calendar and would be reached early in the afternoon. Canon Chase and Rev. O. R. Miller, well known reformers, sat side by side along the west side of the Chamber. George VanNamee, former secretary to the Governor, and recently named as a member of the Public Service Commission, occupied a seat in the well of the Chamber and followed the debate word for word.

Edward Earl, President of Nicholas Power Co., Who Died April 4.

Before recording himself in favor of the repeal bill, Simon Adler, of Rochester, Republican leader of the Assembly, in a carefully prepared and worded speech, said that he did not regard the measure as one of a political character and that his vote would be solely as an indication of his convictions.

"I voted for the first censorship law that was passed and adopted in this state," said Mr. Adler. "I did so because it was demonstrated to my satisfaction at that time that the great motion picture industry was even then so new and undeveloped in its management that it was not being conducted with proper judgment and attention to the rights of the people. Before we placed the censorship law in the books of New York state, through the passage of the bill in the legislature, producers had said to us that if they were given more time they would correct their own faults.

"We were convinced, however, that the industry at this time was not in the hands of men who lived up to their promises and after promise after promise had been broken we became convinced that they did not intend to live up to their word, and so censorship was put through in the way of a bill in the legislature.

"We know that the management of the motion picture industry and the personnel has changed, and we know that the heads are now responsible. We know that any promises made by this industry as a whole, or by its heads, can be relied upon.

"The Davison bill is a perfect protection to the public from so-called indecent films. Under its provisions if improper pictures are shown and convictions follow, punishment is certain and sure. It is in accordance with American principles to punish after conviction. Believing as I do, I desire to be recorded in favor of the Davison censorship repeal bill."

Among the lesser lights who spoke in favor of the bill were Assemblymen Cuvillier, Hackenburg, Murphy and Nugent, while those speaking against the bill were Assemblymen Esmond, Clayton, G. S. Johnson, who talked for a considerable length, Jenks and Hutchinson and Milan E. Goodrich.

Mr. Goodrich declared he had been told that producers were today holding back millions of dollars' worth of pictures which they would flood this state with in case the present censorship law was wiped out of existence.

Assemblyman Davison made a remarkably good plea for his bill. At the outset, Mr. Davison said that he believed that almost every member of the Assembly was opposed to censorship. He said that he was personally opposed to censorship in its principle and yet he should not vote for the Hackenburg bill which was for repeal of censorship because it provided no substitute to protect the general public from indecent pictures.

Mr. Davison took some time to recite the history of his bill, now he had set about to frame a measure which would serve as a substitute for censorship and one which would not operate solely against the exhibitors.

As Mr. Davison spoke, he was interrupted from time to time with rather pointed questions from Assemblyman Burton D. Esmond, of Ballston Spa, and Walter F. Clayton, of Brooklyn, who introduced the censorship bill that was passed in 1921. At times it became almost a debate between Mr. Davison and Mr. Esmond, with the latter taking the stand that the present system was superior to anything embodied in the bill under discussion.

Before concluding Assemblyman Davison said that he had submitted his bill to three different district attorneys and each had said that it was workable. Mr. Davison read

Government Speakers at I. M. P. P. D. A. Luncheon

HUSTON THOMPSON, Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission was the guest and principal speaker at the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association luncheon in the Astor, April 8. O. A. Keen, Post-office Inspector; Oscar Neufeld of De Luxe Exchange of Philadelphia, and R. E. Welsh of Moving Picture World were the other speakers.

Huston Thompson stated that the Federal Trade Commission was chiefly interested in keeping the channels of commerce open and that any branch of any industry that could show that other branches in the same industry were conspiring against them would be sure of relief from this government commission to restore fair competitive conditions and an open field.

President I. E. Chadwick was toastmaster, and about thirty independent producers were present, some coming from as far away as Chicago for the luncheon.

M.P.T.O.A. Convention Program Set

Plans Being Completed Rapidly for National Meeting at Boston in May

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week from M. P. T. O. A. National headquarters of the program for the Boston Convention, to be held May 27-28-29. Mayor Curley of Boston will open the convention with an address of welcome, which will be supplemented with speeches from other city officials.

The business sessions will open with a report by the National Board of Directors on the activities of the organization during the year. Executive Secretary Ernest H. Horstmann of the M. P. T. O. of Massachusetts and members of the convention committee are rapidly completing arrangements for the event. The Chairman of the New England Convention Committee is H. I. Wasserman of the Eagle theatre, Roxbury, Mass., and he is assisted by a group of exhibitors. The committee held a meeting last Tuesday and the following program was decided upon:

Monday, May 26

Meeting of National Officers, Members of the Executive Committee at the Copley-Plaza for reports of the year and final convention arrangements.

Tuesday, May 27

Opening of the Convention at 11. Address by His Honor, the Mayor of Boston, and other dignitaries. Convention business. Grand Ball at Copley-Plaza in evening.

Wednesday, May 28

Convention continued. Trip down Boston harbor in afternoon. Convention Banquet at night.

Thursday, May 29

Convention continued. Visit to Bunker Hill and other historic spots. Evening — Adjournment.

The city of Boston will provide the theatre owners and other visitors to the Convention with a steamship ride along the Boston Harbor and other sections of the New England coast. The historic elements associated with Boston Harbor, notably the Boston Tea Party, landing of the British troops just previous to the battle of Bunker Hill and other phases will be illustrated during the trip. A musical program and other forms of entertainment including a luncheon will feature the trip.

The Motion Picture Ball on Tuesday evening at the Copley-Plaza will be attended by the civic and social leaders of Boston and vicinity, and many prominent actors and actresses. While the delegates are busy in the convention hall, there will be special entertainment provided for the visitors, especially the lady guests, in addition to the foregoing program. A committee of Boston ladies will have charge of these arrangements.

Coincident with this detailed work in Boston with respect to the convention, are the activities of the National Convention Committee in New York. President Sydney S. Cohen, M. E. Comerford, R. F. Woodhull, John A. Schwalm, Fred Seegert, Glenn Harper and J. W. Walsh, members of the Committe, are busy on the convention program.

Carolina Convention Will Be Held in June

THE annual convention of the North Carolina M. P. T. O. will be held at Morehead City, North Carolina, June 11th and 12th. The executive committee have been called to meet the evening before the opening at 8 o'clock. There will be closed sessions the opening day and at 7 P. M. a banquet open to all. The second day will be open sessions with anyone connected with any branch of the industry invited.

DeSalles Harrison, southeastern representative of the Public Relations Department of the Hays organization has been invited to address the convention and has already accepted a letter from the president of the Association of District Attorneys of New York state, which went on to say that the writer was in favor of the bill as it solved the problem of censorship and possessed teeth sharp enough to guard the public from indecent film, and furthermore that it could be enforced.

Censorship Repeal Defeated in N. Y. State

Minority Leader Maurice Bloch, of New York, spoke briefly saying that his party was pledged to the support of censorship repeal.

Although the Assembly was working under what is termed a "close call" of the House, with no one being given permission to leave the Chamber, there were nevertheless eight members absent when the slow roll call recorded the vote.

The motion picture industry, particularly the exhibitors who had been hoping to obtain a law which would enable them to admit unaccompanied children to theatres under certain conditions, received a jolt in the Assembly Wednesday night, when the Jenks bill permitting children between the age of eight and sixteen years, unaccompanied, to attend a motion picture theatre at such times during the day as would not conflict with school hours, was defeated by a vote of 131 to 14. The Jenks bill was also introduced by a Republican, and was one of four bills that were introduced during the session of much the same character, the other bills being the Reiburn measure, the Miller measure and the Schoffel measure, differing but little and introduced solely because of this or that faction demanding certain provisions that might better have been embodied in an amendment to the original bill.

There are two or three other bills relating to the motion picture industry to come before the legislature prior to its adjournment. One of these is the Murphy bill, which has already passed one house and appears to stand a good chance of being approved by the other.

The Steingut bill relating to the requirements of miniature cinemagraph machines to the end that they shall be of a type approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters or by the head of the department or bureau of a city or village having jurisdiction on matters relating to fire prevention, is attracting little or no attention and may or may not get through.

There is one bill introduced on February 26, by Senator Knight which is of prime importance to the theatre owners of New York state and one which if passed and signed will serve to do away with the required expenditure of vast sums in obeying the proposed standard building code. The Knight bill provides that the proposed code shall not apply to New York city or to such other cities as have a bureau of buildings charged with the duty of enforcing a building code.

The Levy bill, which includes employees of motion picture production getting not to exceed $25 a day or $100 a week within the provisions of the states compensation law for workmen, may be passed before the legislature adjourns.

Eastern Missouri M.P.T.O. Meets April 22

THE annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Missouri will be held at the Elks Club, St. Louis, Mo., on April 22. It is expected that this year's gathering will greatly exceed that of last year, as many matters of importance to the exhibitors are scheduled to come before the body. Many exhibitors from the Southern Illinois territory have indicated they will be on hand.

A movement is under way to give the Eastern Missouri division jurisdiction over the Southern Illinois territory because those exhibitors purchase their film in the St. Louis market.

The convention is expected to take a decided stand against Federal and state taxes on theatre tickets, and also to favor the repeal of the music tax.

Big Plans for Illinois M. P. T. O. Meeting

The Get Together Dinner and Midnight Frolic which will be a feature of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners' convention and will be held at the Sherman Hotel, Chicago, on the night of April 23rd, promises to be a big success.

The film board is cooperating with the exhibitors to put it over and the following committee has been appointed by the film board: I. Maynard Schwartz, Edward Silverman, Joe Friedman, and Harry Kirsig. The Exhibitors' committee is composed of J. C. Miller of Woodstock, Ben Berve, of Rochelle, Glenn Reynolds of De Kalb, and L. Siegel, L. Zahler, Ben Cooney, and Abe Cohen, of Chicago.

Among the prominent men who have promised to attend and address the Exhibitors are Mayor Dever of Chicago, and Charles Pettijohn, of the Hays organization, who will come from New York especially for the dinner.

New Jersey Convention at Asbury Park

When the board of directors of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey put the choice of a convention city up to its 89 per cent membership the vote was as follows:

Asbury Park, 104 votes; Atlantic City, 31 votes; Lake Hopateong, 29 votes and Newark rolled a seven.

The dates will be announced later.

Important Ruling on Sale of Picture Rights

THE Court of Appeals of New York State, handed down a decision last week to the effect that motion picture rights are not included under a sale of "dramatic" rights. The decision came as the result of an injunction proceeding brought some time ago by John G Underhill, who restrained Richard G Herndon from exhibiting "La Maquerida" as a picture.

It appears that Mr. Underhill had the right to translate and produce the play. He made a contract with Mr. Herndon transferring to him the exclusive dramatic rights. Herndon produced the play under the name of the "Passion Flower." He then sold the motion picture rights for $22,500 to Joseph M. Schenck, the latter producing a picture under the name of "The Passion Flower," starring Norma Talmadge.

Underhill's contention was that the motion picture rights had not been given to Herndon, and that its showing in competition with the play resulted in reduced royalties.

The decision on the part of the court of appeals is of importance in determining the right to film a play of which a producer has obtained dramatic rights. Herndon's claim that such rights were included when not expressly stated was not accepted by the court of appeals.

"Chechahcos" Showing for U. S. Officials

A special showing of "The Chechahcos," an Associated Exhibitor release, was scheduled for late this week for government officials in the auditorium of the Department of the Interior at Washington. This is an Alaska-made production. The late President Warren G. Harding and the Congressional party were guests of the company on their Alaskan tour.

Cast of "Babbitt" Is Now Completed

Clara Bow and Raymond McKee have been secured by Warner Brothers and the cast is now complete to produce the Sinclair Lewis story, "Babbitt."

John B. Rock Predicts a Prosperous Summer

VITAGRAPH'S general manager, John B. Rock, declared that the coming summer will be the most prosperous for the motion picture industry, upon his return from a flying visit to Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Buffalo and Albany.

These conclusions are the result of specific territory surveys made by the Vitagraph sales force under the direction of branch managers and which were reported to Mr. Rock at general sales meetings in each of the cities visited.

Those who directed these surveys were J. M. Duncan, division manager, and J. A. Steinson, manager, Chicago; C. L. Kendell, Cincinnati; J. H. Young, Detroit; F. W. Redfield, Pittsburgh; C. W. Anthony, Buffalo and S. N. Burns, Albany.

Governor "Fires" Member of Kansas Censor Board

The political "axe" moved swiftly in Kansas last week. Governor Davis requested Miss Emma Viets to resign as a member of the Kansas Board of Film Censorship, no reason being given in a letter from Governor Davis to Miss Viets, received at the censor board's office in Kansas City, Kas. She has been succeeded by Miss Ella Tripp, of Fort Scott, Kas. Miss Viets went to the state capitol, Topeka, to resign in person.

Miss Viets was the first member of the board to be appointed by the governor. She is a Republican and said she knew of no reason for the governor's action. Miss Viets, whose home is in Girard, Kas., was an inspector for the board before she became a member. Miss Tripp has been employed in the office of the hotel commissioner at the state capitol several months.

Film Boards Hear Five Thousand Cases

Since a year ago, more than five thousand have been actually tried by the thirty-one film boards and fully three times have come up for argument outside the meetings, according to Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Hays' office, who is handling the operations of the F. I. L .M. Clubs throughout the country.

In the Cleveland territory above, there were 107 cases tried during the last eight months of 1923. This board handles only about one case in seven as many are attended to by Sam Bullock, field representative of M. P. T. O., who handles the cases in conjunction with W. J. Banks, secretary of the Cleveland unit, and Howard Christman, secretary of the F. I. L. M. Board.

Emory Johnson Editing Fifth Production

With the final scenes of warfare filmed in the hills back of Santa Monica, overlooking the Pacific Ocean, Emory Johnson has begun the work of editing his fifth production for F. B. O. It is tentatively called "Swords and Plowshares."

The new picture was written by Johnson's mother, Emilie Johnson, who wrote the scripts for all the other Johnson successes including "In the Name of the Law," "The Third Alarm," "Westbound Limited" and "The Mail Man."

Hollywood Publicity Chief Takes Bride

The marriage of Wilson M. Heller and Miss Wilmirth Holdaway was recently solemnized in the Hollywood Congregational church. Rev. James Hamilton Lash tied the nuptial knot. The bride was a former society girl of Salt Lake City. The young couple are living in Hollywood. Mr. Wilson is director of publicity for the Hollywood studios.

"Never Say Die" For Douglas MacLean

Douglas MacLean's third starring vehicle for Associated Exhibitors is a screen adaptation of William Collier's farce, prepared by Raymond Griffith and entitled "Never Say Die."

Bureau Urges Producers to Send Information

JANUARY 1 the Bureau of the Census, of the United States Department of Commerce, sent out questionnaires to ascertain the extent of the American film and film-play manufacturing activities. More detailed information was sought in the schedule sent out than heretotore, and more of the independent producers were reached than previously. The inquiry contains 8 main divisions and pertains chiefly to the term "The Motion Picture Industry (Studio, Laboratory Work, Etc.) being a sub-section of the "Census of Manufactures, 1923", and is restricted to the calendar year, not the fiscal year, just passed. With the cooperation of the Hays organization the form has been broadcast to all known producers whose output was in excess of $1,000 or over 1,000 feet of film

The Bureau has requested the Washington correspondent of Motion Picture News to urge that all producers fill out the schedules and expedite receipts of the information by the Bureau of the Census, at Washington. Many of the larger concerns have sent in their replies but the figures can not be published as accurate, pending a receipt of all schedules now out.

"A Woman of Hollywood" for Vitagraph

J. Stuart Blackton's next production for Vitagraph is "A Woman of Hollywood," and Irene Rich has been engaged for one of the three leading roles.

It is described as a drama of life in the film colony among the studios and will include intimate shots of pictures in the making. Production starts soon at Vitagraph's Hollywood Studios.

Universal Starts "Souls That Pass in Night"

"Souls That Pass in the Night," a Universal feature with Chester Franklin directing, has gone into production at Universal City. In the cast are Lucille Rickson, Winifred Bryson, Johnny Harron, Charles Clary and Ylon Kalo, Chinese juvenile character actor.

The story is an adaptation by Emile Forst.

Grainger Back from Long Visit to Coast

JAMES R. GRAINGER, General Manager of Sales for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan is back in New York after a six weeks' trip to the company's exchanges.

Mr. Grainger spent some time at the Goldwyn studios in Culver City looking at productions now under way and conferring with executives there. He is particularly enthusiastic over Marshall Neilan's production of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles." He reports that King Vidor has started "Mary The Third" and Seastrom is under way with a picturization of an English novel by Edwin C. Booth, "The Tree of the Garden."

"I found business conditions good everywhere," said Mr. Grainger.

"The exhibitors were mostly in a satisfied frame of mind due to a generally prosperous season. The big money makers have been the big special productions."

Pictures Advocated by Church Paper

Official Organ of Methodist Episcopal Church Sees Benefit in Showings

MOVING pictures in the Methodist Episcopal church are strongly advocated in an article by A. E. Tink in the Northwestern Christian Advocate, the official paper for the Methodist Episcopal church in the Middle West.

After quoting the Chicago newspapers as saying that three hundred Chicago schools are equipped with picture apparatus, Mr. Tink's article continues:

"Almost last in the procession, the Christian church becomes interested, until there are between five and six thousand churches within our borders that are showing pictures more or less regularly. And why not? May not an instrument that is in itself clean, that is loved by the masses, that has proved effective when used for entertainment, instruction, and for the dissemination of the spirit of patriotism, be equally effective when used by the church for the purpose of supplying entertainment at cost, instruction in righteousness, and of creating the Christian ideal within the minds and hearts of men?

"A few church members have objected furiously to the use of pictures by the church. Some of these objections are sincere and some of them are the symptoms of the oft-recurring disease 'staticism.' All innovations necessitate readjustments which the hedonistic Christian finds it inconvenient to make. 'If ye pit an organ in this kirk, I'll pit my fit through t!' said the rut-bound church member of less than a century ago. Ten years after the introduction of an organ in a certain church, a cyclone struck the community, uprooting and demolishing one wall of the church. Some of the organ objectors stood by wagging their heads, and one of them exclaimed, 'It's all a visitation of Providence for attemptin' to worship the Lord with a machine!' Was that objection due to the extreme spirituality of the speaker? Was it not rather evidence of that inertia which is ever tending to arrest progress, increasingly evident as the individual, or the institution grows old?

"I will briefly enumerate a few benefits derived from the showing of carefully selected motion pictures directly under church auspices.

"1. It aids in bridging the great gulf, fixed or fixing, between the churched and the great mass of unchurched. It brings within church walls those who will not attend a 'regular' service, who cannot be compelled to go, even once, to an evangelistic meeting, whose sin consists in a complete indifference toward organized Christianity. It gives the church one more point of contact. It is a 'go-getter' for any worthy church cause—it 'compels them to come in.'

"2. It shows the citizens of a community that there is one institution under the sun that is operating for service only and not for financial gain—this is no small item!

"3. It develops a community conscience respecting suitable pictures. It is as valuable a service to educate people to the difference between good and bad pictures, as it is to educate them to the difference between good and bad language, or to the difference between good and bad music.

"4. It offers the best medium yet devised for the study of mission lands and the work which our missionaries are carrying on, whether in the home or foreign field. If seeing is believing, then the movie offers the church a faith-inspiring means of teaching missions.

"5. It cultivates within the heart of many a neglected child a love for the institution which gave him something which he liked, when he had neither money nor a place to go; at the same time the thing that he likes is good for him, body and soul.

"6. If shown on a Sunday evening the pictures attract scores and hundreds who otherwise would be at the commercial theatre where the sole purpose is to entertain. The selected picture is only one item of a considerable program; there is also carefully selected music, the singing of several gospel songs from the screen, a Scripture passage from a modern version, and a ten to fifteen-minute address by the pastor; while every service is opened and closed with prayer. Whether is it better to preach thirty minutes to a faithful two-score 'who need no repentances,' or to talk fifteen minutes to five-score who are somewhat akin to the multitudes upon whom the Master had compassion? Let the average pastor answer."

Musicians Demand Pay for Radio Work

OTTAWA, Ontario, musicians, practically all of whom are identified with local theatres, have formally notified the local radio broadcasting stations that radio concert engagements must be paid for according to a union scale in future.

This step was taken, it was pointed out, because the musicians realized that radio had developed as a competitor of the theatres through which they earned their livelihood. The scale established by the musicians for broadcasting concerts was $2 per hour with $3.50 for the orchestra leader.

Syracuse Theatres Given Clean Bill of Health

Downtown picture theaters in Syracuse were given a clean bill of health in a report filed with Acting Commissioner of Public Safety D. E. Lillis by inspectors in the Bureau of Fire Prevention, who visited the theaters to determine whether they are being overcrowded to a point threatening the safety of patrons.

They reported that the crowds, although large in most of the theaters, were being handled in such a way as to provide easy exit in event of a fire or other disturbance.

Northwest Film Board Holds Banquet

Managers on the Seattle, Wash., Film Row turned out en masse the end of March to attend a regular monthly meeting of the Northwest Film Board of Trade, during which meeting plans for the coming spring season were discussed. A banquet at the Gowman Hotel followed the business session. Guy F. Navarre, manager of the Fox Film Exchange and president of the Board of Trade, acted as chairman of the business meeting and toastmaster of the banquet.

Emenheiser Makes Changes in Theatre Personnel

A. H. EMENHEISER, president of the Pacific Southwest Theatres, which, by re-incorporation, has succeeded the Western Theatres, Inc., has announced some changes affecting the motion picture houses of San Diego, Cal., which have been taken over by the syndicate.

Dwight L. Hill, has gone to Los Angeles as manager of the syndicate's latest addition to its list, the Mission Theatre at Ninth and Broadway. Mr. Hill will also do the buying and booking of pictures for the entire group of houses controlled by the Emenheiser interests.

Russell Rogers will have general management of the syndicate's theatres in San Diego.

Charles J. Plambeck, who has been handling the publicity for the Whitson houses for some time, has been retained as advertising and publicity director of the Emenheiser theatres.

Missouri Theatre Mortgage Notes on Sale

The Merchantile Trust Company of St. Louis has placed on sale a total issue of $1,200,000 first mortgage serial notes of the Missouri Theatre Company. The notes are secured by the Missouri theatre and office building at the corner of Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue, considered one of the most profitable ventures in the city from an investment standpoint.

News' Prize Offer Wins Attention

Hailed As Constructive Step

HAILED throughout the trade as a constructive move, the Distribution Plan Prize Offer, announced last week by William A. Johnston, editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, has won immediate attention in all branches of the industry.

Contestants have already begun to send in plans in competition for the $1,000 prize. The selection of the five judges who will make the award, is proceeding. Twenty-five prominent exhibitors, in all sections of the country, are casting their ballots, and announcement of the names of the judges will be made as soon as they are chosen and have accepted. The competition closes June 2.

Here are exhibitors who are selecting the judges:

Theodore L. Hays, Finkelstein & Ruben, Minneapolis.

Stanley Chambers, Miller Theatre, Wichita, Kas.

Harry M. Crandall, Washington, D. C.

E. V. Richards, Jr., Saenger Amusement Co., New Orleans.

Jules E. Mastbaum, Stanley Company, Philadelphia.

A. H. Blank, Des Moines.

Hugo Riesenfeld, Rialto-Rivoli Criterion, New York.

Joseph Plunkett, Strand, New York.

S. L. Rothafel, Capitol, New York.

Phil Gleichman, Broadway-Strand, Detroit.

William Fait, Jr., Loew's State, Cleveland.

Leo A. Landau, Alhambra and Garden, Milwaukee.

Willard C. Patterson, Metropolitan, Atlanta.

Frank L. Newman, Newman Theatres, Kansas City.

A. G. Stolte, Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines.

J. A. Partington, Imperial Theatre, San Francisco.

Thomas D. Soriero, Century Theatre, Baltimore.

Fred S. Myer, Palace Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.

Charles G. Branham, Gordon Theatres, Boston.

George E. Carpenter, Paramount-Empress Theatre, Salt Lake City.

Harry T. Nolan, Denver.

Sam Katz, Balaban & Katz, Chicago.

Tom Moore, Washington, D. C.

W. S. Butterfield, Bijou Theatrical Enterprise, Battle Creek, Mich.

C. W. Deibel, Youngstown, O.

Trade Praises Move

The judges will be men who are authorities on the various important phases that enter into film distribution, as well as on other industries which have, to some extent, paralleled the development of the motion picture industry, such as transportation, banking, real estate, organization, economics, steel, automobiles, etc.

Prominent producers and distributors complimented MOTION PICTURE NEWS for its initiative in centering attention upon the distribution problem.

J. D. Williams, president of Ritz-Carlton Pictures, declared: "This is the most constructive move ever made by a motion picture trade paper. I am glad to see it, and I congratulate you. I will submit a plan myself, and I am sure that there will be a general response throughout the industry to your call for constructive suggestions."

Adolph Zukor, president, Famous Players-Lasky, declared: "The offer by the MOTION PICTURE NEWS of a prize of $1,000 for a new distribution plan is to be commended.

"Since its beginning the motion picture industry has been confronted with several problems. These problems have been worked out or are being worked out in the natural evolution of things; and the problem of efficient distribution, I believe, is being solved in the same way. Just as we are making better pictures today than we were five years ago, so we are selling pictures more scientifically today than we were five years ago.

Zukor Commends Plan

"However, anything that will hasten the solution of whatever problems there are in distribution certainly should receive the closest attention of everybody in the business. Prizes have been offered for better pictures, better stories, and new players. Certainly a prize for better distribution will engage the attention of everybody who is interested in the distribution phase of the industry, and from this concentration of thought some valuable ideas should result. Particularly will it be helpful in eliciting suggestions from exhibitors and sales managers out in the field. These men who are in close touch with individual problems may be able to put forth some ideas which will help to make the selling and physical handling of film better for all concerned.

"If it accomplishes this, the offer of the NEWS will have performed a distinct service."

W. E. Atkinson, vice-president and general manager of Metro, sent this communication:

"William A. Johnston and the MOTION PICTURE NEWS are to be highly congratulated for their appreciation of the industry's greatest problem, and their readiness and enterprise to obtain a constructive remedy.

"The motion picture business has many problems to solve, but that of distribution is one of the most distressful. After all, good pictures can be made,—but it is the proper and efficient selling of those pictures, the proper division of the dollar, on which the production must depend.

"If a plan, satisfactory and fair to producer, distributor and exhibitor, can be found through this contest inaugurated by Mr. Johnston and his paper, every person who derives either money or entertainment from motion pictures, will feel everlastingly indebted to the backers of this public-spirited offer."

In a letter to William A. Johnston, Elmer Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, said:

"I doubt that the industry actually believes that there exists as much waste and inefficiency in distribution as some uninformed writers seem to think.

"At any rate, I congratulate you upon the prize offer for a distribution plan. Let us hope that many practical people will submit plans, because the more light we can have on this subject the more likely criticism of present methods will dissolve.

"A Great Idea"

"We will also hope that such concentration upon this important subject brings to light some really new ideas the practicability of which will be so obvious that every distributor shall adopt them, and the industry reward the MOTION PICTURE NEWS for its progressiveness."

E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution of Associated First National, made this comment:

"MOTION PICTURE NEWS, in offering its prize for a plan for distribution, is certainly rousing and stimulating thought toward the solution of distribution problems, and anyone doing such a work is certainly benefiting the entire industry.

"This prize competition is a means toward what may be a constructive change in our present system which as it is now, certainly leaves much to be desired. There is a duplication of sales effort; a duplication of physical handling, which, in summary, amounts to a duplication of selling cost. By focusing attention upon these problems and crystalizing thought, the MOTION PICTURE NEWS may be doing a great benefit to the industry."

Paul Mooney, vice-president in charge of distribution for Hodkinson Corporation, wrote Mr. Johnston as follows:

"Your distribution contest is in my opinion a great idea, and I sincerely hope that it will result in something of material benefit to all of us who are really interested in the future of the industry.

"Perfection is the ideal in every line of industry and the perfection of the system of picture distribution is, I am sure, desired

Late Studio Briefs From the West Coast

THOMAS H. INCE has purchased "Limehouse Polly," an original story by Ed. J. Montagne.

Joseph Henabery has finished directing "The Guilty One" for Famous Players-Lasky and left for New York to direct Rudolph Valentino's next production.

Ernest Lubitsch will start directing for Warner Brothers a story by himself and Hans Kraly with Pauline Fredericks and Lew Cody.

James Flood, assistant director to Lubitsch for "The Marriage Circle," has signed a three year contract with Warner Brothers as director.

William Farnum's first picture for Paramount will be "The Men Who Fights Alone," under the direction of Wallace Worsley from a story by Wilton Barrett and Alfred Kutner

News Prize Offer Wins Praise

by everyone in every branch of the motion picture business. And while we are all struggling with the big problems of the business the added incentive of your prize contest may bring the desired solution.

"The idea is splendid and I earnestly hope that it will produce the beneficial result that you and all of us are seeking."

Irving M. Lesser, vice-president of and general manager of distribution for Principal Pictures, had this to say:

"I have read the able statement regarding a distribution plan, signed by Mr. William A. Johnston, president of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and I consider it highly commendable in every way. Anything that tends toward better development of business methods in motion pictures is well worth considering in these times when everyone in our industry is aiming toward great things.

"Mr. Johnston, in his statement in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, gives a terse and powerful synopsis of what is needed. The award of $1,000 for the best plan submitted is only a small part of what the winner of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS contest will get. He will earn fame throughout the industry.

"Our present plans of distribution are based on experience. We have builded on the rock of experience. It is true that we are not satisfied with what we have. If we were we would not be a progressive industry. Any business that is satisfied with itself stands still. Let us by all means aim at better distribution just as we aim at better pictures."

See Helpful Results

Arthur N. Smallwood emphatically expressed his approval of the announcement of the prize offer. "It is a most constructive step," he declared. "Even if a complete, workable plan is not obtained, still there will be so many excellent suggestions of a practical sort that they will be certain to be of great value. I congratulate MOTION PICTURE NEWS on its enterprise."

J. S. Woody, general manager of Associated Exhibitors, said: "Mr. Johnston and MOTION PICTURE NEWS are to be commended for offering this award. A constructive effort to bring about greater efficiency and economy in the industry in general cannot but be productive of helpful results. Associated Exhibitors of course has no distribution problem. Our organization devotes its entire time to selling and distributing. We are happily free from the heavy burden which obtains with many companies that combine producing and distributing, and are enabled to pursue our open door policy to the benefit of the exhibitor."

The following rules for MOTION PICTURE NEWS Distribution Plan Competition are reprinted for the information of contestants:

1. The competition is open to everybody except officers and employees of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

2. The competition is open at once and will close on Monday, June 2nd, at six o'clock P. M. All competing plans must be in the NEWS office by that date. Proof of sending will not be considered proof of receipt.

3. The award of $1,000 will be made by a Committee of Judges to be selected by twenty-five exhibitors. The names of the exhibitors who will make the selection of the judges will be printed in an early issue. They will then vote for five judges who will make the award. The names of the judges will be published as soon as they are chosen.

4. The winning plan will be selected strictly on the merits of the suggestions offered. In case there are two or more plans which, in the opinion of the judges, are of equal merit and therefore are tied, the full amount of the award will be paid to each contestant so tied.

5. It is not necessary to be a subscriber to MOTION PICTURE NEWS to enter the competition.

6. The plans should be typewritten, if possible, one side of the sheet only being used. Plans written in longhand, however, will receive equal consideration.

7. Within a reasonable time after the close of the competition, the award will be made and the name of the winner published in MOTION PICTURE NEWS. The check will be forwarded to the winner as soon as the judges have reached their decision.

8. Honorable mention will be given to plans which the judges consider meritorious, but which are not deemed sufficiently good to deserve the award.

9. The winning plan will be published in full. Other meritorious plans will be published, in whole or in part, but no publication will be given any plan until all have been submitted to the judges and the award made.

10. Manuscripts intended for this competition should be addressed to "The Distribution Plan Competition," MOTION PICTURE NEWS, 729 7th Ave., New York City, and bear the name and address of the author on the first page of the manuscript.

11. As rapidly as manuscripts are received, they will be copied, numbered and sent to the judges. Each plan will bear a number, the name of the author being removed from the copy sent to the judges. In this way, the judges will make their decision solely on the merits of the plan submitted. This is done for the sake of absolute impartiality. The originals of all the plans will be filed in the NEWS office, and will be numbered to correspond with the copies sent to the judges.

12. Authors should retain copies of their plans. Manuscripts will not be returned unless specific request is made therefore, and stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

Vignola and Staff Off for Metro Studios

ROBERT G. VIGNOLA, who recently entered into an arrangement with Metro for the production of a long series of Robert G. Vignola Productions, left for the coast this week and soon after his arrival at the Metro studios in Hollywood he will begin work on the first of his new pictures.

With Mr. Vignola went his staff, the men who have assisted him in the making of such pictures as "When Knighthood Was In Flower", "Enchantment", "Yolanda" and many others.

The initial photodrama to be made for Metro by Mr. Vignola will be from an original story by E. Lloyd Sheldon.

Exhibitors Rush Envoy to Washington

RESPONDING to an emergency call sent out by Chairman Al Steffes of the exhibitors "French Lick" committee, representatives of six state organizations met at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, April 8th, and after deciding that prompt measures were necessary to secure amendments to the Dallinger bill revising the copyright law, rushed Judge S. A. Handy to Washington to appear before the Senate Committee at the public hearing on the bill Wednesday morning.

Judge Handy was to make an effort to have this measure changed so that exhibitors will be relieved of the so-called music tax.

Other matters taken up at the Chicago session were means of abating competition of churches and other institutions showing theatrical pictures, and to consider to proposals for changes in the so-called uniform contract.

Present at the meeting were Al Steffes of Minnesota, S. A. Handy and R. R. Biechele of Kanasas; H. A. Cole of Texas, James Ritter and H. M. Richey of Michigan, Frank Rembusch and Billy Connors of Indiana, Glenn Reynolds and Ludwig Siegel of Illinois and J. R. Denniston of Michigan.

New Organizations Granted Delaware Charters

The corporation commissioner at Dover, Delaware, granted the following charters the ten days ending April 5th: The Pottstown (Pa.) Theatres, Incorporated, to conduct places of amusement on a capital of $150,000; The John A. Miller Company, Incorporated, to conduct places of amusement, $25,000; R. G. Hill Enterprises, Incorporated, motion pictures, motion picture films and theatres, $100,000; Peninsula Studios, Incorporated, to produce and exhibit motion pictures, $600,000; The Leo A. Scheuneman, Incorporated, to conduct theatres and other places of amusement, etc., $500,000. Incorporators, Leo Scheuneman, Helen Scheuneman, Henry H. Morris, all of Chicago, Illinois.

The Phono Flex Products Corporation, Inc., to manufacture radio, phonograph and movie products, capital authorized, $2,200,000, incorporators, Samuel C. Wood, and associates, of New York City; The All Metal Screen Company, Inc., to manufacture screens of all kinds, Riverdale, Md.; Washington, D. C.; Baltimore, Md.; Wilmington, Del., and Philadelphia, Pa.; interests being represented in the incorporators.

Hamlin Publicity Director for N. Y. Strand

Fred E. Hamlin has been appointed publicity director of the Mark Strand Theatre in New York to succeed H. A. Leonard, who has resigned to take up his residence on the West Coast.

Hamlin is a newspaper man of wide experience. Before coming to New York he was city editor of the Atlanta Georgian and the New Orleans States. During the war he was publicity director for the American Red Cross in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

Ottawa to Have Daylight Saving

Ottawa, Ontario, is to have daylight saving once more, regardless of what the rest of Canada does, according to announcement made at the Ottawa City Hall on April 5, a formal motion having been presented in the City Council for the advancement of clocks from the end of April to the end of September this year.

In Montreal, which is Ottawa's nearest civic neighbor of importance, a considerable number of storekeepers and large employers of labor have organized a Daylight Saving Association, for their own observance of "summer time," regardless of what the Montreal civic authorities do in the matter.

Stores and factories identified with the movement open and close their places of business one hour earlier than the others. This resulted in a situation last year that compelled exhibitors to advertise the hours of picture performances in two sets of schedules, one for standard time and the other for "adopted" time.

Des Moines Theatre Partially Damaged by Fire

The Grand theatre, located in East Des Moines' business district, was partially damaged by fire and smoke occasioned by a fire in a downstairs room. The fire was discovered about noon and had evidently been smoldering for some time. Efforts to reach the small room in which the blaze was by the cellar way proved almost fatal to several firemen. Three were overcome by gas and the fire was finally reached by chopping a hole in the floor of the theatre auditorium.

Sam Ellman, manager of the theatre, suffered considerable loss also in the damage which the smoke did to the seats and the curtain.

Charlotte Film Board Holds Election

The Charlotte Film Board of Trade held its semi-annual election of officers March 31. E. F. Dardine, manager of Universal, succeeds himself as chairman; Frank Bryan, of First National, succeeds himself as vice-president, and H. H. Everett, of Progress Pictures, is again secretary and treasurer. Installation of officers for another six months was held April 7.

Sunday School Director Slams Pictures

OUT of 300 motion pictures examined by a church board only 30 were fit for children to see, declared Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, elementary superintendent of the general Sunday school board of the Methodist Episcopal church with headquarters at Nashville, Tenn., speaking last week before the North Carolina Sunday School conference at Wilson, North Carolina.

She pleaded for cooperation in cleaning out what she termed the things in the motion picture industry which are very harmful to the children of the nation. She asserted that the National Board of Review was valueless as a moral censor board and that many local censorship boards were just as useless.

Canadian Exchanges to Enforce Two Weeks' Clause in Play Date Changes

ALL exhibitors of Ontario have been notified by the Canadian Moving Picture Distributors Association, through Secretary John A. Cooper of that association, that a two weeks clause will be enforced in all booking contracts to cover the privilege of a change in playing dates for any release. This clause has been inserted in contracts, it is stated, to eliminate misunderstandings and disputes regarding playing dates booked, of which there had been a considerable increase it is pointed out.

The new regulation provides that a playing date for a picture which has been agreed upon by both exhibitor and exchange cannot be changed unless the exchange receives a written request for a postponement of date at least two full weeks prior to the original date in question and only when the exhibitor gives a reasonable excuse for wanting to change his booking list. When such a request is received, the exchange may cancel the original play date, it is noted, providing that the substitute date occurs not later than 30 days from the original date

The notification states that "no exhibitor shall ask for a change and no exchange shall permit a change unless the request reaches the exchange a full 14 days before the original play date; otherwise the exhibitor must pay the rental of the picture for the original dates arranged just as if the picture had been shipped to him for those dates but the exhibitor shall be entitled to play the picture without further rental at a future date. If payment is not received before the date when it is necessary to ship to protect the original contract, the film shall be shipped C. O. D."

This proclamation, which was issued jointly in behalf of all exchanges operating in the Province of Ontario, has caused some stir among exhibitors and the matter has been taken up by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of Canada, it is announced.

Japan Financing Many New Theatres

Dell Goodman of Fox Film Corporation Describes Film Methods of Government

AUDIENCES in Japan are content to sit through twenty-two reels in the motion picture theatres there. Two shows daily are presented.

The government is partly financing many temporary theatres throughout the empire, according to a communication received by Fox Film Corporation's home office from its representative, Dell Goodman of Kobe, Japan.

Every evening at eight the admission charge to the Japanese movie palaces is cut in half and great crowds fight to get in to see the remainder of the program, according to Mr. Goodman's letter.

English titles are used but a "binshi" or interpreter is in a little box along side of the screen and he translates the titles as the picture is unwound. This system is somewhat similiar to the old talking pictures in America, when a man talked from behind the screen and a transparent curtain was used.

The "Binshi" has a following the same as the popular actors and many people patronize certain theatres because they like the "binshi's" interpretation of the pictures. The "Binshis" are high-salaried men and sometimes to get a certain "Benshi" it is necessary for exhibitors to give them a bonus as high as 5,000 yen.

The Japanese exhibitor is about five years behind the American theatre owner. Reels are not used. The film is curled up the same as raw stock and placed on a spindle.

There are three types of theatres in Japan. One runs the old school Japanese film stories adapted from famous poems dating back 300 years or more. New school Japanese pictures are supposed to be up-to-date. American film is slowly but surely replacing both.

Sales Chiefs Meet at Informal Dinner

A dinner attended by the sales chiefs of the important distribution companies was held at the Hotel Astor, New York, on April 7.

Discussion of various problems connected with distribution and booking resulted. The affair was said to be entirely informal. No statement was issued regarding the meeting.

The Reader Has His Say

Editor's Note — The following letter relative to the subject of prints, featured in a series of special articles in Motion Picture News, has been received from P. A. Powers, president of the Powers Film Products Company.

MY dear Mr. Johnston: I have read with much interest the letter addressed to you by Mr. John M. Nickolaus, of the Standard Film Laboratories, and printed in the April 5th issue of your publication.

Mr. Nickolaus has turned the light upon a subject which too long has been a sort of accepted evil, and I am taking the liberty of writing to amplify a bit on the vital points in his letter.

How far has the industry encouraged competition in raw film manufacture? This is a fair question and pertinent.

Everyone is "Passing the Buck." They say —The EXHIBITOR plays rough house with costly prints. The DISTRIBUTOR does not supply enough prints to make the rounds respectably. The PROJECTOR comes in for his share of compliments, and John M. Nickolaus takes a rap at the PRODUCER for being "penny wise and pound foolish" for asking how cheaply can prints be made, not how well.

The producer, I think, is within his rights in getting his work done at the lowest figure quoted by reputable finishers, just as the Laboratories are within their rights in buying supplies in the cheapest market. The Producer furnishes considerable "cooperation" by keeping up the flow of negatives to be printed from.

The Producer has his hands full; Heaven knows! The Laboratories are in a position to show the Producer where his best interests lie. They represent the technical branch of the motion picture art, and as such, are the Producers representatives and should be his advisors and counselors. But if they do not take the trouble to investigate the claims of other manufacturers of raw stock, they have only themselves to blame for the continuance of the conditions which they so loudly deplore.

What is needed more than anything else and what the industry may have for the asking, is film base not so delicate as to require professional nursing—raw stock which while thriving best under fine conditions will nevertheless thrive even if the thermometer or hygrometer does play pranks occasionally.

The whole trouble is just in the way one branch of the industry has educated the other. The laboratory has educated the producer to believe that good work can be done only with a particular make of film. The producer holds the laboratory to the tenets of this education and so they have tied each other into knots. Neither has had the spirit to recede from the uncomfortable position. Perhaps their troubles have not given them time to try.

The American producer has brains enough to listen. He can be reasoned with, not talked at. The laboratories can relieve the situation and set the whole industry upon a firmer footing by giving competitive raw stock manufacturers a fair chance. It is perfect folly to deplore the lack of co-operation between producer and laboratory when the laboratories themselves have withheld co-operation from American competitive raw stock manufacturers.

Nickolaus states:

> "The producer himself, with no technical knowledge, were he to go into a laboratory, would instantly realize that there must be a definite reason for humidity, temperature and cleanliness in their effect upon the product."

While durability is to some extent controllable in the laboratory, it cannot add to the durability of the raw stock.

The laboratory can control only to the extent of preserving the original strength of the material he is using. In other words, the laboratory must not be destructive. But the producer must work fast: not only because of the price he is paid for the work but also to meet release dates. It is easy to see how more durable raw stock will relieve the print situation better than anything the laboratories can do.

The best friend the motion picture industry can have will be competition in the raw film manufacture.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) P. A. POWERS.

Buffalo Exhibitor Declares Radio Is Menace to Small Picture Houses

IN discussing the effects of radio on motion picture theatre business, Arthur L. Skinner, manager of the Victoria theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., has the following to say: "The radio, which is becoming more popular every day and is being made more perfect all the time, must be looked upon as a serious menace to the industry especially the neighborhood and small town theatre. It must be acknowledged that the box-office is suffering at the present time from this popular pastime.

"The theatres can do little or nothing until the radio reaches a more advanced stage of perfection which will give exhibitors a better opportunity to install it and use it as part of their program. This, I believe, will do more than anything else to encourage the radio fan to attend the theatre. However, a receiving instrument must be installed which is more powerful than any in use by the average fan and must be able to give a concert uninterrupted by interference.

"It is also up to the owner or manager of the theatre to surround his radio concert with proper atmosphere and feature it as much as the picture. I believe that by encouraging the use of radio in the theatre at the present time exhibitors will be able to curtail the sale and installation of more sets in the homes and may be the means of increasing the box office receipts."

J. E. Rickards Heads New Producing Company

TWELVE two-reel subjects, each dealing with a great woman of history, is planned by a new producing company being organized by J. E. Rickards in Hollywood. Mr. Rickards is a well known exhibitor and senior member of Rickards and Nace.

Scenarios for a story of Pocahontas, Betty Ross and Barbara Fritchie have been started.

Mabel Julienne Scott is the star and she will shortly start work on the first release. Miss Scott was chosen because of her work in the part of the Indian maid in Gilbert Parker's "Behold My Wife" and came to the screen from a legitimate career

It is the intention of the makers to enlist the interest of the various woman's clubs throughout the country.

Doc Holah Says Radio Is Beneficial to Screen

Discussions anent the relations of Radio and Motion Pictures have aroused C. E. Doc Holah, former General Manager of A. H. Blank's Enterprises, to advance his opinions, and be declared that co-operation and not competition will be the final result with benefit to both industries.

"Out of the Five Senses of life there are two that have a bearing directly upon the amusement business," says Mr. Holah. "Motion Pictures cover 'Seeing' and Radio covers 'Hearing.'

"The motion picture has developed from the visualization of human emotions on the screen through the eye without 'hearing.'

"Radio is fast developing from that source of 'Hearing' without 'seeing.'

"Where is there a person that has become a movie fan that has not had the 'Feeling' of wanting to 'See' their favorite Screen Star?

"Radio is developing another source of curiosity, 'hearing' a favorite but not being able to 'See' them, which will all cause a natural development within the public mind of a desire to 'see' them.

"The combining of the Radio with Pictures only seems natural and will take place eventually."

"After the Ball" Minstrel Car in Cleveland

After many unique and exciting experiences, the "After the Ball" minstrel car, which William Quick is piloting across the continent for Anderson Pictures, has reached Cleveland. The car, which is exploiting the picture, left the front of the Capitol theatre in New York early in February and is expected to reach the coast late in September. The minstrel crew has visited every exchange center between New York and Cleveland.

Fox Completes "Man Who Came Back" Cast

The Fox Film Corporation has completed the cast for its production of the Jules Eckert Goodman play, "The Man Who Came Back." George O'Brien will be seen in the title role, with Dorothy Mackaill in the feminine lead.

The balance of the cast will be made up of Cyril Chadwick, Ralph Lewis, Emily Fitzroy, Harvey Clark, Edward Piel and David Kirby.

Australia Business Best Ever, Says Hicks

AMONG the arrivals in New York last week was John W. Hicks, Jr., managing director of Famous Players-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., of Sydney, Australia. With him are his wife and son.

Mr. Hicks is most enthusiastic over conditions in Australia, regarding which he had the following to say:

"We have enjoyed the best business ever known in Australia. Our leading exhibitors are whole-heartedly back of the movement for better pictures and are lending their earnest support to their proper presentation and exploitation. A number of new high class theaters soon will be in operation, and there is every indication that the year 1924 will witness a big increase in Australia's rapidly-increasing film business.

"We have employed a well-known American exploiter, John E. Kennebeck who, in the three months he has been in Sydney, has obtained the heartiest co-operation from exhibitors who are interested in increasing their business through the most modern and efficient exploitation methods."

War in Ohio on Children's Specialty Acts

The Ohio State Industrial Relations Department has opened active warfare against the practice of exploiting young children for specialty acts in picture theaters.

On affidavit of Miss Loretta Bean, deputy field inspector of the Department, Miss Corinna Harding, singing and dancing teacher, was fined $25 and sentenced to 30 days in the county jail by Justice of the Peace M. J. Plenty. She was accused of directing the appearance of a 12-year-old girl at a performance in the Dennison Square theater.

Sentence was suspended, however, and Miss Harding was released on $200 bail, pending motion for a new trial. Cleveland exhibitors say they are all through with children stunt nights.

"U" Arranges Turkey, Greece Distribution

Universal recently made arrangements with the Turkish merchantile importing and exporting house of Leon Nissim Taranto, in Constantinople, for the distribution of many Universal films in Turkey, Greece and other countries of the Levant.

Leon Nissim Taranto, one of the heads of the Turkish company, who is now in this country, arranged the distribution plans and contracts directly with Carl Laemmle, president of Universal.

The contract included eighteen Universal Jewel productions and six serials. It is of particular note that film distribution in the Levant is being undertaken by established merchantile houses.

"Little Old New York" in History Museum

Cosmopolitan's "Little Old New York" has been placed in the archives of the American Museum of Natural History of New York City because of its accurate portrayal of the life, manners and customs of early New York.

Miss Belle Fox Marries in Los Angeles

FRIENDS and relatives of William Fox received the news last week from Los Angeles of the marriage of Miss Belle Fox, the youngest of his two daughters, to Milton S. Schwartz of New York.

The wedding took place on her twentieth birthday and was the culmination of a courtship which began several weeks ago in Yosemite National Park, where Mr. Schwartz first met Miss Fox who was visiting there with her parents.

Says Picture Costs Exceed Musical Comedy

EXHIBITING motion pictures in New York comes higher than producing musical comedy, according to Hugo Riesenfeld, director of four New York picture houses. Regarding the subject he says:

"What seemed an extravagant price for a whole program back in 1916 wouldn't pay for a two reel comedy now. We used to be able to get the best pictures on the market; Douglas Fairbanks, Bill Hart, Norma Talmadge, for only three hundred a week. And we considered that price so outrageous that we we insisted on having a comedy thrown in free. Now if we get our features for ten times that amount, we think ourselves lucky, and the comedies aren't handed out as appetizers. On music alone at the four theaters of which I am director, we are spending nearly a million a year."

Kansas City Salesmen Form Organization

An organization of film salesmen in the Kansas City territory, for the purpose of elevating the standard of salesmanship and combatting evil influences gained by acts of a few unworthy salesmen, is nearing perfection.

Impetus to the formation of such an organization was given at a meeting last week at the Metro office, under the auspices of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade, presided over by Al Kahn, of Film Classics, Inc. An effort to acquaint all salesmen more fully with the workings of the board of trade will be made.

The speakers and their subjects: Tom Byerle, assistant manager, First National, "Irregularity of Contracts;" M. A. Kahn, manager, Film Classics, Inc., "Irregularities;" W. E. Truog, district manager, Goldwyn, "District Managers' Problems;" Cecil Vaughan, manager, Pathe, "Mules;" E. C. Rhoden, chairman, board of arbitration, "Joint Board of Arbitration;" Truly B. Wildman, president, Film Board of Trade, "Film Board of Trade."

Milwaukee Clubwomen Aid Better Pictures

Unofficial review of motion pictures in Milwaukee county by a committee of ten clubwomen was recently decided upon at a meeting of the Milwaukee County Federation of Women's Clubs. The movement is receiving the full cooperation of the Wisconsin Association of Theatre Owners, according to Henry Staab, secretary, who urged the women to cooperate with the managers in educating the public to better pictures.

F. B. O. Launches Canadian Sales Force

THE announcement has been made at Toronto, Ontario, that Film Booking Offices of Canada have organized their own sales organization for the whole of Canada, the arrangement for Canadian representation through United Exhibitors of Canada, Limited, Toronto and five other cities, having been terminated.

United Exhibitors is the exchange organization which grew out of the old Canadian Exhibitors Exchange, Limited, the latter having been organized by the original exhibitors association for the Province of Ontario, namely, the Moving Picture Exhibitors Protective Association of Ontario.

F. B. O. has announced the appointment of Phil Hazza as general sales manager for Canada, his headquarters being at Toronto. Mr. W. E. Allen has been appointed manager of the F. B. O office at Montreal; Harry Decker has been placed in charge of the office at St John, N. B., and W. Gould has been made manager at Winnipeg, Manitoba. Further offices are to be established at Calgary, Alberta, and Vancouver, B. C.

Whitman Bennett Decides Upon Title Change

Whitman Bennett has changed the title on the production he is making at his studio in Yonkers. Originally titled, "Divorced in Name Only," the picture will be released as "Love of Women." Actual photography will be concluded within a week, and it is expected the production will be ready for release within a month.

The cast includes Helene Chadwick, Montague Love, Maurice Costello, Mary Thurman, Lawford Davison, Marie Shotwell and Frankie Evans.

Foreign Deal Closed for "After Six Days"

Globe Theatres, Ltd., have purchased the rights from Weiss Brothers for Burmah, Ceylon and India on their Artclass picture, "After Six Days," a biblical photoplay spectacle. It is the intention of the purchasers to roadshow the production, arrangements having been made for extended runs in all the principal cities of the territory.

Helen Ferguson Signed by Douglas MacLean

Douglas MacLean has signed Helen Ferguson for the role of the Parisian dancer in "Never Say Die," his second independent production for Associated Exhibitors. She will share the feminine honors with Lillian Rich. The production is being directed by George Crone.

Beatty to Direct "U" Exploitation

Is Appointed by Carl Laemmle to Handle Campaigns on Thirty-Six Jewels

JEROME BEATTY, formerly advertising and publicity director for Preferred Pictures has been appointed exploitation director of Universal Pictures by Carl Laemmle. He will arrange the details of exploitation for the thirty-six Jewels which will comprise next season's program. Exploitation will be done in connection with prerelease and first run showings and in their follow-up bookings, according to Beatty.

The new chief will start augmenting his field staff which includes the following: Jean Belasco, Kansas City; Jack Meredith, Dallas; Andrew Sharick, Atlanta; Harry Yost, Philadelphia; Jack Hays, Pittsburgh; Herman Fisher, Des Moines; Al Feinman, Chicago; Wayland Taylor, San Francisco; W. H. Wilkes, Toronto.

One of the outstanding features of Universal's exploitation plans for next summer and fall is the close cooperation that will exist between the exploitation force and the sales department. Al Lichtman, general manager of exchanges for Universal, is convinced that every big picture should be thoroughly exploited, and that exchange men and exploitation men should work hand and hand to assure the exhibitor a high box-office value for every picture.

The new Universal exploitation chief has very definite ideas about exploitation and is an enthusiast concerning high class methods of putting pictures over. In his opinion exploitation is more necessary today than ever before.

"Pictures today are bigger and costlier," he explains, "and the exhibitor faces the necessity of playing to bigger business to cover his rentals and overhead. Increased business is attracted by more and better exploitation. The distributor must aid in this exploitaton—he must help to make the picture more profitable for the exhibitor."

"A Boy of Flanders" for April Release

Jackie Coogan's "A Boy Of Flanders," opens at the Rialto in New York this week and Metro will release it throughout the country this month.

Major Thomson Talks Distribution

F. B. O. Managing Director Tells Need of Good Outlet for Independent Product

MAJOR H. C. S. Thomson, managing director of the Film Booking Office, is back from the coast with considerable to say in regard to the outlet for independent pictures.

"If there is one thing the film industry has needed and needs today, it is a reliable, honest and efficient outlet for the product of the independent producer," said Major Thomson.

Major H. C. S. Thomson, Managing Director of F. B. O.

"The kind of distribution the independent producer has needed is very different from the kind he has received. A producer must be sure of four fundamental business needs: First, of a good selling and distributing organization that will give him equitable treatment; second, that the distributor will show no preference between pictures, for when the attention of the sales department is placed on certain pictures it is done so at a cost to other features and short subjects; third, he must be sure of the money that is due him at the time it is due; fourth, he must be sure that the picture will be properly advertised and exploited, its good points properly developed and brought out."

First Charles Ray Feature Titled "Smith"

The first of the new series of pictures in which Charles Ray will star for Thomas H. Ince has been titled "Smith." It was written by C. Gardner Sullivan and will be directed by Ralph Ince.

Initial scenes of "Smith" are now under way at Truckee, California. The full cast will not be announced until the company's return to the studio.

Ince Acquires "Christine of Hungry Heart"

THOMAS H. INCE has acquired screen rights to the Kathleen Norris story, "Christine of the Hungry Heart." Production will be under way within two weeks under the direction of John Griffith Wray with Mr. Ince acting in a supervisorial capacity. The picture will be released through First National.

Bradley King has completed the scenario for the story, which recently appeared in Good Housekeeping as a serial. No cast has yet been announced.

"Secrets" World Premiere in Los Angeles

With Fred Niblo, president of the Motion Picture Directors, as master of ceremonies, Norma Talmadge's "Secrets" had its world's premiere at the Criterion theatre in Los Angeles, March 20.

The Los Angeles Examiner devoted a full page to the opening and critics were said to be enthusiastically unanimous in profusely praising the production.

It is declared that this is the first time in Los Angeles theatrical history that squads of police on horseback were used on the sidewalks and in the lobby of the theatre to clear the way for holders of tickets.

Miss Talmadge was accompanied to the theatre by Eugene O'Brien and the ovation received was declared to be tremendous.

Brandt Announces Program for C. B. C.

Joe Brandt, president of C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, who returned from the coast last week announces most of the program for the 1924-25 season. In addition to eight special productions to be released under the Columbia brand, there will be a series of eight dramas in which William Fairbanks and Jane Novak will be the featured players.

Screen Snapshots and a series of short reel subjects are contemplated in the production schedule so far arranged.

"Defying the Law" Ready for Release

Gotham Productions announce the immediate release on the independent market of the William B. Brush production, "Defying The Law," with Lew Cody as the featured player. The scenes are laid along the waterfront of San Francisco.

In addition to Cody the cast includes Renee Adoree, Josef Swickard, Charles (Buddy) Post, Dick Sutherland, Evelyn Adamson, Nalde Morelli, Kathleen Chambers, Marguerite Kosek and James B. Leong.

"Hunchback" Paris Opening Early in Summer

Universal's "Hunchback of Notre Dame" is to have its Parisian premiere early in the Summer. It will be presented in the Marivaux Theatre. Joe Weil, assistant general manager of exploitation for Universal will prepare the opening and exploit the picture during its run in Paris. Weil sailed last week on the steamship Paris.

Fox Making Progress With "Dante's Inferno"

"DANTE'S INFERNO," in modernized version, will be one of the first of the 1924-25 productions from the William Fox West Coast studios. It has been in production for the past two months. Henry Otto is directing and Julian Harrison is art director.

Harry C. Hoyt is directing the few remaining scenes of "Sundown," uncompleted by Director Laurence Trimble, who is seriously ill at El Paso. Mr. Hoyt was the director of "The Woman On The Jury."

Earl Hudson is personally supervising "Sundown" for First National.

Betty Compson in the Hodkinson release, "Miami."

"Fools In The Dark" is an F. B. O. Release featuring Matt Moore and Patsy Ruth Miller. These scenes are from the production.

First National Inaugurates New Plan

Will Bring Branch Managers to N. Y. to Study Departments in Home Office

A PLAN that will bring branch managers in closer relationship to home office executives will be inaugurated by First National. E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution is responsible for the move which will be inaugurated May 4. Two branch managers will be brought to the home office each week and will make a careful study of all departments. The first will be F. E. North of Detroit and Leslie Wilkes of Dallas.

"By having each branch manager," states Mr. Eschmann, "spend time with the accounting, sales, advertising, publicity, supply, purchasing, and film departments individually and alone there is no do bt but that a greater good is accomplished than by any national convention. The department heads get to know the branch managers and vice versa. There is an immediate and common understanding developed so that each can conform to the others requirments. There is no doubt in my mind but that we in the Home Office will get equal if not greater good from these visits of branch managers. They will carry their territorial problems and requirements to us and together we shall endeavor to solve them.

"Quite naturally our men having, up to January 1st, 1924, enjoyed local guidance from their associated exhibitors and partners feel, more keenly the necessity of knowledge concerning the manner of things in the Home Office. Their problems were formerly very particularly local, but now with the development of a national distribution unit they will feel the necessity of a broader viewpoint.

"The great advantage of nation-wide conventions of branch managers, for which we are substituting this new plan, lies in the general discussion from the floor of definite problems. However, we will be able to accomplish the same results, I believe, by bringing our managers to the Home Office. There will be certain definite problems presented to visiting exchangemen and they will express their opinions and suggestions. These opinions and suggestions will be put in writing and presented to other branch managers as they visit New York. In this way we will accomplsih the same result as if we gathered all our managers in one place and held an open meeting."

"The Last of the Duanes" Started by Fox

Lynn Reynolds will direct "The Last Of The Duanes," the Zane Grey story adapted for the screen by Edward J. Montague, which has just been placed in production at the William Fox West Coast Studios.

Warners Completing Year's Production Schedule

Warner Brothers are rapidly completing their 1923-24 production schedule and will shortly launch the twenty pictures they are to make for 1924-25. Four of the seven remaining on the present program are in production and the others will be cleaned up within the next few weeks.

Two units nearing completion are "Babbitt" the screen version of Sinclair Lewis' novel, and "How to Educate a Wife," from the story by Elinor Glyn. Monta Bell is directing the latter and Harry Beaumont the former. Two others under way are "Cornered" from the story by Zelda Sears and Dodson Mitchell, which William Beaudine is directing, and "Being Respectable" from the story by Grace Landrau, with Phil Rosen at the directorial helm.

William Beaudine is also scheduled to shoot "Lover's Lane" as soon as he completes "Cornered."

The two remaining pictures, "Her Marriage Vow" and "The Tenth Woman," will be assigned directors as soon as room is cleared at the west coast studios.

Lloyd's General Manager Refutes Rumors

William R. Fraser, General Manager Harold Lloyd Corporation, makes the following statement to refute rumors:

"It has been reported from various sources that we have aligned ourselves with organizations for the distribution of our pictures following our current contract with Pathe Exchanges, Incorporated. There can be no foundation for these stories. We have three more pictures to be released by Pathe under our present arrangements. First of these is 'Girl Shy,' which will be released late in April. It will take at least a year to complete the other two pictures called for in the Pathe contract. Therefore, we see no need to talk new contract with any organization or individuals."

Victor Schertzinger to Direct "Bread"

With Mae Busch in the leading role, Victor Schertzinger will direct for Metro a screen version of "Bread," one of Charles G. Norris' best sellers.

Miss Busch has just finished a leading part in "The Shooting of Dan McGrew."

"Bread" is the fourth consecutive picture Mr. Schertzinger has directed for Metro. The first was Jackie Coogan's initial Metro picture, "Long Live the King" following which he directed "The Man Life Passed By" from a story he had written with Winifred Dunn. Then came Jackie's second Metro picture, "A Boy of Flanders" recently completed and now "Bread."

Mabel Normand Welcomed to St. Louis by Mayor

Mayor Henry W. Kiel of St. Louis, headed a large delegation of representative citizens and motion picture exhibitors and exchangemen that met Mabel Normand at the Union Station on her arrival. While the Mayor grasped the star's hand and welcomed her to the city, Charley Skouras, manager of the Grand Central pressed into her arms a large bouquet of American Beauty roses. She was then escorted to a waiting limousine and driven to the Chase Hotel where she stopped during her stay in St. Louis.

Handicapped by a very severe cold, Miss Normand refused to cancel her appearances at the theatre.

Selznick Changes Sales Department

Following the resignation of David R. Blythe, former director of sales and distribution for Selznick Distributing Corporation, President Doolittle, assisted by L. J. Darmour, will supervise the activities of that department.

In addition to their twenty-six branch managers they have placed in the field five special representatives who will cover the entire country working out of the Home Office and whose duties will be to stimulate sales and generally supervise the operation of the branches.

"Born Rich" Is First of Garrick Pictures

With Will Nigh as director and T. A. Persons as production manager, "Born Rich" will be the first picture made by the newly-organized Garrick Pictures Corporation, capitalized at $200,000 with offices at 247 Park Avenue, New York.

Hughes Cornell wrote the story which ran serially in 16 Hearst newspapers and filming will start at the Biograph studios. Jess Smith and Leland Hayward are the officers of the new producing corporation which will release its first picture through Associated First National.

Geraghty Completes Cast for Jack Pickford

Norma Shearer has been loaned by Louis B. Mayer to Tom J. Geraghty and will play opposite Jack Pickford in the Geraghty production in which Pickford is starred, "The End of the World." Work on this picture is well under way.

Miss Shearer's engagement practically completes the cast which includes Alec B. Francis, Herbert Pryor, Claire McDowell, Ann May, and George Dromgold. Bob, the dog and Felix, the cat also have prominent roles. Vernon Keays is directing.

Arthur Loew Warns U. S. Producers

ARTHUR LOEW, general manager of the foreign department of Metro Pictures Corporation, just back from a European tour warns producers against flooding the foreign market with back releases which cannot compete with current productions. He said:

"The foreign market is limited as to theatres and they are all eager to buy outright or play percentage the big American feature productions. This demand has created a buyer's market that should mean even more to American producers in future years than it does at present. Instead of taking advantage of this opportunity to build up good will through the foreign market, and realize the largest financial profit, what have American distributors done?

"They have literally flooded the foreign markets with old releases of several years ago, and films of inferior quality, that cannot compare with current productions, because the short-sighted producers figure that they have the pictures and whatever they can get is profit. The result is that American producers are, to put it truly, 'cutting off their noses to spite their faces.'"

Woman Is Producer of "Which Shall It Be?"

Madeline Brandies, former society leader, of Omaha, Neb., is responsible for the production of "Which Shall It Be?" a Hodkinson release at present on the screen at the Cameo theatre, New York.

It is Mrs. Brandies' intention to produce a number of photoplays having a child appeal in them. She also intends to reproduce classics in poetry and drama in two-reel pictures. Her next production will be "Maud Muller," an adaptation of Whittier's famous poem, which will be ready for release in two months.

Rex Beach's "Recoil" Is Ready for Goldwyn

J. Parker Read, Jr., has completed in France the latest Rex Beach picture, "Recoil," and Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan is now preparing to release it.

A meeting of district managers of the Film Booking Offices was held last Saturday and Sunday at the New York offices. Its purpose was for the discussion of the handling of forthcoming releases.

The sessions were presided over by J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president. All divisions were represented with the exception of the West Coast. H. M. Hoffman, vice-president and A. A. Aronson, general sales manager of Truart Film Corporation addressed those present on the Truart productions to be distributed by F. B. O.

Sanford Here to Dispose of Eight Features

Frank M. Sanford, president of Sanford Productions, is in New York, from Hollywood, in the interest of eight five-reel productions featuring Matty Mattison, which his company is now producing on the coast.

Five of the pictures are already completed and the others will be rushed to conclusion. They are to be state righted. Mr. Sanford is arranging for the sale of several foreign territories. The five completed pictures are, "The Lone Wagon," "Mile-A-Minute Morgan," "The Last White Man," "North of Alaska" and "Shell-Shocked Sammy."

Universal Buys Western for Hoot Gibson

"The Ridin' Kid From Powder River," western novel by Henry Herbert Knibbs, has been purchased by Unniversal for Hoot Gibson's first feature under his new production schedule for the coming year.

Production will start on the picture in about three weeks under the direction of Edward Sedgwick. It is probable the troupe will go to Arizona or Wyoming for exteriors.

The screen version of the novel has been prepared by Sedgwick and Raymond L. Schrock. Gibson's supporting cast will be selected within the next week.

Two Additions to "Janice Meredith" Cast

George Nash has been engaged by Cosmopolitan for the role of Sir William Howe in "Janice Meredith," in which Marion Davies will star. Douglas Stevenson, leading man in dramatic and musical comedy productions is another who has recently been added to the cast. He will play the part of a young British officer.

"Janice Meredith" was adapted by Lillie Hayward from Paul Leicester Ford's story of the American Revolution. E. Mason Hopper is the director.

Scenes from "Those Who Dance," which will be released by First National

"Bugler of Algiers" Under Way for Universal

Rupert Julian has started work on "The Bugler of Algiers" for Universal. This is a screen version of "We Are French," which Julian both starred in and directed some years ago.

Charles De Roche has the leading role, with Madge Bellamy in the leading feminine part. Little Priscilla Dean Moran also has a prominent part. Others in the cast are Gibson Gowland, Ford Sterling and Charles De Ravenne.

"Nellie, Beautiful Cloak Model," Held Over

Goldwyn's "Nellie, The Beautiful Cloak Model," was held over for a second week at the California Theatre in Los Angeles as business was reported excellent and the reviews were declared to be so favorable.

The cast, which embraces Claire Windsor, Mae Busch, Edmund Lowe, Raymond Griffith, Lew Cody and Hobart Bosworth, were all given fine notices by the Los Angeles newspapers.

Effective "Triumph" Tieup Is Arranged

What should be an effective tieup has been arranged by Paramount on its production of "Triumph," which is to be released this month. Through an arrangement with the Adsealit Corporaton of New York, automatic gum-sealers, used on bundles in department stores in place of string, will carry advertising matter on "Triumph."

According to the Paramount contract four million sealers are to be used each month throughout the country, for a period of three months, April, May and June.

Panzer and Herbert Join "The Fool" Cast

William Fox has added Paul Panzer and A. J. Herbert to the cast of Channing Pollock's stage play now being filmed at the New York studios.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see Motion Picture News —first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Post Card Stunt Works Well in Seattle

A post card stunt was used quite successfully recently in Seattle, Wash., by Edwin B. Rivers, assistant manager of the Heilig Theatre when that house showed "The Lullaby."

Mr. Rivers purchased two thousand stamped mailing cards, and on the correspondence side had a message printed to resemble a woman's handwriting. The message read something like this:

"Dear Friend:—I have just been to the Heilig theatre to see 'The Lullaby' and it is a wonderful picture. Jane Novak in the leading part is exceptional, and as a friend of yours, I want to take this means of advising you to be sure and see the picture this week while it is here."

At each performance, Mr. Rivers used a slide on the screen advising the women in the audience that as they left the theatre they would be given one of these cards. The slide further requested them to put the name and address of one of their friends on the card, and drop it in the mail box as they left at the end of the performance, at no expense to themselves.

These cards were given to the first two thousand women to enter the theatre, and an actual survey of the stunt disclosed the fact that more than five hundred of the cards were returned to the theatre by women who had received them.

Teaser Ads Stunts Works on "Temporary Husband"

Manager Cliff Denham used the Victoria newspaper to advertise for "A Temporary Husband" when he played the attraction of almost similar title at the Royal theatre. His newspaper ad read:

"A Temporary Husband — Young girl, 22 years of age, attractive, must marry within a week. Will pay any man who marries her well, but he must leave her after the ceremony. Prefer gentleman of good breeding, but one who does not expect to live longer than a week. Apply Burns and Burns, Post Box 1000."

Manager Denham placed the ad as an advance teaser campaign. To his amazement

Lobby display, painted by hand in many striking colors, and used at B. S. Moss Broadway theatre, New York City, on "Name the Man!" (Goldwyn).

he was rewarded with about 30 replies. The general excuse was to get in on some easy money. The prospective bridegrooms all had different ideas about the ceremony. One wanted it on the quiet. Another admitted he was momentarily hard up. Still another declared that he hoped the matter of dying within a week wasn't important.

On Friday before the opening Manager Denham advertised again. This time he said: "Found — A Temporary Husband — He'll be at the Royal Theatre four days commencing Monday."

Stands Pat on Editorial in "Anna Christie" Display

Ace Berry of the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, decided that all the copy he needed for his campaign for "Anna Christie" was contained in the editorial which appeared in the Chicago Tribune during the run of the picture in Chicago. A cut of the advertisement was made in time for the Indianapolis first run and was used as a 16 inch advertisement on the picture.

White Puts "Scaramouche" Over in Sumter, S. C.

Manager Oscar White of the Rex theatre, Sumter, S. C., recently put over an excellent campaign on "Scaramouche" at that house. Many Sumter residents had seen the picture at nearby cities, and White knew he could count on a certain amount of word-of-mouth publicity. With that as a nucleus, he built up his campaign.

The smaller nearby towns were covered by truck, putting up several stands of paper a week in advance. This theatre has just recently established a good rural mailing list which is reserved and used only for the best and highest class attractions.

Had you taken a trip over the out-lying districts of Sumter you won'd have seen Scaramouche advertised everywhere and might have thought a circus was coming to town.

The telephone was used announcing the picture, its merit and the playing dates.

Oil paintings were used in the lobby and a few cut-outs, also stills and lobby-photos making altogether an attractive display.

Screens Reel in Store to Tie-Up With Style Show

Christie Deibel, of the Liberty Theatre, Youngstown, wins prizes for his prowess in golf. But that isn't the only things he knows how to do well. He demonstrated that he knows a thing or two about exploitation recently when he put over a unique style show in connection with his showing of "Nellie the Beautiful Cloak Model." Deibel took an old moth eaten idea, and gave it a brand new turn that got the whole town of Youngstown talking about his show. First, co operating with McKelvey's, the largest department store in the town, he staged an elaborate style show at his theatre. During the noon hour, when everybody's out on the streets, Deibel staged a reel of "Nellie,"—the reel that displays the most and the finest gowns—at McKelvey's Department Store with the style show. In that way he caught people either at the theatre, or at the department store, or at both. The attraction drew crowds, the picture setting a new high mark in theatre attendance.

Quite appropriately, during the showing of "Fashion Row," (Metro) Manager Clifford Stiff of the Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., staged the fashion show here depicted.

Lobby Circus on "Fools Highway"

William Raynor Stages Elaborate Fun Frolic in Theatre Foyer During Run

When "Fool's Highway" was shown recently at Reade's Hippodrome, Cleveland, Manager William Raynor put over a stunt that made the house the talk of Cleveland.

In the first place, the Hippodrome has a tremendous foyer, which lends itself to effective exploitation. Beginning at the top, he hung rows upon rows of fantastic colored flags from the ceiling, giving the entire place a gay appearance. Then, at the back, he had regular side show tents erected. In one, Prince Ali Sadhoo gave special mind reading exhibitions free of charge. In another, Madame Alladka read your palm by the light of a smoky lamp. Still another, exhibited a crystal gazer, who looked into the future for anyone who was inquisitive.

One entire section of the lobby was roped off like a prize fighting ring. Here two midgets boxed before the show. The "smallest ponies in the world" one of 'em's twenty-four inches high and the other is thirty inches high, were harnessed to a tiny cart and a little black boy in bright red uniform as driver, attracted attention in the foyer. In addition, about fifty novelty kiddy teeter horses were placed there, for the youngsters to ride. A clown supervised them, and refereed their races. All this in the lobby, before the patron even entered the auditorium.

Inside, the entire vaudeville show was built around the circus idea and the Bowery atmosphere of the picture. Every act on the bill was a circus act, many of them from the big circuses, just working in the theatres until time for the big tent to come out.

Manager Raynor took advantage of the occasion to build up two window displays in the lobby, to exploit future attractions. One was a snow storm display, artistically arranged with life sized figures, and announcing the coming of "Judgment of the Storm." Another was a Jazz window, highly colored, gay, and announcing the approaching Jazz Festival. But it in no way conflicted with the big circus exploitation, which was the talk of the town.

Private Showing Quiets "Youth" Objectors

Instead of trying to squealch objections raised when he announced "Flaming Youth" Manager Walter Richards, of the Royal, Findlay, O., adopted a policy of pitiless publicity. He invited the city fathers to witness an advance screening with the result that they gave it the official endorsement of "Fine."

Objection had been raised by the Women's Federated Clubs, and, according to the local scribe, it developed afterwards that they dropped their protests "after seeing the picture." In the meanwhile Richards, profited by the hubbub.

Texas House Profits by National Tie-up

Manager Al. H. Lever of the Isis theatre, Houston, Texas, profited by a National tie-up when he played "Black Oxen." The story had been serialized and publicized and the song tie-up had been advertised locally as "When Romance Wakes."

Lever used the "Melody in F" as his musical duet opening and followed it up with "When Romance Wakes." The use of this song was good for a music store window display.

In the foyer of Proctor's 125th St. theatre, New York City, for "The Darling of New York" (Universal).

Odd Fellows Tieup With "The Shepherd King"

The interest stirred up in Winnipeg, Canada, by a Grand Lodge Convention of the Odd Fellows was turned to excellent advantage by the National theatre for its presentation of "The Shepherd King." The visiting delegates were the guests of the theatre at a special screening and as result offered their cooperation in boosting the show.

The Odd Fellows induced the Canadian National Railways to use a display card in the window of their main office. The card stated that while "The Shepherd King" travelled from place to place on the backs of camels had he lived in this age of rapid transit his mode of travel would have been in a Canadian National Pullman.

Many patrons were reached through a circular letter sent out to various lodges by the Grand Master of the Manitoba Lodge. This spoke of the merits of the film and urged the support of the members of the lodges to which it was addressed.

Juvenile Player Appears With "Big Brother"

Mickey Bennett, juvenile featured player in "Big Brother," was the guest of the city of Newburgh recently, the occasion being the showing of "Big Brother" at the Broadway theater.

Three thousand post cards mailed from New York and bearing a facsimile signature of Mickey, told the people of Newburgh that he would arrive on the 10:19 train Monday. A big crowd was at the station and Mickey was driven to the City Hall where he was presented with an enormous "key to the city" by Mayor Spencer.

Monday noon Mickey was the honor guest at the luncheon of the Lions' Club and Tuesday he was entertained by the Rotary. Monday night was Lions' night, Tuesday was Rotary night and Wednesday was Kiwanis night at the Broadway and Mickey made a personal appearance on each occasion.

Showing the lobby of the Garing theatre, Greenville, S. C., during the showing of "The Dangerous Maid" (First Nat'l). H. B Clarke is manager.

Two Displays in One Store Made for "Black Oxen"

Guy Kenimer captured two window displays in one department store for his showing of "Black Oxen" at the Arcade, Jacksonville.

One was a big window flanking the entrance to the store which featured a card decorated with portrait pictures of Corinne Griffith and built up with copies of the novel arranged to cover the floor of the window and support the big card. The other was in the cosmetic department where Kenimer had a sign reading, "An actual case of rejuvenation based on scientific methods is Black Oxen."

Tags Fire Hydrants with "Flaming Barriers" Copy

By persuading the fire chief of Evansville, Ind., that motorists and truck drivers needed a little reminder that they were not to park near fire hydrants, A. K. Hoel, director of publicity for the Criterion theatre of that city obtained permission to tag all the hydrants with a sign which boosted his results with the "Flaming Barriers" feature.

Cards with black lettering on red flashed the warning: "Beware of 'Flaming Barriers!' Do not park within ten feet of this plug."

Music Tieup Gives Murray Thorough Mail Campaign

To announce "Singer Jim McKee," W. J. Murray made his "direct to consumer" appeal through the Victrola mailing list of the Cable Piano Company. Five thousand insert folders were made and delivered to the Cable company. Their mailing department did the rest.

Novel "Under Red Robe" Prologue

Elaborate Presentation Is Put Over by John Hamrick at Seattle Theatre

WHEN "Under the Red Robe" played at the Blue Mouse theatre, Seattle, Manager John Hamrick used an unusual prologue, written, staged and directed by Henri C. LeBel, manager of presentation.

The prologue opened with the orchestra rendering "The March of the Toys," from "Babes in Toyland." During this rendition, two children, attired as court courier marched onto the stage from opposite sides, each bearing a card. When placed together, these cards announced the beginning of the presentation.

Following this, a small scene to the right of the stage showed the characters, Renee DeCouchefort and Gil de Bereault, attired as they were in most of the scenes in the end of the picture. In this scene on the stage, each character sang through a verse of "Twilight Rose," and the scene ended with a duet of the number by the two.

As the lights faded on this scene, the couriers re-entered to the strains of "March of the Toys," this time bearing cards saying, "Richelieu's Intent." At the end of this appearance of the couriers, a scene at the left of the stage was lighted to show a character, attired as Cardinal Richelieu, sitting at his desk. While a violin softly played Nevin's "Love Song," the character Richelieu made a brief speech, reading from a scroll, regarding the state of affairs of the French nation at that time, Richelieu's methods of aiding the state, etc.

Following the end of this scene, the couriers re-entered for the third time, in the same way. This time they bore cards reading, "John Hamrick presents "Under the Red Robe." From this point on, the orchestra continued playing "March of the Toys," while the screening of the picture began. The preliminary titles, etc., of the picture, were omitted, so that the first thing shown on the screen following the announcement by the cards carried by the couriers was the cast of characters.

In line with the prologue and theme of the picture, the staging of these scenes was made more graphic by the use of red lighting effects, and red drapes. On the red drapes that were used during the staging of the prologue were hung small gold fleurs-de-lis, symbolic of the time expressed in the film.

Unusual lobby display arranged at Atlantic Gardens, New York City, for the premiere of "Fool's Highway" (Universal), and reproducing the atmosphere of the old Bowery.

Gets Fourteen Individual Tieups for "Scaramouche"

A distinct tieup for each of the fourteen window displays for his engagement of "Scaramouche" is the rather unique record achieved by Charles McFarland of the Queen Theatre, Houston.

The display in each window featured an idea especially suited to the stunt. A drug-store, for example, exhibited a sign reading: "Follow the example of beautiful Alice Terry star of Scaramouche, and keep that beautiful schoolgirl complexion by using Palm Olive products." In Goggan's music store the window was plastered with cover sheets of "Rose of Picardy" with the line that the song was being featured at the Queen. In the millinery store there were fifteen stills from the picture some of them pasted on hat-box covers, built around a picture of Alice Terry in a hat of the 1794 vintage which went with the line see our "1924 advance styles."

McFarland changed his lights in front of the house, used the twenty-four sheet cut-out on top of the theatre building with an electric light arrangement for night display and had signs on all the mirrors of confectionery stores and cafes, and a trolley car bearing two large "screamer" banners.

Reproduction of Cathedral Draws Crowds to Lobby

A reproduction of the interior of Notre Dame Cathedral was one of the outstanding items in the campaign for "The Hunchback" at the Academy theatre, Haverhill, Mass.

The model presented such novel and striking effects that it was the topic of wide discussion in Haverhill. The display was designed by Manager Ed. Foley of the Academy and Phil Han of the American Feature Film Company. It was built of wall board with rose windows and door arches cut out. These were backed by variously-colored gelatine paper and lighted from behind. A motor-driven phonograph reproduced church chimes and added a final touch of realistic suggestion.

Mystery Puzzles Cops But Towns Gets Publicity

Results, counted in terms of newspaper publicity, far exceeded expectations when L. R. Towns of the Strand, Birmingham, entertained the city detectives at a special showing of "The Acquittal." The showing was in advance of the engagement at the Strand, and Towns added to the entertainment by issuing a friendly challenge to the cops to penetrate the mystery, "Who killed John Prentiss?" The manager stopped the film after the fifth reel and offered to buy a new hat for any sleuth solving the mystery.

Though he counted on buying a few hats, Towns was nevertheless agreeably disappointed when there were no winners in the audience. The following day he broke out with an ad featuring the line "If the detectives can't guess who killed Prentiss, what a sweet mystery this will be for you," which in turn led to some good stories in the news columns of the Birmingham papers.

The same idea was used to launch "The Acquittal." Towns gave a ten-thirty matinee and offered free tickets to "West of the Water Tower," his next engagement, for those who guessed right when the picture was stopped.

Tieup Proves Valuable for "Lilies" in Kansas City

An extensive advertising campaign heralded "Lilies of the Field" to theatre-goers of Kansas City for its run at the Main-street

The outstanding feature of the drive was a tie-up with a perfume company which netted window displays, and the distribution of twenty thousand heralds. This tie-up was also extended to include the distribution of samples at the theatre, the package holding the samples carrying copy for both the picture and the powder.

Flower stores featured window cards containing the following text: "It's time to order your Easter Lilies and to see "Lilies of the Field" at the Mainstreet Theatre."

Taking advantage of Miss Griffith's announced retirement from the screen, the Mainstreet arranged a contest in which prizes were award for the best petitions urging the star to reconsider her decision. The contest netted valuable newspaper publicity.

Schade Teaches Meaning of "Ponjola" in Novel Way

By this time it should be pretty well known among picture exhibitors that George Schade of Sandusky, O., does not let many opportunities slip by him. However, if there are any doubters let them consider his neat advance campaign for "Ponjola."

Schade, as one of the city commissioners, has frequent occasion, in the council discussions and his business life, to refer to the Prohibition issue. In all these questions he has substituted the word "Ponjola" to mean whisky. He advertised the synonym first of all by a clever newspaper interview. He also brought it up frequently in the city council meetings.

"The complaint has been made that numerous places," the council chairman would say, "are selling whis-"

"Ponjola" Schade would jump up and interrupt.

Attractive art display material of many types was used in the lobby of the Rivoli theatre, Portland, Ore., during the showing of "The Dangerous Maid" (First National).

Classified Ads Aid Run of "West of Water Tower"

It wasn't exactly new, but it proved still good when Manager H. B. Clarke of the Garing theatre, Greenville, S. C., used it on "West of the Water Tower." Referring, in this instance, to the "Lost pocketbook" classified ad stunt.

Clarke had nine classified ads placed in The Piedmont, the local paper, exactly alike, and reading:

"Lost, between depot and city hall, a pocketbook, containing 5 one dollar bills and a diamond pin, brooch style, and four tickets to 'West of the Water Tower.' Finder may keep the five dollars and the diamond pin. But please return the four tickets to 'West of the Water Tower,' playing at Garing theatre, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday."

The response aroused proved that the stunt was still effective, Clarke reports.

Launch Big "Scaramouche" Drive on Short Notice

Notified only four days before his opening that "Scaramouche" had been booked into the Garing, Greenville, S. C., Manager H. B. Clarke displayed his resourcefulness when he got out a fast sniping job with his theatre porters co-operating with the bill posters in getting the paper up on the "free-for-all" stands.

As the picture opened on Monday, Sunday night Clarke gave an invitation showing to the newspapermen and the social highlights.

At the time Greenville had a slight case of "costume-poisoning" so Clarke used cut-out heads of the stars and the producers, and in a general way drummed the fact that was a super-production without touching on the period.

Special "Law Forbids" Displays

Manager Puts Over Aggressive Stunts in Exploitation Campaign on Picture

WHEN "The Law Forbids" was booked for Proctor's East 125th Street theatre, New York City, Manager James P. Travers got busy and resolved to put over a record campaign. He lost no opportunity to get the name before the residents of Harlem. Two weeks before the opening, he started using the special trailer. Ten thousand circulars were distributed at the various schools in Harlem.

As a ballyhoo, he had a man made up as a rooster (Ale ander in the picture) going through the streets. Baby Peggy dolls, fingers to lips, were strung along the lobby of the theatre carrying signs reading: "Sh! Sh! I will be here Thursday in 'The Law Forbids,'" signed by Baby Peggy. A life sized Baby Peggy doll in a carriage was pushed by a woman, made up as governess, through the streets three days before showing and while playing.

Travers also built up a special electrical display on his marques, featuring the picture and a huge doll. In the lobby, there were a large illuminated cut-out, life size dolls in swings hanging in the middle of the lobby with signs reading "The Law Forbids Me To Leave Here Until Sunday Night," a Baby Peggy shadow-box, and a large Baby Peggy and two roosters with illuminated letters in outside lobby. Colored enlargements of stills in gold frames, were placed in store windows before and during the showing.

Manager Earle Settle of the Palace theatre, McAlester, Okla., was responsible for this pleasing display on "Rupert of Hentzau" (Selznick).

Postal Workers Help Calla Sell "The Mailman"

When "The Mailman" played recently at the Strand Theatre, Youngstown, O., manager Joe Calla enlisted the entire postal force to exploit the picture. Front page newspaper space was obtained with a story about the oldest mailman in Youngstown. A mailman's parade was staged. Also, he secured permission for the mailmen to deliver on the regular routes 20,000 letters to the citizens of Youngstown. These letters were propaganda for better pay for the mailmen. Banners were stretched across the main streets. A big ticket selling campaign was launched. Various civic organizations took whole blocks of tickets and guaranteed to sell them, a percentage to go to the mailmen's fund.

Old-Time Songs Number Wins Audience Applause

Offered as "Popular request" feature, a [illegible] dancing dances and singing of old-time favorite songs won a big round of applause from audience at the Brooklyn Mark Strand. The feature was on the program with "Flowing Gold" and was arranged by Edward L. Hyman.

Sixteen artists took part in the incident, including the Criterion Male Quartette, the Betty Wall Harpists, the ballet and two [illegible].

There was a special film to announce the number, the introduction stating that "Songs come and songs go; we hear them today and forget them tomorrow. There are, however, those which stand the test of time and cling to our memory — the songs we can't forget."

The songs presented were: "Sweet Adeline," sung by male quartette. "Alexander's Ragtime Band," danced by premiere danseuse in silk minstrel costume. "The Glow Worm," [illegible] with accompaniment by harpists. "The Serenade of New York," male quartette and four girls, song and pantomime. "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," by another soprano, with harp a[illegible]. "Come Back To Erin," male quartette and harps.

Oil Scandal Catchline for "Galloping Fish" Herald

The incongruity of the title "The Galloping Fish" is carried a word further in a report on that picture from the Strand, Cincinnati. Harry Royster, First National exploitation representative, cooperated with the theatre. A trick herald started the campaign. The booklet was titled "What I Know About the Oil Scandal." The second page was blank, of course. But propaganda for the Strand show was printed on the third and fourth pages which declared that the writer knew that there was a laugh in every foot of "The Galloping Fish."

The success of the herald at the Strand shows that this old device can be revived to good purposes, now and then, if the catchline is brought up to date.

Ingenious display on "Why Worry?" (Pathe) by Manager Earle Settle at the Palace theatre, McAlester, Okla. Good use was made of the comedy's spectacles in [illegible] the [illegible].

Times Square Windows Are Open to "Beau" Displays

If the exploitation for "Beau Brummel" at the New York Strand may be taken as a criterion there is far more than the usual material for merchant cooperation in the new John Barrymore feature. For something like two hundred windows in the Times Square district were induced to display announcement cards, oil paintings and stills on "Beau Brummel" in conjunction with merchandise suitable for featuring in association with the famous dandy.

The merchants who were receptive to the overtures of the Warner publicity forces included dealers in men's hats, clothes, shoes, music and other commodities. According to the exploitation men the merchants evinced unusual enthusiasm when broached on the question of a window display.

No difficulty was found in discovering a tieup between "Beau Brummel" and the wares of the merchants. For example:

Young's Hat Stores featured the large grey beavers of the Brummelian period; the dainty polished shoes that the Beau wore were shown by the Signet shoe stores; Brill Brothers used a Beau Brummel dummy specially made for the purpose; Aeolian Hall had a window display, and music store tie-ups were effected by Carl Fischer Co., publishers of the Beau Brummel Minuet specially prepared for the production.

Staten Island Social Clubs Profit in Theatre Tie-up

Whole-hearted cooperation of local social service organizations with the Richmond theatre, Richmond, Staten Island, resulted in an appreciable swelling of funds for philanthropic purposes. The organization, which does social welfare work, entered into a percentage arrangement with the theatre for the showing of "David Copperfield."

Under the direction of the theatre management the association threw its resources into a publicity campaign which brought out crowds to each performance. One of the stunts was the appearance on the streets of an impersonator of the runaway David, riding his donkey, and in search of the home of Aunt Betsey Trotwood. David visited at assembly hour private schools, women's clubs, rotary clubs and other civic organizations. On these visits the impersonator of the screen character was accompanied by Dora and Mr. Micawber, all in proper costume. Addresses were made in which the characters expressed the wish of making better acquaintances of their audiences by their visit to the theatre where "David Copperfield" was being screened.

Sensational Headline Used in Display Ads

A novel method was used to illustrate the punch of "Her Reputation" by the Fox Theatre, Philadelphia, in its newspaper advertisements. The display featured a sensational headline under the caption "Prominent Film Star Implicated in Mysterious Shooting." The plainly marked "advertising" sign gave it away; but the idea was realistic enough to attract attention and it brought home the punch of the theme in advance.

TRADE MARK

Exploiting "Copperfield" From Educational Angle

The screen adaptation of the Charles Dickens classic "David Copperfield" has been exploited through the co-operation of educational and cultural institutions with marked success by exhibitors in this country and Canada. Special appeals to the local schools and social organizations by means of special showings, essay contests in the schools, percentage tie-ups, etc., were made with marked success.

Harry Brouse, proprietor of the Imperial, Ottawa, Canada, played "David Copperfield" to a very successful engagement by holding an advance presentation to which special invitations were sent to school teachers and clergymen. The invitations to the teachers were extended to a party of three, each teacher being invited to bring two of her pupils with her. The selection of the pupils had the effect of creating much talk among the children as there was some competition for the honor.

"Lilies of Field" Scheme Ties Up With Late News

Taking advantage of a news break was the high spot of the campaign conducted for "Lilies of the Field" at the Main Street Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

News of Corinne Griffith's proposed retirement had just come over the wires and the theatre offered an award to the essay writer who could give the best reasons why Miss Griffith should retract her decision to withdraw from the screen.

It was called a "Petition Competition," immediately getting over the idea that the vast majority were opposed to Miss Griffith's proposed desertion.

The stunt aroused unusual enthusiasm among picture fans and the Kansas City Journal gave it a good play.

Al Sobler, First Nationals exploitation representative from the Chicago exchange, was on hand to help put over the campaign.

Shadow box for "Shadows of Paris" (Paramount) made by J. Wright Brown, Manager of the Grand theatre, Columbus, Ga., at slight expense.

"When a Man's a Man" He Is Polite, Strand Says

A stunt for the run of "When a Man's a Man" at the Strand, Detroit, taught a rather painfully blunt lesson in chivalry, but it was good advertising for the theatre, so that makes it all right. It was invented by Jack Fuld, who co-operated with the theatre.

Jack had small cards printed, one side of which read: "When a Man's a Man he gives his seat up to a lady." The cards could be pasted on the windows with this side showing. On the other side the cards carried a bold display announcement of the picture at the Strand.

Brown's Campaign Doubled Average Receipts

By means of a cleverly planned campaign which featured "The White Sister" as a picture of special interest during the season of Lent, J. Wright Brown of the Grand Theatre, Columbus, Ga., just about doubled his average receipts for a three day run during this season. The campaign opened ten days in advance of the engagement when photo editions of the novel were awarded as prizes for a competition in connection with another feature. This was the starting point and from that on the campaign was carried on in a thoroughgoing manner, as may be judged by the following outline of the advertising done by Mr. Brown.

Stock trailer and slides were used on the screens of the Grand and Rialto theatres, two weeks in advance.

Street car signs, car cards, daily announcements on the menus of two tea rooms and window cards were the routine methods used. Heralds were also distributed through the local laundry and through the theatre's weekly programs.

A window display was secured from a local drug store cooperating with the sale of the photoplay edition of the novel of this photoplay. Which also resulted in several days' cooperative newspaper advertising, as the Drug store advertised in the newspapers both the photoplay and the novel.

The lobby display was the result of a "tip" published in the Theatre department's magazine "The Close-Up" and was modeled after the design of a large "book" formerly used in Memphis, Tenn.

The "Enquirer Sun" published for three days in advance a front page "box" advertising the coming of this attraction and also continued this announcement during the run, in exchange for a limited number of passes, which were distributed to those lucky enough to find their names and addresses published in the want ad or classified ad sections.

1,000 Lillian Gish postal cards were mailed in advance to a classified list of prospects.

A local department store was induced to give this book window display to "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" (Universal) when it played at the Rialto theatre, Marinette, Wis.

YOUR IDEA

AMONG the members of the staff working on "Monsieur Beaucaire" at the Famous Players Long Island studios is Reese B. Harrington, employed as an assistant to Forrest Halsey. Harrington, who is just 20 years of age, will be remembered as having been the youngest exhibitor in the country when at the age of 11 he took over the Reese theatre at Harrington, Del.

Now, after having run this 1,000-seat house for nine years, he has put a manager in charge and come to New York to study the producing end of the business.

It will be recalled that many of his exploitation campaigns were featured prominently in the Exhibitors' Service Bureau and the trade papers generally. All of which goes to prove, perhaps, that if your name appears in the trade papers often enough, something is bound to happen.

SENDING out merchandising ideas with the weekly bills from a film exchange is a somewhat startling idea—not that it should be so unusual, since similar things are done in many lines of business—but that such common-sense things are so rarely done in this industry.

The idea in question is being used regularly by Hal Hodes, New York City branch manager for Educational Films, Inc. Commenting on the plan, he says:

"As I told you, a bill is a cold, impersonal thing and in order that the exhibitor may understand that we are just as much interested in seeing his house go over successfully as we are in getting his business, I make it a practice to send out one of these letters every week or so together with the bills."

Many letters of appreciation have been received in response to these suggestions, showing that the plan has accomplished its purpose. Excerpts from some of the letters sent out by Hodes follow:

"A Brooklyn exhibitor told me of an idea this morning which has caused his weekly business to jump from $1,150 to $2,400. And because I've always believed in passing good things along, this letter is going to you.

"The idea was a simple one. He has been getting out a printed program all along, but it had never meant much, so far as building business was concerned. Then one day he printed on the back page of the program the names and addresses of twenty-five people who live in his neighborhood. At the top of the column containing these names was printed the following:

The Flying Scotchman, famous English train, leaving London with a special car to show "Black Oxen" (First Nat'l)

A pass good for any day except Saturday or Sunday is waiting at the Box Office for every person whose name is printed in this column. Call at the Box Office, identify yourself, and get the pass. A different set of names will be printed in this column every week. Watch for your name.

"Did it go over? Well, within twenty-four hours every program had been snapped up. And they've been in demand ever since. Furthermore, although each pass admitted one person free, these lucky ones were always accompanied by another person who paid to get in. Best of all, was the fact that the idea got the people into the habit of going to this particular theatre, which is the reason for receipts jumping from $1,150 to $2,400 per week."

"Here is an idea, comparatively inexpensive, which has enabled a local exhibitor to put his house over. It's possible that you can put it to work, too.

"This exhibitor was up against a tough situation. Lots of opposition in a residential section. He had tried everything from country stores to double feature bills, but somehow couldn't put his theatre on a permanently successful basis. Then one day his wife told him about a clever canvasser who had interested her in a vacuum cleaner that afternoon. That gave him his idea.

"The next day he looked about for a woman who could go from house to house and from door to door for the express purpose of interesting the ladies of the neighborhood in the idea of coming to his theatre. This woman would note the name on the bell, ask for Mrs. So-and-so, and then inquire why it was she hadn't been to the exhibitor's theatre during the past week. The canvasser was a woman of middle age and her appearance inspired confidence. Consequently when she told the lady of the house of the good things this exhibitor had booked for the entertainment of the people in the neighborhood, her listener was interested. More important, she had never been canvassed for her picture theatre patronage before. Within a month this particular theatre showed a fine increase in receipts.

"In trying out this idea, make sure you hire a woman who looks motherly. A flippy-looking canvasser will simply mean a waste of good money. To check up the number of people whom this employee sees ANOTHER manager to take advantage of the exploitation advantages in radio is J. Raymond Thurston, of the Temple theatre, Lockport, N. Y., who recently made it a business booster for his house.

The occasion was the playing of "Maytime" at the Temple. Manager Thurston availed himself of the fact that this production was adapted from a popular light opera, with a tuneful musical score.

This score was accordingly broadcasted through Station WMAK at Lockport, and thousands of persons were reminded of "Maytime."

Quite a number of features the past season have been based on light operas or musical comedies, and this sort of tie-up might be worked to advantage in any city where there are broadcasting facilities.

IN the newsy little house organ published by Orlando Enterprises, Inc., at Orlando, Fla., for the Beacham and Phillips theatre, is found an unusually sensible and straightforward appeal on the subject of children's shows, and the sort of pictures children should see. Since it is copy that might be used to advantage by other managers holding these shows, we reprint the statement in full. It was run over the signature of H. B. Vincent, manager of theatres.

"With the passing weeks the fact is brought home to me that Orlando children like pictures more and more and not only do they like pictures of all kinds and descriptions, but they also respond when we offer special shows for them alone.

"These remarks are caused through a desire on my part to make every child a friend of the theatre. And not only that but to present to every child in Orlando the right kind of a picture, presented in the right way and at the right time. For this reason the Beacham Theatre is now sponsoring Girls' and Boys' Matinees, which are held every Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at the theatre, and the youngsters are shown pictures of the type that they should see.

"The average child attends the theatre every time he or she can secure enough money to pay the admission. Nine times out of ten they see heavy, melodramatic subjects, entirely unfit for the child mind. Naturally they are influenced to a certain extent by what they see. And while we show a certain number of pictures weekly which are proper for children, we also show numberless subjects which the children should not attend. Running a theatre for the multitude is a hazardous proposition, as some object to the very things that others applaud.

"However, for this reason, the Beacham theatre this year is cooperating with the various Parent Teachers' Associations and many of the local club organizations and is giving the children special shows every Saturday morning. The pictures are all carefully selected beforehand by a Program Committee from the Parent Teachers and every unit of the program is picked for a purpose. For instance, each program consists of a scenic, a comedy and a feature. The scenic picture for educational purposes, the comedy for amusement and the feature is of the type which at once appeals to the child mind as being good.

"The admission to these Saturday morning shows being but ten cents, it has proved a popular affair with the children and each Saturday finds hundreds of them waiting to get into the theatre. The programs are worthy of comment, for ofttimes they are of merit and always well worth while.

"I would like to ask that every parent in Orlando see that as many children as possible attend these shows each week. If you want your child to see the right kind of shows, here is your opportunity and furthermore all receipts over and above the actual expenses of the films, etc., are turned over to the Parent Teachers."

RECENTLY there was reproduced in these pages one of the attractive electric art lobby displays being used by Manager Leroy V. Johnson at the Liberty theatre, Seattle. Another of these effective signs, designed and supervised by Manager Johnson, is here shown, being that used during the recent run of "Woman to Woman." He comments on it as follows:

"The main outstanding features of the lobby display as used on 'Woman to Woman,' you will notice by the photograph, are the windmill wings, which were kept revolving at a very slow speed. And you will notice the lamp receptacles, each one containing a small candelabra base lamp. Each wing and each paddle of a different color.

"You will notice the words 'Betty Compson' are studded with ten watt white lamps. 'Woman to Woman' is studded with ten watt canary yellow. You will notice to the left and right of this electrical display banner, a small cutout of Betty Compson is placed therein, and highly illuminated with a crystal effect, and below each tiny cutout you will notice a studding of lamps of the ten watt variety in assorted colors, and placed on a five (5) point flasher, which caused them to alternate.

"To the extreme left of the lobby you will notice a cutout shadowbox effect. You will notice a cutout placed in the center of the lobby and in the background a cutout made from the 3-sheet of Betty Compson in front of which was placed a piece of scrim, purposely put there to lighten up the vision of those who object to figures done in the nude. Highly colored lamps of red and green were used in this shadowbox.

"You will notice the box office entirely enclosed in a most colorful way. Illumination as used was that which was placed behind the lattice scroll effect, to enable one to see this point which would be lost, for illuminated banner carried one away with this effect. Variation of colors were used with red and yellows.

"You will notice the marquee lamps were dipped alternating with red and amber."

WHAT was doubtless the most expensive set of tickets ever used was employed for the recent opening of the Biltmore theatre in Los Angeles. Each ticket was regulation size and style—but instead of being the conventional pink pasteboard, it was stamped and engraved on a strip of bronze and flashed in gold.

The result was that the complimentary ticket looked more like an expensive piece of jewelry than a mere "pass," and Manager Edward D. Smith of the Biltmore reports that more than a thousand of the first night guests had their names engraved on the back of the tickets, to keep them as souvenirs.

C. A. Lick, Jr., of the firm of Weldon, Williams and Lick, which made the unique "ducats," remarks: "We find in history that in the amphitheatres of ancient Greece and Rome coins of metal were used to gain admission, but we believe this gold ticket represents the most handsome and costliest set of tickets since those ancient times."

Exhibitors Box-Office Reports

ASSOC. EXHIBS.

Courtship of Myles Standish—
A good drawing card. Played to good crowds all week. (Middle West.)

The Extra Girl—
Business the second week fell off to a noticeable extent. The picture itself was considered good. (West.)

Harbor Lights—
Good program picture. Fair business with it. (Middle West.)

WARNER BROS.

The Marriage Circle—
Best adult picture ever shown here. Had to stop selling tickets for every performance. Holding it over another week at least. (Middle West.)

Tiger Rose—
Did wonderfully well. Star big attraction. (Middle West.)

F. B. O.

After the Ball—
A fair program picture interest in which was aroused by the personal appearance of Gaston Glass at the same time as picture presentated. Business capacity. (East.)

VITAGRAPH

Let No Man Put Asunder—
Story well liked and well produced. Box reports good. Drawn by name and music as well as picture. (West.)

ALLIED P. & D.

The Hill Billy—
Added another success to Jack Pickford's long string. (East.)

STATE RIGHTS

Forgive and Forget—
This one pleased the crowds. Box office receipts good. (Middle West.)

The Country Kid—
Played to fair business and pleased audience. (Middle West.)

The Pantheon, Toledo, used this four-column ad on "The Love Master" (First Nat'l).

Half page newspaper ad on "Sporting Youth" (Universal) used by the Oklah theatre, Bartlesville, Okla., recently.

FIRST NATIONAL

Stronghear:—
A fairly entertaining picture. Went over good backed by strong exploitation campaign. (Middle West.)

Why Men Leave Home—
The best box office attraction in several weeks. (Middle West.)

Lilies of the Field—
Most of the patrons enjoyed this picture and went away praising it. The star was well liked—more so than her male lead. Business was good. (West.)

Secrets—
This is Norma at her best. Everybody enthusiastic over the production. Capacity business all week at $1.65 top price. (Middle West.)

When a Man's a Man—

UNIVERSAL

Sporting Youth—
Fine production. Opened very big. (Middle West.)

Picture although well played not well liked as too much love affairs with no moral. Box reports good because of special fashion review and music. (West.)

The Phantom Horseman—
Picture made strong appeal to those liking wild west plays. Box office receipts good. (West.)

A Lady of Quality—
A good costume picture, but patrons didn't care much for it and business was off. (East.)

GOLDWYN-COSMO.

The Great White Way—
Closing a second week with everybody happy. (East.)

One of the best ever made. Should pull 'em anywhere. (Middle West.)

Wild Oranges—
Exceptionally good movie. Business was fairly good all week. (Middle West.)

Really a good picture, without any extra frills or finery to spoil it. Business was only average, however, tending to pick up toward the end of the engagement. (West.)

FOX

Gentle Julia—
A picture with a light vein that pleased the crowd. (East.)

The Wolf Man—
Shows John Gilbert at his best. Good box office attraction. (East.)

The Temple of Venus—
All right for patrons that like that type of picture—seemed to lack continuity and common sense. Many of the subtitles unintentionally made audiences giggle. Business good for this style of entertainment. (West.)

Mile a Minute Romeo—
Seemed quite pleasing to the many patrons who like Tom Mix and his pony—others also were satisfied. Business was pretty fair. (West.)

Love Letters—
A light but entertaining story, well done. Did a nice business. (West.)

METRO

The White Sister—
Great picture. Good acting by Lillian Gish. Held over for second week. (Middle West.)

Women Who Give—
Picture very well produced. Facts strongly brought out. Did well with us. (West.)

Our audience liked it very much. Very good business. (Middle West.)

A Boy of Flanders—
Delightful, charming picture. Coupled with "Columbus" and a good "dog" act, this made an ideal program for the spring school vacation week. Matinees were jammed. Evenings, not so good. The show was built to appeal to the youngsters, and it did. (Middle West.)

Very good picture; business fair. (Middle West.)

Half a Dollar Bill—
This is a good picture. It had a fair week's run. (Middle West.)

Fashion Row—
Another weak Mae Murray vehicle that did not pull them in. Business only fair. Patrons did not enthuse. (East.)

Desire—
An average attendance for the week. (Middle West.)

PREFERRED

Maytime—
Good show; business good. (Middle West.)

Daughters of the Rich—
Expensively mounted picture, but failed to ring true. Broke house record, due to tremendous exploitation of Jazz Festival. (Middle West.)

PARAMOUNT

A Society Scandal—
Fair picture. We did pretty well with this. (Middle West.)

Swanson has tremendous local appeal. Her following thought this among her best. Long lines in front of box office every day. (Middle West.)

Considered inferior to a number of the star's recent successes. Business was small, considering the star's usual pulling power. (West.)

West of the Water Tower—
This picture was well advertised and it did a very good week's run. It is not out of the ordinary but can be made to do good business. (Middle West.)

The Fighting Coward—
Proved splendid drawing card. Good attendance during week. (Middle West.)

Booth Tarkington at his best. A money getter. (East.)

To the Ladies—
An entertaining comedy drama. Well praised by press and public. Attracted business all week. (East.)

Nearly a Singer—
This one made money in a week's run. (Middle West.)

The Stranger—
Drew exceptionally well, aided by week of warm weather (Middle West.)

The Next Corner—
Just the kind of picture people like. (East.)

Clean cut ad on "The Next Corner" (Paramount) at the Olympic theatre, Pittsburgh.

Short Subjects and Serials

Dorothy Devore to Make New Series

E. W. Hammons Reveals New Plans for Schedule of Educational Short Subjects

E. W. HAMMONS, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., revealed some new plans for the schedule of short subjects to be released by Educational during the 1924-25 season. In addition to the six Bobby Vernon comedies already announced, there are to be six Dorothy Devore two-reel comedies made with her own unit at the Christie studios.

"Miss Devore has won her way to comedy stardom by hard, faithful and consistent work in the leading roles of the Comedies," declared Mr. Hammons. "Those who have watched her ever-increasing in leading roles in the Christie Comedies during the last several months have looked forward to her elevation to stardom as the earned reward for her entertainment and her own merit and hard work."

Miss Devore has made especially fast strides during the current season in which she has appeared in such pictures as "Navy Blues," "Kidding Katie," "Stay Single" and "Getting Gertie's Goat." Her rapidly increasing popularity with the picture fans has been reflected in the unusual newspaper reviews which have been accorded to the pictures in which she has been featured.

Mr. Hammons also confirmed previous announcements of arrangements for a new series of two-reel Christie Comedies. For the fifth season the two-reel product of the Christie Company will be distributed by Educational. Christie Comedies formed an important part of the releasing schedule of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., during the first year of this national organization's existence and, they have maintained a leading place among the Short Subjects distributed by Educational ever since.

"Lloyd Hamilton is hard at work in the feature picture 'The Goof,' in which he is being directed by William Beaudine and for which we lent the big star to First National," said Mr. Hammons. "Following completion of this picture Lloyd will come to New York, where arrangements will be completed for his next season's group of Hamilton Comedies."

"Classics in Slang" Cast Is Completed

The cast has about been completed for the first of the Flavey-Runaway productions of the H. C. Witwer stories, which will be known as "Classics in Slang." There are to be 12 pictures in the series for Grand-Asher release with Eddie Gribbon as the star and Mildred June as leading woman. The balance of the cast will be changed in each of the pictures. They are to be two-reel comedy dramas.

The series is being adapted to the screen by Edward J. Montagne. William Hughes Curran is director and John J. Garvey, director-general. The cast for the first picture, in addition to Gribbon and Miss June, includes Dot Farley, Frank Bond, Josef Wsickard, Ernest Woods, Louis Dumar and Dorothy Hamilton.

Varges Starts on Tour for International News

Captain Ariel Varges, International News cameraman, sailed from New York last week for an extended tour abroad. He will cover pictures in the news for International News, as well as a number of special assignments, the nature of which have not been divulged.

Captain Varges only recently returned from a 250,000-mile globe trotting trip from which he furnished International innumerable interesting subjects.

Cliff Bowes, Virginia Vance and Sid Smith in the Educational-Cameo Single Reel comedy, "Dusty Dollars."

Educational's "Fun Shop" Series April 20

Nation wide publicity is expected by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., on the inauguration of its "Fun Shop" reel of humor edited by Maxson Fo hall Judell as it is stated that more than eighty newspapers will carry the material as a humor column, effecting what is expected to be a strong co-operative tie-up between newspapers and screen.

No clipped material will be used and prizes are offered to patrons of the theatres for puns submitted that are accepted.

Arthur Stone Engaged for Roach Comedies

When Arthur Stone's present vaudeville contract expires he is to appear in a series of comedies for Hal Roach to be distributed by Pathe. Stone portrays a "rube" character in the vaudeville skit, "The County Fair."

Pathe's current picture of the Chronicles of America series is "Gateway To The West." Some of the highlights from the Goldwyn production "Recoil."

New Roach Comedies on Pathe List April 20

ALTHOUGH the special feature release of Harold Lloyd's "Girl Shy" heads the Pathe April 20 schedule, added interest is shown in the first of a new group of Hal Roach single reel comedies featuring Earl Mohan and entitled "One At A Time."

"Hit The High Spots" is the two reel Spat Family comedy where the Tewksbury family under the guidance of Brother Ambrose don the equipment of Alpinists and go mountain-climbing.

"The Hollywood Kid" is a two-reel Sennett comedy picturing rival producers competing for the services of the "kid" star, enacted by Jackie Lucas, Charlie Murray has the role of Jackie's father.

"The Gateway to the West," the eighth of the "Chronicles of America" series, presents one of the episodes of the warfare waged between England and France for domination of the North American Continent.

"Sun and Snow," a Grantland Rice "Sportlight," contains a variety of scenes taken at Miami, Fla., and Lake Placid, N. Y.

"Ransom" is the fifth chapter of the Pathe serial, "Leatherstocking," and "A Trip To The Pole," is the Aesop Film Fable.

No. 16 of Pathe Review and Topics of the Day; and Pathe News editions Nos. 34 and 35 complete the Pathe April 20th program.

Two More Nighsmiths for Pathe

"Her Memory" and "The Guest," the second and third of the series of Will Nigh's Miniatures have been titled and edited and delivered to Pathe.

The fourth of Nigh's Miniatures is adapted from "One Way and Another," by Noble May, and is a story of New York's Bowery.

As "The Tumbleweed" will not be released until October the work on it will not be started until June after Will Nigh and the entire technical staff, shifted temporarily to produce "Born Rich" for Garrick Pictures, finish that production.

Luddy Starts Second With Pal, Dog-Star

Edward Luddy has started work as director on his second Century Comedy with Pal, the dog as the star. It is titled "Delivering The Goods" and was written by Luddy in collaboration with Leslie Murdock, his assistant. Henry Murdock, "Spec" O'Donnell, Gerry O'Dell and Marjorie Marcel have the leading parts.

Hal Roach's first Pathe Comedy featuring Earl Mohan in "One At A Time."

Century Announces Comedy Title Changes

Several title changes in recently completed comedies are announced by Century Film Corporation. The first Edward Luddy production made under the title of "Hikers" will be released as "Tired Business Men." The cast is made up of the Century Follies girls, Joe Bonner, Al Alt and Marjorie Marcel.

Al Herman's new Pal story originally called "Some Pal," has been changed to "Some Tail." Ernie Shields, Fred Spencer and Earl Marsh have leading roles.

"The Runaway Car" is now "Lost Control." Additional changes are expected on a number of comedies.

Universal Announces April Comedies

THREE reels of fun is scheduled by Universal for each of the four weeks of April in addition to the feature length pictures, the two International News Reels and the two-reel episodes of the current serial "The Fast Express," every seven days.

The program for April 7th, includes "The Spring of 1924," a one-reeler featuring Neely Edwards and Bert Roach. Alice Howell also takes an important role. The action concerns the woes of a family man forty years from now when the feminist movement will have reached its climax. The program also includes "Checking Out," a Century Comedy featuring Harry Sweet and Pal, the educated dog.

April 14th program offers the Edwards and Roach comedy "One Wet Night," and the Century Comedy "The Racing Kid," featuring Buddy Messinger.

Releases of the week beginning April 21 include "Green Grocers," a one-reel comedy featuring Slim Summerville and Bobby Dunn and "Pretty Plungers," a two-reel Century featuring the Century Follies Girls

The final April short subjects releases are "Politics," a one-reel comedy made by Summerville and Dunn; "A Lofty Marriage," a Century comedy featuring Jack Earle and Henry Murdock.

Thirteen Chronicles Are Already Completed

Although only eight of the Yale University Press Chronicles of America subjects have been released by Pathe, production work is more than keeping pace in the thirty-three episodes scheduled.

Thirteen of the subjects have already been completed by the producing organization or are now in the final stages of production.

One of the producing units has just returned from Yorktown, Va., where the famous battle of 1871, resulting in the surrender of Cornwallis to Washington, was re-enacted on the actual site of the engagement.

Several companies of United States Army infantrymen, costumed as American, British, and French soldiers, refought the great battle before the camera.

PROMISE and PERFORMANCE

Independent Pictures Corporation since the date of its inception has striven to supply the independent exchangemen and exhibitors and finally the public with the kind of motion pictures they want. It has been our aim to make our trade mark not merely a symbol, but a veritable guarantee of satisfaction and service, and it is with a pardonable measure of pride that we are able to say that we have fully met with our ambitions.

We have never gone in for the ridiculously lavish and extravagant type of production that has no appeal other than the ability to boast of unlimited cost.

Exchangemen, exhibitors and the public are no longer fooled by "A record breaking Broadway run" advertised in the trade papers. They know that New York City is not the United States of America, and that the successes accorded a fictitious New York Broadway showing is in no possible sense a criterion of a picture's true worth. These so called "classics" and "super features" cost a fortune, but, when finally given country wide distribution many of them fall flat.

It is not easy to make a good motion picture production and into each picture produced by my company I try to put all I know about motion picture productions, and happily the results proved themselves. We still place faith in a powerful story, an able cast, a competent director, and proper scenic investiture. Then a box office attraction is made—whether the picture costs Ten Thousand or a Million Dollars. Then—proper exploitation and advertising.

Our reputation for prompt service, whole hearted co-operation and a square deal will be steadfastly maintained.

The following pages record just a part of our out-put for 1924-1925.

Every production produced by us will be made under the personal supervision of the undersigned.

WE know that the eight FRANKLYN FARNUM super westerns stand in a class by themselves and we take a little measure of credit for the rapidity with which independent exchanges acquired them and theatres booked them, because we made the posters and they lessen sales resistance.

Our posters bring the public to the box office and that is where the money is taken in.

We are going to make the posters on the HELEN HOLMES special productions and we promise they will be the most powerful advertising medium ever circulated.

Exchangemen and theatre men never ask "what kind of posters have you got," if you merely say "Ritchey makes them."

CLAREMONT

Jesse Goldburg One of Industry's Pioneers

Jesse Goldburg.

THE present aggressive production activities of Independent Pictures Corporation, of which Jesse Goldburg is president, forms an interesting contrast to the company formed by Mr. Goldburg in the early days of the film industry—the days when the Motion Picture Patents Company and the General Film Corporation exercised a supreme dominion over the film business in this country. At that time Mr. oldburgh formed the Life Photo Corporation, the first state right or independent company to make pictures of feature lengths.

Ever since that time Mr. Goldburg has devoted himself to the production, exploitation and distribution of state right productions.

Two years ago Mr. Goldburg, convinced that the state right producers and distributors would come into their own and maintain a position as a vital element in the picture industry, formed the elaborate production plans which are now in operation by Independent Pictures Corporation. At that time a set policy to avoid the super special type of production in favor of high-class pictures based upon conservative production costs was initiated. At the same time the president of Independent Pictures determined to exercise a close supervision over the making of the pictures.

The system of personal supervision is said to have born fruit the success of Franklyn Farnum westerns produced by the Independent concern. The rule which Mr. Goldburg follows in direction of the activities of his company from the selection of the stories to the marketing of the product he has outlined as follows:

"In the selection of stories the effort is made to obtain scripts of literary merit. This element and the adaptibility of the play to picture presentation are given consideration over exploitation values; which, however, because of their importance are a factor to be kept in mind while searching material. The preparation of scenarios is also thoroughly gone over before casting and the preliminary details of production are started.

"In casting the effort to obtain types is not carried to the degree of neglecting the important point that players of reputation available should not be overlooked for proven ability counts. The construction of sets should strike a sane balance between the two extremes of striving for effect regardless of cost and small cost regardless of effect. When a production is planned and all its details have been thoroughly considered and checked up the filming is something which must be left in the hands of those actually engaged in the work."

Many New Independent Productions Ready

HELEN HOLMES, Miss Dupont and Franklyn Farnum are the stars who will appear in the new product from Independent Pictures Corporation. Miss Holmes, a favorite with a large following among the many fans who remember her as the heroine of numerous railroad melodramas, is to be featured in a series of society stunt melodramas; the first of which is now in production at the west coast studios of Independent Pictures under the direction of J. P. McGowan.

This series combined with the feature "What Three Men Wanted," in which Miss DuPont stars, and Franklyn Farnum in a series of western thrillers gives the Independent company the most imposing array of feature offerings it has sponsored since its organization by Jesse J. Goldberg, the president of the concern.

Independent Pictures have announced that in the production of the Helen Holmes pictures every effort will be made to bring to the states-right market features considerably above the level of the program feature standard in these new melodramas. To the end that the star's famous stunt performance may be seen against a background of appealing modern drama and scenic effects of distinction, provision has been made to supply the pictures with high class settings and carefully selected stories.

The production will be under the direction of the man who made the series of Franklyn Farnum pictures, J. P. McGowan. The Farnum series is complete and Mr. Goldberg of the Independent Pictures company has stated that they are in every detail up to the highest expectations with which they were regarded during the preliminary plans and the producing process.

With the features ready for release and those now in production the Independent Pictures Corporation officials feel that they are prepared to meet the demand of state-rights buyers for high class features and be in a position to partake of the prosperity which they are convinced is in store for independents in the immediate future.

Goldburg Plans Advertising Co-Operation

IN earnest of his belief that advertising co-operation is one of the vital and urgent needs in the present independent film market, Jesse J. Goldburgh, president of Independent Pictures Corporation, has planned an extensive campaign of trade paper and newspaper advertising for the ambitious production schedule on which his company is now engaged.

Mr. Goldburg is of the opinion that advertising is as essential to the final returns to be realized from productions as the pictures themselves. In announcing his new advertising policy Mr. Goldburg said:

"In my travels throughout the country I was continuously met with statements from exhibitors that they wanted to play Independent productions but that they did not know where to get them. This view was supported by the state right exchanges, the officials of which told me that since the exhibitor expects notification of new productions and the source of supply through trade papers it is essential that producer or national distributors include in either negative cost or sales price a sum sufficient to cover the investment required for trade paper advertising campaigns.

"Now, when the advertising cost is distributed among the various exchanges of the United States it is not as staggering a sum as it would otherwise appear to be.

We cannot expect our goods to move unless we shout about them from the "house tops." The house tops in this instance are the trade publications.

Whatever we say about pictures in our advertisements, if true, establish a good will that cannot be measured in dollars and cents and if false, has its own detrimental reaction.

Hence Independent Pictures Corporation, since it is in the state right production and distribution of motion pictures practically without limit, will, henceforth advertise 52 weeks in the year. When business is bad that is an additional reason to advertise; when it is good, then we certainly can afford to advertise."

Finds Note of Optimism Among Independents

ACCORDING to a survey of the state right market recently made by Jesse Goldburg there is a note of high optimism concerning the future of the independent productions on the part of distributors in that field. Mr. Goldburg, who is the president of Independent Pictures Corporation, is said to have made a rather extensive investigation of the state right field in an effort to determine the requirements of independent buyers in the near future.

"One of the most encouraging things to an independent producer," says Mr. Goldburg, "is the general confidence in the permanency of the state right method of production and distribution.

"Distributors and exhibitors alike regard the independent element of the industry as something definitely established on a sound, and healthy basis. The feeling that the cream of the productions was to be had only in the exchanges of national distributors. The fact that it has become common practice for a theater owner to walk into the exchange of a state right buyer and make a request for a specific production, proves that the sales resistance which has prevailed in the past has been broken down by production by independents of pictures that can compete with the best offered by national exhibitors and that when a state right picture of high merit is presented it receives the recognition due it. This naturally has greatly lessened the problems of the state right exchange man, for no longer is it necessary to carry on a continuous canvas and solicitation to get the product before the notice of the theater man.

The independent market is no longer the "step-child" of the industry. The methods of production and distribution together with that of sales and exploitation have been systematized. Legitimate capital is legitimately invested in state right productions and the market can well absorb and will continue to seek worth while state right attractions."

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger

Jesse Goldburg Will Make Flying Trip to Coast

Jesse J. Goldburg, president of Independent Pictures Corporation, is preparing to leave for his west coast studio at Los Angeles the end of next week to remain in Hollywood twenty-four hours. A telephone call from J. P. McGowan, Mr. Goldburg's director in charge of the Helen Holmes series, justifies the visit.

Upon Mr. Goldburg's return, it is expected he will have an announcement with respect to additional production plans.

Grand-Asher Lining Up New Productions

Samuel V. Grand, president of Grand-Asher, on his visit to the coast is signing a number of additional productions and reports and that the studio is humming with activity. Swickard productions are making "San Francisco" as the first of four features. R. William Neill is completing two of five features for Grand-Asher. Other productions are about ready to start, including Ethel Clayton's first offering, directed by Travers Vale.

"Daylight and Darkness" to be Released

Arthur Lee, president of the Lee-Bradford Corporation, stated that his company will soon release the first of a series of features by Bancroft Productions. It is entitled "Daylight and Darkness" and is from the stage play of the same name. The picture title will be changed before release.

Scenes from the William Steiner production "Surging Seas," which will be state righted.

Bathing Girl Unit for Century Comedies

CENTURY Comedies will launch a second Century Follies unit within the next two weeks, according to word from Julius and Abe Stern on the coast. The new unit will be confined to bathing girl comedies and will be under the supervision of Abe Stern, while Julius will continue his jurisdiction over the first unit, which will continue to make comedies against backgrounds of cabaret sets, theatres and revues.

Arrow Brings Mah-Jong to Screen

A VERY timely novelty film has been announced by W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Film Corporation. This is a Norman Jefferies production, titled "The Mysteries of Mah-Jong."

The picture opened at the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, last Monday, and the extraordinary success attending its initial public presentation is indicated in the following to President Shallenberger of the Arrow Company, by Jules Mastbaum of the Stanley Company. In reporting on the picture to the Arrow official, Mr. Mastbaum said:

"We paid the highest price ever for a two reel picture when we secured 'The Mysteries of Mah-Jong.' Its reception justified the good judgment of our outlay. The film is timely, novel, original, instructive and entertaining and so constructed as to please those who understand the game as well as those who do not. 'The Mysteries of Mah-Jong' will be found a welcome addition to any program for the various elements of entertainment as mentioned above."

The rapidly increasing interest in Mah-Jong all over the country that an exposition of its apparent mysteries so cleverly done, seems destined to draw phenomenally at any house where the slightest use is made of the many angles of exploitation which this picture offers.

"The Mysteries of Mah-Jong" shows in a clear and comprehensive way the uses of the 144 tiles, how the game is played, the counting and the highest possible score in one hand which is some 50,000,000.

This game is probably the cause of more discussions than oil leases or presidential possibilities. Arguments over disputed points, methods of play and Mah-Jong etiquette are widespread, long and bitter. The picture answers all these questions in a clear and forceful manner.

With newspapers, cartoonists, manufacturers, dealers and teachers all making quick and extensive profits from this craze, the theatre owner has been left out in the cold. This picture gives him every opportunity to cash in on the growing popularity of the game and get his share of the Mah-Jong money.

Mr. Norman Jefferies, an expert, has packed these two reels full of information, entertainment and comedy. The titles are unusually clever and the whole picture is a marvel of condensed enjoyment for the hardened Mah-Jong-er or the citizen who has been wondering what it is all about.

Says Exhibitors Must Support Independents

JOE BRANDT, President of C. B. C., who recently returned from a trip to the coast during which he made stop-overs at the principal cities enroute, states that the outstanding factor of present conditions as they affect the independent producers is found in an increasing tendency on the part of exhibitors to give their support to independents. This condition Mr. Brandt says is due to the fact that theater men have found that their figures have proved to them as only figures can that they could make real profits with independent productions. In discussing his trip and the present condition of the state rights market, Mr. Brandt said:

"The greatest problem which the exhibitor has always had to solve is that of protecting his house with a sufficient number of pictures of box-office drawing possibilities.

"The Independent producers demonstrated during the last season that they could manufacture product on a par with that of the program companies.

"The time has arrived when the exhibitor can safely feel that the Independent producers are able to give him a sufficient number of pictures each season to guarantee a steady supply. This is a matter of vital importance to the exhibitors. It is a condition that can be continued; but only if the exhibitors give the necessary amount of patronage to the Independent producers.

"The Independent producers collectively have shown their willingness to hire the best stars available, to buy the best stories possible, and to dress their pictures up so that they compare favorably with the pictures that are being offered by the program concerns. The Independent producers are ready to go the limit if they can only feel sure of steady patronage by the exhibitors.

There are any number of stars who are now under contract with the program companies who are willing to produce pictures under the Independent banner if the exhibitors will give them sufficient encouragement.

"The Independents will go ahead with producing plans that will relieve the exhibitor of the pressure of a limited and inadequate supply of money-making pictures if the exhibitors will give the Independents their just share of theater bookings and pay a fair rental. And a fair rental means something more than the 10 or 15 per cent of the gross business done by the exhibitors which is largely in effect at present.

"If we are to bring back into the theaters the thousands of people who have deserted the motion pictures the exhibitor must make up his mind to pay a fair rental so that the producer can manufacture product that will entertain the public and bring back to us the days when we could count on millions of motion picture fans. And the exhibitor must particularly make up his mind to give the real support to the Independent producers so that the program concerns will always feel that they have a source of competition and a standard of product they must meet if they are to secure the business of the up-to-date showman exhibitor.

Joe Brandt.

Report Demand For Tom Mix Special

EXCLUSIVE FEATURES, INC., report that the Tom Mix special being released by that concern under the title "Pals in Blue" is being greeted with a lively demand for territorial rights by state right buyers.

The picture, which stars this extremely popular interpreter of western characters at the head of a cast of familiar screen actors, is being vigorously exploited by Exclusive features, and the campaign has produced eminently satisfactory results according to statements of the officials.

"Pals in Blue" presents Tom Mix as the sheriff of a small town which includes in its colorful grouping of humans the good and the bad characters typical of the old west as it lives in tradition. The role provides opportunity for some emotional acting when the sheriff is forced to arrest his sweetheart's brother in connection with a mail robbery. This leads to a parting of the ways and the sheriff goes off to an outpost where he joins the forces fighting hostile Indians. The scenes showing the fights with the Indians are done on a large scale and employ many of the real Redskins.

The players supporting the star are Edwin Brady, Eugenie Forde, Al. Merrill and Eugenie Besserer. "Pals in Blue" has been re-titled and re-edited by Exclusive Features.

For exploitation of the picture Exclusive Features have issued a line of lithographs, lobby displays, cuts, mats, novelties and complete campaigns outlined in the press books.

Exclusive Features has concluded deals for the territorial rights to "Pals in Blue" with the following state right concerns:

Progress Pictures, Washington, D. C., for Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia and Delaware. The S. & S. Film Company for West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania. Specialty Film Company for Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma. Realto Productions for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey. Exclusive Features, Detroit, for the State of Michigan.

Harry Segal Buys Farnum Series for New England

Harry Segal, President of the Pioneer Film Corporation, with offices in Boston and New Haven, upon his arrival in New York on Wednesday, went straight to the offices of the Independent Pictures Corporation and signed contracts for the eight Franklyn Farnum super-westerns, produced and released by that company.

Mr. Segal is preparing to release the Farnums immediately. Mr. Segal has enlarged his publicity staff and is preparing an extensive and attractive campaign booklet for circulation among New England Theatres.

Finish "Meddling Women" With Barrymore, Godowsky

Lionel Barrymore has finished work in "Meddling Women" for Chadwick Pictures Corp., it is announced this week. Dagmar Godowsky, daughter of the noted pianist, appears opposite him in the leading feminine role.

M. J. Winkler

M. J. Winkler Takes Over New Cartoon Series

MISS MARGARET J. WINKLER, probably the pioneer woman distributor and a leader today in the Independent Short Subject field has received recognition from a source totally unexpected by her.

The Film Club of Boston, in existence since moving pictures first have been shown, issued a special invitation to Miss Winkler to make a speech before them. In her talk she told of the many hardships and difficulties she encountered in making "Felix," the cartoon cat, what it is today.

In addition to the "Felix" comics, Miss Winkler has taken over a series of combination cartoon and live character subjects known as "Alice Comedies" which are being made for her in Hollywood by Walt Disney; the Burton Holmes Travelogues; a series of two-reel kid pictures which are to be known as "Kid Kappers Komedies" and a further series of two-reel subjects based on the works of the nationally famed writer, Edgar A. Guest.

In a recent statement, Miss Winkler said that she could see a bright future in the short subject market.

"The courtesy and consideration shown me by all independent exchangemen with whom I have dealt have decided for me the fact that I will continue to distribute all my product in the state-right market and will continue to do so as long as my relations with my buyers are as pleasant as they have been and I hope this will continue for a long while," said Miss Winkler.

Independent to Release Five Reel Comedy in August

Though all arrangements were completed some time ago, Independent Pictures Corporation has just made announcement of the release by that concern in August of a five-reel burlesque comedy under the title "If Winter Goes." Raymond Griffith is the star and the picture is frankly "hokum" comedy. No attempt was made to produce anything but a straight laugh provoking five reeler replete with trick situations.

Jesse J. Goldburg, President of Independent Pictures, has made plans for a unique campaign to exploit "If Winter Goes."

Sees Opportunities For Independents

NEVER before in the history of the screen have States Rights productions had the brilliant opportunities now offere dthem, according to Irving M. Lesser, vice-president of and general manager of distribution for Principal Pictures Corporation.

"There will never be a monopoly in the motion picture field," says Mr. Lesser. "The reason for this is that it is, and always will be possible for anyone with brains and money to make a picture and then arrange for its distribution. The methods of distribution are (1) Through a regular releasing organization; (2) through the States Rights field.

"There is a steady improvement in the States Rights system. But there is still room for much more improvement. What we need among States Righters at present is a movement to give the producer an even break, or the same deal as he gets from one of the National releasing organizations.

"Such a movement is under way at present. And it soon will bear fruit. This is why I believe there are brilliant opportunities in the States Rights field.

"Our company has found the States Rights system an excellent sales medium because we follow this set policy in production: (1) Quality. This goes above everything. We aim at 100 per cent in quality of story, cast, production. (2) Liberal advertising. This is essential. If you have anything good you must let the public know it. (3) Fair dealing. Some people believe that motion pictures are a gamble pure and simple and go into them with that idea in view. Motion pictures are an investment that must be nurtured and watched and promoted. They are Big Business. And in all business you must have fair dealing or you are working without a foundation."

"For the present season Principal Pictures Corporation has five States Rights productions, which now are ready for release. They are

"Daring Youth"—Presented by B. F. Zeidman, with Bebe Daniels, supported by Norman Kerry, Lee Moran, Lillian Langdon and Arthur Hoyt. Directed by William Beaudine.

"Listen Lester"—Produced and presented by Sacramento Pictures Corporation. Adapted from John Cort's famous stage success which had a phenomenal run on Broadway. In the cast are Louise Fazenda, Eva Novak, Harry Myers, George O'Hara, Alec Francis, Lee Moran and Dot Farley. This is a farce comedy directed by William A. Seiter.

"The Masked Dancer"—Produced and presented by Eastern Productions, Inc., with Helen Chadwick and Lowell Sherman. Also in the cast are Leslie Austen, Joseph King, Arthur Housman, Charles Craig, Mme. Andree, Dorothy Kingdon, Miss Alyce Mills and Helen Ward. It was directed by Burton King.

"Daughters of Pleasure"—Produced and presented by B. F. Zeidman. Starring Marie Prevost and Monte Blue, supported by Clara Bow, Wilfred Lucas and Edyth Chapman. It presents a love story, dealing with modern social conditions and the "idle rich," and was directed by Wm. Beaudine.

"The Good Bad Boy"—Produced and presented by B. F. Zeidman, with Joe Butterworth and Mary Jane Irving. Brownie, the remarkable dog actor also is seen in the production. The story of a boy who tried to do the right thing but always got in wrong in the attempt, it was directed by Eddie Cline, who directed Jackie Coogan in "Circus Days."

Pre-release Reviews of Features

North of Nevada

(Harry J. Brown Production—F. B. O.—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

YOU'VE got to hand the producers of this western credit for one thing. They have got action into their effort. Western pictures will always be popular with a certain clientele and some one must supply them. This one is as good as most of them. It has several real thrills and some very fine riding. In fact, a horse named "Silver King," comes close to galloping away with the star honors through some almost human work. One of his stunts is a dive from a high cliff.

There are thrilling sequences furnished through the race between the hero and a half breed Indian, the former to try and stop and the latter to attempt to persuade the girl to sign "the papers." When the Injun starts across a deep ravine via an abandoned aerial car and the hero jumps onto a rope hanging from the bottom of car — with the rope beginning to break when the car gets in the middle of the cut — well, the patrons are certain to register excitement.

Fred Thomson, the star, works hard to put his stuff over and succeeds. He is a clean cut actor and some day we'll see him doing better things. He puts up a couple of good fights with the "gang" and stages an exciting rescue of a man in a carriage attached to two runaway broncos. Hazel Keener is adequate as the heroine and Taylor Graves is satisfactory in a silly role. Josef Swickard appears for a few moments as does Wilfred Lucas. Chester Conklin is also in the cast but doesn't do much. There are some attractive exteriors and the photography is good.

THEME. A straight western in which the "gang" tries to get the valuable water right from the new owners of the ranch but are thwarted by the foreman who wins the girl after some hard battles.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fight between the foreman and the half-breed. The ride across the ravine in the aerial car. The hard riding scenes. The jump of the horse from a high bluff into the river. The runaway horses and the rescue of the brother by the foreman.

DIRECTION. Has done well with the material at hand and is to be congratulated on supplying the thrills through the use of the horse. Has also injected a number of exciting episodes and some good fights. Has put over a good climax which is sure to satisfy the western-type fans.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Be sure and play up the work of Silver King, the horse and his thrilling stunts. Tell them of the exciting fights and the great riding. Play up the names of Thomson, Chester Conklin, Josef Swickard and Wilfred Lucas. They are all well known.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for smaller downtown houses catering to audiences that like westerns.

SUMMARY. A western picture that is well produced, has a goodly quota of thrills and possesses novelty through the introduction of a horse that is a real stunt performer. The cast is also good.

THE CAST

Tom Taylor	Fred Thomson
Miriam Ridgway	Hazel Keener
Mark Ridgway	Josef Swickard
Reginald Ridgway	Taylor Graves
Bill Hanneford	Wilfrid Lucas
"Red"	Joe Butterworth
"Sam"	Chester Conklin
Jo Deerfoot	George Magrill

Directed by Harry J. Brown. Photographed by Ross Fisher Presented by Monogram Pictures Corporation.

SYNOPSIS. When Mark Ridgway dies he leaves his ranch property to his niece and nephew, eastern society folks. The property is valuable because it has some fine water rights, which are coveted by an unscrupulous gang. Tom Taylor, Ridgway's foreman, decides to remain under the new ownership, especially when he meets Miriam. The gang through a half breed get to the brother and almost succeed in getting the water right but are thwarted by Tom after some real fights, hard riding, etc. Tom wins Mirian after he ships the brother back east.

Racing Luck

(Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS picture is going to put Monty Banks several notches up the ladder of comedy fame. It is the star's first feature length funfilm and it looks like a winner. The big feature of the production is the auto race in the last reel. This is undoubtedly one of the funniest things screened in many moons.

The idea is novel to begin with. A large auto maker signs up a young Italian thinking that he is a famous foreign racing driver. In reality he is absolutely ignorant on the subject of automobiles. However, he starts out in a big speedster in the road race, after the villain has fixed the car so it can't be stopped. Well, once he gets started nothing can stop driver or car. It goes through barns, fences, fields, leaps great divides, dashes along railroad ties, etc., wins the race and comes to a stop against a tree with the driver landing in the branches. It is a fast and furious flight.

The production opens with some well staged scenes in Italy, then switches to America where the young Italian has a terrible time in the auto traffic. Arriving at his uncle's restaurant he meets The Girl and falls. He also meets the villain. Immediately fighting starts and there are several snappy battles throughout the film, especially the free-for-all in the cabaret. There is more fun as Mario is taught how to drive a flivver. In fact the picture is filled with hilarious action and if the whole could be cut to five reels instead of six, livening up the opening footage, it would be close to perfection for its type.

The cast has been well selected. Monty puts his stuff over in good shape and he is given good support by Helen Ferguson, who is a charming Italian belle.

THEME. Comedy dealing with rise to fame of a young Italian who is mistaken for a famous foreign racing driver and signed up to participate in the big event of the season.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The auto race which is a classic of comedy craftsmanship. The work of Monty Banks as the young Italian and the good supporting cast. The dance scenes in the cabaret. The battle royal in the dining emporium.

DIRECTION. Has succeeded in putting a number of original gags into the picture and has kept the action up well after the first two reels which should have been shortened.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Try and get a large racing car and put a couple of men in it dressed in racing attire. Drive this craft through the streets with appropriate advertising.

DRAWING POWER. O. Keh for some downtown houses, community theatres and the towns. It will make anybody laugh, so you can feel safe in booking it.

SUMMARY. Monty Banks has accomplished a very creditable piece of work in his first feature-length comedy effort. He puts over a race that is a wow from a comedy viewpoint.

THE CAST

The Boy	Monty Banks
The Girl	Helen Ferguson
The Mother	Martha Franklin
The Father	D. Mitzoras
The Uncle	Lionel Belmont
Tony Mora	Francis MacDonald
Cafe Proprietor	William Blaisdell
Members of Tony's Gang	Al Martin
	Al Thompson
	Ed Carlie
	Joe Scaduto

By Gene Havez and Lex Neal. Directed by Herman C. Raymaker. Photographed by Ray June.

SYNOPSIS. Mario Bianchi leaves his parents in Italy to seek fame and fortune in America. He goes to live with his uncle who runs a restaurant. There he meets the Girl. Mario wins the enmity of the leader of a powerful gang who has the former fired from every job he gets. Then a motor car manfacturer publishes a snapshot of Mario as being the new foreign driver they've engaged. A rival, however, gets Mario to sign with him. He has never driven an auto but he starts in the great road race and, of course, wins the race, the girl and a wad of money.

The Enchanted Cottage

(Inspiration—First National—7926 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a picture of rare charm — one which will weave a spell of enchantment through its inspiring theme and the lofty idea it expresses — that romance can be made perfect when two forlorn people, through the illusion of love, are made to seem beautiful to each other. It carries a fine glow of sentiment free from any saccharine coating — and the sympathetic treatment of its subject — coupled with its surging heart note — makes it a vital, vibrant and compelling drama. Here is an innovation — an experiment because it capitalizes the eternal theme that in the eyes of love all things are beautiful.

The two unfortunates of this post-war romance find a sympathetic bond in each other. The boy is hopelessly crippled, the girl, an ugly little governess — and they despise themselves until love comes — bringing with it a transformation. They have encountered nothing but pathos and tragedy — but with their love's awakening they see with an inner sight which speaks of the soul.

To tell this story with such simplicity and yet establish the fact that they are victims of an illusion took courage. They are perfect only in each other's eyes — and when they are transported by love we see them as they see each other. Such an idea offers much better material for picturization than as a spoken play.

It is a picture which needed delicate treatment — and an appreciation of its sheer romance — and this it has received from John Robertson, the director, and Josephine Lovett, who adapted Pinero's play to the screen. Any digression of plot would have ruined it. There are no pretentions. It is told simply and forcefully. The director takes us to a snug, little English wayside cottage — and with a fine sensitiveness treats us to a sacred romance. He thrills us, too, when the lovers would reveal themselves as beautiful — only to appear drab and ugly to those who do not see with their eyes. And Richard Barthelmess presents a study of the cripple — that registers with cameo clearness — that moves us with its sympathy and feeling. And May McAvoy, submerging her personality, enacts the plain, little drudge with keen insight and understanding. Seeing her the sensitive patron will suffer with her. There is fine support offered by Holmes E. Herbert who, as a sightless comrade, aids in weaving the charm of illusion — and Florence Short's sketch of an unsympathetic realist. The picture is inspiring, enchanting and sincere. It should move any audience — because it is all very well done — all very fine.

THEME. Romance of two forlorn lovers who, through illusions of love, are made to seem beautiful to each other.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fine characterizations by Mr. Barthelmess and Miss McAvoy. The sympathetic note. The sentiment. The illusion which makes the lovers beautiful to each other. The scene of disillusionment carrying great suspense. The charming atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Treats this lofty idea with fine appreciation and keen sensitiveness. Does not digress from theme — and tugs at heartstrings with simple, direct touches. Gets unusually fine results from players.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as Barthelmess' greatest acting vehicle. Play up its theme and exploit it as unforgettable picture. Tie up with Legion posts. Play up its charm and simplicity. Put on dignified prologue. Put it over as big as you can.

DRAWING POWER. Should appeal with sensitive patrons everywhere.

SUMMARY. A most charming picture, told with fine simplicity and naturalness — which carries a perfect love story — and is exceptionally acted by star and Miss McAvoy — not forgetting a capable supporting cast. Carries fine sentiment — and a strong love interest.

THE CAST

Oliver Bashforth ..... Richard Barthelmess
Mrs. Smallwood ..... Ida Waterman
Rupert Smallwood ..... Alfred Hickman
Ethel Bashforth ..... Florence Short
Beatrice Vaughn ..... Marion Coakley
Major Murray Hillgrove ..... Holmes E. Herbert
Laura Pennington ..... May McAvoy
Mrs. Minnett ..... Ethel Wright

By Sir Arthur Wing Pinero. Adapted by Josephine Lovett. Directed by John S. Robertson.

SYNOPSIS. War veteran, hopelessly crippled, breaks engagement with boyhood sweetheart and retires to cottage in the woods. He meets a homely little governess and marries her. They despise themselves at first but through the illusion of love which transforms ugliness into beauty, they see each other as perfect.

Which Shall It Be?

(Hoffman—Hodkinson—4600 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT is a picture which radiates sentiment and charm. There is a fragrant, wistful appeal about its tender little story which is certain to find healthy response everywhere. Here is a picture which radiates love and affection — which capitalizes "home sweet home" in a manner that will bring a tug to the heart and a tear to the eye — and yet it is balanced with quaint humor that will bring a smile to the mouth. It speaks a language that will be understood in every clime — because of its universal theme.

It portrays quietly — without any recourse to hokum, tense action, villainy or other dramatic properties and inventions — a thread of sentiment which has to do with the love of parents for their children — parents who work themselves to the bone to provide for them. There is a charm about it — which suggests a lazy summer afternoon in the country. The atmosphere of a Vermont farm projects a quiet rusticity that glows with a homely quality.

Renaud Hoffman, the adaptor and director, who chose his subject from a poem "Not One to Spare," by Mrs. E. L. Beers — which appeared in the Fourth Readers a quarter of a century ago, understands children. He also understands the simple virtues of mankind. It may be that he started out to make a short subject—but the idea took on breadth — and wishing to exploit the homely qualities, the picture became one of feature length. It is not too long if one appreciates its sweet simplicity — its "Out-to-old-Aunt Mary's" character. Mr. Hoffman has used commendable tact in fashioning this sentimental piece. It resembles a pastel drawing of a quiet day at a farm.

Peace and contentment are in this home. The farmer's brother has met with financial success, but his heart is lonely. In his old age he wished for the patter of little feet — the caress of little hands. So he offers the father of seven children an estate and an allowance for one of the youngsters if he will consent to having the child adopted by him. The parents visit the children as they lie tucked in bed. And they cannot give up a single one.

No drama here—is there? Yet it carries a big heartbeat—considerable pathos, rich humanity — and real tenderness. Seduction, villainy—and melodramatic red meat are absent. And so it is different. And so it will succeed — because it is tender and human.

THEME. Homespun study in parental love with parents solving the problem of giving up one of their children by refusing to part with a single child.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fine sentiment. The heart appeal. The freedom of hokum. The rustic atmosphere. The even performances by players — and the naturalness of the children. The scene when parents visit the children as they lie in bed. The homespun humanities.

DIRECTION. Has treated it with fine simplicity — keeping away from any suggestion of hokum. The repression. The homespun touches employed to give it genuine sentiment have carefully established the heart appeal.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature it as a simple little heart study which will tug at the emotions. Make a play for feminine patronage. Build up campaign on what it means to have children in the home.

DRAWING POWER. Sure-fire audience picture — especially with feminine patrons. Particularly suitable for neighborhood houses and small towns.

SUMMARY. An effective little heart study — this, which releases a fine glow of sentiment — which is free from any display of hokum — which tells its charming story with great simplicity and touching heart appeal. Rather slight for its footage — but homespun touches keep interest sustained.

THE CAST

John Moore ..... Willis Marks
Mrs. Moore ..... Ethel Wales
Robert Moore ..... David Torrence
Musicmaster ..... Paul Weigel
The Children: Mary McLane, Billy Bondwin, Newton Hause, Miriam Ballah, Dick Winslow, Buck Black, Thayer Strain.

Based on poem by Mrs. E. L. Beers. Adapted and directed by Renaud Hoffman.

SYNOPSIS. Parents on farm in Vermont have seven children to whom they are greatly devoted. The father has wealthy brother who pleads to have one of the youngsters given to him in order to drive away his loneliness. He will reward them with riches. The parents visit their children as they lie asleep and because of their love for them decide to keep them.

Bluff

(Paramount—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

ANOTHER entertaining comedy drama of New York life is here. It is just light and airy enough for warm weather showing and contains enough drama to satisfy those who crave for the heavier sort of film fare. Set against a background of Gotham's hotels, modiste's ateliers and the haunts of the idle rich, it is a picture which has given Sam Wood opportunity to put over some of those lavish interiors for which he is noted. The apartment of the heroine in the Palace hotel in the last word in elaborate mountings.

The story had to do with the power of "bluff" in putting yourself over. And a subtitle sets forth that bluff is the only thing that New York understands. A nice crack at the metropolis but true only according to your point of view. Taking advantage of this condition a beautiful girl, who heretofore has been unable to gain an audience to display her fashion designs, bluffs herself across to such an extent that the modistes get on their knees for the designs. And then just when the girl thinks she has attained her object, a detective steps in and she lands in police headquarters and almost in the "pen"—but then the attractive attorney appears and, true to form, saves the situation and wins the girl.

Agnes Ayres is an attractive Betty Hallowell, the girl who decides to get even with New York through bluffing the town to think that she is the famous Nina Loring, missing London beauty. Miss Ayres wears some striking costumes during the action of the story. Antonio Moreno is a satisfactory attorney. The rest of the cast has been well selected, especially Clarence Burton and Fred Butler both of whom sure do look the parts of police-political hard boiled eggs.

THEME. A society comedy drama showing how a poor girl bluffed her way into fame and fortune and won a prominent attorney for a husband.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting of Miss Ayres and the admirable support of the rest of the cast. The scenes attending Betty's introducing herself as the famous Nina Loring and the moments dealing with the rush of the big modistes to buy her fashion designs. The arrest of Betty and her rescue by Fitzmaurice who bluffs the big boss into coming through with $20,000 for the girl. The elaborate background given the picture.

DIRECTION. Has injected considerable heart interest into this rather diverting tale and has succeeded in holding one's attention for the entire six reels, which by the way, is a very sensible length for the picture. He has eliminated all padding.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Plaster the town with the title. It is a striking one. Stencil it on the sidewalks and streets. Put on a fashion show in co-operation with some department or style store. Play up the names of Agnes Ayres and Antonio Moreno.

DRAWING POWER. Just the type of picture for presentation in downtown first run houses during the coming warm weather months. Also suitable for the better community houses and the towns.

SUMMARY. Set in an air of class and distinction, this picture will undoubtedly attract business because it has much appeal for the woman. Agnes Ayres is attractive and wears some striking gowns. Antonio Moreno plays opposite her. The cast is almost perfect as to type. A good film to offer as summer entertainment.

THE CAST

Betty Hallowell	Agnes Ayres
Robert Fitzmaurice	Antonio Moreno
"Boss" Kitchell	Fred Butler
Jack Hallowell	Roscoe Karns
Waldo Blakely	Clarence Burton
Fifine	Pauline Paquette
Dr. Steve Curtiss	Jack Gardner

By Rita Weiman and Josephine Quirk. Directed by Sam Wood. Scenario by Willis Goldbeck. Photographed by Alfred Gilks.

SYNOPSIS. Up against it for money with which to give her brother proper medical aid after he has been crippled by "Boss" Kitchell, Betty Hallowell decides to pass herself off as Nina Loring, an English beauty. At her apartment she is swamped by modistes desiring to buy her fasion designs because of the notoriety connected with the Loring name. The police, however, get on Betty's track and arrest her on a charge of embezzlement for which Miss Loring is wanted overseas. Betty is saved by a lawyer, who intervenes and "bluffs" off the "Boss".

Excitement

(Universal—4913 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

UNIVERSAL'S new star, Laura La Plante, is projected in a farce-comedy here — which because of its slapstick hokum widely misses the mark as a laugh-getter. Of course one must take into consideration that the loud pedal is used throughout — there being no evidence of repression in pointing characterization or incident. It is as if the director took an exaggerated script and ordered his cameraman to turn the crank — without paying attention to the fact that there must be rhyme and reason — even in farcical trimmings.

The idea revolves around the taming of a spirited girl who is the despair of her parents and several swains who would win her. The slapstick sprouts begin early — with the heroine ordering the admirers to jump through their paces. These episodes are amateurish — much after the style of high school dramatics. They make an exit when the hero is introduced — and true to the movie formula — he doubles up his fists when he sees the girl running away from a persistent suitor and punishes the youth. Indignant heroes who resort to bad manners don't belong in farce! A quick courtship follows — but the wife refuses to be domesticated. She runs away and meets with a series of crazy adventures.

The action is so wild — so exaggerated with pointless hokum, that we expected the dream situation would be utilized. It is a surprise to see it left out — because the happenings are so utterly haphazard. The heroine answers a want ad. which gives her a job as attendant to a wealthy spinster whose mania is Egyptology. This woman has scheming suitors who would marry her for her bankroll — and it is the girl's duty to interest them. Much of the incident is stupid — seldom is it funny. But there is a laugh when the heroine enclosed in a mummy case is carried aloft in an airplane. The case falls out — but is picked up by the plane before it reaches the ground. There's hokum for you — hokum which suggested the employment of the dream situation which never materializes.

In the end she gets her fill of excitement — though the finish brings in some more slapstick as the dinner guests upset the table. Miss La Plante has too many close-ups — but her work is spirited enough. Her support is incompetent insofar as being able to project humor.

THEME. Comedy-drama based upon girl's craving for excitement and being tamed by her husband.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The lively action. The airplane episode. The spirited performance by star.

DIRECTION. Uses slapstick methods to provide laughs and thrills — and overshoots his scenes. Might have used more repression to give it balance. Some of the episodes are amateurish. Permits players to overact.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill it as comedy romance of spirited girl who is tamed by forceful husband. Play up Universal's new star and her attractive personality. Use a teaser campaign asking patrons how they would tame a spirited girl. Make a play on fact that everybody craves excitement.

DRAWING POWER. Best for program houses.

SUMMARY. Here is a comedy romance which is overdone in every particular. Emphasis is laid on heavily — and the action is of the slapstick variety. Carries titles which are of the "wise crack" style. Much of the action is farfetched and pointless — with hokum in rich display. Cast lacks comedy players.

THE CAST

Nila Lyons	Laura La Plante
Arthur Drew	Edward Hearn
Hiram Lyons	William Welsh
Mrs. Lyons	Frances Raymond
Eric Orton	Fred De Silva
Violet Smith	Margaret Gullington
Abner Smith	Albert Hart
Willie Winkle	Rolfe Sedan
Toby	Bert Roach
Freddie	Stanley Blystone
Roger Cove	Lon Poff
Chester Robbins	George Fisher
"Mammy"	Fay Tincher

By Crosby George. Scenario by Hugh Hoffman. Directed by Robert F. Hill.

SYNOPSIS. Spirited girl, the despair of her parents, has plenty of suitors among the boys—and plenty of enemies among the girls because of her popularity. Meets a forceful youth who marries her. He is unable to tame her—and she leaves home. After experiencing several wild adventures she is glad to settle down—and be a dutiful wife.

Broadway After Dark
(Warner Brothers—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

WARNER BROTHERS are to be congratulated on the excellent manner with which they have transplanted Owen Davis' famous old melodrama of New York life to the screen. The story has been thoroughly modernized and mounted in lavish style. It is entertainment plus. The picture starts off with some unusual shots of The Great White Way as the incandescents are "turned on," and then we are taken to the Actors Equity Association ball and given glimpses of Raymond Hitchcock, Fred Stone and daughter, Dorothy, Mary Eaton, Elsie Ferguson, Florence Moore, James J. Corbett, Paul Whiteman, Buster West, Irene Castle, Ann Pennington, and other celebrities of the stage. These views will arouse much interest as "the folks back home" recognize the stars.

After the ball the audience is entertained with some shots of those much talked-of New York studio parties where we meet the principals of the cast. All these scenes are done a la jazz and there is much pep and snap in the footage. Contrasts between existence in the boarding house district and life in Fifth Avenue will afford much merriment and the folks in the "Main Streets" of the nation are going to be surprised at the lengths to which a Gotham rounder goes when taking his "hawth."

The story holds the interest at all times and is enacted by a very fine cast. Adolphe Menjou is an ideal son of Broadway and repeats his success in "A Woman of Paris." Norma Shearer is a charming and vivacious Rose Dulane. Anna Q. Nilsson and Carmel Myers wear a young fortune in gowns and the latter and Mr. Menjou inject considerable feeling in several love scenes. We wish Willard Louis, who gave such a splendid account of himself as the prince in "Beau Brummel," might have had more to do.

The picture has its moments, in fact, there are several dramatic situations and quite a novel ending which brings everything to a satisfactory

THEME. An adaptation of the Owen Davis society melodrama showing New York life as it is today — mostly at night.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The novel opening showing the stars at the Actors' Equity association ball. The syncopated studio parties. The work of Adolphe Menjou, Norma Shearer, Carmel Myers and Anna Q. Nilsson. The lavish interiors. The striking gowns worn by the feminine players. The comedy moments in the boarding house scenes.

DIRECTION. Monta Bell has squeezed all that was possible out of the old stage play. He has made a modern picture filled with real entertainment and novelty. He has awakened interest at the start and held it to the end.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the shots of the stars at the Equity ball, the views of the Great White Way, the names of the well-known players and the jazz studio parties. Tell your patrons that if they want to see New York life as it really is, here's the chance.

DRAWING POWER. Should pull them in at any house.

SUMMARY. Enacted by a good cast, mounted in an attractive manner and possessing real novelty from beginning to end. This picture should create much interest wherever shown. It is a high-class modernization of one of the old Owen Davis mellers.

THE CAST

Ralph Norton	Adolphe Menjou
Rose Dulane	Norma Shearer
Helen Tremaine	Anna Q. Nilsson
Jack Devlin	Edward Burns
Lenore Vance	Carmel Myers
Mrs. Smith	Vera Lewis
"Slim" Scott	Willard Lewis
Carl Fisher	Mervyn LeRoy
Ed Fisher	Jimmy Quinn
The old actor	Edgar Norton
Vera	Gladys Tennyson
The Chorus Girl	Ethel Miller
Norton's Valet	Otto Hoffman

Based on the play by Owen Davis. Directed by Monta Bell. Adapted by Douglas Doty. Photographed by Charles Van Enger.

SYNOPSIS. Rose Dulane, a worker in a restaurant, is framed by a detective in whom she confides and is "sent up." On being released she gets a job in a cheap theatrical boarding house. Ralph Norton, sickened by the superficiality, of Broadway decides to try life among new people. He lands in the boarding house district where he meets Rose and saves her from the detective and others who continue to hound her.

The Moral Sinner
(Paramount—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

STORIES of a crook's redemption are ever with us. We cannot expect any value of surprise when the climax arrives so the interest is usually held through the characterization and the melodramatic details. This picture served on the stage as a vehicle for Mrs. Fiske, its original title being "Leah Kleschna,"— and it has even served on the screen before, with Paramount as the producers. Being a good sample of its kind its sponsors deemed it valuable enough to picturize again. But since it was first shown, the idea has formed the background of innumerable film melodramas exploiting the redemption of crooks.

When the central figure is a girl suppressed by a domineering father — who is an unwilling party to his schemes, the crook is certain to inspire sympathy. The outcome is invariably the same. Along comes a detective from headquarters (he may even be working independently) and it's a certainty that under the spell of his debonair manner — his savoir faire, as it were, she will fall in love with him and find redemption. These officers never arrest these girls because they also catch the romantic spark. But James Rennie, in trying to maintain a dignified poise, places the entire burden upon Dorothy Dalton — and her performance is vital enough even if it does become a trifle monotonous. She does not vary her mood — which is that of a girl bowed down with sadness over her unhappy life.

As the characters are much more interesting than the plot — a little variety of shading would have helped things all around. Ralph Ince plays safe. He does not overstress the action — but injects just enough incident to hold the attention of the spectator.

Miss Dalton receives competent support from Alphonse Ethier in the role of the father, while Frederick Lewis and a few others are inclined to "mug" their expressions. "The Moral Sinner?" A fair enough picture of its kind.

THEME. Crook melodrama revolving around thief's daughter who follows her father's stealthy profession until she falls in love with young criminologist. Her redemption is assured.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The good continuity furnished by J. Clarkson Miller. The conflict between heroine and her father. The planting of the romance. The subdued acting by principals — which suggests suspense. The scene when heroine is regenerated. The good atmosphere. Scene when girl crook is caught.

DIRECTION. Has managed to sustain a fair amount of interest in time-worn plot — and by using soft pedal gets in some good suspense. The moment when girl decides to go straight carries a "kick." Provides satisfactory action, detail and backgrounds.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as adaptation of famous play which was starred in by Mrs. Fiske. Mention that Dorothy Dalton returns to screen after long absence. Bill it as crook story of redemption — and use the old bromide for a teaser —"there's a little bit of good in the worst of us." Come to the ——— Theatre and see "The Moral Sinner."

DRAWING POWER. For average houses everywhere.

SUMMARY. This story has been ground through the movie mill many, many times — and it has lost some of its appeal. The plot never varies — but it is competently treated so that the interest is sustained. Miss Dalton, Mr. Rennie and Mr. Ethier contribute good work. Several of the others stress the importance of their roles.

THE CAST

Leah Kleschna	Dorothy Dalton
Paul Sylvain, a criminologist	James Rennie
Anton Kleschna, Alias Garnier	Alphonse Ethier
Schram, his confederate	Frederick Lewis
Raoul Berton, a scapegrace son	W. I. Percival
General Berton	Paul McAllister
Claire Berton	Florence Fair

Adapted from play by C. M. S. McLellan. Adapted by J. Clarkson Miller. Directed by Ralph Ince.

SYNOPSIS. Treats of the daughter of notorious criminal of Paris, who under her father's guidance, commits many thefts. She is unwilling to carry out his nefarious schemes—but through fear of his evil associates is forced to lead a criminal life. When a young criminologist tracks down the father, the girl falls in love with him. He surprises her robbing his home—but her redemption is assured—and she returns the gems which were really stolen by another.

A Man's Mate

(Fox—5041 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

EVERY once in a while screen writers turn to medicine and surgery for inspiration — and the ideas usually revolve around a man's loss of memory and a subsequent operation which restores it. Here is a picture which treats of this familiar subject and while it is competently handled in a technical manner it fails to convince in several of its important details.

We have a youth who loses his memory when struck down by an apache — who falls in love with a girl from the Paris underworld and, though he has only a hazy recollection of her, the operation restores his memory, and his sub-conscious mind which had functioned all the time, attracts him to her. Result? A renewal of the romance.

There is quite a lot of hectic action — the first suggestion of it being revealed when the hero receives his knock-out from an apache, known as the Lynx — who has mixed it up with another apache known as the Lion. The cause of the trouble is the heroine who is known as the Wildcat. The innocent victim, remembering nothing of the incident, becomes an apache though his sub-conscious mind inspires him to pursue his talents as an artist. He has fallen in love with the Wildcat who, in discovering his identity, restores him to his family and consents to an operation on his brain even though she knows it will make him forget her.

For the purposes of the plot, his memory is restored to such an extent — that he obeys the sub-conscious urge to return to his sweetheart. So he wanders back to his old haunts and rescues her from the apaches. It is easy to guess the outcome of this story — it having been done so often — but it holds the attention through the conscientious performance by John Gilbert — and the adaptability and attractiveness of Renee Adoree in the role of the heroine. The supporting players are competent enough. The underworld atmosphere is suggestive and the rural exteriors are picturesque. Because of its heart interest—established through the romance it is certain to appeal to audiences in program theatres.

THEME. Melodrama of Paris underworld projecting romance built around youth losing his memory as he is felled in fight over girl. She makes impression on his sub-conscious mind — and when his memory is restored there is a romance.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The good work contributed by star — and the effective performance by Renee Adoree. The realistic bit contributed by Noble Johnson. The fight in the cafe. The fast action. The underworld atmosphere. The rural shots.

DIRECTION. Takes obvious plot and holds interest through making characters dominant. Also attracts attention with its details and incident. Keeps it moving — and you forget its obviousness. Gets good effects with backgrounds, etc. Handles players in competent fashion.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Would mention good acting vehicle for John Gilbert. Also play up Renee Adoree — who possesses considerable talent and charm. Bill it as fast-moving drama of Paris underworld. Play up a woman's sacrifice in helping the man she loves. Put on an apache dance number for a prologue.

SUMMARY. A fairly effective melodrama — which, while on an old theme, manages to hold one's attention because of its dominant characterization. The details are well arranged. It is not convincing in several of its scenes, but it has been treated with good dramatic values.

THE CAST

Paul	John Gilbert
Wildcat	Renee Adoree
Lion	Noble Johnson
M. Bonard	Wilfrid North
Father Pierre	Thomas Mills
Verzign	James Neill
Lynx	John Giddings
Sybil	Patterson Dial

Story and adaptation by Charles Kenyon. Directed by Edward Mortimer.

SYNOPSIS. Young artist enters Paris underworld cafe and is felled by an apache who runs away from his enemy — also an apache, both men being admirers of heroine. The artist loses his memory as a result of the blow — and becomes an apache. Falls in love with girl and paints her portrait. She takes him to his people and consents to an operation to restore his memory even though it will make him forget her. But his sub-conscious mind attracts him to his sweetheart—and romance triumphs.

Mrs. Dane's Confession

(F. B. O.—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WE have pretty crude melodrama in this foreign-made picture which carries on in the style of the unimspired European directors, the sensational stuff that they imagine constitute dramatic fare. So we have a sordid tale of a titled rake, his unhappy wife, a discarded lover — with the usual trimmings — indicating murder, blackmail, a jury trial — and what not. It is sensational all the way — with undue emphasis placed upon showing the theatries, which have long since been discarded by sensitive, imaginative directors on this side of the Atlantic.

In fact it is stagey in its characterization and situations. It sticks to its artificial atmosphere throughout — and the acting does not help in bringing in any suggestion of naturalness. It may have some exploitation values in the presence in the cast of Count Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraeten who gained considerable newspaper publicity through his marriage to the heiress of the H. H. Rogers fortune — Millicent Rogers.

The stars at work in our studios need not register jealousy over the Count's histrionic talent. His is only ordinary ability. But because he has been well publicized there is some reason to believe that exhibitors who book the picture (it may get by in the cheaper houses or where there is a daily change of bill or where it is strengthened by good short subjects) may profit by exploiting him and the marriage. There are several close-ups which indicate that they were added as an after-thought — inasmuch as foreign-made films do not go in for them.

The Count plays the role of a suave villain, who is a devil incarnate in his parade through the picture. He vamps a girl causing her to jilt her lover, marries her to gain her fortune, kills her father — and gets away with it. When she gets a divorce and marries another man — she is happy for a time. But wait. The Count reappears — with blackmail in his heart. When he threatens to take the child, she kills him. A sympathetic jury bring in a verdict of acquittal. Crude stuff, this — and crudely directed. The Count struts and poses in a graceless manner — and Lucy Doraine, while possessing an attractive personality, overstresses her emotions. The photography and lighting are of a poor quality.

THEME. Melodrama of innocent girl who is victimized into marriage by unscrupulous admirer, who stops at nothing to gain her wealth. He is killed when attempting to steal her child.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The charming personality of Lucy Doraine. The consistent devilishness of the villain, a character without a spark of virtue. The effort to build up story interest with titles.

DIRECTION. Is of the style of the stagey European school — which is still in evidence in many importations. Overstresses action, placing emphasis upon all the crudities. Makes players overact.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. As the players here are unknown with the exception of Lucy Doraine — who has appeared in several European importations, their names do not carry any advertising value. The best angle is to exploit Count von Hoogstraeten who received much publicity in marrying Millicent Rogers. If you have saved the newspapers which featured the marriage use the "copy."

DRAWING POWER. For the cheaper houses — but needs support from strong comedy.

SUMMARY. A crude, stagey melodrama, conceived and executed in the manner affected by several European directors. Old-fashioned treatment, long since discarded in this country. Has hectic villainy running rampant throughout action. Capitalizes crime and is unconvincing. Overemphaszed and over-played. Poorly lighted.

THE CAST

Dorothy Robey	Lucy Doraine
Her Husband	William Farleigh
The Count	Count Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraeten

Author not credited. Directed by Michael Fertes

SYNOPSIS. Rich girl is engaged to youth whom she jilts in favor of fortune-hunting Count. The latter marries her and after spending her money, kills her father. He is not suspected of this crime. The wife gets a divorce and marries her erstwhile lover — and finds happiness in the birth of her baby. The Count comes back in her life and attempts to blackmail her. When he threatens to kidnap the child, she kills him. A jury acquits her after listening to her story.

Short Subjects and Serials

"The Medicine Hat"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

WHILE this one of the Indian Frontier series is dramatic enough it is produced in a lighter vein than the previous pictures in this group.

It portrays the return to his tribe of Long Hair who had attended the first great conference in Washington between Government officials and representatives of the various Indian tribes throughout the country.

Long Hair was a medicine man and brought a high beaver hat and a soldier's cap as trophies which he declared would make him practically the center of knowledge and augmented wisdom from then on.

His daughter earns his displeasure by accidently shooting an arrow through the tall hat and he offers to give her as wife to the first man that asked. And the villain was at hand but was finally thwarted by the hero.

This is about on a par with those previously issued and will hold the interest.—TOMHAM.

"Safe and Sane"
(Christie-Educational—Two Reels)

A POST-GRADUATE class in safe blowing with a diploma to the one bringing back the most generous supply of loot provides the theme for this comedy and it's real comedy at that. Jimmy Adams is featured and he is seen to good advantage. Presumably visiting the daughter of a man of wealth, a fortune in jewels disappears, and Jimmy is accused of taking them. He explains he is visiting the daughter, only to learn that there is no daughter. Jimmy finally succeeds in rounding up the whole class of crooks and it is then revealed that the whole thing is a rehearsal for a moving picture. There is some exceptional comedy in this and it should go well wherever the short subject is appreciated.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Dandy Lyons"
(Christie-Educational—Two Reels)

NEAL BURNS plays the timid young man desperately in love with the girl who insists upon being married in a cage of lions. Persuaded by a friend that there are no lions within reaching distance Neal accepts the proposition only to have a circus arrive in town the same day.

Circus hands are bribed, the lion tamer drugged and the Lions club called to the rescue that Neal may go through the bargain with a minimum of danger as the angry mob within the circus tent waits the ceremony. Through a slight error on the part of Neal, his friend finally finds himself in the cage with the real lions as Neal emerges a hero. There's plenty of good, fast comedy and it's bound to be appreciated.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Our Little Nell"
(Pathe—One Reel)

ALMOST uncanny is the marvelous instinct and training displayed by these animals from the Hal Roach Zoo; the Dippy Doo Dads.

The actions and expressions are almost human and the producer has dressed them so realistically and provided such an array of special sets that each "drama" registers cleverly.

When the crook elopes with the daughter the father pursues in an automobile and the crook flees toward Mexico to be stopped at the boundary line by the mastiff "cop."

A pool game is featured between two of the monkies and there is comedy enough in this single reel to hugely entertain everybody.—TOMHAM.

"A New England Farm"
(Fox—One Reel)

WHEN one thinks of farms—one naturally turns to thoughts of New England—because its backgrounds are so suggestive of that quaint rusticity which cannot be found on the vast acres of the prairies.

This little Fox educational will delight anyone who has been brought up in a rural community—and city patrons who are ignorant of farming life will get an education concerning the activities which occupy the farmer's long day—for he labors from sunrise to sunset. Both types of patrons will respond to the picturesque backgrounds—and also to the New Englander's family at their various tasks—such as feeding the chickens, making butter, milking, harvesting, etc. The number is instructive and enjoyable—and makes a neat filler.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Racing Kid"
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

BUDDY MESSINGER, mischievous son of a race horse owner, is a competent youth around the stable and racetrack. He, Martha Sleeper and "Spec" are pals.

The day of the big steeplechase Buddy discovers one of the jockeys has been "fixed" by a crooked gambler. The jockey is to ride Buddy's father's horse. Buddy beats up the jockey, temporarily putting him out of commission, and rides the horse himself. With the aid of Martha and "Spec" he wins, but only after getting a lift in a taxicab. It is a pretty good story, exciting and humorous in spots.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Fold Up"
(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

THIS is another travesty on the collapsible California bungalow and its leading tenant, the Iowan. The newcomers are ushered into what apparently is an empty apartment. The closing of the door, however, automatically releases beds, tables and other appurtenances necessary to the furnishing of the rooms. A party is given and the guests are knocked about by the rapidly moving furniture each time the door is opened or closed. The best that can be said for it is that it moves fast and will probably go well in neighborhood houses.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"One Wet Night"
(Universal—One Reel)

AN unprecedented rain storm is responsible for the action in the comedy which stars Neely Edwards and Bert Roach. It starts with the stalling of hubby's flivver in the middle of a puddle and a consequent drenching of him. It continues that night when a guest discharges an "unloaded" shotgun through the roof. Rain pours in in torrents and the grand piano, bathtub and every other available receptacle in the house is used to catch the overflow. It's just a lot of silly nonsense which might be pleasing to youngsters.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"If Noah Lived Today"
(Pathe—One Reel)

CARTOONIST TERRY uses his imagination to good effect when he portrays the animals scampering to Noah's Ark when the flood comes.

Only in this instance they are helped by modern devices like the Radio and the old arc finally becomes the airship "Shenandoah."

Two skunks who are admitted under protest finally put the other animals to flight. A satisfactory filler.—TOMHAM.

"The Hollywood Kid"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

RIVAL producers compete for the services of a little "kid" star and Mack Sennett himself appears in his own studio. Plenty of comedy is derived from the unperturbed attitude of Mr. Sennett when he is shown in his private office where quietness would naturally be expected.

There are chases of men and animals and bathing girls throughout the office culminating with an explosion while the producer sits there calmly without wrinkling an eyebrow.

When the "Kid" is discovered one producer tries to induce his hard working parents to sign away his services for twenty-five dollars a week but the one offering two-hundred and fifty dollars a week wins.

A great deal of comedy is derived from the parents after that as they move from the street car to the limousine class. This satirical comedy will assuredly hold its own as a laugh creator anywhere.—TOMHAM.

"Brothers Under the Chin"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

WITH the aid of cleverly constructed furniture installed in the orphanage Stan Laurel and Jim Finlayson are made to look very diminutive as twin babies waiting for adoption.

Then the audience is asked to throw itself ahead twenty years which finds one of the "brothers" shanghaied on a ship commanded by the other twin. Many comedy situations are provided but the prolonged and wholesale vomiting is not comedy but rather sickening to the average audience.

With the exception of the "sea sickness" of the captain and his crew this is a pretty fair comedy.—TOMHAM.

"There He Goes"
(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

LIGE CONLEY is first the victim of a lot of hallowe'en pranks, which take him from one humorous turn to another, and they are real humorous too. Later he is a driver in a cross-country sulkey race and the fun then becomes fast and furious. Going through all sorts of mishaps he emerges victorious. These comedies in which Conley is featured are almost invariably good and replete with action and fun. This one is about as good as the best of them.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Realms of Sport"
(Educational—One Reel)

LYMAN H. HOWE certainly is ingenious when it comes to arranging these hodgepodges. This one is no exception. He shows some pictorially beautiful scenes, some amusing cartoons and some shots of pushball, skiing, boxing and aquaplaning. This series is adaptable to almost any class of house.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Pathe Review No. 15
(One Reel)

REALISTIC ferocious animals in papier mache enliven this issue of the "magazine" and the Pathecolor shows "Sunshine Land" with a Florida locale.

"The Sweetheart Of The Desert" is a pictorial study of the much maligned cactus plant and how it is made up into toothsome candy. This review has not as many subjects as usual but those shown are all entertaining as well as interesting.—TOMHAM.

Des Moines

DAN BURGUM, one of the first men in United States to turn a motion picture crank, who has been connected practically every theatre in Des Moines, and who is one of the pioneers of the film business not only in Des Moines but before that as manager of the Penny Arcade in Pittsburgh in 1904, has bought the Garden theatre at Atlantic, Ia., and will start this new enterprise in May. The theatre will probably be named the Strand.

For ten years his personality was what drew the fans to the Garden theatre with which he was associated since its opening and for several years more than that he was connected with the A. H. Blank Enterprises. He has an enviable reputation for original lobby decorations. He has been a strong advocate of the children's matinee but believes that it will not be a financial success until the public is educated to the idea.

Two of his hobbies are good pictures—he has never shown a picture which he would not wish his own family to see—and good ventilation.

The theatre in Atlantic seats 500 people and is situated on Main street. It will be refurnished and redecorated, the lobby space will be entirely remade and new projection facilities will be installed. The theatre will open sometime in July.

Eddie Lipson, manager of the Associated Exhibitors exchange for Iowa, who has been spending most of his time out in the territory, has found a slight improvement of business conditions in the agricultural communities.

Dan Burgum, who has purchased the Garden Theatre, Atlantic, Ia.

Herman Stern, manager of the Des Moines Universal exchange, left last Thursday for Brooklyn, and Sam Stoll, formerly city salesman for the Kansas City branch, has been given the managership at Des Moines. The illness of Mrs Stern and her desire to return to Brooklyn, where all her family are located, influenced Stern in accepting a new proposition in New York. He came to Des Moines from Chicago about five months ago.

W. F. Smith of the Colonial theatre at Clarion has suffered a stroke of paralysis and has been confined to his bed. His son is operating the theatre during his illness.

The Princess theatre of Traer purchased a new Gardner screen and had their grand opening last Thursday.

A. G. Stolte, booking manager for A. H. Blank, is enroute for Chicago and points east. Manager Watts of the Rialto theatre at Omaha is also with him. The trip is in the nature of an inspection tour. This is the first time that Stolte has been east for some time and on his return he will disclose new plans for the management of the Capitol theatre. Des Moines' newest picture house.

Manager Schwarz, of the Premier Picture Exchange, is making good his threat to visit every exhibitor in the Iowa territory.

George Baumeister is leaving the DesMoines Universal Exchange after two years as booker there. He is accepting a similar position with F.B.O. in Albany, New York. Joe Cowan takes his place as booker at the DesMoines exchange. Harry Williams, who has been recruited to the film business, has become the new poster man.

L. Carlos Meier of the Capital Theatre has returned to the Des-Moines Theatre. Vergne Ford, who has been with the DesMoines Theatre, becomes the new organist at the Strand Theatre. And F. Donald Miller who has been with the Strand Theatre since its opening has resigned. Announcement of his plans will be made later.

A. H. Blank, Iowa's theatre magnate, will enjoy a vacation at Excelsior Springs, Mo. This vacation, his first for nearly a year, he has been trying to work into his strenuous schedule for some time. And this time he's really going.

Mr. Chadkin, Educational sales manager, conferred with Manager Kahn of the DesMoines branch.

The Majestic Theatre at Cedar Rapids is closed. They are discontinuing the vaudeville and expect to run feature pictures during the summer and also to play stock.

The Iowa Theatre Equipment Company has installed a Powers 6 A machine at the Cozy Theatre at Toledo, which gives them the second machine in the town.

Seattle

THREE new theatres in the Washington territory opened within one week during the end of March, establishing a record for openings in this state. The three included Dominick Constanti's Liberty theatre in Sumner, the Moore Amusement Company's Kay Street theatre in Tacoma and V. A. Peterson's New Mission theatre in Georgetown, a suburb of Seattle. The new Liberty in Sumner is a first run house with a seating capacity of practically 500. The Tacoma house, operated for the Moore Company by the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit, is a second run neighborhood house seating 600. The New Mission, built to replace the former Mission theatre, recently condemned by the city, is a second run house seating about 450.

F. A. Flader, general manager of theatres for Universal, spent a number of days here recently with Robert W. Bender, manager of the Columbia theatre, and M. H. Newman, general manager of the Universal theatres on the Pacific Coast. Mr. Flader came here with Mr. Newman from California, where he has been spending a number of weeks. From here he was scheduled to return to New Work City, stopping off in a number of cities en route, to visit Universal theatres in those places. Mr. Flader was reported as being generally pleased with picture theatre conditions as he found them on the Pacific Coast during his visit.

Announcements received last week were to the effect that Lon Brown, an exhibitor of the Western Washington territory, had begun plans for the construction of a new picture house at Snohomish. Mr. Brown now owns and operates theatres in Duval, Redmond, Tolt and Granite Falls, all small towns in the same district as Snohomish.

The new picture house now under construction at Auburn was sold last week by John Brewett, who began the work on the house, to Walter Craft. Mr. Craft at the present time owns and operates the Mission theatre in Auburn, and Mr. Brewett is an exhibitor in Sumner, a neighboring town.

F. E. Lyons, manager of the Lyric theatre in Tacoma, recently announced that his new house in that city, now under construction, would soon be ready for an official opening. The house is not named as yet, but is expected to be called the New Lyric. It is a medium sized suburban theatre

L. K. Brin, owner and manager of the Kwality Pictures Exchanges, left here recently for a two weeks' trip to his Denver office, planning to return by way of Montana and visit the Kwality exchange in Butte. Mr. Brin was accompanied by G. H. DuMond, special representative of the Warner Brothers company, who has been spending the last several months in this territory with Mr. Brin.

Frank Rethore, former assistant to Arthur Gollofon, booker and assistant manager at the local First National exchange, resigned his position there recently and is now connected with one of the motion picture studios in Los Angeles. He has been replaced by Miss Olga Lund, formerly secretary to the exchange manager. F. G. Sliter, head of the local office, left here recently on a trip to Spokane, Lewiston and other key cities in this territory, expecting to be gone for a number of days.

Seth D. Perkins, manager of the local Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exchange, has just returned from Portland, where he was conferring with the Oregon Board of Theatre Censors regarding a current Goldwyn release, parts of which are reported to have met with the displeasure of the board. During Mr. Perkins' absence from this city, the exchange was under the management of A. J. Sullivan, booker and assistant office manager.

J. A. Gage, manager of the Educational Film Exchange, has been out of the city for a number of days on a sales trip into the Washington territory. Wallace Rucker, salesman for the local exchange, remained in the city during Mr. Gage's absence, and was expected to start off on another road tour within a short time.

F. J. Becker, Vitagraph salesman, was transferred to the local territory early in April, after having been associated with the Salt Lake City exchange since the first of the year. Mr. Becker was formerly connected with Manager H. A. Black's local office, and his return to this territory was welcome news to his many friends among the exhibitors.

Word received on Film Row this week announced that the Rialto theatre in Portland, a second run house, had been sold by O. B. Henson, former owner, to a Mr. Sandblatt, who was to take over the management of the theatre at once.

G. G. Johnson, well known on Film Row as a former suburban exhibitor and more recently as assistant manager of John Danz's Colonial theatre, last week resigned the latter position, after a number of months in Mr. Danz's employ. He has not been replaced as yet, Mr. Danz choosing to handle all details of the house in person, at least for the present season.

In the neighboring village of Schuylerville, movies were given on April 1, at the Broadway theatre in order to provide the senior class of the high school with funds for a Washington, D. C. trip.

Elton L. Griffith, connected with the orchestra in the Robbins-Eckel theatre in Syracuse, is receiving the congratulations of his friends, after writing a melody to "Bank Roll Blues" that has been accepted by a music publishing firm in New York City.

Margaret Donnelly has resigned as assistant booker in the Pathe exchange here, and Joe Schleiger, who has had charge of the poster department for the past four years, becomes assistant booker.

Among the visitors in town last week were Rae Candee, of Utica, and Charles Weimbel, owner of the Orpheum in Amsterdam.

The Howe Trucking Service will open a branch office near Film Row at once, and will furnish a trucking service for the distribution and picking up of film in all places between Albany and Syracuse. There will be branches in the two latter places.

The interior of the Clinton Square theatre has recently been made most attractive by painting the walls a light blue, hanging new curtains, providing new seats for the balcony, and in other ways freshening up a house which is today a money maker.

Laurence McKinney and Frederic T. Cardoze, of Albany, are collaborating in a scenario which will be shown in connection with the Albany Tercentenary. The picture will be shown in June at Harmanus Bleecker Hall.

Miles Gibbons, handling short subjects for Pathe, dropped into Albany one day last week, on his way back from Utica to New York.

Homer Howard, a two reel salesman for Pathe, arrived in Albany last Monday and will be here for about four weeks.

C. W. Strombough, the new manager for Pathe here, has adorned the walls of his office with a score or more of personally autographed photos from many of the stars.

Improvements are being made at the Griswold theatre, in Troy, the ceiling of the booth being raised, while connections supplying running water to the booth have also been installed.

Charles Travis, operator at the Barcli theatre, in Schenectady, has been named as a delegate to the coming convention of the International Alliance of Stage Employees.

The Barcli, in Schenectady, claims that its records show that the biggest business is being done this year during Lent, of any similar season during the past three years.

The theatres in Schenectady claim that they will lose $25,000 this summer if daylight saving goes into effect.

Claiming that the people of Schenectady were not supporting the best pictures after they had clamored for their booking, William Shirley, manager of the State theatre, the largest and most pretentious in the Electric City, inserted the following advertisement in the newspapers of that city last week:

"Are we to infer that you simply talk of better pictures? Must we believe that no matter how excellent are the pictures we show, you will not support them? Are we to take our lesson and merely offer you the usual run of program pictures? The answer lies with you."

Chicago

JONES, Linick & Schaefer Company, Chicago, have concluded a deal whereby they leased from Fred Becklenberg the large new theatre to be located on North Clark street just north of Diversey Blvd., upon which active work will begin May 1st. There will be 3,700 seats on the main floor and balcony and the theatre will have thirty-eight feet stage depth and an orchestra pit with room for sixty musicians. A modern refrigeration plant will control the theatre temperature both in winter and summer. The lot upon which the theatre will stand has 205 feet on Clark street with a depth of 165 feet. The architects are Alexander L. Levy and Wm. I. Klein. The rental will be $100,000.00 per year for the first ten years, $110,000.00 per year for the next five, and $120,000.00 per year for the concluding five years. President Aaron J. Jones, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer states that the new theatre will be used for motion pictures or vaudeville. This firm recently acquired the Woods Theatre Building which they a reoperating as a two a day special feature motion picture house at $1.50 top prices, and also operate the Orpheum and Rialto Theatres in the Chicago Loop district.

Ralph Bradford, formerly Minneapolis Branch Manager for First National and for the last year connected with this company's Chicago office, as salesman, has resigned to become assistant to Mr. Braden, who is distributing "Powder River," the official war department picture, at present running at the Monroe Theatre under the auspices of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Mr. Bradford will make his headquarters in Chicago.

Charles Schwerin who for several months has been connected with Universal Film Company, as special representative in charge of "The Hunchback" in the Middle West, has resigned. Mr. Schwerin will go to Atlantic City for a brief vacation before announcing his future connections.

Divisional Manager Seery of Associate First National has returned from a trip to St. Louis, Des Moines and other Central West cities, expects to be at his Chicago headquarters for several days.

Manager Churchill of the Rareton Opera House within a few days will open a small motion picture house in Biggsville, Illinois.

Harry Frank has sold the Liberty Theatre at Atlanta, Illinois, to James Horn. He is remodeling the old Tokio Theatre at Macomb, Illinois, and expects to open the latter house about May 1st. Macomb is familiar ground to Mr. Frank who started in the film business a number of years ago in that city, later going to Atlanta.

Cooney Brothers have taken over the Stratford Theatre, popular 2,500 seat South Side House, from Henoch Interests and assumed possession. This growing firm already owns the Chatham and Hamilton Theatres and are erecting the Capitol Theatre at 79th and Halsted streets, which will be one of the finest and largest houses in Chicago and will have a seating capacity of 4,500.

Herman Stern, formerly manager of Universal's Chicago Exchange, and who recently has been in charge of this company's Des Moines office, has resigned and is back in Chicago. Mr. Stern expects to announce his future plans within a few days and is understood to be considering an offer which will again take him away from Chicago.

Carl Laemmle, President of Universal Film Corporation, stopped over in Chicago for 48 hours en route from Universal City to New York, in conference with Divisional Manager Harris P. Wolfberg, and other local Universal officials. Mr. Laemmle was accompanied by his two children, Rosabelle and Julius. In addition to the local Universal representatives, E. A. Rosenberg, Assistant General Manager of Universal City, who was in Chicago on business, conferred with Mr. Laemmle.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lubliner celebrated their fifteenth wedding anniversary last week and the occasion was made a gala one by the throng of friends who gathered to fete this popular member of the firm of Lubliner & Trinz and his wife. Many of the guests who spoke at the banquet praised the fine humanness and good heartedness of this couple.

Cyril O'Connell for many years connected with the Universal Chicago Exchange is now a member of Fox's local selling organization.

Nat Wolf after many years' connection with film exchanges, is now in the buying end, having become connected with the picture department of the Junior Orpheum Circuit. Mr. Wolf hereafter will make his headquarters in this company's offices in the State Lake Building.

Kansas City

LAWRENCE GOLDMAN, former secretary of the M.P.T.O. Western Missouri, has resigned as head of the Mesco Productions Company to become president of the Monarch Productions Corporation, which will maintain offices in the Gloyd building, Kansas City. The company was organized for the purpose of producing and distributing pictures featuring negroes. Mr. Goldman left last week for the East and South to open new branches.

A ragged newsboy, madly chasing [illegible] street, the heart of Kansas City's film colony, last week was the cause of an "inspirational" idea, simultaneously, in the minds of several exchange representatives and exhibitors. The result is that the Pathe Crescent baseball team issued a city-wide challenge to other film clubs and the proposed organization of a film league in Kansas City this season.

The personnel of the Pathe-Crescent team is: Lester Coleman, "Jimmy" Schorgl, Leon Jameson, C. C. Vaughan, George Lawson, R. L. King, Charles Hendricks, J. J. McFadden, S. T. Black, C. E. Besenbacher, I. Bieser, Al Kahn and M. A. Kahn.

All ambitious candidates have been requested to call "Rube" Melcher of the Selznick branch, telephone Harrison 9180, for try-outs.

In order to make room for road shows and vaudeville, a stage and dressing room have been added to the Linwood theatre, Tarkio, Mo. The capacity of the house is 464. Finishing touches are being added to the Marlborough theatre, a suburban house of Kansas City, this week and the opening probably will be next week. The new house will seat 1,000 persons.

Four new faces are among the personnel of the Kansas City Vitagraph force this week—W. N. Miller, salesman; Miss Catherine Scott, assistant cashier; Miss Jeanette Conant, stenographer, and Miss Clara Ragland, inspector.

This week was a busy one along Kansas City's film row, with the sun registering 60° in the shade. Hustling about in the scramble to buy film and get back in time to "brush up the ol' house a bit," were Mrs. Helen B. Wertenburg, Empress theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Robinson, Jewell theatre, La Harpe, Kas.; J. C. Perry, Odeon theatre, Coffeyville, Kas.; Charles Sears, president of the M. P. T. O. Western Missouri and owner of theatres in Marshall, Mo., Brookfield, Mo., and Nevada, Mo.; William Turner, Panama theatre, Burlingame, Kas., and E. N. Boylston, Victoria theatre, Hiawatha, Kas.

A new sales system is being installed in the Kansas City First National branch. J. C. McGowen of the home office is in town assisting in the installation.

H. E. Corbyn, manager of the A. H. Blank Enterprises, Kansas City office, has proved himself a "marathon" salesman. No sooner did he return from an extended trip over the territory, in behalf of some of his features, than he was gone again last week. M. I. Shear resigned as salesman for the A. H. Blank office last week. His successor has not yet been named.

Following several trips into the territory, E. C. Rhoden, manager of the Kansas City First National branch, is convinced that rumors of "better business" are not "pep" stories, but realities. Mr. Rhoden returned from the key centers last Saturday and remained only long enough to take a glance at some large pictures of First National stars, which were received by the local office last week, framed and hung on the wall.

The first week of the Apollo theatre, a suburban theatre of Kansas City, as a first run theatre has convinced Martin Finklestein, manager, that the move was a wise one. Although about three miles from the downtown section, the theatre is located in a thickly populated residential district and the new venture appears destined to be profitable.

The Strand theatre, a Kansas City suburban house, shared with the Newman theatre this week in the publicity given by the Kansas City Star in connection with the Star's nightly radio program. A quartet of Philippine musicians joined with the Coon-Sanders orchestra in giving a program.

Washington

JAMES R. GRAINGER, General Manager of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, paid Washington a flying visit April 3, incidentally inspecting the new Tivoli. He had just returned from the Coast where he had looked over the exchange and production angles of the concern.

John S. Woody, of Associated Exhibitors, was in the city for the official opening of the new Tivoli. Harry Hayner, local chief of Associated Exhibitors had in tow also, on the same night, Murray Garsson of Garsson.

Lou Berman and party, of Philadelphia, head of Independent Films, Philadelphia and Washington Warner Bros. Franchise holders, were on hand with local executives of their exchanges here.

George Roberts, Fox manager, rushed back from Atlantic City on Friday, to be present at the Tivoli premiere.

When Mr. Roberts returned from his three weeks' convalescene, he found his desk heaped with a huge flower basket from the Fox employes, including acting manager Melvin, the Baltimore representative, and Special Representative Brooks of the New York office who was here for ten days, and attended the inaugural with Roberts and other Fox functionaries.

The F-I-L-M Board of Trade of Washington arranged to give a huge consolidated flower basket to the Tivoli fiesta, with blue ribbons bearing the exchange designations. This was done but the individual exchanges also sent last minute floral baskets.

S. W. Toth, manager of the Philadelphia office at 1031 Chestnut street, in the Quaker City, spent the week-end here in the interest of The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, purveyors of the super-organ installed in the Tivoli. Mr. Toth sold the organ and supervised the constructional stages at the plant, North Tonawanda, N. Y.

Harry Bernstein, Wells Circuit official, was here as their delegate to the two-day festivities. Jack Pryor, Richmond and Danville exhibitor, was in town for the week-end.

So rapidly has the business of Exhibitors Film Exchanges increased that E. A. Sherwood, general manager and vice-president of this phase of the Crandall enterprises, has opened a branch office in Baltimore and designated Arthur Price, well-known Baltimore exhibitor-manager of the Wizard theatre as special representatives there.

W. F. Seymour, Eastern Divisional manager for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, spent several days of the past week, on an extended motor tour of the Virginia territory with George Faulkner, Washington manager. Norfolk, Suffolk, Petersburg, Portsmouth, Fredericksburg, Richmond and intermediate points were visited.

Henry Lego, Paramount salesman, reports that on his last call at the Wilbur theatre, Orange, Virginia, he found that the house had changed hands, the proprietors, Messers. Wrighton and Clarke retiring to be succeeded by W. H. Harlowe, also a familiar Virginia exhibitor. Vernon Gray, Paramount exploiter, formerly engaged in that capacity at the exchange at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has transferred his bag o'tricks here to be Washington exchange specialist for the every busy Manager Harry Hunter.

All Famous Players-Lasky folk, including Manager Hunter, and sales operatives, Fred Myers, Henry Lego, Joseph Oulahan, Frank Boucher, George Kallman, Harold Messiter and Henry A. Clark are pepped up for the trip to New York City, for the annual sales convention on April 16th.

Nick Weems, Baltimore representative of F.B.O., was in the new office of Manager F. L. McNamee, Saturday and reported that the old "spring complaint" of the Maryland exhibitors was again in epidemic stage. With the usual spring and summer complaint of slump times, the exhibitors have found themselves booked up with more pictures than they can play or pay for. Weems had to take dates for August bookings, owing to the local condition there. Many play dates have been set back until August or later. Mrs. Donna Gleason, formerly in the inspection end of F.B.O., has been drafted into stenographic work as assistant booker, contract clerk, etc.

Manager Bachman of Educational Films reports that his Baltimore aide, Louis A. DeHoff, has been incapacitated for several days with an attack of la grippe, complicated by a severe abscess of the ear, but is recovering and is expected to be out selling Educational products soon again.

C. V. Weems, general manager of the chain of film theatres operated by the Stonega Coal & Coke Company of Big Stone Gap, and owner and booker for an independent chain on mining camp town theatres in the Clinch valley zone, Virginia, has sent his usual springtime letter request to Sam and Jake Flax of Liberty Films, to reserve seats for the opening games of the Washington Nationals, in preparation for his annual visit to the capitol.

Miss Clara Cunningham is preparing to take over the duties relinquished by Vice-president Fitz-Gerald of S. B. Lust's Super-Films, who is retiring from the concern. Miss Cunningham several months ago took over Miss Gauss' duties and is now assuming an added burden.

Having completely renovated and redecorated their original quarters at 906 Mather Building, Messrs. Sam and Jake Flax announce to the trade that, effective May 1st, their Liberty Film exchange will again function there. At the same time, it is learned, the contract whereby they acted as physical distributors and sales outlet for the output of Colman's Federal Film Service terminated.

The Washington Post devoted six pages of the Sunday issue, April 6, to the new Tivoli. Impressive layouts, stories of Columbia Heights business men, advertisements of exchanges, contractors and near-by shops killed the section lay-out.

W. G. Luber, shipper at Universal Films, Washington, took over the Lincoln (colored) theatre, in Alexandria, Thursday, and is operating the projection booth, temporarily.

The Strand, Harry M. Crandall's Cumberland, Maryland, theatre, had not resumed its performance schedule up to Saturday of last week. Since the previous Saturday, when the Potomac flood inundated the auditorium, the photoplay house has been dark. Even with the recession of the flood, much work will be required to clean up the damage. With heavy rain Sunday, April 6, at the heels of the April 1 snows, the situation indicates a resurgence of the high water, in the next few days.

MANAGERS of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg and heads of departments of the Wilmer & Vincent organization in that city were the guests of C. Floyd Hopkins, director of the W. & V. forces there, at a dinner party on March 23, at the Hopkins home. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Elmer H. Ley, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Vint, Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Paul T. Weaver, Mrs. Bertha S. Emmitt, Samuel Kuebler, C. M. Gibble and Walter J. Hurley.

The Valley theatre, which was opened on March 8, in Lansford, is the first of a chain of theatres which the Panther Creek Valley Amusement Company proposes to erect in Northeastern Pennsylvania. A Wurlitzer Unit Orchestra has been installed and Professor Mollard has been engaged as organist. For the present the theatre will be devoted exclusively to motion pictures but ultimately, it is understood, a stage will be installed for vaudeville.

With the expectation of having the theatre open for business next winter, ground has been broken for the new $400,000 picture house to be erected in Mahanoy City by the L. J. Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises, of Shamokin. Stofflet & Tillotson, of Philadelphia, are the contractors. It will seat 1,800 persons.

Lita Grey, Charley Chaplin's new leading lady.

The New Rialto theatre, Third and Harris streets, Harrisburg — formerly the Family theatre — has just adopted a policy of introducing jazz orchestra music as an added attraction to the motion picture shows. The Banjo-Saxo Orchestra, a well established local organization of eight pieces, under direction of "Buzz" Crawford, has been engaged. The organization includes Clarence Roberts, saxaphone soloist, and a vocal quartet consisting of Messrs. Adams, Hays and the Roberts Brothers. This is a neighborhood theatre, in which the admittance prices are ten and seventeen cents.

A group of Harrisburgers, including Mrs. Florence Ackley Ley, who is head of the community service bureau maintained in Harrisburg by the Wilmer & Vincent theatrical interests, went to Baltimore on March 20 to witness a performance of "Blossom Time," the musical comedy in which Mrs. Ley's daughter sings an important role.

Complete remodeling of the Rex theatre, Nanticoke, has removed all traces of the fire which recently swept that picture house, and it has been reopened for business.

The Galen motion picture theatre, Marysville, was engaged by the pupils of the Marysville public schools for the holding of a musical comedy, on April 14 and 15, for the benefit of the library fund of the high school.

system, the exchanges whose headquarters are in the Albee Building, Mayor Street, have engaged a special night porter who is on duty for the receipt of films from the theatres. The boxes are held in the film exchange building until the next morning when they are sorted out for the different companies after which they are immediately examined before being delivered to the next theatre booker.

The companies cooperating in this scheme include Famous-Lasky

tion, United Artists, Vitagraph, Educational, Dominion Films, Hodkinson, F.B.O., Goldwyn-Cosmo, whose offices are in the Albee Building. This arrangement, it is pointed out, makes it possible for the exchanges to have sufficient time to check over and inspect the reels, thus insuring better prints. Previously, exhibitors were in the habit of keeping the films until almost noon the next day because they did not get down to their theatres any earlier.

John Drey, veteran film exchange man who is now Western Canadian district manager for Canadian Educational Films, has made his headquarters at Calgary, Alberta, in place of Winnipeg, Manitoba, where the Western district office of Educational has formerly been maintained. Harry Matthews is now Educational manager at Winnipeg; Joseph Pravelle has been made manager of the Calgary office and E. Dieppe is in charge of the Educational branch at Vancouver. Educational is taking care of the physical distribution of Hodkinson, F. B. O. and other releases in addition to handling its own Educational and Ideal (English) pictures.

Managers at the Metropolitan Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, and Sask., have exchanged places under the direction of H. M. Thomas, Western Canadian district manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp. John Reith, who has been in charge of the Winnipeg "Met" is now established in Regina and Bert Crowe, manager of the Regina Capitol is now at the Metropolitan.

An indication of the manner in which Winnipeg is over-seated, it is claimed, is shown by the fact that admission prices at the Metropolitan, which was formerly the Allen Theatre, have twice been reduced during the past couple of months, the one admission for matinee performances being 25 cents and evening prices ranging from 25 to 40 cents with with 50 cents for the loges.

There was no orchestra at the Metropolitan Theatre, Winnipeg, for several weeks because of a strike among the musicians.

James Gorman, manager of the Montreal branch of the Associated First National, has recovered from a severe attack of appendicitis, through which he was confined at the Montreal General Hospital for some days.

Douglas McNeill of Calgary has purchased the Rex Theatre at Red Deer, Alberta, Harding Brewer, the former owner, having gone to Portland, Oregon, to buy another house there. Mr. McNeill has been special salesman with Famous Lasky Film Service, Limited, working out from the Calgary office for a number of years.

Film Abuses Can and Should Be Abolished

Great Saving to Industry and Better Pictures Would Immediately Result

AN analysis of the reasons film does not last longer when in general use in the theatre brings forth many mistreatments and calls to attention the opportunities for correcting these evils.

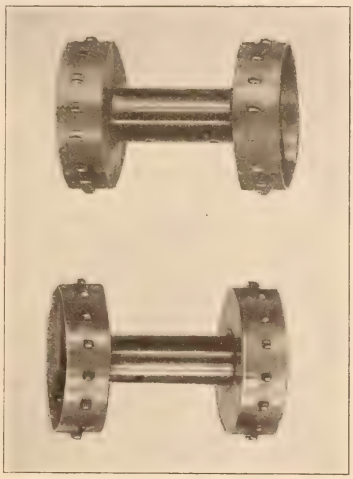
It isn't the fault of any one particular source that costs this industry millions of dollars annually through the destruction of prints long before the usefulness of these prints should expire. It is a combination of many misuses, the responsibility for which rests on the different divisions of this business.

A print may leave a laboratory in a condition that immediately determines a short life without subjecting it to the numerous other maulings that may be in store for it.

Drying a Life Factor

The condition of the emulsion of a new print as it leaves the laboratory, that is, its degree of dryness, is of the greatest importance as a life factor.

Providing a print is not conditioned properly, the emulsion being dryed under atmospheric conditions which extract almost all the moisture, causes the emulsion to crack soon after it is put in general use. Even though the base remains in perfect condition, the print is no better than its emulsion.



Then again, the base of the film may be injured in the laboratory during inspection. As an illustration, the writer was advised recently that 1000 ft. reels of films were inspected in 48 minutes or four minutes per reel. Film is often forced through the projectors in the theatres at a rate to cause severe strain but consider the results when over four feet of new film pass the aperture or 48 intermittent movements are completed per second. Treatment of this sort often starts "checking" at the edges of the sprocket holes. While this "checking" may not be discernable to the naked eye (but visible under microscopic inspection) it is nevertheless there and is the start that will soon develop into badly torn and defective sprocket holes.

Condition Reflects Treatment

If a print survives its early life in perfect condition, it has a good chance for a long and prosperous life providing—

It receives none of the abuses lying in wait in numerous exchanges and theatres.

In exchanges the film is submitted to inspection. The thoroughness of this inspection varies materially with the particular exchange and individual inspector. It is conceded that the film passing with great rapidity through a cloth held in the hands of an inspector, does not permit detection of all flaws and so is not put in perfect physical condition as far as tears and defective patches are concerned. A small rupture in the film may not mean much as such, but there is certainty of its development into a serious defect, probably causing damage to the film adjacent. If by a closer inspection, these minute ruptures were eliminated, then the rents and tears that ruin prints would be decidedly reduced. It certainly would seem good business to inspect film, even though at a slightly increased cost, with the thoroughness necessary to eliminate this seat of trouble.

Two Bad Actors.—The intermittent sprocket at top has "hook teeth," due to wear. These hocks catch the film instead of sliding smoothly from the sprocket holes. Below it is an intermittent sprocket with its teeth almost completely worn away, knife edges only remaining. Sprockets in this condition cause the sprocket holes to throw out of mesh with the teeth with a consequent damage to the film.

Bad Patches a Menace

Bad patches are a source of irritation to exhibitors, projectionists and a detriment to the industry in general, thru the enormous toll they exact thru ruined film and fire hazards.

To say that the source of defective patches lies with either the exchange, projectionist or laboratory would not be stating the true facts. The responsibility for this curse on economy and good projection in this industry rests with all of these. Hurry, carelessness and ignorance are the only reasons for their existence.

In making a patch, when scraping the emulsion from the base, the base itself may also be scraped and weakened in such a way that the patch will not stand strain. Or where the sprocket holes aren't matched, causing the film to ride on the teeth of the intermittent sprocket, a rent on several frames of the film will probably result. Thick heavy patches are a cause of severe strains on the film.

And yet, bad patches are just as laborious to make as good patches and the latter will pass through a projector time and time again with no harm to the film.

Theatres Share Blame

A large share of the responsibility of the poor physical condition of prints rests with the projectionist and exhibitor,—mostly due to neglect in keeping their projectors in good repair.

On this page is shown reproductions of two intermittent sprockets. After an inspection of these parts, it remains a deep mystery how film even passes through the projector or why exhibitors and projectionists can possibly allow such parts to remain a part of their equipment.

Upkeep of Equipment

Why demand "more prints" or good prints when they are to be submitted to the abuses of such parts?

One of the best investments an exhibitor can make is in good equipment and its upkeep.

Hooked sprocket teeth are probably the worst offenders in mutilating film but there are other parts, just as inexpensive in replacement, that cause great damage.

Worn or improperly adjusted shoes, latteral guides, rollers, tension springs, film gates, etc., all exact their toll.

Submitting film to excessive tension in the projector is another common abuse for which there is no defense.

But the harm done to film is by no means all that results from these bad practices; poor projection is also guaranteed.

Co-operation Needed

This discussion of the various abuses to which film is submitted is by no means complete, only the high spots have been touched

An unusual example of redesign is offered in the New Boro Hall Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., formerly a store. The auditorium is located in what formerly was the basement, with the front elevated to the street level and the rear at the basement level. The lobby, shown at the right, with the vestibule is 100 feet in depth. The capacity of the house is 600 seats. The lobby displays, frames, etc., shown in the photograph were furnished by the Libman-Spanger Corporation. The New Boro Hall is owned by Goodman & Strausberg.

Detroit Theatre, New $275,000 House, Is Model of Elegant Simplicity

THE Detroit Theatre, Cleveland's newest motion picture house, is an exponent of elegant simplicity. It is quite a contrast, and quite a relief from the abundance of elaborate detail usually provided in the modern theatre. Although $275,000 was spent on the two-story building which devotes the major portion of its space to the theatre, nothing is showy. The money was spent to secure a restful effect, rather than to look expensive.

The Detroit Theatre was built by the Homestead Theatre Company at 16505 Detroit Ave. This is in Lakewood, a fashionable residence suburb of Cleveland. Julius Schwartz, Abe Schwartz and Dr. I. Brody constitute the Homestead Theatre Co. They also operate a chain of neighborhood houses in Cleveland.

Built of glazed white terra cotta, the Detroit Theatre attracts attention from a considerable distance. On entering, the most noticeable feature is the absence of the ticket booth in the middle of the lobby around which patrons are usually forced to dodge. The ticket window is at the side, flush with the walls, and does not mar the beauty of art glass mirrors which are placed in panels. Hand made lobby frames are also a decorative feature of the lobby which measures 45 feet in length by 22 feet in width.

The auditorium presents an aspect of great width. It is 123 feet long and 96 feet wide —unusually well proportioned. No pillars impede the view and the 123 foot throw is uninterrupted from any point. The American Seating Company supplied the 984 seats in the theatre, which are walnut, upholstered in leather. They are all on one floor. Each aisle seat is provided with an electric light, so all danger of stumbling in the aisles is obviated. The ventilating system is of the combination hot and cold variety, which operates mechanically. Direct lighting is used all through the house, with a complete dimmer system. Polychrome fixtures hang from the ceiling, and similar side brackets, all equipped with golden glow lamps, furnish a soft effect which is decidedly pleasing.

The walls are panelled in cream, with Rafaello decorations in each panel. Outside the panels, the walls are finished in light brown, with ivory and gold ornaments.

The stage is bordered on either side by French windows, draped with Bordeaux curtains. The proscenium is finished in old rose with gold rosettes to hold the lights. Dressing rooms flank the stage which can be used for theatrical performances.

Special attention has been devoted to the projection room, to make it among the most modern and complete in the city. Everything in the room is mechanically controlled, including the stereoptican spot and the curtain draw.

Rose is the prevailing color in the auditorium. The drapes are rose. The stage curtain is rose. The carpet is taupe, with a rose cast, which blends well with the rose drapes and tan walls.

Three changes a week has been adopted as the house policy. Prices are 30c. for adults, 15c for children. This scale is permanent. It does not vary for Sundays or holidays.

The architect for the Detroit Theatre is Nicholas Petti, Williamson Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio.

New Strand Theatre Opens to Capacity Business

The New Strand Theatre opened recently, to very good business, in Hartford, Conn. This theatre is managed by Mr. Hoffman who selected the First National picture, "Lilies of the Field" for the opening feature.

United Amusements, Ltd., Building in Montreal

United Amusements, Ltd., Montreal, operating a chain of high class moving pictures in Canada's largest city, have arranged for the construction of two additional houses in Montreal of impressive proportions. One of the new theaters is to be erected at Park avenue and Bernard street at an estimated cost of $200,000 with a seating capacity of 1,800. The permit which was secured from the city for this house indicates that the theater will have a frontage of 100 feet and a depth of 100 feet, the structure to be of the same style as the several other theatres erected by the company in the past two years. Building operations will start May 1.

The company also announces that a start will be made on a new moving picture theater in Maisonneuve, the East End district of Montreal, in July, at which time the Park Avenue theater will be nearing completion, it is expected. The house in Maisonneuve will have accommodation for 2,000 persons and will be similar in structure and appearance to the company's other new theaters. Both theaters are to be opened next fall.

The United Amusements, Ltd., already own and operate theaters in various parts of Montreal, including the Strand, Regent and Moulin Rouge in the downtown sections of the city, as well as the Belmont, Papineau, Plaza and Corona, the last named having been opened this season.

Theatre Employes Control Blaze Starting in Booth

Hardly more than five minutes after a capacity audience had left the Park theatre at Spencer, Mass., following the presentation of "Powder River" for the benefit of the local American Legion Post the projecting booth became a mass of flames when two rolls of the film ignited from an over-heated carbon stick left on the work bench. The flames were checked by use of hand extinguishers used by employes of the house prior to arrival of fire apparatus. Damage was confined to burning of two rolls of film and scorching of the projection booth.

Gentlemen:

We are taking the liberty of expressing our appreciation of your Mazda Lamp Projector.

We have been operating theatres in New York, Brooklyn, Flushing, Richmond Hill, Bayonne Opera House and Colonial Theatre, Newark, N. J., and have been using in the past Inductors, Rheostats, and Generators but we must confess that since using your Mazda Lamps in our machines, the projection shows clearer and is more satisfactory to our patrons and besides has been a big saving to us.

Yours always for Mazda.

Mass. Parks Affected by Cut in Rail Service

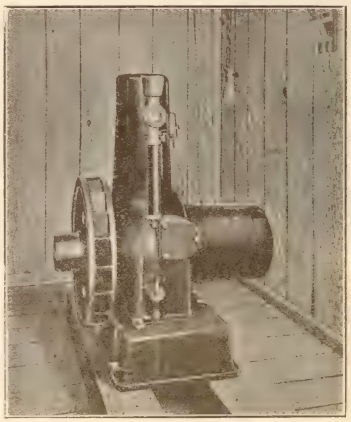
Suspension of electric service by the Northern Massachusetts Street Railway Company over more than 50 miles of trackage in central and northern New England will affect numerous parks and summer resorts that in past years have maintained open-air or other motion picture theatres. As a result of the situation, motion picture interests are making a survey of the field, to determine how much territory will be covered the coming season by municipally-owned electric car and motorbus service.

Athol, Mass., has taken over about seven miles of trackage and necessary equipment to operate within the town and immediate vicinity.

Other towns are considering like action, or the substitution of motorbusses. There is a prospect that service may be discontinued on other lines touching summer-resort parks.

Ordinance to Compel Fire Box Installation

To reduce the possibility of injury and loss of life in panics accompanying fires in crowded buildings, especially theatres, an ordinance has been introduced before the Worcester, Mass., City Council making it mandatory that a fire alarm box be installed in every such public gathering place. The proposed ordinance provides the cost of installing the fire alarm box be borne by the property owner or person leasing the building. The ordinance has been approved by Fire Chief McCarthy.



Cleveland Firm Buys Four Wurlitzer Organs

The Ohio Amusment Company of Cleveland, closed a hundred thousand dollar organ contract with Mr. G. A. Levy, District Manager of The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company. This contract includes four organs for installation in the Savoy, Knickerbocker, Denison Square and New theatres, all located in Cleveland.

The Wurlitzer (Hope-Jones) organs purchased will give the Cleveland public the finest in organ music and enable the Ohio Amusement Company to render not only high grade concerts but to interpret to the minutest detail the action upon the screen.

Small Light and Power Plant for Use Without Storage Battery

A SMALL light and power plant for use without a battery has been developed by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company for service wherever the current can be turned directly into the line. The absence of the battery adds greatly to the ruggedness and portability of the plant and it is particularly well suited for direct service or for auxiliary or standby service to supplement existing generating equipment in such places as motion picture outfits, for isolated sign boards, mines and quarries, pumping stations, boats and traveling shows.

An illustration of a small light and power plant for use without storage batteries which has been developed by the Westinghouse Elec. & Mfg. Co.

The plant has a capacity of 1,500 watts at 110 volts and operates on kero-sene or natural gas. It consists of a gasoline engine and an electric generator built into a single compact unit. The engine is air-cooled, which makes it possible to install it in unheated places, is economical in oil and fuel consumption, is ruggedly constructed, and operates at a slow speed, providing for a long life under the most rigorous conditions. It has a capacity of 60 25-watt lamps or about one and one-half horsepower.

A distinctive feature of the plant is its ease and simplicity of operation. There are no complicated adjustments or operations necessary for starting or stopping it and no other attention is necessary while it is running except to keep the fuel and oil tanks supplied. The single cylinder, four-cycle engine has a bore and stroke of 3⅜ by 5 inches. A fan in the flywheel draws air into the cylinder dome and over the cylinder fins, assuring cool operation under all conditions. The engine is lubricated by a splash feed system which supplies an equal amount of oil to the moving parts at all times regardless of the depth in the crankcase. This is accomplished by an oil carrying gear that dips into the oil in the crankcase and carries it to a pan, keeping the oil in this pan at a constant level. A simple Venturi mixing valve is used instead of the usual complicated carburetor. Fuel is drawn by suction to this valve from the six-gallon tank built into the base of the unit. A simple mechanical governor controls the speed of the engine by regulating both the fuel and the air. The 1,500-watt, four-pole generator, which is bolted to the engine frame, is of the sleeve type on the engine shaft with no bearings. This unit conforms to the requirements of the fire underwriters.

Formation of Image by Concave Special Mirror

Lesson 2—Part VII

THE six principal cases of image formation described in last week's article, it will be recalled, resulted from different positions which the object assumed with respect to the mirror.

The first three cases described involved placing the object ahead of the focal point of the mirror or on the side of the focal point opposite to that occupied by the mirror. It will be further recalled that the images so formed were all real (capable of being received on a piece of paper) and inverted. The images were smaller or larger than the object depending upon whether the object was placed to the left or right of the center of curvature of the mirror (mirror on right side of center of curvature).

In the three remaining cases it will be shown that in each instance the image has turned around and is now erect and virtual, similar to the image formed by the convex mirror. In fact, for certain object positions, the concave and convex types are practically interchangeable. That is, the image of one type becomes the object of the other and vice versa.

Case 4

It was shown in a preceding article that when a point source of light was placed at the focal point of a concave mirror, which had a small diameter in comparison to its focal length, the rays of light were reflected parallel to the principal axis of the mirror. Since a point source of light cannot be obtained this condition is purely theoretical and has no practical value.

When an object, having appreciable size, however, is placed at the focal point of such a mirror the rays of light from any particular point on the object are rendered parallel, it is true, but the total effect is quite different from the theoretical case of the point source mentioned.

This condition is illustrated by Fig. 24 which shows an object placed at the focus,

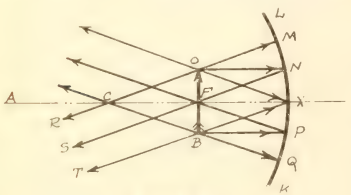

Figure 24

F, of a concave mirror, LK. Using the same method of tracing the path of the light rays as described in preceding articles, we see that the ray OM which apparently comes from the center of curvature C, is reflected back in the direction RM, Ray ON coming from the same point O, on the object and parallel to the axis, AX, is reflected back thru the focus, F. Also ray OX from point O to the intersection of the center of the mirror and the principal axis reflected in direction TX so as to make angle FXB equal to angle FXO.

An inspection of these three rays will show that they are all parallel to each other. This indeed is the case and all other rays from point O will be reflected parallel to these three principal rays.

Similarly, for all other points on object OB, all rays from any one particular point will be reflected from the mirror parallel to each other (But not, necessarily parallel to the axis). Thus, the rays from point B will be reflected in the direction shown. The rays from point F on the axis, however, since they come from the focus of the mirror will be reflected parallel to each other but also parallel to the principal axis AX. All other rays passing thru the focus are secondary axes for the other points on object OB. Thus NFS is the secondary axis for all the reflected parallel rays coming from point O on the object.

It will be seen, then, that when the object is at the focus of the mirror, no image is formed since the rays from the various object points are parallel and hence do not cross to form an image.

Case 5

When the object is moved to a position

between the focus and the mirror a radical change occurs in both the image location and its position.

Thus, as shown in Fig. 25, when the object is placed in position OB (with reference to the mirror LK, it will be observed that the two principal image forming rays, OR (through the center of curvature, C) and OS, (parallel to the principal axis AX) to not cross in front of the mirror, but rather diverge after reflection.

This does not mean that no image is formed but it does indicate that no real image is obtained. If these two rays are prolonged, it will be observed that they cross behind the mirror at point I. Similarly rays BT and BP from point B on the object will be seen to cross at point M. These two points I and M mark the upper and lower image points of the object. Thus IM marks the location of the image of object OB. Furthermore, the image is not inverted but erect. Being behind the mirror it is naturally virtual and can only be received by the eye.

Any virtual image, by the way, while it cannot be received on a piece of paper, and thus rendered visible, can be seen directly by the eye since the lens of the eye brings the divergent reflected rays to a focus and thus forms an image. This image ordinarily, is larger than the object.

The action of the concave spherical mirror, when the object is between the focus and the mirror, is, in some respects similar to that of the convex mirror. With this exception, however, that the object and image positions of the two types of mirrors are reversed. That is, the object, in the case of the concave mirror, represents the image formed by the convex mirror and the object of the convex mirror becomes the image of the concave.

Thus, in Fig. 25, if LK represented a mirror silvered on both sides, the left would be a concave mirror and the right would be a convex. Hence, if IM represented the object, then OB would be the image. Also, if OB was the object, IM would be the image. In both cases the image is erect and virtual.

Case 6

The last case is that of the object being placed at the mirror. This is a condition never attained in practice and is only of theoretical interest since it is impossible for both object and mirror to occupy the same location at the same time.

In Fig. 26, the object OB is shown a trifle ahead of the mirror in order to illustrate the case. The top and bottom of the object touch the mirror, however, which will answer the purpose well enough.

In order to construct the image, a ray from point O on the object, is traced back through the center of curvature, C as shown. Another ray is traced back from the same point to the focal point, F. This represents the reflected ray coming from point O to the mirror, parallel to the axis.

It will be observed that the only possible crossing point of these two rays is at point O, on the object. The object actually touches the mirror at this point and thus, the image and they by no means comprehensively. It is sincerely hoped, however, that those who are the worst offenders will take it upon themselves to remedy these conditions. No great expense or labor is involved, but the results are well nigh beyond conception when the money and the increased popularity of motion pictures are considered.

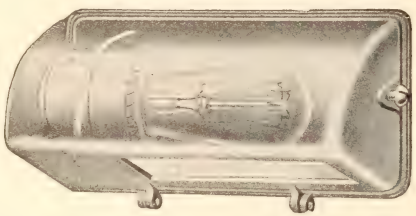
For the immediate advantage of every individual in this industry, it becomes imperative that all abuse of film should cease. Every theatre would then have good prints and better shows.

Specialist Outlines Essentials Needed for Good Ventilation

WILLIAM E. WATT, of Chicago, ventilation specialist, who was in Rochester for ventilation work at the Eastman plant, addressed the managers of the motion picture theaters of the city recently in the Lyndhurst theater. "It is not necessary to deluge patrons with cold air in order to put fresh air into your motion picture theater," said Mr. Watt, "if the air is made right before the the audience comes in and is kept constantly right. The most successful house is operated so that patrons are comfortable and are supplied with good air every day in the year regardless of the number present. The custom of putting in heavy machinery at a large cost, with ducts which encroach upon the available space, is almost a matter of regret to both manager and public. It is now known that almost any building can be kept in good condition as to temperature and quality of air without any heavy machinery. This is accomplished by removing the air sewage at high points and under the balcony so that the usual layer of hot, smelly air is taken out of the building before it has opportunity to damage the air of the breathing plane.

"Fresh air must be admitted, not under the seats, but overhead, so that it falls to the auditors without anything touching it which will contaminate. It surely is not hygenic to drive in warm air underneath the seats. I would prefer one cubic foot of pure air, admitted high, and falling to the nostrils, rather than 100 cubic feet of warmed air blowing in from below. Furthermore the common demand of 1,500 or more cubic feet per person per hour is now known to be unnecessary."



The exhibitors expressed great interest in the subject, desiring to obtain the best possible ventilation for their respective theaters. Mr. Watt was unable to respond to their wishes to visit their theaters this trip, but expects to return later this month and will then undertake whatever work is desired in the motion picture theaters.

DON'T HAVE YOUR PATRONS GROPE IN THE DARK FOR A SEAT

LIGHT YOUR AISLES WITH

"AISLELITES"

The question of adequate aisle lighting in Motion Picture Theatres has been answered. Here is a device that does away with fumbling for seats, stumbling or collision in the darkness. Every inch of the aisle is illuminated with a diffused light. It is no longer necessary to have overhead or side lights, which cause glare and eyestrain. The "Aislelite" especially, does not detract from the best screen effect.

of point O, is formed at the same point and is also in contact with the mirror.

Likewise, the image of point B will be found at the place and also in contact with the mirror.

So we see that when the object is placed at the mirror the image will be found at the same place and will be of the same size, erect and, of necessity, virtual.

In summing up the study of the concave mirror, attention is called to the fact that these six principal object locations which give different degrees of images, are as follows:

Object Location

1. Ahead of center of curvature.
2. At center of curvature.
3. Between center of curvature and Focal Point.
4. At Focal Point.
5. Between Focal Point and Mirror.
6. At Mirror.

The center of curvature, Focal Point and Mirror really mark pivotal points around which changes in the image occur. Thus, if the object is on one side of the center of curvature, the image is the larger. If the object is on the opposite side the image is the smaller.

At the Focal Point, with object on one side, the image is real and inverted. With the object on the opposite side the image is virtual and erect.

At the mirror, with the object in front of the mirror, the image (virtual) is larger. With the object behind the mirror (hypothetical) the image (again virtual) is smaller.

: : Picture Paragraphs : :

VISUAL Education, the well known educational journal, finds that, "although primarily designed for popular entertainment, the informational value of 'The Courtship of Myles Standish' is enormous." This observation was made in the March issue of that publication, and the critic says further:

"This picture, created by Charles Ray, is a splendid film for persons interested in education, setting forth in great detail the voyage of the Pilgrims and the vicissitudes of the first year. It visualizes a vital event in American history and gives definite personalities to historic figures which have hitherto been just names for many."

In like manner, Marie Goodenough, who conducts the School Department of the Educational Screen, finds both entertainment and instruction in the Ray classic. Writing in the March number, she says:

"The picture is true as a die in its depiction of the character of that little band—Captain Myles Standish, John Alden, Priscilla, John Carver, the first governor, and William Bradford, his chief reliance. As material for a study of the Pilgrims and their experience it becomes significant for the educational public."

Dagmar Godowsky, in Chadwick Pictures "Meddling Women."

Sol Lesser, theatre man, says, "I'll take them all—every Harold Bell Wright picture you make—and take them for our entire chain of 106 theatres." The contract is signed, while Sol Lesser, producer, looks on content, for he had smashed every record in motion picture selling, this being the biggest sale of a series of motion picture productions yet recorded in the annals of theatredom.

THE Motion Picture Committee of the Civic Club of Philadelphia has reviewed and given its approval to "The Marriage Market," a C. B. C. production, featuring Pauline Garon, according to a report received from the De Luxe Film Co.

LATEST in the series of yellow sheet exploitation supplements which Goldwyn Cosmopolitan is issuing with each of its releases is that prepared for the Cosmopolitan production, "The Great White Way." The supplement is the work of W. R. Ferguson, manager of exploitation for the distributing concern.

It strikes an unusual note from the title page illustration with its admonition of "Put a Kick into your Campaign" to its final sheet of exploitation suggestions. A special page is devoted to the great amount of publicity which has been given to "The Great White Way" by the Hearst publications, telling the exhibitors how they can capitalize on that publicity which has cost them nothing.

Under the caption "'The Great White Way' contains the stuff that successes are made of," the story of the picture is outlined through the enumeration of features that lend themselves to exploitation. Hints on how to "sell" the great cast, both of actors and of notables in New York's sporting, theatrical and newspaper world, are given in detail.

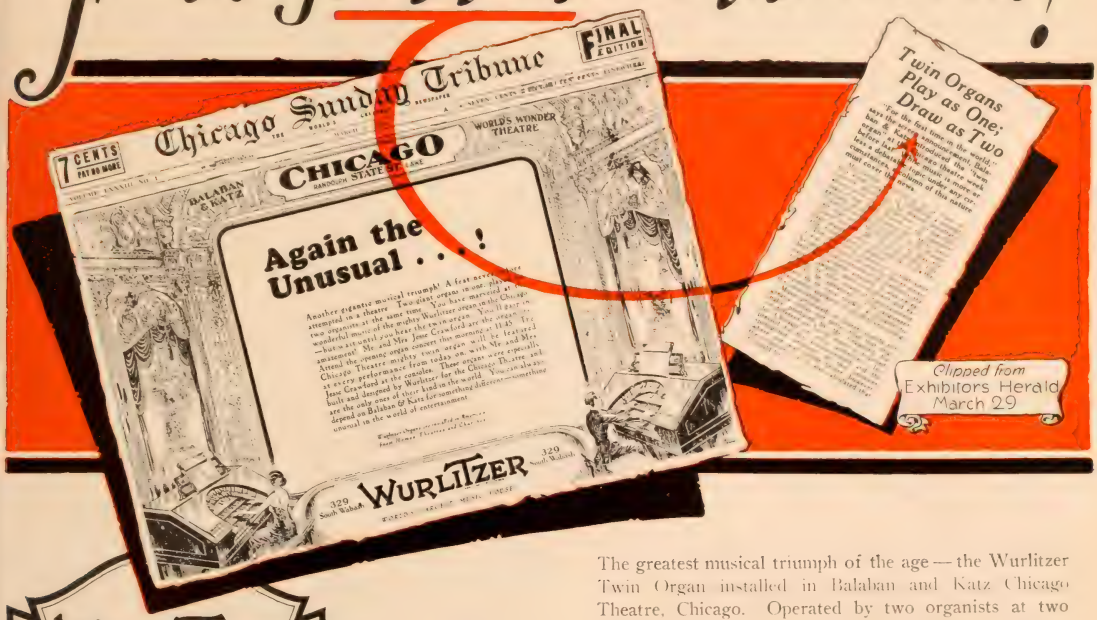
A sample of the very attractive herald prepared for "The Great White Way" is attached to the supplement and two or three pages are devoted to different ways in which this herald can be used.

LAST week the Pre-view Committee of the California Federation of Women's Clubs unanimously endorsed Laurette Taylor's new Metro picture, "Happiness." The following letter was written by Mrs. E. H. Jacobs, vice-chairman of Pre-views to B. F. Rosenberg, manager of the Metro exchange in Los Angeles:

"Of course, the committee previewing 'Happiness,' with Laurette Taylor, decided to endorse it.

"There is a charm about this delightful comedy, and Miss Taylor is irresistible. Her powers of characterization seem to be unusually diversified and her work is always sincere.

"'Happiness' is well named, for it radiates in a great measure, what the name implies."



MARY PICKFORD may be responsible for one of the season's song hits. Victor Schertzinger, film director and composer of many musical hits, including "Marcheta," a recent sensation, wrote a theme melody for Miss Pickford's new photoplay feature, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." When Miss Pickford heard this melody she was so impressed that she suggested it be put on the market as a song.

While the air was catchy and had a compelling swing, Mr. Schertzinger was at a loss for a title. Miss Pickford came to the rescue with the suggestion that the new song be called "Love Has a Way."

Harold Flammer, the publisher, has just returned from a country-wide trip of more than 12,000 miles during which he featured "Love Has a Way."

It is being featured in many theatres with organ, colored illustrated slides being shown on the screen at the same time. In Chicago seventeen theatres are using slides several weeks before the date when "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" will be shown, thus creating interest in film and song.

The greatest musical triumph of the age — the Wurlitzer Twin Organ installed in Balaban and Katz Chicago Theatre, Chicago. Operated by two organists at two keydesks at one time — a feat never before attempted in any other theatre. The clippings reproduced above tell the story of Wurlitzer precedence on this new and unique musical innovation. This is just another instance of Wurlitzer supremacy in the art of organ building. One achievement follows another — and Wurlitzer leads them all.

Other Wurlitzer Twin Organ installations are now being made. Progressive exhibitors are taking advantage of this new box office attraction. Write today for full details.

A modern romance

"TRIUMPH" marks De Mille's return from the ancient pomp of "The Ten Commandments" to the type of ultra-modern society love story that he made famous in "Male and Female" and "Manslaughter."

"TRIUMPH" is De Mille the Showman at his best. A marvelous cast (read the names below!), a great story adapted by Jeanie Macpherson from May Edginton's Saturday Evening Post serial and novel, a production with typical De Mille lavishness and beauty.

supreme tribute
When President Harding was in Alaska he witnessed The CHECHAHCOS in the making. He requested the first showing be for official Washington, making it a command performance.
Last week, under the auspices of the Department of the Interior, the premiere was held for 500 distinguished American and foreign officials.
Almost an unheard of thing, but as Washington admits, a tribute that this scenic masterpiece fully merits.

A Special Word to

No. 380. Straight from the Shoulder Talks by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation

THIS talk is intended for those of you who are ruinously hammering down Universal rental prices through booking circuits, booking agencies or whatever you choose to call them.

You tell me you formed these booking combinations to defend yourselves against producers or distributors who are crushing you. You tell me your booking combination is the only weapon with which you can combat still greater circuits, whether owned by producers or not.

I don't know anything about that, because undoubtedly there are two sides to that story as to every other story. But I do know that, thoughtlessly and without intending to do so, you are hammering prices down on the very company you ought to support to the last ditch. Every time you use that booking combination against Universal, you are using it against yourself! Everything you do to weaken Universal is a good swift kick in your own pants!

I ask you to stop it and stop it now!

With all the power at my command, I ask you to realize that if you treat Universal as an enemy — as some of you are unintentionally doing — you are fighting your own future, battling your own flesh and blood!

Booking Circuits!

Do I ask special favors for Universal?

YOU BET YOUR LIFE I DO!

I ask you to treat Universal as you would treat a partner. Regardless of what your booking combination rules may be, I ask you to waive them in dealing with Universal. I ask you to quit forcing me to deal with one theatre. I ask you to quit restraining me from getting the benefit of competition among you! I ask you to quit fixing the price that I've got to accept for my pictures! I ask you to quit clubbing my prices down to a ridiculous basis!

By what earthly right do I ask these things? Simply by right of the fact that I've never done anything to warrant this sort of rough treatment from exhibitors. I am not threatening you with great chains of theatres. I never tried to force you to book "everything or nothing." I never tried any cute or devilish little tricks or schemes or devices to take you into camp. I've always played with you with every darned card on the table, face up, and not a card up my sleeve.

If you are determined to use a club in booking, don't use it where it will damage you in the end. There is no greater blow you could give yourself than to injure Universal. I know you are hurting us without realizing what you are doing. Now that you do know, will you wake up and quit fighting yourself over my shoulder?

VOL. XXIX NEW YORK, APRIL 26, 1924 NO. 16

Distribution

IN the hey-day of the General Film regime it would have been considered idiotic and outrageous that a trade paper, or any agency, should raise its voice and say that distribution was ominously out of joint.

Distribution was highly efficient. Producers and exhibitors were prosperous. Distribution was capably managed. Yet Charles Pathe came over from France one day, stated courageously that distribution was fundamentally and destructively wrong and told why; Paramount Pictures Corporation was later formed and in time the whole film map was completely made over along new lines, to meet new requirements.

Today a sales manager comes back to New York after a country-wide trip, weary with train travel and the eternal warfare over rental prices, first runs, booking combines and the like and exclaims: "What's this about a new distribution plan? What's wrong with distribution, anyway? Maybe I can work my men a little harder. Maybe I can lop off a few dollars here and there from running expense. But—why don't you go after production waste? That's where the trouble is."

And again, the answer is: there's little wrong with the handling of distribution as it exists today. It is efficient; it is managed by as capable and hard-working managers as you will find in the whole business world. But that is not the issue. The question is: Is distribution correct in principle? Is it fundamentally the right way to sell pictures, right in the best interests of producer, distributor and exhibitor, right for the stability and prosperity of the industry, right for the production of the better pictures the public continues to demand? Is it all this; or is it a deterrent and expensive handicap?

And that question, we submit, is decidedly an open one.

We know that distribution costs too many millions a year. We know that a multiplicity of sales effort exists, that a multiplicity of exchanges exist; and on the other side of the fence we know too well that booking combines exist to a dangerous degree. The thing that breeds civil war within an industry is inequity; and inequity always comes about because there is a large and unnecessary leak somewhere that imposes burdens so heavy that rebellion arises.

Exhibitors war against heavy rentals. Some theatres pay too little in proportion which helps make others pay too much; but it is a fact that several thousand theatres today are up against rental burdens that threaten their existence as paying enterprises. On the other hand, producers are not, as exhibitors may think, much better off. Production, in fact, is altogether too hazardous an enterprise to promise the continued flow of the better kind of pictures the theatres need. Producers must not be forced to make mediocre pictures, as Louis Greenfield, a prominent and practical exhibitor, points out in a letter this week.

Mr. Greenfield's letter indicates that a number of exhibitors are doing some clear thinking on this very large problem; but in all probability the average exhibitor like the average salesman is not looking much below the surface. Each makes the best deal he can on the existing order of distribution.

The question is, we repeat, Is the existing order or distribution right? Cannot its cost be reduced, not by saving a few dollars here and there but by a fundamental reordering, a brand new selling scheme that will save millions in the aggregate each year and so make better theatres, better pictures, more profits and a new stability through the entire industry.

That is the object of MOTION PICTURE NEWS' prize contest. And we don't hesitate to say that already we are optimistic over the result of it.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

HUGH D. MacINTOSH told some people at a luncheon just why Great Britain wants to make pictures and in so clear and forceful a manner that he made his hearers want Great Britain to succeed. As MOTION PICTURE NEWS has often stated, this country welcomes British made pictures because we welcome healthful competition and because we realize that picture expression should be international. But Mr. MacIntosh sets a still higher objective when he states that the security of the world today and to come depends importantly upon the English-speaking races, certainly upon the white races, and that England should and must have its place in the picture sun so that her peoples and their ideals may be suitably and truly portrayed to the vast and mixed picture audience of the globe. This is a serious enough matter, a responsibility indeed that the motion picture and all its people will eagerly welcome much less overlook.

SCARCELY a day goes by that we do not read of some screen player who has injured himself for the sake of realism. If the script calls for a particular hazardous stunt, the man performing it runs the risk of losing his life or meeting with a serious injury. The demand for thrilling adventure adds just so much to realism. We often read of some daring actor being rushed off to the hospital in the performance of his strenuous duties.

Screen work is much harder on a player's strength than stage work. There his nervous energy may be used up considerably more in the memorizing of his lines — and the exhausting wear and tear of rehearsals and continuous performances. It is seldom that he is called upon to inject realism that might bring injury. But when he does it is time to make a story of it.

The other night at a performance of "Rust" — a current Broadway play, Clarke Silvernail threw himself so violently in a stage fall, that he suffered a broken arm. Yet when he sustained his injury, his pluck kept him in character. But the curtain was not raised for the succeeding act until he was patched up. The audience gave him a big hand when he appeared with his arm in a splint. And he continued his performance as if nothing had happened.

We will say that Mr. Silvernail has qualified for the screen.

THE pleasant pastime of suggesting candidates for memorable characters — which started with "Ben-Hur" is being continued for "Peter Pan." Among the actresses who have been mentioned for Barrie's greatest character are May McAvoy, Betty Compson, Gloria Swanson, Jackie Coogan, Viola Dana, Miriam Mears (who has done little or no work on the screen, but whose personality in a Broadway play is suggestive of the fanciful play-boy) and Clara Bow. Gareth Hughes has also been mentioned — and on second thought he appears to be a likely bet — because of his sensitive features and whimsical expressions.

WHEN the medals for heroic conduct under severe trials are given out, a large-sized gold one should be pinned on Burt Morton, an exhibitor of Castle Gate, Sunnyside, Clear Creek and Winter Quarters, mining towns of Utah.

During the terrible disaster which caused the death of 173 miners during an explosion of a mine of the Utah Fuel Company at Castle Gate — one of the worst catastrophes of its kind in the history of coal mining in the State, Morton worked unceasingly in the hope of liberating his neighbors from the inferno, should they be alive. He worked continually from one shift to another until the heroic task was completed. Then he collapsed. He suffered a hemorrhage of the nose and was rushed to Salt Lake City for medical attention.

Having recovered sufficiently after a brief stay in the hospital, Mr. Morton is back on the job of running his picture houses—as if nothing had happened.

THE Kinematograph Weekly's announcement of April 3rd, of the regulation in France by which, from January next, no film can be projected in public unless printed on non-flam stock, has created no comment from the trade.

The editor of this British trade paper is somewhat indignant over the apathy of the English exhibitors. He argues that it is a matter of concern immediately, for this severe law means that in less than nine months' time any prints sold during that period, and not released at once, will be unusable. For the producer selling to France on percentage that may well be a serious matter.

It also means that negatives of foreign pictures will have to be taken in instead of prints (which again means a much higher import duty) unless special non-flam prints are made for importation into France. Even this means increased cost, and will probably seriously affect the American houses (take note of that) who will no longer be able to import ordinary prints out of stock to be re-edited here.

THE big iron doors of Sing Sing closed behind four visitors the other day. A demonstration of excitement quite as effective as when the siren blows, indicating the escape of a convict, was expressed by the inmates. They peered through the bars of their cells and discovered Warden Lawes escorting Booth Tarkington, Thomas Meighan, Victor Heerman and Paul Sloane through the corridors. The quartette went up the river to absorb a little of the atmosphere of the institution — because Tarkington's story, "Whispering Men," has many scenes of Sing Sing in it.

PRODUCING 210 stage attractions during a period of thirty years is the unique experience of R. H. Burnside, recently appointed as a director for Paramount. While he is probably best known for his eleven productions at the Hippodrome (for which he wrote book and lyrics for the most part), this is only a small fraction of his work.

Born in England, he ran away to become a call boy at the age of ten. Despite parental arguments, he remained in the work and ultimately became a producer. After ten years of stage producing in England, Lillian Russell persuaded him to come to America, and he handled three productions for her.

Some of the outstanding hits he has handled during his 20 years here may be mentioned: "Watch Your Step," "Chin Chin," "Stop, Look and Listen," "Jack o'Lantern," "The Beauty Shop" and others.

Burnside has been at the Famous Players Long Island studio for some time, studying methods and quietly absorbing the technique of the photoplay. One thing is certain, at least. No mob scene should be too big or too spectacular for him, since his last production at the Hippodrome before it was changed to a vaudeville house employed 1,054 performers and 734 non-performers.

THE battle of the tees is being fought over the ground where Cornwallis and Washington waged the decisive engagement of the Revolutionary War. This sacred soil of Yorktown is partly covered by a golf course — and today one may see a different kind of battle — a battle of midiron and niblick. When Cornwallis surrendered the event marked the beginning of a nation. Today when a duffer surrenders his place to another duffer on the first tee, it marks the beginning of a bad score.

A motion picture unit which recently reproduced the Yorktown engagement, brings back word that several of the defensive fortifications built by Cornwallis have been utilized by a canny golf architect. For instance, a certain redoubt which was stormed and captured by American troops is now a bunker guarding one of the greens.

"Fore!" has replaced "Forward!" as the American battle cry. Sic transit gloria mundi! Likewise, the paths of glory lead but to the green.

SIX and twenty candles lighting up a cake brought good cheer to the Smith Brothers (Albert E., George H., W. S., and David) as they sat around the festive board in Los Angeles. The birthday cake was a surprise package from Vitagraph's executive offices in New York last week — in commemoration of the twenty-sixth anniversary of the organization of the company.

ADOLPHE MENJOU, who has been signed to appear in the screen version of "Spring Cleaning," a current Broadway hit, will have a role cut after the pattern of the one he assumed in "The Marriage Circle." And with his expressive eyebrows — his perfect savoir faire, he should again make screen history.

Menjou is a type, but he is also a finished pantomimist. He has been on the screen for years, but it took Chaplin to discover his latent ability. He flashed a cameo of a polished rake that placed him in the select gallery of portraits. And while he has played smart, sophisticated gentlemen of amours — gentlemen who do not command sympathy because of their resourcefulness, he somehow manages to inspire admiration.

The world loves a good sport — and Menjou has interpreted that type of character lately. His expression is smooth and unexaggerated — and he makes you understand that life is pretty much a game of besting the other fellow — and the greatest of these games is hearts.

His characterizations in "A Woman of Paris" and "The Marriage Circle" are much closer the truth than those portrayed by heroic disciples of heavenly virtue. A man who can do no wrong is not half so human and fascinating as a man who occasionally kicks over the traces. Adolphe Menjou has humanized the villain.

WE hand it to silent, but subtle, Sam Palmer of Famous Players' publicity staff for giving us something absolutely new in press stories. It is worthy of good space whether he concocted it or whether it is real. Since he swears up and down that it is the truth, and nothing but the truth — s'help me . . . we'll take him at his word and tell you that Mildred Tane of San Pedro, Cal., is the world's first motion picture stowaway. The members of a company making a sea picture found her hidden aboard a yacht in San Pedro harbor.

Now listen to Mildred:

"I've tried to get in the movies every way and failed," she confided to Jacqueline Logan, "and hearing that a movie company was going to use this yacht, I stole aboard and hid in a life boat in the hope that I could meet a director and get my opportunity."

The adventure carried a happy ending. The director, as chivalrous as any prince in an Anthony Hope novel, made her a guest for the remainder of the day and, incidentally, gave her a chance to appear before the camera.

TWO hundred jobless World War veterans were given a chance to earn a fair stipend the other day when Herbert Brenon engaged them through the Veterans' Bureau of New York to appear in several battle scenes of a forthcoming picture. Because of the men being experienced in warfare under very realistic conditions in France, there was no trouble with their rehearsals — and the scenes as a result were finished a full day ahead of schedule.

IN looking back on Ernst Lubitsch's picture, "The Marriage Circle," we distinctly recall an economy of captions — the action and incident running along without interruptions and explanations. The German director is of the opinion that explanatory subtitles and dialogue are unnecessary. It is his belief that a passionate love scene in a picture play should no more have the interruption of the written word than a painting should have an accompanying story to tell what it is all about.

"The Marriage Circle" — like all other pictures of direct action, was so perfect in its expressions and pantomime — that no titles were necessary. The progressive directors are those who cater to an audience's intelligence — who give them uninterrupted action through direct treatment — without bolstering up their stories with wordy titles. "A Woman of Paris" was perfectly intelligible — and so was "The Marriage Circle." They succeeded in being understood because the meaning was in the pantomime — and not in the captions.

THERE was a goodly gathering of friends of various walks of life — men and women of the arts and professions at the pier to wish "bon voyage" to Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and D. W. Griffith who sailed last Saturday on the Olympic. A host of cameramen and ship reporters were present to see that these personages were properly publicized.

The two stars are on their way to a Continental tour which will take them across several boundary lines — including the Scandinavian, while Mr. Griffith will hie himself off to Italy where he plans to make a picture sponsored by the Italian government.

Doug and Mary have accepted invitations from members of royalty. Among the rulers who have commanded the presence of the stars are the king and queen of Belgium and the king and queen of Sweden. Hospitality has also been offered by James M. Barrie, Lord and Lady Mountbatten and the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland. Mary also intends to run down to Derbyshire, England, and visit Haddon Hall.

Carl Laemmle Will Give $1,000 To Winner of Motion Picture News Distribution Plan Prize

AN added incentive for contestants in the competition for Motion Picture News' Distribution Plan Prize of $1,000 is provided through the generous action of Carl Laemmle, President of Universal Pictures Corporation. Mr. Laemmle, on behalf of Universal, this week offers a thousand dollars, which will be given to the winner of the News Competition.

In a letter to William A. Johnston, Mr. Laemmle declared: "Your offer of a thousand dollars for a distribution plan is one of the most constructive propositions put forth in this business for a long time. I think so well of it that I offer another thousand dollars, on behalf of Universal, to be added to your prize offer.

Enthusiastically yours,
Carl Laemmle,
President."

Motion Picture News desires to express its cordial thanks to Mr. Laemmle and Universal for this substantial recognition of the Distribution Plan Competition, which has aroused widespread interest throughout the trade. Plans are being received rapidly from men in all branches of the business.

Those who have not yet submitted their ideas are urged to do so as early as possible in order to expedite the handling of the material. The balloting for the selection of judges by the twenty-five representative exhibitors is proceeding, and the names of the judges will be published as soon as they have been chosen and have indicated their acceptance. The competition closes June 2.

Australian Guest at Trade Luncheon

Hugh D. MacIntosh to Be Associated With J. D. Williams in Great Britain

HUGH D. MacINTOSH of Australia, well known showman and publisher, was tendered a luncheon at the Ritz Carlton on Tuesday by J. D. Williams. Others present included Adolph Zukor, George Kleine, Dr. A. H. Giannini, F. C. Munroe, Elmer Pearson, Raymond Pawley, John Ragland and representatives of the trade press.

Mr. MacIntosh and Mr. Williams sailed for England the following day on the Aquitania. Mr. MacIntosh is to be associated with Mr. Williams in the production of pictures in Great Britain. In a stirring address, he dwelt upon the prime importance of pictures which will present to the world the English speaking race in its true light, and in the same breath deprecated the stock characterization of an Englishman as a fop. Dr. A. H. Giannini, referring to a previous address at the Naked Truth Dinner held recently at the Hotel Astor, spoke again in denunciation of the high-bonus money lender.

Adolph Zukor supported Dr. Giannini's remarks and applied the same principle to parasites in general; men who take much from the industry and leave little with it of a constructive nature. At this point, Mr. Zukor, in a plain, straightforward and sincere way, denied the existence of any monopoly within the industry and said that those who knew the history of the business and understood its present principles knew well enough that a monopoly was utterly impossible.

"In this industry," he said, "we do not deal with material products such as oil, steel, potash and the like. The product we handle is a creative thing which may be called gray matter. It is impossible to control such a product because it is impossible to control brains.

"The continued success of the motion picture industry means the continued and continuous application of brains. Financial genius is just as important as artistic influence, but without that combination of brains in all branches of the industry it cannot go ahead with the rapid strides it should.

"Competition is another equally important essential for the success of this or any other business. It makes any industry wholesome, and without it we could not have progressed as we have with motion pictures.

"At no time have I shirked meeting any one endeavoring to establish himself in this business whom I thought would put it in the right light and bring about improvement within it. This industry is big enough to embrace every group or individual who will make it a life work or seriously endeavor to do good. The parasite should not be tolerated. It wants none of the man who gets in, takes his cut and runs away."

Mr. MacIntosh said that his specific plans were not ready to be announced. He did not, he said, come into the picture business with the motive merely of making a profit, not purely in a commercial sense, but rather to bring about the execution of principles which he believed to be of greater importance to the world and its security than the League of Nations. He believes that pictures must fulfill the important function of bringing about international understanding and security.

Paramount Representative Here From Vienna

P. N. Brinch, Famous Players-Lasky representative at Vienna, is in New York for a conference with E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department, regarding future plans for Paramount distribution abroad.

"Our business in Austria and the Central European countries has been very satisfactory when one considers the conditions still in existence in those countries," said Mr. Brinch in discussing the status of the film industry in Central Europe. "The outlook for the future is more hopeful than ever and the working out of the problems attending the settlement of the reparations issue will serve to hasten the restoration of more normal conditions."

Carroll's "So Long Letty" Suit Dismissed

Earl Carroll's suit against Oliver Morosco and Elmer Harris in connection with the picture rights to "So Long Letty" has been dismissed by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Carroll wrote music and lyrics for the play in 1915 and claimed ownership to a one-third interest, and sued for that portion of the picture rights. The defendants sold the rights to the story without the music and lyrics.

New Exhibitor Association Formed

Ten States in Movement

THE Theatre Owners Special Committee, which was organized at the meeting in French Lick, Ind., last Fall, held a session in Chicago last week and took definite action looking toward the formation of a new national exhibitor body.

Present at the Chicago meeting were: W. A. Steffes, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Northwest, which includes Minnesota, and North and South Dakota; H. A. Cole, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Texas; J. R. Denniston, President, J. C. Ritter, Director, and H. M. Richey, General Manager, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan; R. R. Biechele, President, and S. A. Handy, counsel, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kansas; Frank J. Rambusch, and William Connors, of the Motion Picture Owners of Indiana; and Glen Reynolds and Ludwig Seigel, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois.

The meeting decided that the state presidents would recommend to their respective units the formation of an association to be known as the Allied State Organizations. The body, as indicated by the title, would be an association of states, with the following included, besides those enumerated above: North Carolina, Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

It was also decided that the structure of the organization would be radically different from that heretofore followed. The State Presidents in the new exhibitor confederacy will meet every sixty days, and a chairman will be selected at each meeting. Mr. Steffes was chosen as the first chairman, with H. M. Richey as secretary.

Next Meeting in June

The next meeting will be held at Morehead City, North Carolina, June 11, coincident with the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of that State.

One of the first acts of the new organization was the sending of S. A. Handy to Washington to represent it at the hearings on bills to amend the Copyright Law with special reference to the so-called Music Tax.

It was also voted to request Will H. Hays to call a conference on the Uniform Contract with a view to making certain changes in that document. A resolution of thanks was voted to Mr. Hays for his assistance in the campaign to repeal the Admission Tax.

Official announcement of this new development came to MOTION PICTURE NEWS in a telegram from H. M. Richey, secretary of the Theatre Owners Special Committee. It will be recalled that it was this Committee which co-operated actively with the Hays organization in the Admission Tax Repeal Campaign. Mr. Richey came to New York last Winter and remained several weeks at the Hays headquarters as the contact man between the M. P. P. D. A. and the allied exhibitor group in the campaign.

Reports of the action taken at the Chicago meeting attracted wide attention in the industry. It was pointed out that the new association with ten Mid-Western and Southern States in the movement presented a strong line-up, and speculation immediately began as to what units remained, or would remain, in the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

In some quarters it was said that the crystallization of the new exhibitor movement was in anticipation of the national convention of the M. P. T. O. A. at Boston, and that the meeting in North Carolina in June would be in effect the first national session of the new organization. By that time, it was figured, various states would have voted officially to go into the association.

The attitude of the New York state leaders toward the movement is as yet undefined. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, Inc., has been out of the M. P. T. O. A. officially since the Washington convention in 1922.

It is understood that the New York leaders were not invited to participate at the Chicago meeting last week, and whether the Empire State will join the Allied group eventually remains unknown.

Discussions Held

However, one of the chief figures in the new movement was recently in New York and held discussions with several exhibitor leaders who are not affiliated with the Cohen organization. These discussions, apparently, did not lead to anything definite.

The other states represented in the new body have gradually broken away from the M. P. T. O. A., some of them by official withdrawal and others through a policy of non-co-operation, which amounts to the same thing. All are strongly organized, and one of them is regarded as the most efficient of all the state units.

The seceding states states have avoided any sort of open warfare with the M. P. T. O. A., but have been quietly co-operating among themselves on questions of national importance to exhibitors.

The Allied group is expected to work in harmony with the Hayes organization, as is indicated by its request for a conference on the uniform contract and the resolution of thanks in connection with the work of Mr. Hays for admission tax repeal. This attitude is generally regarded as representing the views of the leaders of the new movement, who are said to believe that co-operation with the producer association will result in ironing out many of the problems in the industry. If this view of their attitude is correct, it means that a new principle has been introduced in exhibitor organization, and the familiar practice of declaring war on the producers periodically has been abandoned.

There is much speculation as to the possibility of combining the M. P. T. O. A. and the Allied group into one national organization, after the Boston Convention. So far no moves for an amalgamation of the two associations have yet appeared on the surface.

Arkansas M. P. T. O. Holds Convention

AT the seventh semi-annual convention of the M. P. T. O. of Arkansas, held at Little Rock April 6-7, President Eli W. Collins, of Jonesboro; O. C. Hauber of Pine Bluff and C. A. Lick, of Fort Smith, were chosen as delegates to the National Convention at Boston.

Resolutions were passed endorsing the administration of President Sydney S. Cohen; thanking Will Hays and the M. P. P. D. A. for their work in the admission tax fight; condemning the renting by exchanges of pictures to non-theatrical institutions; and extending the good offices of the Arkansas unit in bringing together all factions in exhibitor organization circles.

The afternoon session on the second day was attended by a number of prominent Arkansans, including A. B. Hill, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, who was pledged the support of the screens of members for furthering his educational program. Managers of the leading exchanges in Dallas, Memphis, Little Rock and St. Louis were present.

The Sherman & Ellis Insurance Plan was endorsed by the Board of Directors. Officers will be elected at the Fall convention to be held in October.

Sunday Closing Bill Killed in Massachusetts

An adverse report has been handed down by the Massachusetts legislative committee on legal affairs on the petition for an act to prohibit the exhibition of motion pictures in the state on Sunday.

The Massachusetts legislative committee on legal affairs again has voted adversely on bills intended to regulate the prices of theatre tickets. The measures have been presented before the legislature annually for the last several years and always have been held to be unconstitutional.

Music Tax Bill Set for Hearing April 25

Congressman Florian Lampert, Chairman of the Patents Committee of Congress has officially notified National President Sydney S. Cohen of the M. P. T. O. A., that the various bills relating to the Music License Fee now imposed on theatres will come up before the Committee for hearing Friday morning, April 25. Three specific bills proposing amendments to the existing law in which the M. P. T. O. A. is interested will be considered. These are the measures known as the Johnson, Newton and Dallinger bills The changes called for in the bills are of a pronounced character and will bring to Washington large delegations of proponents and opponents to the proposed amendments.

Thirty-Three Million Is Cut From U. S. Revenue

As the new Government Revenue Bill now stands it lists $2,000,000 as the total revenue to be derived from admissions as against $85,000,000 of last year with a prospective consequent saving to exhibitors and the public of $33,000,000.

Keith Forms Big Canadian Company

$5,000,000 Concern Will Operate Picture and Vaudeville Theatres in Eastern Canada

A FORMIDABLE theatre enterprise has sprung into being in Canada in the organization of the B. F. Keith Company of Canada, Limited, with headquarters at Montreal and with a capital authorized by the Dominion Government under a Federal charter of $5,000,000 for the purpose of operating a chain of motion picture and vaudeville theatres throughout Eastern Canada. E. F. Albee of New York is the head of the Keith Canadian organization and he is already extensively represented in Canada through his ownership of the Imperial Theatre, Montreal, and the Imperial Theatre, St. John, N. B., along with the Albee Building, Mayor Street, Montreal, which is used as a motion picture exchange by all but one of the Canadian film distributors having offices in Montreal.

The theatres affected under the organization of the B. F. Keith Company of Canada, Limited, includes the Princess at Montreal, the manager of which is Abbie Wright; the Imperial, Montreal, managed by Howard Conover; the Franklin Theatre, Ottawa, the proprietor of which is J. M. Franklin; The Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, which was managed until recently by Mr. Schaufele; the Shea's Theatre, Toronto, operated by Jerry Shea of Toronto; one of the theatres of London, Ontario, and the Toronto Hippodrome which is now operated by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, this house being the parent theatre of the chain of 60 theatres in Canada of Famous Players. It is intimated that the Hippodrome at Toronto will be taken back by the Keith organization for a combination policy of pictures and vaudeville in place of the present straight film and music programs.

With the development of the new Keith organization in the Dominion, announcement is made that the Franklin Theatre at Ottawa, the Canadian Capital, will be replaced by a much larger new theatre which is to be erected at once under the direction of J. M. Franklin, who is a director of the new company. Shea's Theatre at Toronto will be remodelled, new details being an improved lobby and a new front. At Hamilton the Lyric Theatre is to be rebuilt into a more modern structure.

The new Keith Canadian company absorbs the Montreal Operating Company, Limited, which was E. F. Albee's own Canadian company for a number of years past, as well as the Canadian United Theatres, Limited, and other subsidiary organizations. The Imperial, Montreal; Franklin of Ottawa; Lyric, Hamilton; Majestic, London and the Toronto Hippodrome offer feature as well as other film subjects in addition to the vaudeville. The Princess, Montreal, and Toronto Shea's use short films along with vaudeville.

Eastman Donates Rochester for N. V. A. Benefit

George Eastman has donated the Eastman Theatre at Rochester for the midnight performance to be given for the National Vaudeville Artists the coming Tuesday night. The management of the affair is in the hands of the Theatrical Managers Association of Rochester. All proceeds will go to the sick and benefit funds of the N.V.A.

Big blocks of seats have been taken by Rochester Ad Club, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions, Columbus, Elks, Moose, and other organizations.

Famous New Haven Theatre to Be Modernized

The Hyperion, oldest theatre in the city of New Haven is to be demolished and rebuilt by S. Z. Poli. It has housed in the last half century some of the most famous dramatic, vaudeville, burlesque and operatic stars.

The house will be officially closed to the public April 26th and reconstruction work will be started two days later. It is expected work will be concluded by August of this year.

Receiver Appointed for N. Y. Motion Pictures

Creditors and stockholders of New York Motion Picture Company were granted their appeal and a receiver will be appointed to take possession of the assets and distribute them prorata.

Metro-Goldwyn Amalgamation Deal Not Yet Completed

NEGOTIATIONS are still in progress looking toward the amalgamation of Goldwyn with Metro. Although the official announcement of the completion of the deal was expected momentarily this week, an official of Metro told Motion Picture News on Tuesday that the papers had not been signed.

That the proposed amalgamation would have little or no effect in Canadian distributing circles was the announcement which was made by N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corporation and of Regal Films, Limited, at Toronto. It was pointed out that both Goldwyn and Metro features were already being distributed in Canada by the same company, namely Regal Films, Limited, and that this was practically the effect of the amalgamation in the United States.

In addition to Metro and Goldwyn releases, Regal Films also handles Warner Bros., Pathe and various British and independent pictures in Canada, having branches in Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary, Montreal, Vancouver and St. John for this purpose. Regal is affiliated with Famous Players Canadian Corporation and with Famous Lasky Film Service, the latter distributing Paramount subjects through its own offices.

The main result of the prospective amalgamation at New York is that plans are under way in Canada for a joint distribution arrangement of Goldwyn and Metro features in the Dominion.

Ten Million Dollars In Circuit Box Offices

WEST Coast Theatres, Inc., received nearly ten million dollars in paid admissions during 1923 according to Sol Lesser, vice-president of that circuit.

Approximately 25,000,000 persons attended the West Coast theatres which cover the state of California in a thorough manner. With large and beautiful theatres in all important cities and towns along the coast.

"The greatest care is always exercised," says the executive, "in the selection of motion pictures for our circuit. We think not only of the presentation in the large cities, but we must also take into consideration the smaller towns in which we operate theatres. Pictures must be selected that will appeal and please every day. We cannot take chances nor gamble on production with only the metropolitan audience in mind.

Lesser outlined the various departments and their functions, bringing to bear the fact that fourteen new theatres are now being planned and built as additions to the vast circuit.

New Delaware Charters Are Granted

Dover, Delaware, granted the following film charters the past few days: Superior Art Motion Pictures, Inc., capital allowed, $50,000; incorporators, M. B. Reese and L. S. Dorsey of Wilmington, Del. Philias or Phidias Film Corporation, Inc., capital, $50,000; incorporators, Wilber A. McCoy, Pittsburgh, Pa., I. N. Lofland, Frank Jackson of Dover, Del. The Palma Pictures Corporation, Inc. of New York City was permitted to change the corporate name to "Associated Arts Corporation, Inc.," New York City.

Elsie Horton Studios, Inc., was chartered to take over the business of Elsie Horton Studio, Inc., Minneapolis, Minnesota; capital of the new firm, $5,000.

Tilford Productions, Inc., capitalization $10,000. Samuel S. Wood, Henry C. Hand, Raymond J. Gorman, and associates, all of New York City, incorporators.

Crandall's Strand In Quick Flood Recovery

Crandall's Strand Theatre at Cumberland, Maryland showed unusual enterprise in completely reestablishing itself within one week following the most disastrous flood experienced in the territory.

The theatre was completely filled by water as a result of the flood. It is said to have been four feet above the stage level and twenty feet deep in the orchestra pit. Organ and seats were completely ruined. By working a force of fifty men day and night a new organ and new seats were installed on the orchestra floor and the theatre reopened just one week following the flood.

Louis Brock Will Marry New York Girl

Louis V. Brock of First National foreign department is to join the ranks of the benedicts. The announcement of his engagement to Helen V. Starr has been made by her parents who reside at 370 Riverside Drive. The wedding is to take place in June.

Cohen Attacks Music Society as Trust

Hearing Held at Washington

THE American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers was attacked as a "trust" in testimony given by Sydney S. Cohen, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at a hearing on the Dill Bill before the Senate Committee on Patents at Washington last week.

Senator Ernst, of Kentucky, chairman of the committee, presided and the hearing was held on the measure introduced by Senator Dill, of Washington, to effect amendments in the Copyright Law to relieve the radio people from payment of the Music Tax.

Mr. Cohen submitted an extended argument in favor of the bill and urged that it be made specific in caring for the interests of theatre owners as well as the radio companies. He contended that the framers of the present Copyright Law never intended to have it used as a "legal blackjack."

Senator Ernst evinced a disposition to extend the protection of the Dill Bill to theatre owners and another hearing was scheduled for Thursday, April 17. Arrangements were made to hold a hearing before the House Patents Committee on three bills before that body having the remedying of the License Tax in view. This hearing will be held on Friday, April 25.

Senator Ernst stated that any other features that were appropriate could be included in supplemental argument or a brief to be sent to the Committee, and requested the theatre owners to be represented at the hearing April 17. Mr. Cohen and M. J. O'Toole, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Public Service Department will represent the organization at this hearing.

Cohen Submits Brief

The radio interests were represented at the Senate hearing by Attorney Tuttle of New York, President E. F. McDonald of Chicago and others.

Following is the brief submitted to the Senate Committee by Mr. Cohen:

"As President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and representing Theatre Owners in every state in the Union as well as my own theatre holdings in New York City, I desire to register our protest against the unfair and discriminatory operations of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, or what is commonly known as the 'Music Trust,' in compelling Theatre Owners and others to pay a music license fee for performing music, in which the theatre owner secured property rights through purchase or which was sent to them for demonstration purposes by the agents of the Society levying the tax upon them.

"As Exhibitors of Motion Pictures we make no direct charge for the music rendered in our theatres, that being incident only to the picture presentation which constitutes the performance. The justice of the situation has always been fully satisfied, if indeed there is any equity resident on the side of the Music Trust; through the great value our playing of the music to millions of people daily has been to the Authors and Publishers and others interested in the sale of the music to the public.

"We do confine the presentation of the picture to those within the Theatre who must have an unobstructed view of the Screen. We do not confine the rendition of the music as that may be heard anywhere where sound may penetrate. Therefore our use of the music cannot be said to come within the purview of what is being retailed for profit or that we enter into any resale of the copyrighted article within the intent of the act of Congress or what was proposed by those who framed and passed the law now being perverted into a legal blackjack by the agents of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in levying tribute upon the Theatre Owners of the country.

"In order to fully understand the present conditions under which a Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers of music seek to levy periodical tribute from the motion picture theatres, radio, hotels and cabarets having orchestras and performing music which such theatres, radio, hotels and the like buy in the open market, it is necessary to go back to the history of the enactment of public performing rights for works held under copyright.

Protection of Author

"The original copyright laws of the United States gave protection to the works of an author only against its reproduction in tangible form, that is, in the form of copies which could be handed from one person to another. The right so accorded afforded no protection to a play which was not written for the purpose of reproduction in copies, but solely for representation and among the early amendments and additions to the rights given under copyright following petitions from the dramatic authors and producers showing that this character of production was wholly unprotected under copyright. An Act was passed approved August 18, 1856, under which 'any dramatic composition designed or suited for public representation shall be deemed and taken to confer upon the author or proprietor * * * the sole right * * * to act, perform and represent the same or cause it to be acted, performed or represented on any stage or public place during the whole period for which the copyright is obtained.'

"This provision continued in effect until 1909, inasmuch as the Act of March 4, copyright law immediately prior to the enactment of 1909 (Section 4952 of the Revised Statutes was as follows:

"'Section 4952. The author, inventor, designer or proprietor of any book, map, chart, dramatic or musical composition, engraving, cut, print, or photograph or negative thereof, or of a painting, drawing, chromo, statue, statuary, and of models or designs intended to be perfected as works of the fine arts, and the executors, administrators, or assigns of any such person shall, upon complying with the provisions of this chapter, have the sole liberty of printing, reprinting, publishing, completing, copying, executing, finishing, and vending the same; and, in the case of a dramatic composition, of publicly performing or representing it, or causing it to be performed or represented by others; and authors or their assigns shall have exclusive right to dramatize and translate any of their works for which copyright shall have been obtained under the laws of the United States.'

"It is true that prior to the enactment of the last copyright act the theatrical authors and producers of musical plays petitioned Congress against the unauthorized reproduction of their musical plays and an amendment was passed (Section 4966) making a penalty for performing dramatic and musical compositions, but inasmuch as the act carried no rights in regard to music, there was never any action taken under this provision as it was a remedy given without a right.

Performance for Profit

"In the several hearings under the various bills introduced prior to the enactment of the present copyright law, it was shown to the Committee that in many instances songs were written exclusively for specific vaudeville performance which were not reproduced in copies for sale and that many of the numbers of operas, operettas and musical comedies which were separately registered as musical numbers had no protection against public performance and it was urged that works written for stage purposes, that is, written for the purpose of public performance for profit, should be protected under the law. No claim was made at that time against the performance, public or otherwise, of musical works not so written and when the Committee reported a bill giving the right 'to perform a copyrighted work publicly for profit if it be a musical composition and for the purposes of public performance for profit.' The Committee and Congress had no intention of extending this protection beyond works written for production or performance upon the stage.

"All of this is clearly shown under the various Committee hearings and even under the report of the Committee (Report No. 2222, 60th Congress, Second Section, accompanying H. R. 28192) in which this provision is not even referred to as a new right and wherein the entire report covers rights and remedies under mechanical reproduction as

Ask Exhibitors Cooperation for Music Week

MOTION picture houses will cooperate with the National Music Week Committee in the observance of Music Week, May 4 to 10. Already 227 cities have lined up for the ceremonies and the committee expects the number will be increased to over 400.

The committee is recommending especially the use of films which call for a standard musical accompaniment and also films which introduce community singing by the audience. The featuring of groups or solos and ensemble numbers by local soloists, choruses or orchestras is also suggested.

Information and slides may be had from the committee at their headquarters 105 West 40th St., New York City.

Cohen Attacks Music Society being the only new rights afforded music generally.

"In the earlier actions by the 'Music Trust' all of these facts were apparently overlooked in the presentation of the case to the courts, but whether overlooked or not it is patent upon the examination of the records of the hearings that Congress did not contemplate giving any exclusive public performing rights for music generally which could be purchased in the open market, and the appeals of the motion picture theatres, radio, hotels, cabarets, etc. now made are largely for a copyright law which would effect the intention of the Congress which passed the existing act.

"The purpose of music written generally for sale cannot be for public performing purposes, but instead is for the purpose of sale and distribution, and the Copyright Committee reporting the old bill thought the provisions of the present copyright law were so plain as not to require any explanation in that regard.

"Music cannot be read as a literary work. Its meaning and its harmony cannot be conveyed to the senses merely through the eyes, but it must be translated through the medium of instruments in order to be conveyed to the senses. The sole purpose of the sale of sheet music is that it be played upon the instrument for which that music is arranged and thereby conveyed to the senses of those within hearing distance. If an orchestration cannot be reproduced by an orchestra, then it is published without purpose because there would never be a copy sold merely that such copy might be read. This applies equally to piano scores, vocal scores and the like.

"In direct conflict with the intention of Congress the various music publishers' organizations (which were so bitterly attacked at the hearings before the Committee on Patents) effected through a combination with the authors a complete trust as to a major part of the music written in America under which they sought and have been levying tribute from the purchaser of every sheet of music sold for using that music for the very purpose of its purchase. Music is only bought to be played and we are merely asking Congress the right to use the purchased sheets for the purpose for which said purchase was made.

"We do not believe it ever was, is, or ever will be the purpose of Congress to take away from the American people all rights to elements where sound is the basic circumstance and concentrate in any given group the privilege to levy tribute on the public for the right to hear music. Obviously, composers and authors are entitled to certain exclusive privileges and the enjoyment of the profits associated with their own genius and enterprise. But these can never be allowed to prejudice the rights of the people as the enjoyment of any trade or other privilege through the operation of any law must of necessity be always predicated on the fact that the public rights are concerned. In fact the benefit of every doubt in this relation must of necessity be given to the public as from this source all power and protection in republics proceed.

"As Motion Picture Theatre Owners we aim to serve the public. We have placed the demonstration and publicity powers of our theatre screens at the disposal of the National Govenment through direct conference with the President of the United States and the heads of governmental departments. We speak to several million people a day through our screens, entertaining, instructing and advising them through the universal language of the eye.

"Different departments of the National Government and the governing powers of many states and cities are now availing themselves of this screen power to advance the special work of particular service to the people. In this relation educational programs predominate with agricultural features and other public developments in line. We desire to make this screen service of maximum value to nation, state and community and all of it is entirely free. We desire to extend it and seek to avoid everything which will hamper us in any way.

"Many of these public service programs will center about the National Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America which opens in Boston May 27th next and from that point new lines of procedure involving the advancement of governmental energies through the screen will be projected.

"I feel that this service will be augmented through helpful Congressional action which will give to the Motion Picture Theatre an absolutely square deal. Our joint functions operate along parallel lines to a great extent and to that limit, service as free as possible to the people is our common purpose.

"We give reciprocal service to the authors and composers of music and songs through the demonstration power of our screens and theatres generally. This has been recognized fully by the authors and composers and was the rule in our business with both sides fully satisfied until an Act of Congress was constructed into a legal black-jack with no limit to the exactions or extortions to be practiced under its provisions.

"The discrimination against the American public possible here, and the extent to which it is practiced makes it positively dangerous and places an embargo on American genius by limiting the output of meritorious musical productions.

"The power to discriminate against individual Authors and Composers by the pooling of copyrights into a trust formation destroys initiative in many well disposed and capable people, who might add unmeasurably to the volume of American music and song if they were given an outlet for their efforts and encouraged.

"The restriction of musical genius is a national danger in the sense that music has so much to do with composing and soothing the minds of all, that holding this expression in check along any line breaks in on what was otherwise a harmonious situation.

"We feel that the service of the Motion Picture Theatre to the public, our ability to popularize and advance the interests of Authors and Publishers amply guarantees them against any possible loss in this exercise of copyright privileges, insures them added revenues under mutually helpful arrangements, makes it certain that the public are denied none of those necessary privileges, through trust processes and that Congress can with fairness, equity and propriety so adjust these situations through proposed amendments to the copyright law that all concerned will have full and complete justice meted out to them."

No Kansas Delegates to Boston Convention

NO delegates to the national convention of the M. P. T. O. A. have been named by the Kansas state organization and, according to a concensus of opinion among leading exhibitors, none will be.

Since the break between the Kansas association and the national body Kansas has been devoting its interests solely to building up its own organization and cooperating with officials of other state organizations.

It is doubtful if preliminary re-organization work of the M. P. T. O. Western Missouri unit is completed in time for the naming of national delegates, leaving both Western Missouri and Kansas not represented at a national convention for the first time in several years.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Kansas body in Kansas City, April 21, plans for a membership drive will be arranged and recommendations of the ways and means committee discussed. The membership goal is 350 managers of six and seven-day a week houses. According to C. E. Cook, business manager, the association now is in better financial condition than ever before.

Pen Women Will Discuss Picture Problems

A discussion of motion pictures will feature the conference of the National League of American Pen Women at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D. C., April 23rd.

The principal topic of discussion will be, "How can writers and producer cooperate to produce the best in screen drama?" Representatives of a number of producing companies will endeavor to solve the problem with the pen women.

"The six best films I ever saw and why I list them" should also offer some valuable information. A questionnaire regarding other vital matters to the industry will be submitted to the delegates present.

Carew Granted Attachment Against Terriss

Arthur Edmund Carew who has filed suit in the amount of $6,000, which he alleges is due him as salary, was granted an attachment during the week against Tom Terriss and Tom Terriss productions.

Carew claims he was to receive $750 a week in connection with "The Bandolero," but that the director later negotiated with Pedro de Cordoba and engaged the latter for the part.

More Than a Million Earned by Stanley

From Philadelphia comes the news that the Stanley Company of America earned in the twelve months of 1923 the sum of $1,110,816 before taxes and depreciation were charged off as against $964,280 earned in 1922. Box office receipts were more than seven million dollars.

New York Censor Board Refused More Money

Although the Motion Picture Commission of New York State applied for $3,000 more to provide for another deputy commissioner, Governor Smith refused the request.

Giving Thought to Foreign Markets

By Ralph J. Pugh, 1st National

Editor's Note—This is the first of a series of articles, written especially for the Motion Picture News, on the manner in which American producers can increase the demand for their films in the various foreign countries. They are written by men of the field who have had a chance to study the problems of foreign distribution carefully. They should have a message for every producer. The author of this first article is Managing Director of Associated First National of England.

THE suggestion that American producers might be interested in helpful criticism and general discussion of the manner in which their films are greeted in foreign countries brought me considerable pleasure. There probably is not a man in charge of film distribution outside of the United States who has not at one time or another wanted to get up in class and speak a little piece that would reach the makers of the films he and others of his like are handling. He feels that in many things, the producer is not making the most of the opportunities the foreign field holds forth. The feeling is not one of specious fault-finding, but one engendered by the wish "If they could only see the things as I do."

And right away it should be said that there isn't the slightest desire to preach. The desire to talk is merely that of a friend who wishes to politely advise a friend that he is making a mistake. The chap who appeared in evening clothes, wearing tan shoes would be greeted with snickers. The American film which appears in a foreign country violating in a detail the customs of that country is met with guffaws. If the evening-dressed chap had known that tan shoes were not being worn with that garb, he would not have put them on. If the American producer knew just what the customs of a foreign country prescribed, he would adhere to them. That doesn't mean that he does not adhere to them as a rule, but here and there are serious slips that hurt. It is with something of this in mind that I want to say a bit about the present situation in what the English call "the kinema industry."

Three Factors Predominate

In visualizing the position of the British market for American pictures, these are three factors which predominate.

Firstly, the American producer can no longer look upon the sale of the production in the British Isles as a foregone conclusion. The production in this country is making recognizable progress. Recently, with the aid of the British Film Week movement, newspapers have played upon and stirred up patriotism. Although a measure of praise is accorded to foreign productions which undeniably merit it, every favor is being granted in the Press to the home products.

Secondly, the sale of any product to exhibitors is a highly competitive proposition in Great Britain and Ireland. By comparison, it is far more competitive than in America. In this territory the whole of the product of America, Great Britain and Europe is offered to numbering less than one-fourth the number of exhibitors in America. In other words, the supply in this territory is infinitely greater than the demand with the usual results.

Ralph J. Pugh, British Manager for First National.

Thirdly, the undeveloped patronage of cinema entertainment by the British public.

In regard to the first factor, I venture the prediction that it would pay the American producer to recognize the ultimate if not the rapid improvement of British film production. It is a fact that the majority of British pictures exploited in this territory secure higher rentals than pictures of approximately equal merit from foreign sources. I do not think this is due so much to patriotism as to the insistence on the part of the British producer of meeting the tastes of British audiences.

In regard to the second factor, the law of supply and demand is simple enough in its operation. Exhibitors in this territory have an abundant supply to choose from. Consequently the weaker pictures most inevitably go to the wall, for a quart jug will only hold one quart. I submit it would pay producers to think twice before insisting upon spending money on positive prints, advertising and distribution for pictures which are admittedly weak by comparison and that they would gross as much from four good pictures as they would six pictures of which two were weak.

British Theatre Patronage

In regard to the third factor, the patronage of the British Cinema is about one half of what it should be. The other half are to be found among the higher classes socially. This is due partly to the indifferent presentation of many pictures and partly to the quality of the pictures themselves. Thousands of these prospective patrons decline to subject themselves either to the discomforts of badly ventilated, smoke-ridden, badly furnished theatres, or to the nerve-racking accompaniment of cheap and faulty music. How far American producers are prepared to improve this state of affairs by assisting in their own interests in the building and running of modern theatres is not for me to conjecture.

The type of picture, however, is definitely the responsibility of the American producer and herein lies his opportunity to boost business by catering to the requirements of the prospective British cinema goers. I suggest two things, viz, more accuracy in detail in connection with British stories and more regard for the British national distaste for the "raw" in drama and comedy.

A film may provide splendid entertainment from the point of view of heart interest and appeal, but the critic of the Trade and Newspaper press is too often disposed to ignore these qualities and throw the limelight on technical defects if he can possibly find them, because in so doing he is pampering to the "high-brows"—who are our prospective patrons.

Exhibitors moreover are influenced in their judgment by these criticisms. Therefore it is especially encumbent on the American to ensure that no opportunity is placed in the hands of crities to mar his picture which care would prevent. In a recent Firt National picture "The Voice from the Minaret" for instance, the producer depicted a London fog outside a church whilst inside the church the atmosphere was perfectly clear. Actually a London fog insists on filling every corner of the interior, even of a church.

In an American film representing an English aristocratic family, an Earl walks through the majority of the scenes clad in a velvet dressing gown with a conspicuously large coat-of-arms embroidered on the left breast. The coat-of-arms is, of course, an impossible decoration for such a garment.

English Criticisms

In "Glimpses of the Moon" an English lord returning to his home after a vacation is met by servants lined up from the butler down to the kitchen maid, who as he passes down the ranks, bow low one after the other. At the end of the "inspection" the company is dismissed. This sort of thing does not happen in England in Lord's houses or anybody else's.

In "Name the Man" at the swearing in of the Deemster, the Court is thronged with lawyers in full-bottomed wigs and every other description of wig; military men loaded with orders and medals and soldiers in khaki line the aisle of the court. This is absolutely incorrect court procedure in any part of England at any time, especially in the Isle of Man. Moreover, when the bodyguard is called out after the prisoner's escape, soldiers on horseback tear to the prison with what looks something like the uniform of the Grenadier Guards, complete with busbies. Busbies are used as parade uniform only and the Grenadier Guards are a foot regiment. All this sort of thing is absolutely

Coolidge Invited By M. P. T. O. A.

Cohen and Exhibitor Committee Calls on President at White House

NATION President Sydney S. Cohen and members of the M. P. T. O. A. National Convention Committee called on President Coolidge at the White House in Washington last week and extended to him a formal invitation to attend the convention at Boston in May.

The exhibitor committee was introduced by Congressman Homer P. Snyder, of Little Falls, N. Y.

"Mr. Cohen thanked the President for the courtesy extended to the theatre owners, and read to him a letter of invitation to the Boston convention.

The President thanked the committee for the invitation, and said he would give the matter consideration with reference to his other engagements and advise them soon of his decision.

After the meeting with the committee in the White House offices the President and theatre owners were filmed on the White House grounds by the different screen weeklies.

Members of the Committee present were National Vice Presidents Joseph Mogler of St. Louis, Mo.; Martin G. Smith of Toledo, O., President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio, and Joseph W. Walsh of Hartford, Conn., President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut. National Directors—M. E. Comerford of Scranton, Pa.; R. F. Woodhull of Dover, N. J., President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey; and A. Julian Brylawski of Washington, D. C. National Executive Committee Members— W. W. Watts of Springfield, Ill., and Dave Adams of Concord, N. H., President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Hampshire. Louis Sagal, General Manager of the Poli Circuit of Connecticut and Massachusetts; Former Mayor and Mrs. Samuel Campner of New Haven, Conn.; Harry Crandall, "Daddy" Brylawski and Lawrence Beatus of Washington, D. C.; Michael Nash of St. Louis, Mo.; Thomas D. Goldberg of Baltimore, Md.; Joseph Seider of Newark, N. J., Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey; Hyman Rachmiel of Brooklyn, N. Y., Member of the Board of Directors of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City; Samuel Schwartz, Treasurer of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City and Marty and Charles Schwartz, Brooklyn theatre owners; M. J. O'Toole, Chairman, Public Service Department of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and National President Sydney S. Cohen.

N. Y. Delegation to Attend M. P. T. O. A. Convention

THEATRE owners from many parts of the United States are advising the M. P. T. O. A. that they will be in attendance at the annual meeting to be held in Boston, May 27, 28 and 29. Following a meeting of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Astor in New York, Tuesday, it was announced that approximately 250 exhibitors from New York state and Greater New York had signified their intention of making the trip.

A committee on convention arrangements was named at this meeting consisting of Samuel Sonin, chairman; Sol Raives, Sam Moross and Clarence Cohen.

The M. P. T. O. A. has received word that delegations will be on hand at Boston from Colorado, Montana, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Washington, California, Oregon and Utah.

President Sydney Cohen told the Astor meeting of his visit to President Coolidge and the invitation to the President to attend the Boston session.

Mary and Famous Players Divide Pictures

Mary Pickford and Famous Players-Lasky have divided the twenty-one pictures produced by Miss Pickford for the Famous Players Film Co. and Artcraft several years ago. The pictures had been owned jointly, but now Famous has selected ten and Miss Pickford eleven, and the ownership of each group is vested in the respective parties.

It was the conference between Miss Pickford and Adolph Zukor relative to the division of the pictures which led the rumor papers to jump at the conclusion that the star was to return to the Paramount fold. The elaborate stories printed in these papers thus vanish into thin air.

Famous Players selected the following ten productions: "Stella Maris," "Hulda from Holland," "Amarilly of Clothesline Alley," "The Little Princess," "Little Pal," "A Romance of the Redwoods," "Capt. Kidd, Jr.," "A Girl of Yesterday," "The Eternal Grind," "How Could You, Jean?".

Miss Pickford selected the following eleven: "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "The Pride of the Clan," "Less Than The Dust," "The Poor Little Rich Girl," "The Foundling," "Rags," "Madame Butterfly," "Johanna Enlists," "The Little American," "M'liss" and "Poor Little Papina."

St. Louis Theatre Robbed of $1200

A blond youth, nattily attired, robbed Sam Norman, manager of the New Lindell theater, 3517 Grand boulevard, St. Louis, on the morning of March 31, escaping with the Saturday and Sunday receipts, estimated by the police at $1,200. The loss was covered by insurance.

Fred Becht, a visitor; Mrs. Elizabeth Vassel and her daughter, Elizabeth, employes of the theater, were in the office when the robber entered. Norman was about to go to the bank to deposit the money which he had prepared in two packages. The theater is owned by the St. Louis Amusement Company.

New Brunswick Amusement Tax $57,369

Revenue secured by the Province of New Brunswick through the provincial amusement tax during 1923 amounted to $57,369.40, according to an announcement on April 3 from the provincial government offices at Fredericton, N. B.

Joseph Walsh Indorsed for M. P. T. O. A. Presidency

JOSEPH W. WALSH, president of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut is advanced by that organization as a candidate for the presidency of the M. P. T. O. A. A resolution to that effect was adopted by the organization at the meeting held in New Haven April 1st.

Mr. Walsh is a member of the National Executive Committee and National Vice-President. He is also a member of various important committees and has been a hard worker in the interest of both the National and Connecticut organizations.

Toronto Musicians' Strike Quickly Settled

An interesting story is told in connection with the recent brief strike of musicians at Toronto, Ontario, when the orchestras of some 20 houses, the majority of which were controlled by the Famous Players Canadian Corp., decided to walk out only to return to the pits on the second day. The musicians did not have a real grievance, it is said, as their demands had been met last summer.

For several years there had been no written agreement between the musicians and the managers, but the latter had lived up to the letter of verbal arrangements. The musicians decided, however, that they wanted signed contracts and when they were not forthcoming quickly, a strike was called by the Toronto Musicians' Protective Association.

The immediate result was that a conference was called by N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players in Canada, and the matter was straightened out without question.

Latvia Reports Imported Film for 1922

Latvia imported during 1922, films, worth $71,000 in American money. Imports of electrical and scientific apparatus, film projection equipment, etc., amounted to $250,000 in American currency.

In lithographs, Latvia shipped during 1921, forty pounds worth $40. With regard to Photographic goods, negatives aggregating 6,000 linear feet, worth $195 were sent here.

Music Tax Society Sued by Former Member

SUIT was started in the United States District Court in New York last week against the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers by Waterson Berlin & Snyder, music publishers, and former members of the Society.

The claim of the American Society that it has exclusive right to control the radio broadcasting of songs and music written by its members is contested. It is alleged that the agreement whereby members assigned to the society the exclusive right of public performance for profit does not apply to radio broadcasting.

The plaintiff charges an attempt to restrain and monopolize interstate commerce on the part of the defendants

The suit is of interest to exhibitors because it involves some of the principles at stake in the fight against the so-called Music Tax collected by the Society from motion picture theatres

Chain Houses and Distribution Evils

Louis R. Greenfield Gives Views

An interesting discussion of the chain theatre problem and defects in present distribution methods is contained in a letter written by Louis R. Greenfield, prominent theatre owner of San Francisco, to Will H. Hays. Mr. Greenfield sent a copy of the letter to Motion Picture News for publication.

Incidentally, Mr. Greenfield is entering the Motion Picture News Distribution Plan Prize Contest. The letter follows: "As a theatre owner, I am daily receiving letters from the editorial departments of the trade journals and from different organizations interested in our industry containing questions, queries and asking for my ideas and impressions regarding the different action and movements taking place in the motion picture industry.

"It would keep a corps of private secretaries busy taking care of and answering this correspondence and, after all is said and done, all of the questions submitted and theories advanced affect just about two vital situations. Evidently something is wrong. Possibly one angle of the industry is underdone and another overdone; it may be that some of the distribution channels are clogged; possibly some part of the machinery not visible to our eyes is not working just right. If this was not the case, there would not be so many people trying to find out what that something is. I feel that the industry is being vitally affected by these two conditions. One condition has existed for many years and the other is just now coming into prominence. The last named condition, and, I am sure most interested people will agree me, is the formation of the chain theatre.

The Chain Idea

"In the commercial world, where retail sales prices depend a whole lot upon buying power, the chain idea is an excellent one. Staple articles of merchandise are in demand in practically every nook and corner of the world. As an example: Ivory Soap is in as much demand in Wichita, Kan., as it is in San Francisco, New York, or Chicago, and the firm controlling a chain of stores across the United States can buy car-loads of Ivory Soap for distribution in its stores and know this article is saleable in any community. In buying this product in car-load lots, they do so at a price either enabling them to sell it at a close figure and turn their money over quickly at a small profit, or selling at the regular price to make a larger profit than the individual merchant buying a case at a time and paying a price accordingly.

"I think this situation exists in nearly every commercial line. Commercial brands that have a known selling power can be bought at a figure and distributed all over the United States with an assurance to the buyer that the product is staple and saleable regardless of what community it is offered to. However, even in the business world, the big stores do not find the chain idea practicable. The idea is really only practicable where nationally advertised and nationally known brands are concerned. Also, regardless of what the product might be, each community is differently situated tempermentally and demands individual attention and application which cannot be given under the chain system.

"I am quite certain that the selling of motion pictures to exhibitors and to the public is diametrically opposite in theory and practice to the selling of a staple article of trade. It has been demonstrated conclusively time after time with hundreds of pictures that a production that is satisfactory and becomes a big success in one community can be a total loss in another. It has been proved that even in the big cities several theatres in different localities playing the same picture have shown a wide variance in box office receipts. Therefore, it does not seem practical that an organization operating fifteen or twenty theatres in different parts of the country can buy productions at a stabilized price for the whole circuit and offer a fair trade to either the producer or the public.

Penalizing the Producer

"Also in direct contrast to a commercial enterprise, an organization operating a chain of theatres and buying pictures at a price for the whole circuit does not do so with the idea of selling the product to the public at a discount. Theatre admission prices are generally universally maintained and the only effect of the purchasing power of the chain theatre seems to be to penalize the producer by forcing him to accept a certain figure regardless of production value or box office returns. Because of this practice, but one condition can be forthcoming, and that is producers will be forced to make pictures that will conform to the prices offered by chain theatres thereby turning out mediocre productions upon which the outlay has been dangerously minimized and the result will be that the industry will be forced to return to its experimental stage.

"If this becomes a fact, the individually owned theatres, that have been in a great measure responsible for the progressive change which has made motion pictures the most popular form of amusement today, will suffer and a condition of chaos will prevail which will undo the many years of constructive effort which has made our industry the great factor in public life that it is today. I cannot help but feel alarmed for the future because as an exhibitor selling the product from the producer direct to the public it is to my great interest that the producer make the best picture he knows how.

"Now as to the conditions which have existed for many years and which also in a measure are linked with the chain theatre idea, and, for that matter, with every move of the industry, I think that the method and manner of distributing, selling and marketing motion pictures from the producer to the exhibitor can be greatly improved. I can see all around me wasted energy, wasted effort, wasted money, unnecessary conflict, interference, lost motion and aimless procedure in the present method of selling motion pictures to the exhibitor.

"Each exchange in each key locality must sell its attractions at a certain figure if possible in order to maintain a given quota necessarily given to realize the national valuation. Each exchange manager hires salesmen to go through the country selling the product bearing their particular trademark. After contracts are signed, a certain routine is followed getting pictures from the vaults to one theatre and then back again for inspection and then out again. Each exchange must keep tract of the picture and the money it brings in to the office, the expenses of salesmen, salaries of people employed to take care of the sale, shipping and distribution of the pictures, et cetera. Expenses for the moving of the film are heavy and road salesmen are not the most inexpensive employees in the country. Thousands of dollars are today unnecessarily expended by each exchange in each key locality that I feel could be saved were a new and scientific plan put into effect.

"I know no other line of endeavor than motion pictures. From the first day I entered a business career until the present, my mind has been occupied commercially by nothing but motion pictures. I have pioneered with our industry and made rapid strides along with it. I have studied, thought and tried to improve theories and also to put into practice many ideas. I have tried to run my own business not on theory but along practical business lines. I am essentially a motion picture man, but primarily I am a business man. I feel that any enterprise whereby the dollar changes hands from one party to another in legitimate trade is a commercial enterprise and can be run on sound business principles. Many times during my career as a motion picture exhibitor, I have found it hard to apply sound business principles to this very erratic industry but somehow or other, these principles always dominate and a business man can find a large degree of success even in the motion picture industry that does not come to a show man who is not at the same time a business man.

"After studying the situation from every angle, I can see the practicability of a plan which I am submitting to you.

"As conditions exist today, the exhibitor is traveling about from one office to another talking prices, buying pictures, booking them, canceling them, making contracts and breaking contracts and doing the thousand and

Woman Censor Declares Pictures Are Better

MRS. EMMA SPEED SAMPSON, of the Virginia Censor Board says the movies are getting better.

"With Chairman Evan Chesterman and R. C. L. Moncure, I find the greatest improvement in photography and acting," she declared at the new projection room, new state office building, Richmond. She has been member, vice-chairman and secretary of the Board since its inception in July, 1922.

The board has in the time since then reviewed more than 8,236,000 linear feet of film, in excess of 1,181 miles. Of that footage but 9 films in 2,656 pictures have been rejected in toto. In 308 films, eliminations were ordered.

Chairman Chesterman said "I see but little progress in comedies. Most of these particular films are still filled with slapstick over-drawn sketches, only the mechanical effects having advanced."

Giving Thought to Foreign Markets

contrary to things English. Prisons are not in any way run by the Army. The Deemster, or Governor of an adjacent island would not have a military bodyguard. The whole procedure of the court is wrong. When the girl, who is supposed to be wealthy, seems to have the right of entry how and when she likes about the prison and against all court precedence, takes up her position by the prisoner in the dock, etc. addresses the bench and barristers as and when she likes. English court procedure is and always has been formal and strict and there are no exceptions to it, except at the discretion of a judge which one might say is practically never exercised.

The servants in modern English houses, as represented by American producers often still cling to feudal habits and reverence for their employers. Every time an Englishman speaks to his butler, he bows low. Every time an English mistress gives an order to an English maid, who is always garbed like a French Revue girl, she courtesys. It did happen once upon a time in England, but today—never.

In the First National picture "Lorna Doone" the Beefeaters, who took part in a royal ceremony, presumably at Westminster Abbey, strike one as being wrong immediately one sees them. On analysing the impression, one finds it is because they are all young, clean-shaven men, whereas, of necessity, a Beefeater is a middle aged retired Army man. He cannnot be a Beefeater unless he is a pensioner.

In "Three Live Ghosts" which was made by an American producer in London, the interior of a West End house belonging to a Lord, looks like the state apartments in one of the Royal residences, but the exterior of the house is the frontage of the Atheneum Club which everybody who has been in London knows and will recognize. It is nothing like the exterior of an ordinary London residence. The majority of the members of the aristocracy live in ordinary houses and not in something that looks like a museum.

In one of Mary Pickford's films, everybody in London was commenting on the quaint motorbus which was alleged to be English with its humorous stens at the back. Doubtless, since Mary Pickford's visit to London such a mistake will not occur again.

The instances of humorous London policemen with odd shaped helmets, etc. are so numerous as to have almost ceased to be amusing. Policemen's uniforms are very easy to obtain, and the details most easy to copy and get correct. The details concerning these can easily be ascertained.

The way Englishmen address women and their ordinary behavior towards them is frequently inaccurate. The general social manners of Englishmen or English women are probably no better than those of any other nationality, but they are different from any other nationality's and it is this atmosphere which is so often lacking in American productions.

Instances of this kind could be multiplied. They may seem trivial but in view of the present British critics' atttude to American films, they afford a handle which they do not hesitate to turn to the disadvantage of the films with the public.

Then again the taste of British audiences must be considered where a picture is seriously contemplated for British distribution. The whole of my sales force was enthusiastic about the prospects of "Tol'able David." Not only had this picture proved a Gold Medalist in America, but our faith in it was still further justified when a unanimous press, trade and newspaper also enthused about the picture. So did the exhibitor who booked it. Yet British audiences almost universally demonstrated their dislike for it. Why was that? Fond as the Britisher is of a fight, it seems that they did not like the fights in "Tol'able David." The rough behaviors of the villains, the extreme disaster befalling the hero's family, and the (to them) ugly fight at the finish, left them cold. It was all too "raw." I believe anyone with experience of American and British audiences will agree with me that the Britisher is content to sacrifice some of the punch—the vim—the excitement—if he can get his drama and his comedy "served up" to him with a special care for refinement—polish—restraint. This was the truth behind our disappointment. It is technically as perfect a picture one could wish to see—but too "raw."

Another and most important point for producers. They should see to it that the foreign negative is, if anything, a little better than the domestic negative. At least, not inferior to it. Not infrequently the producer, thinking of foreign sales, only as so much "velvet"—imagines that any old thing will do in the way of a foreign negative, so long as his own domestic negative is good.

There is at present an increasing demand for British pictures and British stories filmed with true British atmosphere. So far as Great Britain is concerned, then, British stories and British atmosphere would seem to be an avenue of increased revenue for American productions in England. But these films must be very true to British customs and taste.

Daughter of Loew Chief Weds Southerner

Miss Elizabeth Mae Schiller, daughter of E. A. Schiller, general representative of Loew's Inc., was married Monday at noon at the Hotel Biltmore, to J. Byron Akins, of Atlanta, Ga. Rev. Dr. Joseph Evans officiated.

A wedding breakfast was served immediately following the ceremony which was attended by members of the immediate families. The couple left for Atlantic City late in the afternoon and will go to Atlanta, Ga., where they will make their residence.

Premier Presentations Only for N. Y. Lyric

The New York Lyric Theatre in Forty-second street will be run as a premiere presentation first run house for feature pictures starting June 1st. Pictures will be presented under the management and direction of Andrew J. Cobs who has handled many similar Broadway presentations during the past four years.

Deadlock in Kansas City Over School Showings

TWO meetings between representatives of the Kansas City Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association and a committee of the Parent-Teacher Association, concerning the showing of pictures in public schools, have brought no definite agreement.

Many of the schools are equipped with projecting machines and have been giving regular Friday night performances and, having no taxation, have been proving a nuisance to exhibitors in neighborhood districts.

Headed by A. M. Eisner, president, members of the Kansas City exhibitors organization appeared before the board of education and requested that Friday night performances be limited to three a year. D. M. Pinkerton, president of the school board, did not favor the plan, saying the schools were equipped with projection machines which, if not used, would be worthless. Mr. Eisner pointed out that Parent-Teacher associations in the various schools could better co-operate with his association in planning benefit showings of pictures at neighborhood theatres. A meeting of the exhibitors then was held with a Parent-Teacher committee, but no agreement was reached.

way presentations during the past four years. one things that spell lost motion and wasted effort. There is no secret concerning the prices paid by different exhibitors for their attractions. The exchange managers are well informed of what is generally paid for productions other than their own, and salesmen are going through the country selling pictures at certain prices which are later either rejected by an exchange manager or by the exhibitor. I think that my plan as presented here would eliminate many unnecessary conditions.

"The producer is having his troubles because of large production costs. The formation of cliques among the directors, and other important units necessary to produce his pictures, help these costs to reach fabulous sums. It is very evident that every branch of our industry is confronted with many adverse influences and it is also very evident that an effort is being made in the production end to eliminate waste and get down to real business. Production eventually will be placed on a sound basis. Good pictures and big features will eventually be forthcoming produced under better conditions for the producer. There is no doubt that many of the faults of our industry will be corrected. But, these things will not come to pass until such times as those who control the various elements of our industry get down to real business and try to manage the entire industry in a business-like way.

"I know that there are many big minds in the motion picture industry and I also know that if the men who possess these minds would get down to 'brass tacks' and figure with a pencil in their hands instead of sitting down and only wondering, a great deal of good could be accomplished and our industry would show healthy progress instead of being confronted, as it is today, with many precarious conditions and many seemingly unsurmountable obstacles.

Two Film Bills Passed at Albany

Murphy Measure One Survivor—Three Repeal Bills Defeated in Legislature

THE motion picture industry certainly did not fare very well with the New York State Legislature this year. Not only were the three censorship repeal bills defeated, but not a single bill with but one exception, managed to survive the onslaught of the final hours. The Murphy bill amending the general business law, and relating to the manufacture and use of film of a nitro cellulose base, and removing present restrictions on the manufacture and use of this type of film, passed both houses of the Legislature and is in the hands of the Governor for consideration between now and May 10, the end of the regular thirty-day period.

This bill, which was introduced by an assemblyman from Monroe county, managed to make fairly good progress during the week prior to the closing. Apparently little general interest was taken in the bill, which provides for the regulation of booths and projection machines for the use of film made of nitro cellulose, the licensing for its manufacture and use, and other features. The State Department of Labor is empowered with the authority to issue the license necessary for the manufacture and use of this type of film. There must also be kept a record of sales and leases, while it is up to the State Department of Labor, to see to the enforcement of the law, except in New York city, where it is given over to the fire commissioner. If signed, the bill will take effect on July 1. The bill provides for the removal of all existing restrictions on non-hazardous film incidental to the purchase and use of such film.

Senator Levy's bill amending the workmen's compensation law so that it would include within its application such employees of producing companies as receive not to exceed $25 a day, or $100 a week, was defeated, dying in committee.

Senator Knight's bill, which will unquestionably bring great relief to theatre owners who may be seriously embarrassed if the proposed state building code is adopted, was passed and now in the hands of the Governor, being included in the many hundreds of thirty day bills. This bill exempts such cities in the state as have a bureau of buildings charged with the duty of enforcement of a building code enacted by the legislative body of the cities themselves.

The two Steingut measures pertaining to miniature motion picture machines, died in committee. The Murphy bill amending the general city law as to the use of film of the nitrocellulose base, passed the Assembly, but did not manage to survive in the Senate.

Of course the chief interest centered around th censorship repeal bills, three in number, but none of which survived. Following the defeat of the Davison censorship repeal bill in the Assembly on Thursday afternoon, it became a foregone conclusion that a like fate would ultimately be meted out to the Walker repeal bill which passed the Senate by a vote of 26 to 24 some hours later, but which went down to defeat at 5 o'clock in the morning in the Assembly by a vote of 77 to 64. There was but little switching from party lines in the Assembly, three Republicans, Griffith and Murphy of Monroe, and Steinberg of New York, voting with the Democrats, while Cross of Sullivan, and Franklin, of Kings, Democrats, voted against the repeal.

Assemblyman Hackenburg's efforts to bring his repeal bill from rules committee in the Assembly, was also defeated.

The Senate Chamber was far too small to accommodate the throngs that stormed its doors on Thursday night for the purpose of hearing Senator Walker's masterly speech that preceded the vote on his repeal measure.

Hurley and Totten Launch Production Work

JOSEPH BYRON TOTTEN and Ed Hurley have combined to produce a series of comedies under the title of "Happy Days," featuring children. They started work this week at their own forty-seven acre studio at Westerly, R. I.

While cameras are busy on the children, carpenters and mechanics will be at work preparing sets for the first Hugh Thompson picture which will be started next week.

It is planned to have three companies at work shortly on the Rhode Island lot. The vaudeville team of De Haven and Nice have signed for a series of two reel comedies under the title of "Mulligan and Mulligan."

The kid comedies, of which twenty-six will be made, will be directed by Totten. The first has been completed under the working title of "Men About Town."

The first of the Hugh Thompson productions, in which Thompson will be supported by Marion Haslip, will be of the rural type.

Ohio Supreme Court Hears Sunday Test Case

The Ohio State Supreme Court heard the famous Richards case last week. The case concerns R. V. Richards, exhibitor, of Findley, Ohio. It is the test case of the state bearing upon the legality of showing motion pictures on Sunday. Richards has been arrested some forty or more times during the past two years, for violating the Sunday closing statute. In each instance he has contended that he has not violated the statute, which forbids the showing of a theatrical or dramatic performance on Sunday. Richards, through his attorney, George Phelps of Findley, maintains that a motion picture show is neither a theatrical nor a dramatic performance. On this basis the question has been argued in every court, finally reaching the Supreme Court.

Fred Desberg, managing director of Loew's Ohio theatres, appeared before Supreme Court Judge Jones in Columbus, as a friend of the court, and in behalf of Richards. He explained to the court the modus operandi of the motion picture business, and explained why, in his opinion, a motion picture show is neither a theatrical nor a dramatic performance.

Harold Burton represented the other side. Toward the end of the proceedings, the Ohio Allied Churches presented a brief, representing sixteen Protestant churches, in which they urged that the motion picture theatres of Ohio be closed on Sunday.

Pathe's Season Schedule Outlined

General Manager Elmer Pearson Says Short Subjects Will Be Increased

BY the terms of contracts with Mack Sennett and Hal Roach, Elmer Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchanges Inc. announces that during the coming season Pathe will distribute a volume of short subject comedies and feature pictures in excess of any quantity of product ever handled before by the Pathe organization.

"In view of the ever increasing demand for the standard of short-subject and feature entertainment distributed by Pathe and the ever widening circle of our exhibitor customers, we believe that Pathe faces the biggest year in its career," declares Mr. Pearson. "The Pathe producers are as alive to the demands of the market for this 'better and better' quality of entertainment as we are, and have completed ambitious plans to supply Pathe during the coming season with a greater and better volume of product than ever before.

"While in California recently we renewed contracts with the Hal Roach Studios for fifty-two two-reel comedies per year, one series of which will include a new comedy find that we sincerely believe will prove a spectacular success in this line. We will continue to release a Hal Roach single-reel comedy every week as heretofore.

"We renewed contracts with Mack Sennett that call for four series, numbering about forty-two two-reel comedies per year.

"The Sennett schedule provides for some especially ambitious plans for Harry Langdon.

"Pathe has provided for sufficient comedy product in addition to the Hal Roach and Mack Sennett output to supply its release program with two two-reel comedies a week. This schedule of one hundred and four two-reel comedies a year, taken in conjunction with Pathe's extensive array of single-reel comedies, short-subject dramas, 'Chronicles of America' series, and novelty, cartoon, and topical releases, provides ample material to meet the demands of the short-subject market for diversified entertainment during the coming season."

Storey of Pathe Visits the Middle West

For the purpose of surveying conditions in the field, J. E. Storey, General Sales Manager of Pathe Exchanges Inc., left Wednesday, April 9, for an extensive tour of the Middle West key centers.

He will visit Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and Des Moines and owing to increased business it is probable that some of the exchanges will be moved to more extensive quarters.

"Loew" Name Curtailed in Massachusetts

Marcus Loew cannot operate theatres under his own name in Massachusetts where Elias M. Loew is already operating theatres. Elias M. Loew must not use his own name in operating theatres installed in cities where Marcus Loew already has a theatre.

This decision of the State Supreme Court ends a long legal battle which Marcus Loew waged against Elias Loew.

First National to Release "Lincoln"

Distributing Arrangements Announced for Rockett Brothers' Production

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN," the picture which recently closed an engagement at the Gaiety theatre, New York, was announced this week as a First National release. Speculation as to its distribution channel was set at rest April 11, when the contract was signed between Al and Ray Rockett, the producers, and Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

The film was more than two years in the making and at times as many as 2,500 people appear in the cast. George Billings, considered by the critics to be a perfect likeness to the famous national hero, plays the title role. Many actors have essayed the Lincoln role, but none of them, according to the critical view, has borne so striking a resemblance to the martyr President.

The life of Lincoln from his birth is shown, through boyhood, the presidency and the strife of the Civil War. Among the highlights of the action are the surrender of General Robert Edward Lee at Appamattox, and the life of the Lincolns in Washington after the war for the brief period that intervened before the assassination of the Emancipator by John Wilkes Booth.

Besides Mr. Billings, the principal players are Ruth Clifford, who is seen as Ann Rutledge and Nell Craig as Mrs. Lincoln. The picture was directed by Phil Rosen. Frances Marion wrote the scenario and supervised the editing.

First National's decision to distribute "Abraham Lincoln" is in keeping with its policy of handling only productions of the highest grade, according to Richard A. Rowland, general manager, who said that the release date had not been determined. An extensive exploitation drive will be used in all parts of the country.

The Rockett Brothers conducted a lengthy campaign of research into the sources of material on Lincoln's life before they undertook the filming of the picture. Everything possible was done to make the production in every way authentic and a correct interpretation of the character of Lincoln.

The picture has been endorsed by many authorities, and during its New York engagement it received excellent notices from the newspapers. It is the first picture of any considerable length which is a film biography of an outstanding American.

Nine Territories Sold on "Surging Seas"

F. F.-L. Holds Sales Conventions

First in New York, with Others to Follow in Chicago and San Francisco

THE annual series of Famous Players sales conventions got under way this week in New York at the Hotel Pennsylvania where the Eastern Division met on Thursday, with sessions scheduled to continue through Saturday noon. The New York convention will be followed immediately by two others, held successively in Chicago and San Francisco, and in addition to executives, district and branch managers, the meetings will be attended by salesmen, bookers, advertising sales managers and exploitation men.

Division Sales Manager H. G. Ballance presided over the sessions of the New York convention, which were attended by representatives from the Eastern Division. George W. Weeks will act in similar capacity at the Chicago convention, which will embrace the Middle West territory, while the Far West convention at San Francisco will be presided over by John D. Clark. All three conventions are under the direction of General Manager S. R. Kent and will be attended by a delegation of executives from the company's home office.

The New York convention is to a certain extent international in character and scope, for it is attended by seven of the company's foreign representatives. They are John W. Hicks, Jr., Australasia; Adolphe Osso, France; R. E. MacIntyre, Japan; William C. Winship, Mexico; P. N. Brinch, Central Europe; C. C. Margon, Central America, and Ary de Lima, Brazil.

The Thursday and Friday sessions, which followed a definite schedule, embraced an analysis of sales problems from every angle and a discussion of next Fall's Paramount product. Saturday morning will be given over to the viewing of new pictures and group discussions at the home office. On Friday evening a dinner is being given at the Pennsylvania in honor of the visiting representatives.

Saturday afternoon the home office delegation will entrain for Chicago where the second convention of the series will open Monday, April 21, at the Drake Hotel and will continue in session three days. The home office delegation will consist of President Adolph Zukor, S. R. Kent, George W. Weeks, John D. Clark, E. E. Shauer, Mel Shauer, A. M. Botsford, C. E. McCarthy, M. H. Lewis, G. B. J. Frawley, A. O. Dillenbeck and Philip Reisman. Wednesday night the delegation, with the exception of Mr. Weeks, will leave for San Francisco where the Far West convention will be held at the Hotel Whitcomb, April 27, 28 and 29. Following the convention, the West Coast studios at Hollywood will be visited and the delegation will leave Los Angeles for New York May 2.

In addition to those mentioned above, the following attended the New York convention: From the home office, J. A. Seidelmann, O. R. Geyer, G. M. Spidell, Claud Saunders, T. A. Kilfoil, L. J. Bamberger, D. Souhami, Eugene J. Zukor.

Arthur S. Kane Back After Long Trip

Associated Exhibitors President Pleased With Conditions in Industry

ARTHUR S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors is back in New York after an absence of five months. Most of the time was spent in Los Angeles, with brief visits to Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha and other middle western cities.

Mr. Kane expresses enthusiasm over conditions as he found them both in the producing and exhibiting fields. He had the following to say upon his return:

"Theatres both on the Pacific Coast and in the Middle West are having a very good season. Production in all studios in Los Angeles has been put on a much firmer foundation in the last six months than during the previous year. Profiting by the experiences which practically all the producers had with the high cost of pictures for this season's market, they are now controlling expenditures much better and have been for the last few months.

"This makes very certainly for stability in the whole industry. It does not mean a cessation or even a lapse in fine product for the market, but rather, for less of a burden upon the distributive and exhibition ends of the business, and with logically improving results to exhibitors themselves.

"The position of the independent producer is distinctly favorable. He is making most of the outstanding hits that are being registered today. The cause of this is not hard to find. In controlling only a few productions each season, and as a rule working on only one picture at a time, the producer is able to devote intensive, individual attention to each and every particular attraction. The result is that the aid and assistance which he gives even to skilled directors and actors, when he is a showman and knows the business of showmanship, counts heavily in the finished product.

"The day of the skilled producer who centralizes his time on one picture is rapidly approaching, if not already here. No matter how competent stars and actors may be, most of them need the show sense of a practised producer to guide, restrain or enlarge upon their conceptions, as the case may be."

Lubitsch Original Next for Warners

Ernest Lubitsch has written with Hans Kraely and will direct an original story of their own writing as his next production for Warner Brothers. The title has not yet been divulged, but it is said the story will be of modern American life.

No Necessity for Slump in Summer

So Says E. A. Eschmann, General Manager of Distribution for First National

COMMENTING upon the interest displayed in the study of business conditions as affected by money, crops, industry and so forth, E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution of First National wonders if in the very study of these things we do not cut paths of thought which take too much for granted.

"I wonder if we do not reflect to one another a rather taken-for-granted poor summer period," said Mr. Eschmann.

"And, having made up our minds to poor business during June, July and August do we not sit back and reconcile the presumed inevitable rather than stir up ways and means to combat an unconsciously imbued spirit of let-down and let-up.

"Just this morning Mr. Santikos of San Antonio, Texas, dropped in for a general discussion and stated that he would be obliged to have better pictures in June, July and August than in September and the following months. Naturally I asked him why, and he replied that he had a natural attendance in the fall, winter and early spring, but that he must create a following while the hot weather is on.

"Realizing that super effort must be made during the summer, Mr. Santikos makes it, while we to too great an extent accept the drop off in business as forecast generally and even go to the extent of withholding the very pictures required to fight off the inclination toward summer slump. In my opinion all of us who distribute pictures should early in the year agree to release a minimum number of big pictures and in that way aid and assist the exhibitor in giving fight to the summer fall-off in attendance. This may not be a specific for the ill, but it should prove an auxiliary at best and would build up the morale of all of out selling organizations.

"We in this industry cannot combat summer slump "with pictures." Let's agree upon a set joint policy toward the betterment of returns at the box office. It can be done."

New Franchise Holder for Warners at Denver

Frank Barmettler, Denver publisher, has taken over the Denver office of Kwality Pictures, distributors of Warner Brothers' product. The territory involved includes Colorado, Utah, Wyoming and New Mexico. L. T. Fidler has been installed as manager.

Official Washington Sees "The Chechahcos"

ASSOCIATED Exhibitors staged a private showing for official Washington of "The Chechahcos" last week and the official list of invited guests resembled a blue book of Washington. It is said the showing was on invitation of Secretary Work of the Department of the Interior.

Among those who were bidden were: Charles Evans Hughes, secretary of state; Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury; John Wingate Weeks, secretary of war; Attorney General Harlan Stone; Postmaster General Harry S. New; Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior Weeks, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, General John J. Pershing and Major Generals Lansing H. Beach and Charles McK. Saltzman.

Announcement was made by J. S. Woody, general manager of the Associated Exhibitors, that it had been decided not to road-show the production. It will be pre-released on May 11, with general release tentatively set for July 1.

Julius Stern to Sail for Europe

After spending nine months at his West Coast studios Julius Stern, President of Century Comedies, which are released through Universal, has returned to New York and will soon sail for Europe.

An arrangement has been made whereby Universal will release five Baby Peggy two-reel comedies starting May 11, and one every two weeks thereafter.

They are "Our Pet," "The Flower Girl," "Stepping Some," "Poor Kid," and "Jack and the Beanstalk."

De Palma Winner of Mary Pickford Cup

Japan Business Completely Recovers

Paramount Representative in New York Tells of Flourishing Existing Conditions

R. E. McINTYRE, assistant manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation office at Kobe, Japan, is in New York with additional information regarding picture conditions in that country. He is here for a conference with E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department.

Dell Goodman of the Fox Film Corporation described government film methods in Japan in last week's issue of Motion Picture News. Mr. McIntyre takes up a new angle as follows:

"The motion picture business in Japan was never better than it is today. The industry has made rapid strides since the great earthquake of last September, having had the hearty co-operation of the government in the work of providing entertainment of the homeless people throughout the devastated district.

"Having requested the aid of the motion picture interests in its reconstruction program, the government has shown great liberality in granting permits for the erection of temporary theatres and for new theatre buildings. In Toyko half of the city's fifty-two theatres were destroyed and Yokohama lost all of its twenty-two theatres. To date twenty temporary theatres, without baleonies, have been built in the devastated districts and ten new theatres have been erected in sections of the city which were without any theatres prior to the earthquake. Several temporary theatres have been built in Yokohama and others have been erected in other cities which were badly damaged.

"The business of the Toyko theatres has increased from two hundred to three hundred per cent. since the disaster, inasmuch as the strict regulations regarding the crowding of theatres were set aside by the city officials. Every theatre is packed with people hungry for the best in American pictures, and Paramount is enjoying its greatest business since its entry into Japan. Business will continue to grow, as there is every indication that Japan's list of motion picture houses will be considerably augmented above the present 650 mark within the next few years.

Orphans See Performances of "After Six Days"

Inmates of the Jewish Orphan Home and the Home for Destitute Catholic Children, Boston institutions, were guests of Weiss Brothers at the Tremont Temple, last week at showing of Weiss Brothers Biblical photoplay, "After Six Days."

Candy manufacturers of Boston supplied each child with a box of candy and taxi companies furnished transportation to and from the institutions. The children were loud in their approval of the picture.

"Merry Go Round" Leads in Swedish Contest

Swedish film goers asked by the Swedish Film Journalen to express their choice of the ten best pictures shown in 1923 have expressed a preference for "Merry Go Round," according to word from the Universal office.

It is said by Universal that "Merry Go Round" leads by a substantial plurality, with a Swedish picture its nearest competitor.

Tully Marshall in New Goldwyn Picture

Voctor Seastrom's second Goldwyn picture is "The Tree in the Garden," by Edwin C. Booth, and Tully Marshall is engaged to play the role of Sardrip, the father of the heroine.

Fifteen Features for State Rights

Lee-Bradford Outlines Program to Back Up Its Faith in the Independent Field

CONTRACTS have been closed with three producers by Arthur Lee, president of Lee-Bradford Corporation, each of whom will make four pictures. This will enable them to release twelve productions to the state rights buyers, one a month beginning next August.

A special franchise will control this product on a series basis and Mr. Lee believes that his system will reduce the selling cost to a minimum.

In addition to the twelve above mentioned there will be three special productions. The first is "The Lover of Bagdad" taken from the tale of A Thousand and One Arabian Nights.

A thorough reorganization of departments has taken place with an executive at the head of each department. Arthur Lee, as president will direct activities from the Home Office in New York.

F. G. Bradford, vice-president, with headquarters in California, will take care of Pacific Coast sales as well as look after the securing of new productions. Frank Whittle, foreign sales manager, will handle all foreign countries from New York, which will be his headquarters.

A. J. McAllister will act as Mr. Lee's special representative, and will cover the territories East of the Mississippi. W. F. Barrett in his capacity as assistant to the president, will relieve Mr. Lee of certain work in connection with the sales department as well as carry on the supervision of all publicity and advertising.

Some new ideas in advertising accessories calculated to directly benefit the box-office will appear in the accessories provided for the coming season's releases.

Mrs. K. C. Pfeil as service manager, will attend to all requirements of the corporation's customers. Mr. Lee proposes to make a flying trip by motor through the Eastern territories on behalf of the launching of next season's product.

C. C. Burr Is Producing "Youth to Sell"

First scenes of "Youth to Sell" has already been taken at the Glendale studio, being produced by C. C. Burr. This is the final production of the "Big Four" series of specials for the independent market for this season and William Christy Cabanne is directing the picture from the scenario of Raymond S. Harris.

May Allison has been engaged to play the leading feminine role and the rest of the cast includes Sigrid Holmquist, Richard Bennett, Charles Dorothy Walters and Dorothy Allen.

Mabel Normand Appearing in Detroit House

Mabel Normand has been making personal appearances at the Broadway Central in Detroit in connection with the showing of "The Extra Girl." According to J. S. Woody, general manager of Associated Exhibitors, both Miss Normand and the picture were well received.

Whitman Bennett Signs Helene Chadwick

Whitman Bennett has signed Helene Chadwick to be featured in "Divorced In Name Only," which is to be produced in New York. Montagu Love and Mary Thurman have also been assigned to leading roles.

Scenes from Samuel Goldwyn's picture made by Fitzmaurice. "Cytherea" will be released by First National.

"The Fortieth Door" for May 25th Release

ADAPTED from Mary Hastings Bradley's "The Fortieth Door," the new Pathe serial is scheduled for release May 25th.

The story revolves around the rescue of a French girl by an American engineer from the bondage of a Turkish harem and is heralded as abounding in romance and mystery.

Allene Ray is the French girl, while Bruce Gordon is the young American engineer. Others include Frankie Mann, David Dunbar, Anna May Wong, Frank Lackteen, Whitehorse, Lillian Gale, and Bernard Siegel.

The serial adaptation was by Frank Leon Smith, and George B. Seitz directed.

"Love Week" to Herald "Cytherea"

Samuel Goldwyn will nationally advertise "Love Week" to be a natural forerunner for his film production of "Cytherea."

A Cytherea Doll is another of the exploitation ideas and also Cytherea Orchids will effect a tie-up. Other national tie-ups are being planned. The Bell Syndicate is issuing the novel in installments in the larger newspapers and a specially prepared feature article has been sent to sixteen hundred newspapers throughout the country.

Cutts Directs "Passionate Adventurer"

Graham Cutts who directed the Betty Compson picture, "Woman to Woman," has been selected to direct "The Passionate Adventurer." The production is being made in England with an American cast and will be released through Selznick.

Alice Joyce is in the starring role and Marjorie Daw featured in her support. Myron Selznick is supervising the production.

Paine Appointed Selznick Mid-West Sales Chief

John F. Paine has been appointed district sales manager in charge of the middle west, acting a special representative out of the home office, by president W. C. J. Doolittle of the Selznick Distributing Corporation.

Mr. Paine will supervise the Selznick forces working out of Minneapolis, Omaha, Milwaukee, St. Louis, Chicago, Indianapolis and Kansas City.

Progress Puts Exchange in Oklahoma City

In addition to exchanges operating at Atlanta, Charlotte, New Orleans and Dallas, Arthur Bromberg, President of Progress Pictures and distributor of Arrow Productions, has installed a Progress exchange at Oklahoma City.

Universal Engages Clara Bow for "Wine"

Universal has engaged Clara Bow to play an important role in "Wine," one of the thirty-six features for next season. "Wine" is an adaptation of William McHarg's Red Book story.

YOUR IDEA

SINCE the lobby is the "show window" of the theatre, the importance of its appearance cannot be much over-estimated. Careful attention to this feature will go a long way toward building up a reputation for a theatre. An interesting example of this is found at Haverhill, Mass., where Manager Ed Foley of the Academy theatre has made his house one of the show places of the city.

So ingeniously has he made capital of its possibilities that the citizens of Haverhill have come to look for the unusual there, and have formed the habit of dropping around to see what the lobby has to offer. Needless to say, many of them, once there, step up to the box office.

The final test, of course, is the box office, and the best answer is in the fact that Foley has turned a once losing venture into an established success. Having a decided knack for mechanical and electric devices, his lobbies always manage to be out of the ordinary.

Foley now and then teams up with Phil Kahn, publicity director of the American Feature Film at Boston, to whom he gives much credit for starting him along the right road. Together, they have put over some remarkable exploitation campaigns.

A recent campaign was that on "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," the outstanding feature of which was a large reproduction of Notre Dame cathedral in the lobby. Built of wallboard, it was painted faithfully to represent the original. Both the famous Rose windows and the arched openings were covered with vari-colored gelatine, with lights inside giving a remarkable imitation of a church at night In the base was placed a photograph with a cathedral chimes record working continuously with a repeater. Naturally, the display was an object of unusual interest during the entire run.

THERE is no good reason, apparently, why the policy of making the news weekly the theatre s own should be confined to the largest houses. The cost of making up an individual leader is not great. Any title concern or industrial film studio will make up for a few dollars enough of this leader to last indefinitely.

Manager Charles E. Raymond of the Fenway theatre, Boston, has an excellent stunt of this sort. The house, in common with other Paramount theatres, publishes a weekly program called "Fenway Close-up." For the news weekly leader, a copy of this was toned down to a medium grey, still leaving the type matter legible, and over it was lettered in white, "Fenway Animated Close-Up. World Events Cinemized."

Any theatre printing a program or house publication of its own can adapt this stunt to its use. Or, if this is impractical, tie up with a local newspaper, reproduce the front page of this on your leader, and call it, for instance, "Strand-Herald Screen Review," or something of the sort, combining the theatre and newspaper names.

Such a leader, tacked onto the front of your news weekly, adds to the prestige of the house, gives it individuality, and since the maker's name appears on all subtitles, does not detract from anybody.

SOME weeks ago this department described an advertisement in which a theatre used the Bargain Sale style of copy with excellent results. Now comes a communication from Frank H. Burns, the live exploitation director of the Beacham theatre, Orlando, Fla., which shows that he is quick to take advantage of a new idea. He writes:

"Taking a tip from someone who ran a Bargain Day at their theatre, I immediately got busy and arranged for a Bargain Month at the Orlando theatres, and the enclosed dodgers and reproductions of page newspaper ads are the result.

"This idea is a knockout if you have the pictures and we had them for this month anyway. By pro-rating the cost of the throw-aways and the newspaper advertising over the four weeks of the month the cost is practically cut to nothing whereas the benefit is decidedly big and we had a splendid business as a result of our scheme.

"I had enough dodgers printed to make a house to house canvass of the city and then to make sure everyone was going to see one, I mailed out a thousand to a special mailing list. We also gave them away in the theatres for a week and just to cap the climax we shot a page in each newspaper to make sure of the stragglers who might miss the other mediums or vice versa. A few slides on the screens kept people talking about our Bargain Month and the advertising did the rest.

"As I said before, business has been away above par during this bad month and I think it will hold up fairly well too for I am still hammering at 'em on the good pictures angle.

THE old slogan, "know your patrons," has been more than casually observed by W. Paul Bowlin, manager of the Missouri theatre, Mountain Grove, Mo. Few small motion picture houses in towns of 2,000 inhabitants can boast of a fifteen-piece orchestra, yet, that is exactly what theatregoers of Mountain Grove are enjoying.

Little more than a year ago Bowlin became manager of the theatre and it did not take him long to discover the sentiment of his patrons ran to music. Hence, an orchestra of eight pieces was increased to fifteen, including a piano, two cornets, three saxaphones, bass horn, two alto horns, a marimbaphone, three violins, a cello, drums, bells and some of the musicians "doubling" on instruments.

But, wisely enough, Mr. Bowlin did not take money from his pictures and transfer it to the orchestra, much as his patrons desired good music, which boils down to the question: "How does he do it?" The musicians, although capable enough, are not an expensive lot. Unnecessary overhead expenses have been eliminated and enough additional patronage is attracted by the orchestra to make the theatre a paying proposition. That's the answer.

CORNERING good will through a capable theatre orchestra is a new angle on the music situation, but that is more or less what Manager Ed Turner of the Imperial theatre at Asheville is doing. It so happens that competent music teachers are almost unknown in the community, and no provision is made in the public school curriculum for music.

AND OURS

In a leading editorial the Asheville Citizen calls the school board to task for this condition, and then adds:

"In this regrettable situation the city is all the more indebted to the Imperial theatre and William Doherty, leader of the Imperial orchestra, for the musical education which they are offering free to the chillren of Asheville."

When this sort of thing comes voluntarily, it is a sign of a healthy relation between community and theatre.

During London's bus and train strike this street stunt was used on "Secrets" (First Nat'l) at the Palace theatre.

PERPETUAL national advertising for a movie star through a radio tie-up has been gained in Los Angeles, where a co-operative arrangement has been entered into between KFI, the Los Angeles Examiner's broadcasting station, and Principal Pictures Corporation.

This station sends an acknowledgment card to every person who writes in about a program, reading: "Thank you for letting us know that you were able to listen in at our regular program on.... We are glad to have reports on these programs from time to time and hope you will keep us informed occasionally as to the clearness of receiving The Examiner programs in your locality."

Illustrating this card is a picture of Baby Peggy listening wide-eyed before a loud speaker.

If you have a local broadcasting station, it might be possible for you to make a similar tie-up on these acknowledgment cards.

MANAGER TOM LOGAN of the Allen theatre, London, Ont., held his second annual Winter Fair recently in the large lobby of that house. All classes of exhibits were on display in the theatre corridor from noon to 11 p. m., the booths containing everything from automobiles, radio sets, bicycles, hardware, gas stoves and washing machines to men's clothing, pianos, toilet goods and other lines, only one exhibit from each industry being in evidence.

Booth space was sold on a rental basis and a great many people attended the demonstration.

EVEN in far off Shanghai "trick" exploitation stunts have found their way, as proved by a clipping from an English newspaper published in China, forwarded to the Goldwyn home office.

The clipping, being a teaser ad, is minus theatre name. It reads: "Enemies of Women Club, organized by the Shanghai bachelors' group. Watch for an announcement of the first meeting." Another advertisement reads: "Enemies of Women! Bachelors watch for further advertisements."

It will be remembered that this stunt was used widely in this country about the time "Enemies of Women" was released

AN excellent feature for promoting good will and understanding between public and theatres, where a local newspaper can be persuaded to carry it, is a series of articles devoted to the various managers.

Three papers are doing this at the present moment—The Washington Post, The Baltimore News and The Newark Call. In each case an article appears each week, in the Sunday issue.

The Washington Post series runs under the heading: "Men Who Furnish Your Amusements." Then, in smaller type: "The Post, in This Series, Takes Pleasure in Introducing to the Public the Managers of the Various Washington Theatres." Two paragraphs from the one dealing with Mark Gates of Loew's Columbia theatre will give an idea as to the style:

Mark Gates, manager of Loew's Columbia theatre, is one of that generation of theatre men who have passed their entire lives in the theatre and who have found, in the theatre, a hobby and a lifework at one and the same time.

Mr. Gates' first introduction to the theatre was as a newsboy selling papers about the entrance to the Grand Opera house in Syracuse, N. Y., the first house the Shuberts ever owned. Charles Plummer, Showing active state of exploitation in England; corner of office of Frederick Allen of F. B. O., Ltd., London, with cut-outs and material on Warner Bros. features.

the house manager of the Grand Opera house, frequently pressed the youngster into service and it was Plummer who first gave the boy an opportunity to gratify his desire for a theatrical career by making him an usher.

This is illustrated with a halftone of Gates. The Newark Call series, on the other hand, is illustrated with a crayon drawing. The articles are in the first person, under the title "Looking Back a Bit." One, devoted to Louis Golding, manager of Proctor's Palace theatre, opens:

I have been asked by the dramatic editor of the Sunday Call to note the highspots in my existence, which began, I may as well confess, in Woonsocket, Rhode Island. It was in that thriving town that I was born when very young, and I still own a piece of property there. It is three by seven feet, marked with four white stones, and I expect to visit there at some late date, the later the better.

Further along in the article is an interesting bit of reminiscence:

After a year at the Lyceum I was sent to Albany, where I had charge of a little picture theatre called the Proctor Annex. After a year there I was brought to New York and joined the booking staff. I have the distinction, or lack of distinction, as you will, of having booked the second feature on Broadway, D. W. Griffith's "Judith of Bethulia," a four-reel feature starring Blanche Sweet. The first big picture of this kind had been a Vitagraph production, "The Five-Million Dollar Bid," which played the Criterion, present home of "The Covered Wagon." After "Judith of Bethulia" we put over "The Wolf," which Rothapfel wanted for the opening of the Strand theatre, but which we got instead.

METRO

Don't Doubt Your Husband—
Plot is thin, and acting not any too good, but the subtitles are very funny, and help to put over the picture. Not much business on this one. (Middle West.)

Subject not new, but treated a little different. Nice business. (Middle West.)

The White Sister—
An excellent picture, ranking as one of the best of any recent season. Playing here six times daily, with prices from 25c to $1, and doing practically a capacity business. (West.)

WARNER BROS.

The Marriage Circle—
Held up under what might otherwise have been a bad week. (East.)

Best adult comedy drama of the year. We did so well during the third week that we are holding it over for a fourth week. (Middle West.)

Daddies—
A rare bit of screen comedy. Acted by a sterling cast. Entertainment from beginning to end. Business fine. (East).

UNITED ARTISTS

The White Rose—
An example of how good a picture can be made. Patrons enthusiastic over it. Business S. R. O. for entire week. (East.)

Broken Blossoms—
This one was brought back as a second return engagement at regular prices, so that Lillian Gish's name could be used in advertising against a more recent Gish picture at another house. Played four days only to good business. (West.)

The Hill Billy—
Very good mountain drama, reminiscent of Barthelmess stories of the last. Seemed to please most audiences. Business good, but not out of the ordinary. (West.)

VITAGRAPH

My Man—
Star is popular with our patrons. Proved winning attraction. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Law Forbids—
Didn't have any great drawing power, and in the face of other competition succeeded in drawing only an average business. (West)

Excitement—
A good box office attraction which played to good crowds for a week. (Middle West.)

ASSOC. EXHIBS.

Courtship of Myles Standish—
A splendid picture. Patrons liked it very much. Fine receipts. (Middle West.)

The Extra Girl—
Greater box office attraction than Molly O. Broke all box office records with it. And it was Lent. (Middle West.)

FOX

The Temple of Venus—
Fair picture. Love too cheaply shown. Receipts good as other attractions. (West.)

The Blizzard—
If you like blizzards, this is a great picture. Wonderful photography, and well acted. Business was surprisingly good. (Middle West.)

HODKINSON

Love's Whirlpool—
Average attendance for the week. (Middle West)

GOLDWYN-COSMO.

Three Weeks—
Very well acted picture which seemed to be well taken by our audiences. Business very good. (Middle West.)

Did a big week. It was well advertised and also advertised itself. Drew well in spite of strong competition. (Middle West.)

Name the Man—
This one drew them in good numbers. Well acted production. (Middle West.)

The Great White Way—
The cast in this one served as an added attraction—good business. (Middle West.)

Day of Faith—
Didn't do so good. Too much competition and not strong enough to hold out against it. (Middle West.)

Nellie the Beautiful Cloak Model—
It held the interest, but is too long in our opinion. It didn't do the business we expected, probably because it's so near Easter. (Middle West.)

Under the Red Robe—
One of the best pictures that has ever struck this town. (East.)

One of the best costume pictures every produced. Business very good. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Discontented Husbands—
Fair picture. Audience liked this one. Box office receipts good. (Middle West.)

The Whipping Boss—
Did not appeal to regular patrons because of its brutalness. Business poor. (Middle West.)

PARAMOUNT

The Stranger—
One of Betty Compson's strongest pictures which added to her popularity. (East.)

Entertaining feature which seemed to be liked by all. Business fair. (Middle West.)

Nothing out of the ordinary, but suitable for the average run. Business here was only fair on this one. (West.)

The Fighting Coward—
Well done version of old plot. Business only fair. (Middle West.)

With good advertising this one did a good week's business. (Middle West).

A Society Scandal—

The Dawn of a Tomorrow—
They didn't like this one. Poor attendance throughout the week. (Middle West.)

Ice Bound—
Only fair picture, some stating parts exaggerated too much. Receipts fair due to special features. (West.)

The Next Corner—
Proved good drawing card. Attendance good. (Middle West)

Montmartre—
Did splendidly with it against strongest of opposition. One of the best of its type this season. (Middle West.)

Call of the Canyon—
An average story given a rather attractive mounting. Well liked by patrons. Business good. (East.)

Stephen Steps Out—
Somewhat disappointing as Doug. Jr.'s first effort. Has a good supporting cast, but wasn't strong enough to do any great amount of business for this house. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Enchanted Cottage—
This picture was not as strong for general entertainment as some of the former Barthelmess films. It received both favorable and unfavorable comment. Picture is unusual and well done. Did fair week against strong competition. (Middle West.)

Why Men Leave Home—
The title brought a good patronage to the house, and the picture pleased them, unless they expected something too heavy. Business was good. (West.)

Lilies of the Field—
Conway Tearle and Corine Griffith well liked in this. However, box office receipts only fair. (Middle West.)

Flowing Gold—
A mighty good picture that struck a popular chord. (East.)

Patrons turned out better than expected for this one. (Middle West.)

Secrets—
Norma's best picture. Played to very big business at advanced prices. (Middle West.)

The Age of Desire—
Rather mediocre film entertainment. Just another program picture. Business good on acocunt of good supplementary program. (East).

Painted People—
Story very good and entertaining. Acting by leading star, as well as entire cast, excellent. Business excellent. (Middle West.)

The Iowa theatre, Davenport, used this lay-out on "A Woman of Paris" (United Artists).

A. J. Kennedy, ad manager of the Melba, Dallas, was responsible for this on "When a Man's a Man" (First Nat'l.)

HAL ROACH presents

The King of Wild Horses

A Feature

Presenting for the first time Rex the dangerous, untamable stallion

No more dangerous animal lives than a wild stallion at his worst. He does not fear man; he fears only his ropes and rifle. Give him a chance to catch a pursuer unarmed, and he will trample him into the dust. Rex is such a horse, big, black, glossy, fierce. He is untamed. Only one man in the world can approach him, touch him, handle him. That man is not his tamer, — he is an accepted friend..

That is the horse that Hal Roach, with infinite difficulty and danger, has made the striking and sensational star of the most remarkable novelty feature ever made.

8 things to remember if you want to make money

1. Cooper's Leatherstocking Tales are read the world over. They have been translated into almost every language
2. They are required reading in many schools. That means that they are known to most school children.
3. After 100 years, they still rank among the most popular romances of adventure and Indian peril ever written, with both children and adults
4. The high spots of thrill and adventure from three of these books, "The Deerslayer," "Last of the Mohicans" and "The Pathfinder" have been embodied in "Leatherstocking"
5. A very large cast was assembled and taken into the wilderness at great expense in the production of this Patheserial
6. George B. Seitz, who has directed more successful serials than any other man, was selected as the director
7. Edna Murphy, beautiful and talented; Harold Miller, handsome and athletic; Whitehorse; David Dunbar, Frank Lackteen, were given the important roles
8. The finished production with its narrow escapes, its thrills, its big mass scenes, and its million dollar title gives to every exhibitor a most unusual chance for big business

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see Motion Picture News — first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Presentation on "Flowing Gold"

Lavish Musical Setting Given Film; Exploitation Campaign Well Varied

GIVEN the support of a pretentious musical prelude and a heavy exploitation campaign "Flowing Gold" recently played at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, Brooklyn, of which Edward L. Hyman is managing director.

Fifteen artists were used, including a male quartette, a ballet of five, two soprano soloists and four feminine harpists.

This prelude, which ran 15 minutes, greatly enhanced the photoplay. Hyman's musical incident was set with a silver cycloramic background, and to the left was a gold settee and two gold chairs. To the right were seated the four feminine harpists. At the opening the male quartette, without accompaniment, sang "Sweet Adeline," and made way for a girl dancer in silk minstrel costume who danced to "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Then a soprano entered from right and sang "The Glow Worm" with harp accompaniment, with four dancers doing pantomime for the second chorus. Next came "The Sidewalks of New York," with the male quartette and four girls, and then "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," sung by another soprano, with harp accompaniment. "Come Back to Erin" was sung by the men, and then "Low Back'd Car" was the finale, by the ensemble. The incident was costumed 1830 period.

The lighting devised by Hyman for this number consisted of blue floods on the entire set, and deep purple floods on the musicians from the dome. Rose pink entrance spots playing on the tops of the transparent windows which adorn each side of the stage. Red cove lights, light blue transparent windows, and two magenta transparent fabric columns, one at either side of the proscenium arch. The lighting for the artists consisted of straw and orange spots from the sides, with a spot from the booth on the solo dancer.

"Flowing Gold," before its Brooklyn Mark Strand opening date, was given a vigorous exploitation and publicity campaign in which Richard Walton Tully's eastern representative, James G. Peede, assisted. Ten thousand Mark Strand bulletins publicizing the attraction were sent to the theatre's mailing list and given out to patrons leaving the theatre. Twenty-nine book stores and other shops had window displays in which the book figured, set off by specially lettered cards supplied by the theatre and which stated the play date, the title and the theatre. The Corona Typewriter store in Brooklyn, on the principal shopping street, installed two 30x40 art lettered cards advertising the picture and showing Richard Walton Tully seated at his Corona machine.

Clarke's Music Store Tie-Up Proves Profitable

A music store tie-up proved highly successful exploitation for the presentation of "The Song of Love" at the Garing Theatre, Greenville, S. C. The co-operation gave the theatre an excellent window display in the music store in return for announcement of the sale of sheet music and phonograph records of "The Song of Love" at the League's store.

The stunt had special appeal and attracted more than the ordinary notice because the road show of "Blossom Time," in which the song is presented, had played Greenville recently.

The lobby of the Garing was especially decorated for the Norma Talmadge picture. Shadow box attractions were featured. These were vividly tinted desert scenes with a cut-out of a Sheik standing in the foreground. The theatre used the regular routine advertising, which includes street car cards, heralds, trailers, etc. The engagement produced a better than average box office mark, according to Manager H. B. Clarke, who conducted the campaign.

Unusual Teaser Tack-Cards Exploit "Twenty-One"

Manager Frank L. Browne of the Liberty theatre, Long Beach, Calif., employed the teaser style of campaigning in connection with his showing of "Twenty-One." Five thousand teaser cards, diamond shaped, and ten men to do the tacking, supplied the ammunition for the campaign. The cards read: "Look for 21 Opposite P. E. Station."

Staring from every telegraph pole and frame building, they aroused endless curiosity. The campaign was supplemented by handbills that carried the same wording but gave the directions more explicitly, mentioning the Liberty theatre by name.

Attractive hand painted display on "The Silent Command" (Fox) by John W. Creamer of the Strand theatre, Chillicothe, Mo.

Circular Campaigns Interest Italians in "White Sister"

The popularity of F. Marion Crawford's novel, "The White Sister" in Italy is being used as a factor in the exploitation of the picture in this country. The book is familiar to at least the last two generations in Italy. Following the example set by the Shubert-Crescent Theatre in Brooklyn when "The White Sister" played there recently, exhibitors over the country are circularizing the Italian population with pamphlets printed in Italian.

Local Talent Feature Scores on "Boy o' Mine" Bill

J. A. Reich, manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, featured boys in various capacities at this house during the screening of "Boy of Mine." One special feature was a boys' orchestra of 20 pieces, this being a new Winnipeg organization. There was also a boy soloist who sang "Dear Little Boy of Mine." An appropriate film comedy was shown. Tea is now being served on the mezzanine floor of the "Met" every afternoon.

State's Attorney Aids Exploitation by Aschers

A war on crime lead by Robert E. Crowe, State's Attorney of Chicago, was hooked up with advertising for "Through the Dark" at houses in the Ascher Brothers Circuit of that city. The stunt was worked in connection with a special herald which read as follows: "State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, the man who has crime on the go, says: See 'Through the Dark,' a Goldwyn picture at Oakland Square Theatre. You will get hints that will make you realize more fully the value of making Chicago a safer place to live.'"

There follow hints from Mr. Crowe on safeguards against robbery, such as never pulling the shades when you leave the house or a note in the letter-box stating the time you will return or admitting meter readers unless they show their credentials.

This herald was used freely in the mail campaigns and house to house distribution and at the box-office windows and proved of decided attention getting value.

Unexpected Twist Adds to Punch of Coogan Stunt

A stroke of luck added materially to the effect of George Schade's Jackie Coogan impersonation stunt when it developed that the best imitator of the celebrated boy star in Sandusky, O., is a girl.

As exploitation for "My Boy" Schade, who owns and operates the theatre bearing his own name, set out to make a special appeal to the kiddies with a Jackie Coogan impersonation contest. The winner was to receive passes to the show for himself and a dozen of his friends. A mob of kids turned out to enter the competition and then one of them, Nancy Sprow, who is six years old, walked off with the prize for herself and her friends.

The ordinary impersonation idea would have worked well for Schade; but the novel result brought a whirlwind of patrons who had been interested and enthused as a result of Miss Sprow's sudden elevation to fame.

New Styles Atmosphere for "Lilies of the Field"

Spring fashions sponsored by the merchants of San Antonio, Tex., doubled in the roles of atmospheric prologue and exploitation for the presentation in the Palace Theatre of that city of "Lilies of The Field."

The fashion show arranged by Manager Santikos as staged by twenty beautiful models who paraded the latest creations from Paris and London. They were versed in their work, having been under the training of the large department store which put on the show and which paid the expense of a dancing master who instructed them in the steps that they could put on expressly for this stage appearance. The double attraction drew one of the biggest runs the house has had.

Gets Fine Co-operation in Campaign for "Maytime"

Herman Lorence, manager of the Bellevue theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y., backed "Maytime," with a real exploitation campaign.

The popularity of the opera "Maytime" from which the picture is adapted, enabled Mr. Lorence to arrange a profitable tie-up with the Steinway Duo Art piano agency.

A Steinway Duo Art piano was used in a specially arranged prologue for "Maytime" and a formal announcement card noting this fact was sent to the theatre's mailing list. In reciprocation of this courtesy, the piano agency made mention of the "Maytime" engagement at the Bellevue in all their local advertising.

Niagara Falls' largest furniture house carried similar mention of "Maytime" in their newspaper ad copy in return for a special herald distributed by Mr. Lorence.

Store Advertises and Distributes Negri Photos

Free distribution of "fanfotos" of Pola Negri and containing announcements of the showing of "Shadows of Paris" at the Strand in Birmingham, gave Manager Towns of that house an exceptionally successful tie-up with the Odum Bowers and White department store.

The photos were distributed by the store and the event was given prominent display in the daily newspaper advertising employed by the merchants. The ad, which carried a cut of the star, emphasized the value of the photos to the picture fans with the statement, following the announcement of the time of distribution, that "These are greatly prized by movie fans and we hope that the five hundred will be enough to supply all who want them."

The results of the stunt indicates the value of the advertising thus obtained for nothing more than the cost of the pictures. For the Strand did a better than average engagement in the face of the same hot competition from a Shriners' street circus and the opening of a new stock company.

Dollar Signs Conspicuous in "Wanters" Lobby

Simplifying the theme of a picture to a dollar sign for an effective lobby display was the way the People's theatre, Portland, Ore., made its public appeal on "The Wanters." The dollar sign was stuck up in the lobby. It was stuck up so prominently that all who passed could see.

The main display consisted of a background panel of the trousseau, bride, and the dollar sign.

The obvious connection between the two carried the idea over. It was supplemented by a new array of poster frames that were attached to the dollars outside the theatre.

Panels Found Effective in Narrow Theatre Lobby

Because of the long, narrow entrance to the theatre, the Rivoli of Portland, Ore., has to resort to the colonnade effect of lobby dressing, consisting of long, standing panels. This was exemplified during the showing of "Her Temporary Husband."

Four standing placards, varying from three to eight feet in height were lined on each side. The big question mark played up the mystery element of the comedy.

Prominent in the advertising and displays given the picture was the cast, which gave the theatre such names as Sydney Chaplin, Owen Moore, Tully Marshall and Sylvia Breamer to work with.

Shirley Scores With 'Three Miles Out'

War on Bootlegging Furnishes Material for Fine Campaign

BY Act of Congress areas beyond the three mile limit have become a fabled realm of bottles and casks and ruddy with the glow of the juice of the grape; and as a field for imagery it has its possibilities for exploitation with the kick of humor in it, particularly when a picture with the provocative title, "Three Miles Out" comes along. The possibilities were realized in a campaign on this production by William Shirley of the Strand theatre, Schenectady, N. Y.

Shirley's campaign had somewhat the nature of a cartoon. With a few simple stunts it painted an amusing picture of the free and licensed stretches "Three Miles Out." This showman decided that there was more than enough timely value to the title to supply material for a striking campaign.

The Strand's exploitation for "Three Miles Out" was built on a lobby display and a street ballyhoo. The lobby was liberally decorated with bottles and cases, all supposedly containing whisky.

A heavy truck, loaded with "empties," every box bearing a name familiar to thousands in pre-prohibition days, paraded the Schenectady streets. A trolley car, with a "Three Miles Out" banner — the 24 sheet — on each side, made the rounds of the street railway lines for several days and helped swell the crowds at the theatre. And 24 sheet stands were used all over the city.

Another feature of the exploitation which is worthy of description was appealing not only because of its effectiveness as an attention-getter, but for the inexpensiveness of the stunt, and its easy sales value. A man, garbed as a bartender, and wearing signs fore and aft, walked up and down for half a block each way from the theatre. Every time he reached the lobby, he paused, looked over the cases of "liquor" on display, selected a bottle, opened it with a corkscrew, poured a drink in a glass which he carried, and sauntered on sampling the concoction and smacking his lips as he went.

The Associated sales department is rejoicing that one of the early runs of "Three Miles Out" was at the Schenectady Strand, because of the enterprise shown by Mr. Shirley and A. De Wolf Veiller, the managing director, in exploiting the feature, and the suggestions which their demonstrations offer to exhibitors elsewhere. On the opening night the Strand "had them standing" at 8 o'clock and jamming at 8:45. This was very unusual, even though Friday (the run opened that night) is pay day at the General Electric plant in Schenectady. And the picture continued to play to capacity houses for a solid week.

Autos Parade Announcement of "Beau Brummel"

Exploitation that introduced an imposing parade of Stutz motor cars was used for the second week of the run of "Beau Brummel" at the California Theatre in San Francisco. The demonstration was made through the courtesy of the local Stutz agency, which realized some good publicity through its tie-up with the California.

The cars were driven through the streets by men wearing high beaver hats in the Beau Brummel manner — to borrow a pharse from the ads about what the well dressed man shall or must wear. Each car also had as an occupant of the rear seat of the sedan a beautiful girl in period costume. The advertising for the picture was carried on banners which decorated the sides of the automobiles.

In its opening drive for "Beau Brummel," the California made excellent use of a press book suggestion for a co-operative stunt with the newspapers. This was based on a recollection of the old beaux of San Francisco in a feature article having great local interest. Photographs from the feature were used and a direct tie-up with the showing of "Beau Brummel" at the California effected.

Samples of Desert Herald "When a Man's a Man"

Envelopes containing sand "direct from the Arizona Desert" were given house-to-house distribution by the America theatre, Casper, Wyoming, to advertise "When a Man's a Man." G. R. Steward of the Casper Wyoming Theatres Company, which controls the America, improved upon the usual form for this stunt by having the one word "sample" printed in large type on one side of the envelope. On the reverse side was the announcement of the film, which was staged in the Arizona desert, and the theatre play date. The envelopes were laid on house door steps with the "sample" side up.

Malaney's Outlay Big But It All Came Back

M. A. Malaney worked up a tremendous lot of local interest in the present engagement of "Secrets" at the Stillman theatre by sending out "Secret Envelopes" to people. Five of these "Secret Envelopes" were sent out every day for a week. And every one contained a surprise gift. One of them contained a pair of silk stockings; another a box for the show "Secrets"; another a check for five dollars; still another a round-trip ticket to Buffalo on the Seeandbee, and one a year's subscription to the magazine called "Secrets." All of them were sent with Norma Talmadge's regards. And the idea was put over that they were sent at the star's request.

The contents of the packages varied during the week, but they were all worth-while gifts. Each day The Cleveland Press announced the previous day's packages with the names of the recipients, and the names of those who would receive packages the following day. The result was one of the biggest weeks since the Stillman adopted the $1.65 top price policy. There was some doubt as to whether people would pay $1.65 to see Norma when they had never before paid more than 75c. But the answer is now known. The "ayes" have it. And Malaney gets the palm for putting it over.

Novel Letter Contest for "Stephen Steps Out"

A novel newspaper letter contest, put over in conjunction with the Seattle Star, was used recently by Edwin B. Rivers, assistant manager of the Heilig Theatre, Seattle, on "Stephen Steps Out."

The week before the picture opened, the Star announced the coming of the new screen celebrity into the field. In a number of feature stories, the paper told that Doug Jr. had had a difficult time deciding what type of part to play in pictures. It went on to state that for the best letters of 250 words or less submitted by readers of the paper, upon the subject of which type of role the new star should play, the Star and the Heilig management would award cash prizes, season passes and admission tickets.

Twenty-five dollars in cash prizes, two season passes and a number of admission tickets good for the following week's show, were awarded to the winners of the Star contest, which was judged by a committee of theatre, newspaper and film representatives.

Schade Plans Co-operative Out-Of-Town Advertising

As a result of his success in bringing in the patronage from the outlying districts of Sandusky, O., through a poster campaign on billboards as far as ten miles outside the city limits, George Schade, owner manager of the Schade Theatre, is considering a plan to bring about co-operative campaigns for the rural districts in conjunction with retail merchants.

The campaign which worked so successfully in bringing patronage from the out-of-towners was used for Schade's presentation of "Anna Christie." For this picture a general drive was used and paper played a heavy part in the proceedings.

The same sheet that Schade displayed right outside his theatre was used in the countryside as far as ten miles away. It drew a rural patronage that seldom comes into town unless there is something unusual on. Schade figures that the visitors will spend money at the Sandusky stores and that the merchants ought rightfully to be interested in such a campaign.

American History Questions Used in Commercial Tie-up

The management of the Auditorium Theatre in Winston-Salem, N. C., took a page from the yellow sheets on exploitation for "Little Old New York" and applied it with profitable results in affecting tie-ups with merchant advertising.

The press sheet suggestion offered a series of questions in American Historical events as material for a contest. The theatre went one better by allotting several questions to each merchant for use in newspaper ads. Passes for the theatre were supplied merchants as prize awards to those who brought in the ad with all the questions correctly answered. Fifty-two tickets were given away in the stunt. The names of the winners were published in the Winston-Salem Journal the day following the close of the competition.

Library Circulates Heralds Printed as Book Marks

Through arrangement with the officials of the public library the Majestic Theatre in Battle Creek, Mich., got wide circulation for its heralds on "Black Oxen." The heralds were in the form of book marks, long, narrow strips of white India paper containing advertising for the theatre and its presentation of the First National attraction. The stunt was arranged by Manager W. Griffith Mitchell of the Majestic.

The town library gives out 500 books daily, considered a high percentage for the population and Manager Mitchell considers this as effective a means of reaching his audiences as any that could be devised.

Misunderstanding Leads to "Black Oxen" Publicity

Because a sign, "Black Oxen—75¢," in a window display of the book in a Montgomery, Ala., department store gave folks the impression that the Empire theatre was going to charge that price for the photoplay, Manager H. C. Farley got a special story in the Montgomery Advertiser stating that regular prices only would be charged.

Black oxen were borrowed from the state prison, hitched to a wagon with suitable banners, and the outfit driven around town for two days prior to the showing.

Arrangements were made with the Montgomery State Fair to hold their annual Fashion Show exhibit at the theatre, which they did for the first two days of the "Black Oxen" engagement, attracting considerable attention.

Page Tie-up Ad Put Across to Aid "The Wanters"

When "The Wanters" played at the Starland Theatre, Anderson, Ind., the Anderson Herald put across a co-operative page under the heading: "99 Per Cent. of Us are Wanters."

The point to this latest addition to the advertising truck series is that it was definitely and unmistakably tied up with the product it was supposed to advertise. In addition to the eight column streamer head across the top every single ad began with the one line, upper case heading:

"Wanters"—

The individual merchants then followed up with copy stating that their particular type of goods was what people wanted.

Shapely Limb Contest Aids "The Humming Bird" Run

S. S. Wallace, Jr., manager of the Criterion theatre, Oklahoma City, pulled a good one in his advance exploitation of "The Humming Bird." By arrangement with the Davenport Hosiery Mills, of Chattanooga, manufacturers of Humming Bird Hosiery, he staged a real "leg show" for a week — and got away with it.

At each performance he announced that a box of Humming Bird hose would be awarded the girl who, in the opinion of the audience, had the best looking legs. The contesting girls, visible from their knees down, walked behind the drop curtain which was raised at knee height from the stage and the audience by its applause decided the winner.

City Blanketed for "Flowing Gold"

Los Angeles Campaign Exhausts All Angles of Merchant Co-operation

PRACTICALLY everything in the line of merchant co-operative advertising was put to high-powered use by Dick Sperr, handling publicity for West Coast Theatres, Inc., and Ray Coffin, director of publicity for Richard Walton Tully, as exploitation for the showing by Loew's State Theatre, Los Angeles, of "Flowing Gold."

The campaign was notable particularly for the thoroughness of the work. While nothing new in the way of stunts was tried the use of window displays, posters, and tie-up publicity was so extensive that the campaign amounted to a complete blanketing of the town with theatre propaganda.

The extent of the campaign and the methods employed to effect tie-ups with all manner of stores should be interesting as a reminder to showmen of the wide scope afforded their exploitation activities with almost any picture. Therefore the following outline of the stunts is worthy of consideration.

Advertising was carried gratuitously by a coffee shop on its menu cards; "Flowing Gold Sundaes" were featured by several soda counters; and the Sunkist company featured signs at each of their two hundred orange drink stands which read "try our 'Flowing Gold' and Don't miss 'Flowing Gold' at Loew's State Theatre."

Displays of tack cards were made in several hotel lobbies and snipes, measuring 9x42 inches were posted. There was something like a hundred window displays in drug stores alone. This was based on a tie-up with a cosmetic and featured photographs of Anna Q. Nilsson. The feminine lead of the play was also featured in a window display by a dealer in furs, who used the tie-up in his newspaper advertising.

A chain of hat stores gave window space in their 22 stores to stills of a male member of the cast of "Flowing Gold" wearing a hat similar to a model recently introduced by the company. A department store featured a window display of gold brocades and gold metal cloth with announcement cards and stills from the production; a jewelry shop displayed stills of Miss Nilsson; and in addition to all these there were displays in men's clothing stores, music stores, shoe stores, beauty parlors and other shops.

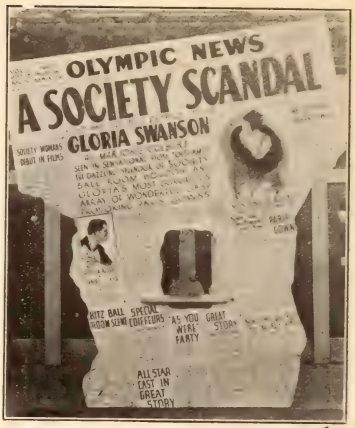
There were tie-up stunts with the Kissel Kar Company, which featured photographs of Milton Sills and Miss Nilsson driving Kissel machines; the Fordson Tractor agency; book dealers made a special drive with photoplay editions of "Flowing Gold;" the Corona Typewriter company; and a display in a store window of a home projector, which ran trailers on "Flowing Gold."

A great deal of paper was used. There were forty twenty-four sheet stands, and among the publicity stunts there was a radio talk by Milton Sills.

Naming Flower for Star Provides Tie-up

When the Rialto, San Antonio, Texas, ran "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," Jack Jackson, Universal exploiteer, arranged a novel tie-up in which a local florist named a special carnation, "Esmeralda," in honor of Patsy Ruth Miller, who plays that role.

The newspapers gave space to this stunt and the window of the flower store was especially decorated. The lobby of the theatre was decorated with the flowers and a sign announced that they were on sale at the Green Flower shop.



Special Presentation for "David Copperfield"

Harry Brouse, proprietor of the Imperial Theatre, Ottawa, and one of the veteran showmen of Canada, showed exceptional form in the presentation of "David Copperfield" recently. Prior to the week's run, Mr. Brouse conducted a special showing to which teachers and selected pupils of local schools were invited. The "David Copperfield" essay competition was also featured. An added attraction was a character prologue at evening performances which was presented by stock actors, who interpreted a number of Dickens' celebrities.

Amateur Ads Get Free Lines in This Newspaper Tie-up

Some valuable newspaper advertising was obtained for the presentation of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" at the Rialto, Fort Worth, Texas, through an amateur advertising writers contest, which is still new in many cities.

The Fort Worth Record cooperated with the theatre in this stunt, the paper publishing the winning ads each day. As the con-

Marriage Rules and Essays Advance "The Goldfish"

In advance of release "The Goldfish," starring Constance Talmadge has been nominated by First National's publicity department for an exploitation campaign centering around rules for happy married life. The cue is taken from the story which deals with Miss Talmadge's rapid fire change of husbands' together with her mutual agreement with her first spouse that the marital bonds can be severed as soon as one presents the other with a bowl of goldfish.

Essays on the best ways to promote happy marriages, the ten rules for a happy married life as well as a table of "Don'ts" are being dusted off and polished up for the campaigns.

One Ad for Every 150 Souls Record of This Tie-up

Two page trucks on "The Girl of the Golden West" in large cities has been done repeatedly. Manager C. B. Patterson of the Best theatre, Pulaski, Tenn., however, accomplishing this feat in a city of 2,780. He placed the double truck in the Pulaski Record, a weekly publication.

Nineteen advertisers took space, making an average of one advertisement for every 150 people. The border outline for the two page spread was the one designed and supplied by First National's publicity department.

"Lady of Quality" Style Show in Holyoke

Style shows conducted on a co-operative basis between merchants and theatres have taken a sort of permanent place among the exploitation methods of the showmen for the very good reason that both the theatre and merchants usually derive some real profits. The common run of these stunts take in only one merchant, but as demonstrated by George Miller, Universal exploiteer, who used the style show in connection with the showing of "A Lady of Quality" at the Suffolk Theatre in Holyoke, Mass., the greater the number of merchants interested in the stunt the bigger the results.

In this Holyoke campaign the only expense to the theatre was in the matter of setting the stage. An interesting presentation was effected by having a large book, built of compo board, on the stage and two attendants dressed in Queen Anne costumes to turn a page of the book as each new model stepped forth to display the gowns, hats, etc. The models were engaged by the merchants making the exhibits, which were made in a two-act performance. The evening clothes were shown in an interior setting, while an outdoor scene was the background for the display of sports wear.

The style show at the Suffolk was widely advertised by the merchants of Holyoke. Extra newspaper displays were carried, at the expense of the stores engaged in the stunt, and window decorations liberally used. One of the stores had a living model in the window and this is said to have attracted big crowds during the shopping hours.

Naturally when so much extra advertising was being used the newspapers increased the allotment of space for the advance publicity notices on the picture. Everything was done to keep the issue alive by special newspaper stories and a street ballyhoo using a walking replica of the Frances Hodgson Burnett novel on which "A Lady of Quality" is based.

Tie-up With Taxi Company on "Pied Piper Malone"

The high spot of Manager Howard Waugh's campaign on "Pied Piper Malone" was his tie-up with the newest Memphis taxi company on the showing at Loew's Palace. Waugh had tickets printed, good for the opening day only, and gave them to the taxi company for distribution to patrons.

In return for this he received signs on 28 taxicabs. In addition, the taxi company bought heavily of newspaper space and permitted Waugh to write the copy.

Victoria Wears Oriental Dress for "Thundergate"

Chinese atmosphere pervaded the lobby and front of the Victoria Theatre, Philadelphia, in celebration of the presentation there of "Thundergate." The bizarre Oriental decorations produced an effect far out of the ordinary and their attraction value proved a good selling item for the Victoria.

The entire front of the house was done over with Chinese lanterns. Swaying cards, held on strings, fluttered above the heads of incoming patrons. Chinese lettering was in evidence on all sides. Around the entrance were Oriental character cutouts and stills from the picture especially painted by the theatre's art department.

Strand Displays Sculpture of John Barrymore

A portrait bust of John Barrymore, the work of Yan McLeod, the New York woman sculptor, was placed in the lobby of the Mark Strand Theatre during the New York premiere of "Beau Brummel." It attracted a great deal of attention from passers-by.

The music to "Beau Brummel" consisted of music of the latter part of the eighteenth century and the beginning of the nineteenth. Appropriate accompaniments were selected from the works of such composers as Haydn, Beethoven, Weber, Schubert, Berlioz, Mendelssohn, Chopin, Schumann and Wagner.

Snappy Lines Sell Broadway "Daughters of Today"

An advance trailer made up of several punchy paragraphs, "atmospheric selling talk," as the way the Selznick publicity department describes them, was a notable feature of the exploitation used by Manager C. B. McDonald of Moss's Broadway Theatre, New York, for the presentation of "Daughters of Today."

The trailer made a hit with the Broadway's audiences. There was snap and plenty of color in the lines as the following samples illustrate.

"Coming—Monday March 24th to this theatre. 'Daughters of Today.' Idle Boys and Foolish Girls: Frou-Frou of Silks: Routs and Revels: Gorgeous Gowns: How Do They Do It? Daughters of Today: They'll all be on hand after Monday to see it.

"Brazen Beauties and Gilded Fools: Pride Rustling in Slithering Silk: Sweetest Joys and Wildest Woes: They're all there, Neighbor, in Daughters of Today. We are not going to mention the cast—it's big, it's great: you'll recognize them all, Daughters of Today.

"What Enchanting Enticements, What Flaming Beauties. What School Breeds Them? The School of 1924. We leave it to you, some of whom graduated twenty years ago: Was it worth it—those wild "cake-walks," that insidious Virginia Reel, those Rhine wine and seltzers—you drank twenty of them before you felt them. Those were the wild times!"

Missing Person Reward Exploits "Red Lights"

The familiar but when properly used effective exploitation stunt of offering a reward for knowledge concerning a missing person named after and answering the description of a character in the photoplay was employed to good advantage in conjunction with the presentation at the Regent Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich., of "Red Lights." The offer was made in heralds which were given wide distribution.

The herald offered $5,000 reward to the person furnishing information as to the whereabouts of Ruth Carson, missing daughter of Luke Carson, millionaire railroad magnate. The herald carried a photograph of Marie Prevost in the part of Ruth Carson and gave the information that she was last seen near the Goldwyn studios in Los Angeles during the filming of "Red Lights."

Brown Uses Heavy Campaign "A Society Scandal"

In exploiting "A Society Scandal," Manager George Brown of the Imperial theatre, Charlotte, N. C., resolved to put over a record-breaking campaign — and succeeded.

Two weeks in advance feature stories appeared in the two daily papers. A deluxe trailer was used one week in advance.

A full page cooperative ad published on the opening day, in the morning newspaper. Nine merchants cooperated, the theatre purchased about $40 worth of this space, and gave 108 passes. 12 passes to each merchant who cooperated, for distribution to customers in each store.

Word of mouth advertising from this page was invaluable, because full pages are unusual in Charlotte.

Two days before opening 3,000 Rotos were obtained, overprinted and distributed in the best residential section, house to house.

The Woman's Club was tied up with a down town card party, 400 prominent women were assembled. Ten passes given to the women for Bridge Prizes. The women took ten Rotos, and tacked them around the clubroom walls, with the announcement of the pass awards.

A special double column headline write-up was landed in the afternoon newspaper, with double column art display.

In all advertising and throughout this campaign, stress was laid on the fact that this was a good picture? It is mostly to the fact that the confidence of the Charlotte public has been established in the Imperial's advertising, that George Brown attributes the success of this campaign.

Managers should bear in mind the practicability of tying up with local society events like card parties. This should be done whenever you have an opportunity coincident with a good picture, and only when your feature is of unquestioned quality.

Male Fashion Show Exploits "Beau Brummel" in Frisco

The male fashion show has made its appearance as exploitation for motion picture theatres. It took place in San Francisco in connection with the engagement of "Beau Brummel" at the California Theatre.

While the eastern tie-up of "Beau Brummel" consisted of window displays in several hundred millinery, men's hats and clothes stores along Broadway, on the west coast it took the form of "Men's Fashion Parade" showing the styles of the dandies of today.

Dramatic lobby piece on "Shadows of Paris" (Paramount) by John T. Read of the Joie theatre, Fort Smith, Ark.

Matinee Passes Bring Tie-up With Traction Drive

Realizing the value of a tie-up with the advertising campaign conducted by a traction company to introduce weekly commutation tickets. Manager Clif Denham of the Royal Theatre, Victoria, B. C., offered passes to Thursday matinees to all holders of such railway tickets. The immediate result was a tickets. Manager Clif Denham of the Royal in the newspaper publicity of the traction company.

The British Columbia Electric Railway Company had just placed in operation a weekly ticket, or pass system on the Saanich line, running eighteen miles from Victoria to summer resort ground. Manager Denham tied up with the newspaper announcements of this new arrangement by stating that passholders who presented their passes at the Victoria entrance on Thursday afternoons in April would be admitted free.

The move was also widely publicized in the traction company's publication, "The Buzzer," as follows:

"Think what this means to pass-holders, practically free transportation and an absolutely free movie show, and an enjoyable afternoon or evening that will cost you next to nothing. Just hop on the Interburban car and ride to town."

It filled empty seats, got the co-operation of realtors and the traction company and made the theatre a limelight standee in Victoria.

Contest Makes Good Use of Stock Accessories

The Victoria Theatre, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, successfully exploited "The Virginian" by means of a contest conducted with the co-operation of the Harrisburg Telegraph. Silhouettes of famous Virginians appeared daily in the Telegraph for nine days prior to the opening.

These silhouettes displayed the profiles of George Washington, Woodrow Wilson, Thomas Jefferson, James Monroe, James Madison, Zachary Taylor, John Tyler, William H. Harrison—eight United States presidents born in Virginia—and on the ninth day a head of Kenneth Harlan as Owen Wister's hero.

All readers able to identify these nine famous Virginians were offered a pair of tickets to the Victoria providing a brief biography accompanied each answer. The interest of an essay contest was added by a further offer for the best set of biographies.

Mats of the silhouettes can be obtained for similar exploitation through the exchanges of Preferred Pictures Corporation.

Ballyhoos "Girl" With a Walking Book

Walking book exploitation for famous adaptations are becoming so effective that they are used even when the picture was not made from a book.

Manager Arthur W. Pinkham of the Park Theatre, Bangor, Me., used the idea on First National's "The Girl of the Golden West." The book idea was new in Bangor and it went over for three days while the theatre played excellent business. To all practical intents the book was realistically gotten up and might have been the score of the opera or the printed stage play.

Exploit "Dorothy Vernon" at Automobile Race

The management of Grauman's Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles, recently seized upon a big automobile race at Ascot Park, that city, to exploit Mary Pickford's new photoplay, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

It was a sort of Mary Pickford event, so the exploitation came as a natural consequence. Miss Pickford offered a handsome cup—the Mary Pickford cup—for the winner of the main event in a series of automobile races,—the "Dorothy Vernon Sweepstakes."

The Grauman management inserted an attractive throw-away in the race programs.

"One Day in Hollywood" Ready for Release

"One Day in Hollywood" has been completed and will be released this week by Standard Cinema through Selznick Distributing Corporation. It was produced by Fred Caldwell. Hank Mann is the featured player.

Hal Roach's two reel Spat Family Comedy for current Pathe distribution is "Hit The High Spots."

New Phonofilm Now Being Made by DeForest

With twenty persons in the cast, Dr. Lee DeForest, inventor of talking pictures, is producing a new phonofilm in which, it is said, exteriors, with exterior sounds, will be photographed.

W. E. Waddell wrote the story entitled "East Side, West Side" and the picture is directed by J. Searle Dawley. A novelty promised in this picture is the advent of a "little German Band" playing on the street, where all the music, with discords, may be heard.

Newspapers Are Advocating Short Subject Houses

AS the result of an interview by Motion Picture News with E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, newspapers are advocating exclusively short subject theatres in several large cities.

The Newark, N. J. News is the latest to swing into line. They comment as follows:

"A sort of vaudeville of the screen, that type of Short Subject program might well be worth a trial in the small and centrally located theatre." Not since the days when the two-reelers marked the limit of celluloid enterprises as a local playhouse been devoted exclusively to the exhibition of Short Subjects. And yet such a program has its advantages over the program dominated by the 'special.'

"Such a program would please and attract many who find in the news reel and its companions their keenest enjoyment in filmed entertainment."

Benny Leonard Signs for Fighting Series

Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion, has signed with Reputable Pictures Corporation to make a series of twelve two-reelers. They will be produced in New York from stories by Sam Hellman, sports writer and humorist. The series will be known as "Flying Fists." Larry Wyndon will direct and Pat Cohen will be in charge of production. The series will get under way within two weeks.

Making New Hysterical History Comedies

Bryan Foy and Monte Brice are now making their fourth Hysterical History comedy for Universal entitled "William Tell."

The three preceeding single reelers in this new series are "Columbus," "Pocohontas" and "Benjamin Franklin."

"Cleopatra" is the title of the fifth which soon goes into production. Zion Myers of Universal staff is supervising the series.

Rogers and Langdon Head Pathe Bill

Schedule of Releases April 27 Also Include Another Will Nigh Miniature

TWO two-reel comedies head the Pathe list of releases April 27. One is produced by Mack Sennett and stars Harry Langdon in "Flickering Youth," while the other stars Will Rogers in "High Brow Stuff." The second Will Nigh Miniature, "The Guest," is also on this week's schedule of releases.

A Hal Roach comedy featuring Snub Pollard in "Get Busy"; Cartoonist Paul Terry's Aesop's Fables, "An Ideal Farm;" the sixth chapter of the Patheserial, "Leatherstocking"; Pathe Review No. 17; Topics of the Day No. 17, and Numbers 36 and 37 of the Pathe News Reels complete the week's offering.

"Highbrow Stuff" is a screen satire of the so-called Little Theatre movement for the uplift of dramatic art. Rogers' caricature is of the imported actor who is willing to suffer everything for his art, provided there is enough money in it.

In "Flickering Youth," Harry Langdon as a prospective bridegroom becomes involved with a strong-armed lady barber in the person of stalwart Charlotte Mineau.

"Get Busy" features "Snub" Pollard who proves that the best way for a jobless man to get a job is to manufacture one.

The story of "The Guest" (Will Nigh Miniatures) is laid in a Russian village. The son, who has become very wealthy in America, returns to his native village in disguise. He assumes an offensive air towards his old peasant parents, the better to hide his identity and increase their surprise when he chooses to reveal himself. The mother leaves for supplies at a neighboring inn and upon departing observes her husband, knife in hand, apparently about to strike the offending stranger down. At the inn she learns the true identity of their guest and rushes back to stay the avenging hand.

Ethel Miller is Shown in Fox News Reel

Recently welcomed by Governor Smith in Albany upon her debut in motion pictures, Ethel Miller, eighteen year old screen "find" appears this week as a "celebrity" in the Fox News reel.

Miss Miller was born and bred in the Mulberry and Oliver street district of Manhattan's famous lower East Side. This is the section of the city which was the birthplace and residence of the chief executive of the State of New York.

Foreign Rights Sold by C. B. C. to Two Series

European distribution rights have been sold by C.B.C. to the Inter-Ocean Corporation on Screen Snapshots and the Seleo Company has obtained the Australasia rights to the Hall Room Boys Comedies.

Bruce Barton Editorial Released this Week

Bruce Barton's latest editorial, "When An Apple Hits You," produced as a one reel Standard Cinema feature, was scheduled for release through Selznick Distributing Corporation April 15.

Scenes from Standard Cinema Comedy, "The Mechanic," released by Selznick Distributing Corporation.

"Dandy Lions" is a current Educational-Christie Comedy featuring Neal Burns.

Universal Starts Serial "Fighting Ranger"

Jay Marchant has started directing a new chapterplay, "The Fighting Ranger," at Universal City, featuring Eileen Sedgwick and Jack Daugherty.

Mistaken identity is the theme and the locale is the U. S.-Mexico border line. William Welsh plays the part of the wronged father of Miss Sedgwick. Daugherty plays the part of Terrence O'Rourke, the young aviator, and Al Wilson is slated for a plane change over the Grand Canyon.

Bud Osborne, is "Topaz" Taggart, mining prospector, and Slim Cole, Charles Avery, Frank Lanning, Sam Polo will also be seen in the new picture.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Alice's Wild West Show"
(M. J. Winkler—One Reel)

WALT DISNAY the cartoonist produced a novel combination of an actual acting cast and cartoons in this single reeler and it is highly amusing and wholly entertaining.

Alice is Virginia Davis, a sweet clever child who attempts to stage a drama on an improvised stage in the barn with the aid of her playmates with the consequent mistakes of amateur talent the world over.

When the tough gang enters she has to give her show alone as her cast deserts her. Her specialty is a monologue describing her imaginary adventures in the wild west where she was a "two-gun" girl. The cartoonist describes her monologue in pictures but the tough gang is not touched so she has to rout them single handed.

A good filler on any bill.— TOMHAM.

"Alice's Day At Sea"
(M. J. Winkler—One Reel)

THIS is one of a new series made by Walt Disney the cartoonist for M. J. Winkler and intended for the state rights market.

It is a novel single reeler combining both an acting cast and cartoons. Virginia Davis as Alice wanders to the sea shore with her clever mastiff and after a sailor tells her of a ship wreck she goes asleep in a row boat on shore.

Her dreams bring her a shipwreck and battles with fish and birds and a final struggle with an octopus at the bottom of the sea. The cartoons help this part wonderfully but Alice is always in evidence in person.

This novel idea is very unique and entertaining enough to satisfy any sort of an audience.— TOMHAM.

"Flickering Youth"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

HARRY LANGDON appears as a wealthy young idler aspiring to the hand of a beautiful girl in his own set.

His trouble commences when he is boldy taken in hand by a robust woman barber who later sues him after a free for all fight in his home that affords enough excitement and supplies fun enough for all, including the audience.

The court scene is especially funny and this is one of the best comedies that Mack Sennett has made with Harry Langdon to date.

Our hero finally wins back the charming heroine after an automobile chase that is full of surprises, thrills and laughs.— TOMHAM.

"An Ideal Farm"
(Pathe—One Reel)

CARTOONIST Paul Terry's cat tries to emulate the farmer in modern methods of operating an ideal farm and originates the novel idea of tearing a day off the calender every few minutes so as to fool the hens who are supposed to lay one egg every day.

This Aesop's Film Fable registers as an excellent filler of novelty and comedy for practically any location.— TOMHAM.

"The Lady Bird"
(Educational-Principal—One Reel)

THIS is another of the interesting Louis H. Tolhurst series on bugs, ably edited by Walter Anthony. Many times magnified, the lady bird is revealed in all phases of its existence. Such a subject ordinarily a dull one, is made most entertaining and educational.— CHESTER J. SMITH.

Cliff Bowes, Ruth Hiatt, Virginia Vance and Sid Smith in the Educational-Cameo Comedy, "Fold Up."

"Pretty Plungers"
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

THIS comedy features the Century Follies girls, but in the featuring they are all too short a time on the screen. They do not make their appearance until the second reel and immediately you wonder why they had been neglected so long. They are surely good to look upon and some of the slow motion pictures of the high diving are real gems.

The story is well above the average, with Al and Hilliard in love with Bartine. She leads them a merry chase which takes them to the swimming pool. There the chase continues when they encounter Big Bill, swimming instructor and hated rival. There is lots of good comedy in this one and the diving shots are exceptional.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Highbrow Stuff"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

SATIRE on the apparent trend of present-day entertainment among the elite is shown by Will Rogers in a diverting and fast moving comedy which should register with all classes of audiences.

The "High Brows" scorn the cinema palaces and take their entertainment in a barn called the "Little Theatre" where they profess to be highly entertained by a somber Russian drama where everybody is killed but the orchestra and stage hands and a few other members of the union.

When the leading Russian artist is persuaded to enter motion pictures he is a failure in the roles he is cast for but makes good in an impromptu role astride a plunging horse.

There are plenty of laughs for all in this one. — TOMHAM.

"Going East"
(Educational—Two Reels)

LLOYD HAMILTON is funnier than usual in this comedy of a Pullman sleeping car. It is Lloyd's first trip on a sleeper and his troubles are augmented when his services are commandeered by a deputy sheriff who is conducting a pair of hard criminals to Sing Sing. They are left in Lloyd's keeping, but promptly take the gun from him and proceed to make their getaway through the made-up sleeper. Complications come thick and fast with many of the travelers confused as to the location of their own berths. Lloyd finally gets possession of the whole car when at an unscheduled stop he captures a "silver fox." This is a fairly humorous two reeler that will be liked in the neighborhood houses.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Green Grocers"
(Universal—One Reel)

SLIM SUMMERVILLE and Bobby Dunn are grocery clerks in this one. Their stupidity in rearranging a defunct stove pipe starts the fun. The pipe is projected into the room of a neighbor and he is smoked out when the fire is started. Pouring water back into it, he floods the grocery store. The balance of the picture is devoted to the delivery of a sack of flour to a pretty girl. All the hangers-on around the store hear her order and each secretly deliver the flour. On the way back the car of Slim and Bobby runs amuck and brings a somewhat welcome end to the picture when it blows up.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Get Busy"
(Pathe—One Reel)

WHEN the policeman gives Snub Pollard and his pal thirty minutes to find work or be jailed they hire out as life guards where there is evidently a premium paid for each person rescued.

The star's admirers will like this one and it is one of his best for some time. His pal pushes persons and dogs off the dock so that the new life saver will have a chance to save them but the regular life guard seems to be at hand at the right time to get all the glory.— TOMHAM.

"Out Bound"
(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

SID SMITH, Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance are the featured players in this good Cameo Comedy in which Bowes and Smith offer some rare comedy. Their maneuvers on a truck whose rear extension projects over a cliff are both humorous and thrilling. In fact the action all the way through is fast and furious with the three players shown to the best advantage. —CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Pathe Review No. 17"
(Pathe—One Reel)

SOFT coal and hard coal are proved to be composed of vegetation of a long-age period in the Popular Science Series of this Review. There are also several photographic gems of Bear Creek Canyon, Colorado, and an instructional feature showing how American flags are made in Philadelphia.

"When Winter Comes" is the Pathecolor presentation of scenes taken at Cinta, Portugal. — TOMHAM.

Regional News from Correspondents

Seattle

ARTHUR Jones, travelling auditor for Vitagraph, arrived early in April and is at present working on the books at Manager H. A. Black's local exchange. Mr. Jones came here from New York, and from here expected to proceed South to the Vitagraph offices in Oregon and California. Mr. Black has been in and out of his office intermittently for the last several weeks, choosing to cover a number of the key cities in the Oregon and Washington territories himself, and therefore making short three or four days trips on an average of once a week.

George P. Endert, manager of the Famous Players exchange, has been out of the city for a number of days recently on a short trip around the Western Washington territory. During his absence, the exchange is under the direction of H. W. West, general sales manager for this territory. Both Mr. Endert and Mr. West expect to leave for California the end of April to attend the branch manager's convention scheduled to be held in Los Angeles at that time.

L. K. Brin, president and manager of the Kwality Pictures Exchanges, returned this week from a two week's trip to his offices in Denver, Salt Lake City and Butte. He was accompanied by G. H. DuMond, special representative of the Warners Brothers organization, whose pictures Mr. Brin distributes in the Pacific Northwest. Both men expect to remain in the city for the next few weeks.

H. N. Holmes last week replaced Melvin G. Winstock as Western Washington salesman for the Universal exchange in this city, according to an announcement made by Manager L. J. Schlaifer. Mr. Holmes is a new man in this territory, having just arrived here after having had a number of seasons experience in the film business in Los Angeles and San Francisco. Mr. Winstock has announced no definite plans for the future.

Ned Edris, special exploitation manager for Manager Carl Stearn's local Metro exchange on "Scaramouche" and "The White Sister" has just returned from Portland. After a few days here he was expected to leave for Spokane, Walla Walla and other key points in this territory, making plans for advance campaigns on both pictures.

Fred G. Sliter, manager of the First National exchange, left this week for a short trip to Southern Washington, where he was conducting a small sales drive among the leading towns and cities of that district. His departure was hastened somewhat, according to rumors on Film Row, by the fact that he is at present being visited quite frequently by persistent automobile salesmen who are of the opinion that he is of sufficient prominence to be able to motor to and from his office in a new car.

G. G. Johnson, formerly assistant manager to John Danz, owner and manager of the Colonial Theatre, who left that position recently, has returned to the scene of his former theatrical ventures in Kelso. At the present time he is associated with W. S. Strange at the Vogue Theatre in that city. Mr. Danz announced last week that beginning the first of April the Colonial Theatre would enter upon a policy of three changes weekly, and would play a number of first run attractions in addition to the second run pictures that have already been booked for the present season.

Vic Gauntlett, advertising and publicity manager for John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre, has returned after a number of days spent in Tacoma, during which time he managed the Blue Mouse in that city. His term of management in Tacoma was in effect only during the few days that Fred Teufel, resident manager, was out of the city on business. C. C. Struble, manager of the Portland Blue Mouse Theatre, spent a few days here recently in conference with Mr. Hamrick. He was accomplished by his family.

Dominick Constanti, operator of a number of suburban houses in this territory, including the new Liberty Theatre in Sumner last week announced that he had purchased a $7,500 piece of real estate in Puyallup, upon which he intends to erect a strictly modern 750 seat theatre. Mr. Constanti's Stewart Theatre in that city has been leased by the H. T. Moore Theatre Company of Tacoma, to take effect about August 1, and it is hoped that the new house will be ready by that date. Mike Barovic will act as superintendent and local manager of the proposed structure.

In order to further increase the comfort, pleasure and entertainment of his patrons, Manager Robert W. Bender of the Columbia Theatre has established a new plan which is meeting with a pleasing amount of success. In the foyer of the house, Mr. Bender has placed a small table, equipped with paper, pencil and a suggestion box. At each show he screens a slide advising his patrons that he is looking out for their entertainment, and asks them to write down, as they leave the theatre, any suggestions that they might have for the further advancement of their pleasure while in the theatre. For the best suggestion each week Mr. Bender awards two tickets to the following week's performance.

Buster Lorenzo, a former Seattle vocalist and entertainer, has returned to this city for a few weeks and has been delighting audiences at Manager C. W. Hollander of the Balaban & Katz organization and has a large number of friends in this city who are sorry to see him leave.

Mrs. Charles E. Merriam, Better Films Chairman of the Illinois Counsel of the Parent-Teachers' Association, who recently asked for an expression from American mothers as to whether children under sixteen years of age should be permitted to attend the movies, has had replies from approximately two hundred. The majority of the letters stated definitely that unless the movies were cleansed of the "passion plays, the sex dramas and the divorce stories," boys and girls should not be allowed to go to the picture shows. Mrs. Merriam, in commenting on the expression of opinions, said: "If we find that the majority of American parents want the movies cleaned up we will ask the producers to take such action. If they do not respond, then we will ask for legislation. Some of the movies of today are not fit for children to see. If we can't stop them from producing these pictures we can keep our children from viewing them."

Ben Eidelman is now connected with Unity as a salesman and will cover south side city territory. He was formerly connected with Universal and National Theatres Corporation. Another recruit to Frank Zambreno's sales staff is Billy Wendell, formerly with Universal.

TWO notable additions to the list of artists who are permanent residents of the Capital were made last week by the appointment of Otto F. Beck to the position of organist at Crandall's Ambassador Theater and the acquisition by the same organization of K. S. Burton to serve as solo cornetist at Crandall's Metropolitan Theater.

Fifty-three baskets of flowers from friends and well wishers in all parts of the United States were received by Harry M. Crandall on Saturday, April 5th, when the new Tivoli Theater at Fourteenth Street and Park Road, Northwest, was formally dedicated. This was eleven more than were received on the occasion of the opening of the Ambassador, at Eighteenth Street and Columbia Road, last September.

Nelson B. Bell, in charge of advertising and publicity for the Crandall enterprises, held a double celebration on April 5th, when the new Tivoli Theater was opened at Fourteenth Street and Park Road, Northwest. For the first time in fourteen weeks, he abandoned splints, casts, bandages and the other impediments attendant upon the possession of a broken right arm, that night. After two operations and a final successful setting, Mr. Bell's right wing is out in the open again and William C. Ewing, his assistant, is celebrating Thanksgiving every day because he no longer has to take all of the Crandall publicity direct to the typewriter from dictation.

Opening night at Crandall's new Tivoli Theater, Fourteenth Street and Park Road, Northwest, had all the appearance of a Crandall convention. In addition to the entire executive staff, every Crandall manager in Washington was "pulled in" from his own house to the Tivoli to insure the skillful handling of the crowds by men who had had long experience "out front."

The sudden transfer in mid-week of Louis Reichert, sales chief of the local Selznick organization, and dean of the inner group of large film concern executives in the territory, was the cause of a hastily arranged noon-hour banquet Friday, April 11, at The Italian Kitchen, 1003 E-street. The al fresco lunch was arranged by the F-I-L-M Board of Trade of the Washington territory, the managers and sales forces of the exchanges, local exhibitors and visitors along film row, being present. On behalf of his co-workers in the field here, a special committee of the Board presented J. Reichert with a tastily equipped travelling toilet set. Mr. Reichert told the boys how sorry he was to leave them, but that he was, after all returning to his first film managerial love, San Francisco.

Buffalo

HENRY B. MURTAGH, organist-in-chief of Grauman's Million Dollar and Metropolitan theatres, Los Angeles, for more than three years, has arrived in Buffalo to begin a year's engagement as feature organist at the Lafayette Square theatre at a salary that looks like the population figures of the city. Mr. Murtagh began his career as theatre organist at the Pitt theatre in Pittsburgh back in 1914. While at this house he was engaged by Farny Wurlitzer to play at the Liberty theatre in Seattle, at that time the best salaried position on the West Coast.

Later he went to the Isis theatre, Denver, where he remained for three years and then returned to the Pacific coast to preside at the console of the Wurlitzer in the Liberty theatre, Portland, again. During his stay there he accomplished the remarkable feat of playing 102 Sunday recitals entirely from memory, playing a total of 600 numbers, with only 50 repeated. Mr. Murtagh went to Los Angeles from Portland in July, 1920, to accept the position of organist-in-chief at the Grauman theatre. With the opening of the Metropolitan he became organist there though continuing to play his famous Sunday concerts at the Grauman. During his ten years as a feature organist, Mr. Murtagh has performed wholly from memory and without lights.

His family, consisting of Wootson Davis Murtagh, who, as a singer, has done considerable concert work, and three children, will remain in California at their attractive home at 1001 Ogden Drive, Hollywood. While in Buffalo, Mr. Murtagh will play for his friends in California from time to time as it is expected that arrangements will be made for him to broadcast some of his famous air recitals from station WGR atop the new Hotel Statler. His KHJ programs from Los Angeles were heard in Buffalo on several occasions.

E. J. Hagerty, formerly assistant booker at the Paramount office, is now in charge of the local office of the Rex Film Cleaner company of Cleveland.

An event of unusual interest was staged at the Eastman theatre, Rochester, last week when the Inter-High School Symphony orchestra, made up of 91 young musicians, substituted for the Eastman theatre orchestra which journeyed to New York for the Philharmonic concert theatre. It was the first public appearance of the high school ensemble which was enthusiastically received by Eastman patrons.

At the request of the reserve officers of Albion, N. Y., and vicinity, and through the co-operation of Mr. Robson of the Family theatre in that town, "Flag Makers," was shown last Saturday. The film was prepared by the government and is of special interest to all former service men and to those interested in the training camps.

Burt Caley, who recently resigned as assistant manager of the Temple theatre, Rochester, is now out hustling for new members for the Rochester Automobile club.

Word reached Film Row this week that Maurice A. Chase, formerly district manager for Universal with headquarters in Buffalo, is now vice-president of the Selznick Distributing company. Bert Gibbons has resigned as district manager for Vitagraph.

Johnny Maxwell, assistant general manager of the Border Amusement company says the report of his resignation is somewhat exaggerated and that he is still at the old stand. James Cooban of North Tonawanda has been appointed general manager of the company, succeeding L. G. Barger, resigned.

Henry W. Kahn, Metro branch manager, was in New York last week to celebrate his ninth anniversary with Metro. Ted O'Shea, Metro salesman, has recovered from his recent illness and is hitting the high spots again. H. C. Carroll, formerly manager of the International theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y., is now handling exploitation on "The White Sister" and "Scaramouche," for the local branch.

Joe Schuchert, Jr., is going to try out a stock company as an added attraction at the Columbia theatre, beginning Easter week and is rehearsing a local talent minstrel show for the Colonial the same week. The film features will continue as usual. Leave it to Joe to pep up the bill.

Robert A. Landry has opened his New Grand theatre in Malone, N. Y. It is one of the most attractive motion picture houses in northern New York.

G. Interrante, the principal baritone of the San Carlo Opera company which played the Teck theatre last week, has been engaged by Manager Vincent R. McFaul to appear at Shea's Hippodrome the week of May 4. Martha Gomph and Katherine Stang who have been giving violin and harp recitals in the Hotel Statler which have been broadcast from station WGR will appear at the "Hipp," the week of April 27, when Redferne Hollinshed will also sing. The orchestra at the Hippodrome has been reseated and much better ensemble work is the result. Harry Wallace conducted the orchestra in a magnificent rendition of "1812" last week.

Kansas City

THE Fox Film building, Nineteenth and Wyandotte streets, Kansas City, was purchased last week by Morris A. Friedman from Ray T. Bowling for $45,000, including a vacant lot on Main street, north of Fifty-first street. The building is 50 x 105 feet.

L. W. Alexander arrived in Kansas City last Monday to assume his new duties as branch manager of the Kansas City Hodkinson office. Mr. Alexander, who formerly was branch manager of the Kansas City Universal office, left last October to become manager of the Chicago Universal office. The last few months he had been in Los Angeles.

L. W. Wier has resigned as manager of the Kansas City Universal office to accept a position as Hodkinson district manager on the Pacific coast. Mr. Wier recently came to Kansas City from the Pacific coast. Until a new branch manager is named, Gerald Akers, Middle Western district manager for Universal, is in charge of the office. Sam Stoll, city salesman for Universal, has been promoted to manager of the Universal Des Moines, Ia., office, being succeeded in Kansas City by W. P. Bernfield, former Universal city salesman.

As a tribute to E. C. Rhoden, Kansas City branch manager of the First National office, the office force has designated the month of May as "Rhoden Month." Mr. Rhoden not only was born and married in May, but it was four years ago in May that he came to Kansas City. To make next month a record breaker in sales is the goal of the office force.

Defying traditions, R. V. Turner of Burlingame, Kas., has thrown open his theatres on Sundays and thus far has met with no opposition from the antiquated Kansas labor law. He was in Kansas City last week to do some heavy booking, for which the Vitagraph office owes him a vote of thanks.

For the first time in six years C. F. Mensing of the Orpheum and Lyceum theatres, Leavenworth, Kas., was hustling about on Kansas City's movie row last week buying film. Heretofore all the buying has been done by Walter Wallace. C. M. Tattee of Lawrence, Kas., and H. R. Payne, formerly of the Palace theatre, Spring Hill, Kas., also were visitors, the latter being on the outlook for a theatre to purchase.

A "bouncing baby boy" found its way to the home of Raymond Gear, manager of the Mayflower theatre, Florence, Kas., last week. All week a proud father has been distributing cigars.

Stanley Koch, Kansas representative for United Artists, does little talking about "big business," but last week, after mentioning that the Beeson theatre, Dodge City, Kas., one of the largest houses between Kansas City and Denver had closed, he confided that his trip through the Sunflower state had been the most successful one in several months.

George Hinton, former Kansas City Hodkinson branch manager, has joined the Universal sales force and is covering Central Kansas, handling the entire Universal product.

Eddie Bonns, head of the Goldwyn exploitation department, was in Kansas City last week on a tour of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exchanges, remaining two days.

Returning from a trip to Wichita, Kas., Saline, Kas., Junction City, Kas., and Hutchinson, Kas., C. C. Vaughan, manager of the Kansas City Pathe office, announced that he had closed contracts in each of the cities on Harold Lloyd's latest picture, "Girl Shy."

A complaint has been made by Kansas City post office officials that many exhibitors in the Kansas City territory are failing to place a return label on film shipments, merely scratching out their own names and drawing an arrow, pointing to the name and address of the exchange in the corner. Exchanges have been urged to inclose return labels with all shipped reels.

A musical prologue, arranged by George Ellis of Los Angeles, was staged at the Isis theatre, Kansas City last week with the showing of the "Virginian." The stage was set like a western ranch and three local singers wore western costumes.

The first real outdoor theatre in Kansas City is being constructed by the Barstow school, an institution for girls. At the rear of the school's gymnasium a stage of an amphitheatre will be of stone, 20 x 30 feet. Stone benches, accommodating 350, will be constructed.

Albany

MUCH activity is characterizing the recent organization of the film salesmen of this city. There is talk now of an automobile outing some Sunday, to which the exchange managers will be invited. John Thurlow and Nat Marcus have been named to confer with the Albany Film Board of Trade on certain matters, and already the Board has assured the new organization of its hearty co-operation.

Ed Hochstim, well known along Film Row, and now manager of the Star, in Hudson, spent a few days in New York last week.

A report reached Film Row last week to the effect that the Peerless Booking offices had assumed control of the Rialto in Glens Falls.

The ranks of the exhibitors in this territory have lost a valuable member in the recent death of Mr. Thornton, owner of the Orpheum in Saugerties, who died a week ago.

Two local boys were featured last week at the Griswold in Troy, in song numbers. The house is being touched up by painters and other improvements are being made.

Alterations are in progress at the local Pathe exchange with a rearrangement contemplated throughout the entire office.

Mr. Zincke will take over the Park, in Hudson, on April 15, when M. E. Troy, who has been running the house, will move to Syracuse.

Arthur Whyte, who looks after the Proctor bookings, was along Film Row last week. J. H. MacIntyre, manager of the Paramount exchange, working to land some big contracts with Mr. Whyte, accompanying him on his return trip to New York City.

Dave Cohn of Binghamton, one of the big exhibitors in the Parlor City, was a visitor here last week.

William Smalley of Cooperstown, head of a chain of houses in this section of the state, and who has been at odds with the Film Board for some little time, has adjusted matters.

Lew Fisher has installed new seats in the Playhouse in Ticonderoga. Business looks poor for Mr. Fisher in Port Henry, owing to the fact that some of the blast furnaces have closed down indefinitely.

Alec Herman, manager of the First National exchange, made a tour of the Little North last week, which includes Glens Falls, Saratoga and other places.

The Gilmore Amusement company, of Syracuse, has reopened the Astor in Troy, with double features at ten cents. The house seats 450. P. H. Riley, of Albany, has been named as manager.

Moe Mark, Walter Hayes and Gene Falks, heads of the Mark Strand chain of houses, were in Albany last week on their way to New York.

Jake Golden, of the Harmanus Bleecker Hall, provided the entertainment which characterized the anniversary dinner given one night last week by employees of the Albany Evening News.

Friends of Jacob Rosenthal, owner of the Rose, in Troy, presented him with a handsome fern last week, which now adorns the lobby. Mr. Rosenthal did a great business during his anniversary week, providing double features for his patrons and presenting photographs of favorite stars to everyone.

A cut-out of "The White Sister," the work of Walter Roberts, resident manager of the Troy theatre, caused a lot of comment during the last week or so. Mr. Roberts arranged the cut-out so that the head appeared in the center of a red ball of lights, and then with a baby spot focused on the head, it stood out in a wonderfully life-like manner.

Thirty years ago, Virgil N. Lappeus sold tickets at the Griswold theatre in Troy, the house to which he has just been named as manager.

Harry Symansky and Uly Hill, of Troy, were in New York last week, arranging the bookings of the Lincoln, which has now passed to the management of the Strand group of houses.

The Troy theatre came near being inundated one night last week when the high waters in the Hudson river reached the boiler room at one o'clock in the morning, and caused Walter Roberts and other employees of the house to maintain an all night vigil in case it became necessary to hurriedly remove the costly motors from the basement. At 4 o'clock in the morning, the waters began to recede and Mr. Roberts heaved a sigh of relief as he hurried off to bed.

Michael McGraw, assistant projectionist at the Troy theatre, had a tough run of luck last week, when he bought a new automobile, and then had someone smash into him the next day. T. Roy Kieffer, orchestra leader, and Uly Hill, are also sporting new cars, but have managed to keep out of the way of others.

Vaudeville will shift to the Avon in Watertown on Easter Sunday, and pictures will be featured from now on at the Olympic. It has been decided to feature local artists of Watertown in prologues at these two houses.

Pictures will give way to stock at Harmanus Bleecker Hall sooner than expected, owing to the fact that the leading woman will become available somewhat earlier than was at first thought possible. Pictures will not be featured after May 5.

St. Louis

EVENGELOS PASMEZOGLU, 69 years old, father of Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu, owner of the Criterion, Delmar and Congress theatres, St. Louis, died at his home, 715 North Euclid avenue, St. Louis, on April 9 after an illness of nine months. The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon April 12 from the residence of his son, 4967 Forest Park boulevard. Interment was in Valhalla Cemetery. Rev. Father Ermogenis of the Greek Catholic Church presided at the funeral services.

Roy Dickson, formerly manager of the local Selznick office, on Monday, April 14, assumed charge of the St. Louis Associated Exhibitors Exchange, succeeding Steve O'Brien, formerly of Omaha, Nebr., who was temporarily in charge of the office. Mr. O'Brien has been assigned to other duties.

When he left the Selznick service on Saturday, April 12, Dickson was remembered by the office organization and presented with a handsome leather brief case.

John Paine, special representative for Selznick who has been in St. Louis for several days named O. F. Lessing, formerly assistant to Dickson, as office manager for the St. Louis office while B. J. Derby becomes sales manager. Both Lessing and Derby are very well known to the local film world. Lessing has been with the Selznick and Select organizations for several years, while Derby has had considerable experiences in the various branches of filmdom.

Samuel Werner, of United Film Exchange, returned from New York last week.

Charles Werner of Metro, G. E. McKean, manager for the local Fox office, Sol Hankin of Educational, W. Chalet of United Artists and Jack Weil of Goldwyn who attended the annual convention of the Arkansas exhibitors at Little Rock the past week have returned to St. Louis. Werner and McKean took advantage of their trip to drop over to Memphis and adjacent territory.

J. E. Storey, general sales manager for Pathe, passed through St. Louis last Friday on his way to Kansas City and other Western key cities. He spent several hours in St. Louis.

B. Van Borsson, owner of the Crescent, Savoy and Majestic theatres in Terre Haute, Ind., was in St. Louis on April 12 to arrange his late Spring and Summer programmes.

Theodore Coleman of Mount Carmel, Ill., was seen along Picture Row during the past week.

Other out-of-town visitors included Mrs. I. W. Rodgers, Poplar Bluff and Cairo, Ill.; S. E. Pertle of Jerseyville, Ill.; Green Luttrell of the Majestic, Jacksonville, Ill.; W. Patterson of the Princess Huttick, Ill.; Jimmy Clayton, West Frankfort, Ill., and Ross Denny, Carrollton, Ill.

Claude McKean, manager of the Educational Department of the local Fox Exchange visited Olney and Mount Carmel, Ill., during the week. He landed some nice contracts.

Cleveland

THERE was gloom in the local Goldwyn exchange this week. It was caused by the sudden death of Miss Leona Bandy, book keeper. Miss Bandy died of sleeping sickness, after having been ill less than two weeks.

Norman Moray, manager of our First National exchange, is back at his desk after an illness of three weeks.

Mrs. C. J. Gurwell, assistant manager of the American Motion Picture exchange, is recovering from a severe illness which has kept her confined to her home for more than two weeks.

Lee Chapman, president of Security Pictures Company, state rights distributors, announces the purchase of six Art Mix westerns. They're all five reelers, and they are ready for immediate release for the entire state of Ohio.

George Jacobs, personal representative for Al Lichtman has been made temporary manager of the Cleveland Universal exchange, following the resignation last Wednesday of Manager Harry Brown.

J. S. Jossey, of Progress Pictures, paid his Cincinnati branch office a visit during the past week.

The Film Ball last week was a great success. 350 couples gathered at the Winton Hotel last Saturday night, and danced until the wee small hours. There were specialty acts arranged by Mark Goldman and Bill Onie, of the entertainment committee. The ball was given under the auspices of the Film Board of Trade.

Pete Callages came up to town last week to book pictures for his new Washington Theatre at Toronto. Callages used to own the Opera House and Royal theatres in Salem. He sold them recently, and took unto himself the new house in Toronto which has just been completed.

J. V. Wolcott has leased the Standard Theatre, Prospect Avenue and East Ninth St., Cleveland for a period of ten years. Wolcott also has the Princess theatre, another downtown picture house. The Reel, East Ninth St. was operated by him too until last week, when it was taken over by the Cleveland Trust Company for banking purposes.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Forty Horse Hawkins

(Universal—5419 Feet)

(Review by Laurence Read)

THIS carries a slight plot — which offers a great deal of episodic and padded incident. One might call it glorified hokum — but hokum that is not out of place considering the story and characterization. Ever since Hoot Gibson demonstrated that he can play the boob to perfection, Universal has given him stories calling for his peculiar brand of comedy. The picture is dependent upon the star, for he is in every scene. It is far-fetched and repetitious in its incident — but the average spectator will be fairly interested in its burlesque — even though it fails to generate any humor.

Gibson is a handy man in a western hamlet, doubling as bus driver, hotel manager, waiter, porter and stage manager of the local 'opry house. In assuming these duties he wears a distinctive headdress for each of the varied positions. The hokum isn't long in arriving. The tank town troupers are playing one of the "mortgage" melodramas — and the action shifts from shots of the audience — to bits from the play — and several scenes of Gibson as the boob stage manager. It is ridiculous if you can imagine a Broadway actress falling for a country bumpkin. But she does — and he follows her to New York, where after an unsuccessful attempt to locate her he gets a job as super in her new production — without discovering that she is the leading lady.

The New York stage life and atmosphere is in vivid contrast to the "hick" stuff — and the incident concentrates upon showing the super as a prize boob. He is always in the way or intruding where he doesn't belong. And in playing up the part, the director repeats himself. This director, incidentally, places himself in the picture as the city stage manager. The boob puts over some impromptu business when he discovers his sweetheart — and saves the show from flopping. So we have two plays within a play.

The picture is not as bright as some recent releases of Gibson's — but it should satisfy the audience in program theatres. It was apparently sketched to exploit the star in a boob character.

THEME. Comedy romance of westerner who is jack-of-all-trades. Falls in love with actress, follows her to New York — and wins her love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The village 'opry house — with an old-fashioned meller being acted. The hokum of scenes which feature star. The boob performance by Hoot Gibson in his role of a handy man and a stage super.

DIRECTION. Makes fairly interesting picture from slight plot. Is mostly episodic — and is forced to repeat his incident. A hokum story — he sees to it that the hokum is in place. Is good with his stage incident.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as another of the Hoot Gibson comedy pictures — in which the star plays a boob role. Emphasize the title in a teaser campaign. Might ballyhoo it with employees dressed in uniform of Union soldiers.

DRAWING POWER. For program houses.

SUMMARY. This one has slight plot — which is mostly episodic. Gives Gibson a chance to play the boob — which he does so well. It featurse two plays within a play — and carries a lot of hokum. Not much humor — but should satisfy its audiences.

THE CAST

Luke (Bud) Hawkins	Hoot Gibson
Mary Darling	Anne Cornwall
Rudolph Catalina	Richard Tucker
Sylvia Dean	Helen Holmes
Johnny	Jack Gordon Edwards
Sheriff	Ed Burns
Wild Bill Bailey	John Judd
Stage Manager	Edward Sedgwick

By Edward Sedgwick and Raymond L. Schrock. Scenario by Raymond L. Schrock. Directed by Edward Sedgwick.

SYNOPSIS. A young Jack-of-all-trades in isolated western hamlet meets leading woman of theatrical troupe — and sees to her comfort in his hotel duties. Also acts as stage manager. She returns East — and the hero follows — where after working as chauffeur he becomes a super in her company — and saves the show by some impromptu business of his own. The romance is continued.

On Time

(Truart-Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS story was evidently written for no other reason than to exploit the athletic prowess of Richard Talmadge. The plot sure does keep this active star on the move, jumping over persons, up telegraph poles, from one building to another, from one floor to another, and so on and so forth from beginning to end of a film tale that starts out with promise but soon develops into such a bewildering maze of nonsense that there is one hope left in the mind of the observer — that the end may soon arrive.

In the beginning we have some fairly interesting work on the part of the star and the beauty of Billie Dove who is exceptionally easy on the eyes, with some fair comedy on the part of Tom Wilson in the role of a valet who is also a Nubian polo enthusiast. But then suddenly, and for no reason whatever, we are introduced to a costume ball and a lot of dances which take up valuable footage. We soon discover, however, that "we hadn't seen anything yet," for then ensues a long series of wild sequences dealing with an attempt of a demented surgeon to transfer the brains of a gorilla to the dome of the hero and with a lot of "you chase me" stuff between the athletic star and a band of Mongolians who want their little idol back poco pronto.

After one is just about fed up with the silliness of the whole thing and as the hero and heroine are about to be married a screen is drawn aside and we are told that it was all done for no other reason than to see what the young man could do as a movie star. But even that didn't make us feel any better. However, be that as it may, there are some audiences who may enjoy this sort of picture and overlook its weaknesses in the action-packed sequences.

Talmadge works hard but he has had much better vehicles than this one. The cast includes some names that can be played up, such as Stuart Holmes, George Siegman, Charles Clary and the charming Miss Dove. The mounting of the picture is quite stagey throughout.

THEME. A melodrama that exploits the athletic ability of Richard Talmadge with the star going through some very wild adventures and in the end being told that it was all to test his talent for a film career.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The stunts accomplished by the star. The charm of Billie Dove. The comedy introduced by Tom Wilson. The fights in the Chinese den.

DIRECTION. Must be forgiven on account of the weak material at hand. Has however kept the star on the move.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put over a display of clocks with your local department or jewelry and hardware stores with appropriate ads and photos on the feature. Play up the thrilling stunts put over by Richard Talmadge.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for smaller houses downtown and in the communities where folks don't like to use their grey matter much.

SUMMARY. There are a lot of folks who like to see Richard Talmadge jump around on the screen. This feature, therefore, will please these folks. It is a production that starts off well but becomes so muddled up that the interest is lost before the ending comes which explains why so much foolishness was permitted.

THE CAST

Harry Willis	Richard Talmadge
Helen Hendon	Billie Dove
Horace Hendon	Charles Clary
Richard Drake	Stuart Holmes
Casanova Clay	Tom Wilson
"Mr. Black"	Douglas Gerard
"Dr. Spinks"	Fred Kirby
"His Wife"	Frankie Mann
Wang Wu	George Siegmann

By Albert Cohn. Directed by Henry Lehrman. Scenario by Garrett Ford. Photographed by William Marshall.

SYNOPSIS. Failing to make a fortune in six months, in spite of his possession of a lucky Chinese idol, Harry Willis returns discouraged. But he is offered $10,000 a day for some dangerous work. He becomes involved with a demented surgeon who wants to graft gorilla brains on him and with a gang of Chinese who threaten his life unless their idol is returned. When he seeks a license to be married he finds that all his wild adventures have been nothing more than tests to see what he could do as a movie star.

Borrowed Husbands

(Vitagraph—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

MILDRED K. BARBOUR, who writes those entertaining tales of snappy doings among the idle rich, and, who has quite a following among the newspaper readers of the nation, is responsible for this story of domestic complications in the upper strata of society which should please the women folks and those who seek light and fluffy diversion in their celluloid fare.

The acting is the big feature of this picture. The plot, while not being startlingly original, is entertainly developed and succeeds in holding the interest, although the picture would be improved if edited down about a reel.

The production has been given a distinctly high class setting, the interiors especially being very satisfactory and artistic. The theme is rich in tense situations, the first occurring when the husband sees the message in a gift book from "the other man" to his wife which causes a rift in the sails of the marital bark. There is also a big thrill in the sequences leading up and the actual wrecking of a motor car with two occupants as the machine climbs the Adirondacks and at a sharp curve, skids and goes down the slope.

Romance teems throughout the plot or perhaps we should call it love making — between other women's husbands and other men's wives. The scenes between Florence Vidor and Rockliffe Fellowes being especially well acted. Miss Vidor will put over most any film with her personal charm and appealing interpretations. She stands out every moment during her work in this picture. Mr. Fellowes gives a very fine characterization of a talented surgeon who is also skilled in the ways of wooing. The rest of the cast is adequate.

The picture is brought to a dramatic climax when the surgeon, finding that he has been cornered by the federal authorities for poisoning his mistress, successfully performs a dangerous operation and then takes his own life. The production, technically, approaches perfection.

THEME. A society drama dealing with the complications ensuing when friends introduce the wife of a departed husband as the most attractive widow in town and then proceed to give her a "borrowed" husband.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting of Miss Vidor, Mr. Fellowes, Mr. Williams and the rest of the cast. The wreck of the auto when it plunges down the mountain side. The love scenes. The dramatic climax.

DIRECTION. Has made a satisfactory picture out of an ordinary story. Has been fortunate in having such excellent players to work with. Has put over several well aimed punches and brought the tale to a peppy climax. Might have speeded up the action in the early reels.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell your patrons that the author of this story is the same that writes all those newspaper tales for them. Play up the names of Miss Vidor and Messrs. Williams and Fellowes. Tell them about the auto wreck and the intimate love scenes.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for second class, downtown houses, larger community theatres and the towns.

SUMMARY. This is a good program picture acted by a cast of well known players and you have a popular star to play up in Florence Vidor. There is punch, romance and drama in it.

THE CAST

Nancy Burrard	Florence Vidor
Dr. Langwell	Rockliffe Fellowes
Major Desmond	Earle Williams
Gerald Burrard	Robert Gordon
Edith Langwell	Kathryn Adams
Constance Stanley	Violet Palmer
Reeve Lewis	Alpheus Lincoln
Fleurette	Claire DuBrey
Peggy Lewis	Charlotte Merriam
Curtis Stanley	J. W. Irving

By Mildred K. Barbour. Directed by David Smith. Scenario by C. Graham Baker. Photographed by Steve Smith.

SYNOPSIS. No sooner has Gerald Burrard gone on a South American scientific expedition than his wife, Nancy becomes involved in a flirtation with several men, one the husband of her friend and the other a major, the latter becoming quite infatuated with her. He believes her to be a widow. Nancy learns of an affair between Dr. Langwell and Fleurette. The latter, however, is injured in an auto accident and dies. Dr. Langwell then attempts to make love to Nancy, telling her that Gerald has sent money to Fleurette. In South America the major learns that Nancy is married when he meets her husband who he tells to hurry home. On his arrival all is explained. Dr. Langwell takes his own life, when he learns that the federal authorities have discovered that he poisoned Fleurette.

The Age of Desire

(First National—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

A RATHER weak and tiresome story of the "mother love" type which is quite a disappointment after some of Frank Borzage's former offerings. About the only saving qualities of the picture are its large and artistic interior sets and the acting of a few members of the cast. It is too bad that Mary Philbin doesn't have more to do as exhibitors might then feature her name in the lights which would help her recent successes. However, the little that is given to Miss Philbin to do is done well. Myrtle Steadman is really the star of the feature, but overdoes her part of a mother who married wealth and deserted her son but found that money failed to bring her happiness without her son. Miss Steadman fails to make her scenes with her new found son convincing.

There is a garden party with some bathing beauties doing their stuff thrown into the picture. It has nothing to do with the story but we suppose the producers thought they had to do something to fill out the required footage. There is an appealing scene when the deserted son, brought up by a crook and developed into a criminal, confesses to his little sweetheart that their home has been bought with stolen money and that he is a thief.

William Collier who interprets the role of the son does too much posing instead of acting and therefore does not win much sympathy for his part. Josef Swickard is the one bright spot in the picture. He, at least, acts lifelike. Edith Yorke does well with her role of grandma.

There is a bit o' moral to the story but on the whole it is decidedly preachy material and is suitable only for the smaller houses in the towns and some neighborhood houses. It is O.keh for second class downtown theatres that change their programs often.

THEME. A drama of mother love in which a woman finds that wealth without her son, whom she deserted when she married a millionaire, fails to bring her peace and contentment.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting of Mary Philbin. The scene in which the millionaire finds his wife in the arms of the son thinking the latter "the other man." The gowns worn by Miss Steadman. The artistic and elaborate interiors. The scene in which the hero tells his sweetheart he is a crook. The statisfactory climax.

DIRECTION. Shows nothing to stamp it as being off the beaten path. Has been handicapped with a weak story. Has put some heart appeal into some of the scenes, but on a whole has failed to keep up the interest in the theme.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title. The names in the cast, especially Mary Philbin. Play up the moral of the plot which shows that money cannot offset mother love. Photos of Miss Steadman in her striking gowns might be used to advantage in some fashion store tieups.

DRAWING POWER. Might go in some program house, but is suitable for the towns and neighborhood theatres.

SUMMARY. This picture has few redeeming qualities. Its plot is mediocre and tiresome having few bright spots and only a very few convincing dramatic situations. Mary Philbin is in the cast but having little to do she is unable to awaken much interest in her work. The interiors are quite elaborate and artistic. And that 's that.

THE CAST

Marcio	Josef Swickard
Ranny at 21 (son)	William Collier, Jr.
Malcolm Trask	Frank Truesdell
Ranny at 3	Baby Bruce Guerin
Ranny at 13	Frankie Lee
Dan Reagan	J. Farrell MacDonald
Margy at 10	Mary Jane Irving
Janet Loring	Myrtle Steadman
Ann Reagan	Aggie Herring
Margy at 18	Mary Philbin
Grandma	Edith Yorke

By Dixie Wilson. Directed by Frank Borzage. Scenario by Mary O'Hara. Photographed by Chester Lyons.

SYNOPSIS. When Janet Loring marries Malcolm Trask, a millionaire, she deserts her son, who becomes the tool of a crook seeking to blackmail the wealthy mother. The mother, desiring her son's return in later years, advertises for him and the crook sends the boy not knowing he is the son. The lad takes money from the mother, but after she convinces him that he is her son he confesses all and is eventually taken into the millionaire's heart and wins a sweetheart and a little home.

Between Friends

(Vitagraph—Seven Reels)

(Review by Laurence Read)

HERE is the eternal triangle theme with a new dressing. Through a treatment of suggestion which credits the audience with intelligence, J. Stuart Blackton, has turned out a picture that should meet with immediate response — even with those skeptics who cry out that nothing new is being served on the screen. Robert W. Chambers, who wrote this story, develops his theme from the "trusted friend" idea — and strikes a real tragic note which engenders a fine dramatic suspense. It is a story of human frailities — of a wife who leaves her husband for his best friend — and, finding no way out of her predicament, commits suicide.

You may guess what is coming — but you are apt to guess wrong. Blackton could have chosen one of a dozen threads. And each one would have made interesting drama. The choice here, however, is rich in melodramatic conflict. The early situations are finely executed — there being no map drawn to point out the action and incident. It is when the philanderer returns to ease his conscience that the picture develops a melodramatic trend. He would build a church and an altar. You wonder (and the suspense mounts) whether an interloper will acquaint the husband of the facts — a sequence which is subsequently developed. And then comes a new twist to this ancient formula. The husband, a sculptor, has become enamoured of his model — although he has a rival in the friend who stole his wife. Instead of the usual vengeance he orders the other man to kill himself at a specified time — and then exerts mental telepathy to prevent him. Far-fetched, but effective, this touch. Mr. Blackton resorts to double exposure, in establishing the husband's delirium — and plants his climax too laboriously — so that much of the suspense striven for is lost. But though one may guess the outcome it releases a real dramatic punch. The title is symbolized in several situations. What we like about it is the absence of hokum — and the doing away with a familiar development. There is suggested a constant suspense that something dramatic is going to happen — although had the "conscience" note been developed it would have allowed greater acting opportunity insofar as Norman Kerry is concerned. The picture is direct and progressive in action — is handsomely mounted with all the atmosphere and details in good taste, and the acting of Anna Q. Nilsson, as the runaway wife, and Alice Calhoun, as the model, is exceptionally good. The former makes her exit early but her vital presentation of the wife is felt throughout the unfoldment of the story — while Miss Calhoun gives a fascinating study of a nun.

THEME. Eternal triangle drama revolving around husband's best friend stealing his wife. The husband discovers his treachery and orders him to kill himself — but saves him by mental telepathy.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The direct, progressive action. The absence of any planting of incident. The good taste in settings. The fine performances by Anna Q. Nilsson and Alice Calhoun.

DIRECTION. Takes triangle theme and handles it with economy of detail. Builds action so that it is always direct and progressive. Overstresses climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title possesses teaser possibilities. Bill it as something new in domestic dramas. Play up the beauty of feminine players. Bill prominence of cast. Play up the climax.

DRAWING POWER. A good audience picture.

SUMMARY. This triangle story packs a good wallop — and succeeds in holding the interest all the way. Director handles plot with direct treatment. Carries suspense — and some human appeal. Is well acted — also excellently staged.

THE CAST

David Drane	Lou Tellegen
Jessica Drane	Anna Q. Nilsson
Jack Greylock	Norman Kerry
Cecile White	Alice Calhoun
Quair	Stuart Holmes
Guilder	Henry Barrows

By Robert W. Chambers. Directed by J. Stuart Blackton.

SYNOPSIS. Wife leaves her sculptor husband and elopes with his best friend. Regrets her act and kills herself. The friend is never mistrusted until a mutual acquaintance gives him away. The sculptor has model who wins love of the friend. And the latter offers to do away with himself to satisfy husband's vengeance. The hour is set for the suicide — but the husband prevents the tragedy through mental telepathy.

The Rejected Woman

(Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS is undoubtedly the most pretentious production that Distinctive has so far contributed to the Goldwyn program. Its plot sweeps from the snow-covered wastes of northern Canada to the haunts of the idle rich in New York. It is a picture that has many points of appeal. There is romance, adventure, thrills, tense drama and real heart interest.

The action begins in Canada where the audience is introduced to some very fine snow scenes and the first thrill when the hero is injured falling down a steep bank during the terrific blizzard. Then after the hero and the girl are forced to remain in a cabin overnight and the former is driven away by the father after consenting not to kill him, the scenes shift to Broadway and the production takes on a very elaborate appearance presenting a series of lavishly furnished interiors of homes, offices, hotels and cabarets.

The picture offers a goodly quota of stirring episodes. The radio is introduced in the early reels when the news of the death of the hero's father is sent into the ether from a Gotham broadcasting station and received in the northland by a friend who communicates it to the son. A novel idea and thoroughly modern. Comedy is injected into the meeting of the directors of the Leslie estate as John, the son, presides, but is continually being called on the phone by "wild women," or forgetting business in thoughts of the latter.

There are some tense scenes as Leslie, embarrassed by the manners of Diane in a swell cabaret, is deserted by the latter who accepts a proposal of Leslie's enemy, Dunbar, to provide her with money and clothes and send her abroad. The drama continues when the girl returns, more beautiful than ever, and when having wed Leslie, her past is exposed by Dunbar who succeeds in breaking up the happy home by showing the husband checks endorsed by Diane.

Alma Rubens is an attractive heroine and acquits herself creditably in the emotional moments. Conrad Nagel is an acceptable hero. The remainder of the cast is adequate.

THEME. Society romance dealing with the adventures of a Canadian northwest beauty who is sent to New York where she enters into a compromising proposition with the enemy of the hero.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The injury of Leslie during the blizzard in the northland. The discovery of the two in the cabin by the father and the driving of Leslie from the country. The scenes in which Dunbar, hoping to ruin Leslie ,exposes Diane as the woman he has been supporting. The elaborate interiors.

DIRECTION. Keeps things going along fairly well with several well planted dramatic moments. Has been able to inject novelty by use of radio and airplane.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with the radio stores using photos of the broadcasting scenes. Play up the names of Nagel and Rubens. Play up the scenes of New York life. If you have an airplane field near your town engage one of the aviators to drop heralds.

DRAWING POWER. Should go over in the larger houses and please most of the patrons.

SUMMARY. Quite a pretentious production that is acted by a cast of the first water. Possesses many gripping situations and filled with elaborate sets. Has novelty of appeal through use of the nation's hobby — the radio.

THE CAST

Diane DuPrez	Alma Rubens
Jean Gagnon	Bela Legosi
Samuel DuPrez	George MacQuarrie
John Lesie	Conrad Nagel
Craig Burnett	Antonio D'Algy
Peter Lesie	Aubrey Smith
Leyton Carter	Frederick Burton
James Dunbar	Wyndham Standing
Aunt Rosa	Mme. La Violette
Lucille Van Tuyl	Lenore Hughes

By John Lynch. Directed by Albert Parker. Adapted by John Lynch. Photographed by Roy Hunt.

SYNOPSIS. Landing "somewhere in Canada" from his airphane, John Leslie meets Diane Duprez. During a walk they are overtaken by a snow storm. Leslie falls down a slippery slope and is injured. The two are forced to seek shelter over night in a cabin. Diane's father is furious and after Leslie has returned to New York, he sends Diane to the same place "until the folks forget the scandal." They are married, but soon Leslie hears that another man has been paying Diane's bills and he leaves her. Eventually everything is explained.

The Confidence Man

(Paramount—Six Reels)

(Review by Laurence Read)

THIS formula has been going the rounds for many, many years — and since it is a favorite with screen producers there is no question but what it will continue to serve for screen expression. Thomas Meighan has found the "come back" type of character particularly suitable to his personality and talent — and he can make it interesting if there is a substantial plot behind it — a plot well fortified with incident and compelling situations.

Unfortunately "The Confidence Man" is a single track picture. There is no ingenuity nor invention about it — the director taking the script as written and playing safe. There was opportunity to balance the obvious development with amusing incident — and to inject some capital "business." But the highlights are contained in the titles — for which George Ade is responsible.

The central idea is built around a Wallingford character who journeys down from New York to a Florida village in order to fleece a crabbed miser out of his money. When he comes in contact with the simple, honest natives and, particularly a girl, who has unbounded faith in him, his regeneration is in sight. The action is confined to the groupings of the characters — and they do little, but stand around while the camera grinds. Close-ups are balanced with medium shots in catching the same views of the star and his leading woman, Virginia Valli — and the director doesn't give her many chances to register emotion or to be photographed to advantage. The story drags because Mr. Heerman fails to fortify his cut and dried situations with any incident. He provides but one humorous situation — when two bearded characters dress themselves in Laurence Wheat's checkered pajamas and tumble into his bed. Speaking of Mr. Wheat — he plays the hero's partner and he appears to be employed for no other reason than to cut to some figure as the romance is being developed.

The plot sort of vanishes into thin air — for it fails to register any stirring climax. The hero is willing to go to prison and face the music when he appreciates the honesty and trust of these gullible natives. The development is slow and methodical — and often tiresome. The mechanics of atmosphere, photography and lighting are first rate. And the interpretation is competent enough. Tom Meighan deserves bigger stories on the order of "Back Home and Broke."

THEME. Treats of a city swindler's regeneration when he encounters the faith and honesty of simple villagers — much of his "about face" being influenced by romance.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. George Ade's titles. The character sketches of Charles Dow Clark and Margaret Seddon. The lighting and photography. Moment when hero decides to go straight. The spoiling of the bazaar by the rain.

DIRECTION. Is uninspired. Had opportunity to inject some capital business and overcome plot shortcomings — but fails to lighten the monotonous development. Romance is almost negligible. Too many cuts to unimportant details.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature this as a typical Meighan story. Bill as picture of redemption. Play up Virginia Valli.

DRAWING POWER. Star's popularity will attract them everywhere.

SUMMARY. We expect more from Meighan. Not in the same class as "Back Home and Broke." Conventional, uninspired treatment — with scarcely any incident. Titles are the best points about it. Has no situations of consequence. Mediocre.

THE CAST

Dan Corvan	Thomas Meighan
Margaret Leland	Virginia Valli
Larry Maddox	Laurence Wheat
Godfrey Querrit	Charles Dow Clark
Mrs. Bland	Helen Lindroth
Jimmie Bland	Jimmie Lapsley
Mrs. X	Margaret Seddon
Wade	George Nash
Mrs. O'Brien	Dorothy Walters
The Minister	David Higgins

By Laurie York Erskine. Scenario by Paul Sloane. Directed by Victor Heerman.

SYNOPSIS. Swindler from city goes to Florida town to fleece miserly skinflint. With the co-operation of his partner he succeeds in his venture, but refuses to profit by it when he appreciates the honesty and faith of the humble villagers. Meets a native girl who inspires him to go straight. His redemption assured he is willing to go to prison.

The Woman Who Sinned

(Finis Fox—F. B. O.—Seven Reels)

(Review by Laurence Read)

TELLING a story of redemption — and carrying elements of appeal in its pathos, heart interest and melodramatic conflict — to say nothing of a convincing characterization, this picture is destined to meet with popular approval. There is unfolded a plot which, while unoriginal, is forceful in its treatment. The author and director has manipulated his characters so that they appear like everyday folks. In other words he has subordinated his plot to make his figures vital and dominant. And they are subject to the virtues and vices found in every community.

It makes moving and interesting drama — even with its time lapse of fifteen years — which is an accomplishment because the continuity is unimpaired. The theme, based upon the triangle (featuring a home-loving wife, innocently compromised) contains sufficient elemental action to quicken the pulse of the spectator — and enough humanities to tug at his heart-strings.

Mr. Fox, who believes in contrast and conflict, sees to it that these ingredients are firmly projected. He shows us a humble home occupied by a husband, his wife and child — and for contrast he guides the youngster aboard a rich philanderer's yacht — which is at anchor in the harbor of this New England coast village. The conflict enters when the young mother frantically searches for the child and finds him aboard the ship. The heroine's degradation is complete when she realizes that she has been victimized. Feeling herself an outcast she refrains from going home. The rest of the story reveals her revenge after experiencing severe trials in the city. Her regeneration is effected through the aid of her son who has become a clergyman — and the sequences building to it are embroidered with human touches so that sympathy for the distressed heroine is never lost.

With its theme of retribution and redemption it carries pathos and drama. And there are no gaps in its logic and treatment. The acting is convincing — especially Mae Busch's performance — while Irene Rich, Rex Lease and Lucien Littlefield are always in character. Morgan Wallace, on the other hand, is a theatrical villain, playing his part with too much emphasis. We call it a sure-fire audience picture. It is finely photographed — several of its scenes flashing a pictorial appeal. The patron will be attracted by the title — and once in his seat he will follow a well-timed story, told progressively and vigorously.

THEME. Domestic drama featuring a wronged wife who gains retribution after being forced to carry on liaison with philanderer. Her redemption follows.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scenes aboard the yacht. The heart appeal. The good acting turned in by well balanced cast. The regeneration of heroine. The detail. The atmosphere of coast village

DIRECTION. Having written the story, the director has known just how to treat it to bring out all the values. Keeps it moving — and emphasizes human note. Makes characters dominant over plot.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title is certain to arouse interest. Play it up — and also concentrate upon cast which comprises well known players. Bill it as a dramatic document of a wronged woman who finds regeneration.

DRAWING POWER. A good audience picture. Should appeal to any type of patron.

SUMMARY. A heart drama is featured here which carries a strong sympathetic note for central figure — a wronged wife. While theme is familiar it has been treated so that its dramatic values are well emphasized. Well staged and finely acted — and contains vital situations.

Milwaukee Hails The New Wisconsin Theatre

New $2,000,000 Saxe Bros. House Called "Showplace of The Northwest"

THE opening of the New Wisconsin theatre at Milwaukee, was an event which attracted visitors from far and wide and was a real triumph for the Saxe Brothers. Thomas and John Saxe, who are pioneer motion picture theatre men, have named this 3,500 seat house, which cost nearly $2,000,000, "The Showplace of the Northwest". It is the twenty-eighth theatre in the chain of the Saxe Operating Company, and is similar in design to the Chicago and Tivoli theatres.

Six Story Building

The building is a six-story affair, located at the corner of Sixth Street and Grand Avenue, one of the busiest downtown intersections. Its furnishings, hangings, and equipment are said to be unexcelled in theatres of similar type in larger cities. Each seat is in clear view of the screen and stage. The enormous gallery is of the cantilever type. The lighting system is of the most comprehensive kind, every known effect of harmonious coloring being possible. The orchestra pit is lighted by direct rays from the roof. Behind the scenes on the stage is sufficient rigging to hang twenty different scenes, and the dressing rooms, rest rooms and offices, are complete in every way.

Presentations A Feature

In complete charge of art and production is Ed. J. Weisfeldt, who has been a member of the Saxe forces for fifteen years. Mr. Weisfeldt leaves the managership of Saxe's Strand in Milwaukee, to assume the stage presentation direction of the new theatre.

The front of the house has the grand stairway and beautiful mezzanine popular with Messrs. C. W. and Geo. L. Rapp, the architects, and these make of the lobby a truly gorgeous setting. Harry Davey, director of the front of the house, is formerly of the Mark Strand Theatre, New York.

The orchestra is comprised of sixty able musicians under the direction of Rudolph G. Kopp, formerly of the Los Angeles Symphony theatre, Grauman's Million Dollar theatre at Los Angeles, and later of the Chicago theatre, Chicago. The members of the orchestra sit in a specially designed pit, the floor of which is a resonance chamber for increasing and enriching the tone values of the music.

Twin Organs Installed

On either side of the orchertra pits are the organ consoles, comprising the Barton twin organ, the last word in organ perfection. Bernhard Cowham, one of the best known organists in the country, has been engaged by the New Wisconsin, but with this new instrument two persons are able to play at the same time and a volume equal to a hundred piece symphony orchestra thus produced.

The seating arrangements are of the latest design. The auditorium chairs were furnished by the Heyward Wakefield Company of Boston.

The heating, cooling, and ventilating systems of the Wisconsin theatre are said to be masterpieces of engineering. They alone represent an expenditure of $157,000. The projectors were installed by the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Co.

Despite blizzardy weather, with the opening scheduled for 6:30 p.m., in half an hour the entire house was filled. More than two thousand invitations had been issued by Messrs. Saxe, but the remaining seats were quickly filled by the crowds who stood in the rain and snow forming a line a block long to gain admittance, and more than 2,000 persons were turned away.

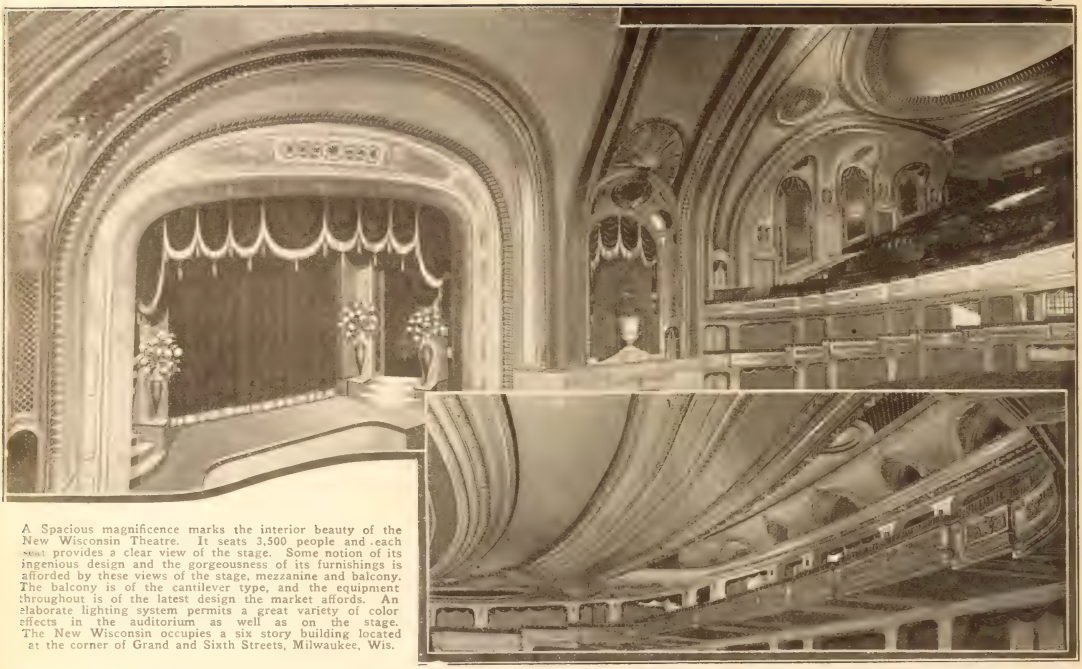
Opening Gala Affair

The program was opened by the Orchestra playing Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser, supplemented by a chorus of 75 voices of the Lyric Male Chorus of Milwaukee singing the Pilgrim's Chorus. The entire stage was arranged to represent a path in the heart of the mountains, along which the entire pilgrim chorus descended, singing as they came. It was a magnificent piece of staging.

Stage Novelties

This was followed by a film showing various features of Wisconsin, and was concluded by a tableau representing the state's crest against a drop showing the state Capitol. Next came Plastigrams, the duo color films.

An organ solo, both organs being played at the same time, was one of the most attractive features of the opening program.



A musical fantasy called Banjo Land was next presented. A gigantic banjo on the back drop, with two banjoists seated on the neck of the instrument, huge daisies and a harvest moon were part of the attractive setting. Dancing and singing of southern and old fashioned songs completed the act.

"Why Men Leave Home", was the feature picture, and a comedy concluded the program.

Features of the opening included a beauty contest throughout the state to determine the most beautiful girl in Wisconsin. Miss Dorothy Jabavy of Two Rivers, Wis. was selected. Miss Jabavy was presented with $100 in gold, a life-time pass to the Wisconsin in a gold case, and presided as queen in a big parade just previous to the Friday evening opening.

The New Wisconsin in Milwaukee is the Twenty-eighth house in the Saxe Brothers string and one of the finest picture theatres in the country. Above an exterior view and at the right a view of the spacious and beautifully decorated lobby, taken from the balcony.

A Spacious magnificence marks the interior beauty of the New Wisconsin Theatre. It seats 3,500 people and each seat provides a clear view of the stage. Some notion of its ingenious design and the gorgeousness of its furnishings is afforded by these views of the stage, mezzanine and balcony. The balcony is of the cantilever type, and the equipment throughout is of the latest design the market affords. An elaborate lighting system permits a great variety of color effects in the auditorium as well as on the stage. The New Wisconsin occupies a six story building located at the corner of Grand and Sixth Streets, Milwaukee, Wis.

members of clubs, various civic organizations, etc. were participants in the parade. At the conclusion of the program a string orchestra played on the mezzanine and Miss Wisconsin presided.

An artistic program booklet, said to be the first of its kind, was presented to each person at the theatre Friday night. It contained the entire history of the building of the theatre and photographs of the theatre personnel and was arranged by Albert Coppock formerly an art designer and technical man with Balaban and Katz.

A regular feature of the Wisconsin will be Sunday noon concerts by the Wisconsin Theatre Symphony orchestra under Mr. Kopp's direction.

Says Movies of Future Will Reproduce Sound and Color

In an interview with the art editor of the Washington Post, Leon Bakst, famous Russian scenic artist, predicts that the motion picture of tomorrow will be in natural colors and reproduce sound by means of radio.

Bakst, who recently paid a visit to Hollywood, did not say by what particular means these effects will be obtained, but states that following a return visit to his Paris studio he will go to Hollywood to devote himself entirely to motion picture work.

The artist is well known in this country through the settings and costumes he designed for numerous stage productions offered here. Among these were the "Cleopatra," "Scheherazade," and other ballet presentations brought to America by the Ballet Russe.

Paying his respects to the spectacular scenes of motion pictures for their artistic and emotional effectiveness, Bakst goes on to say that these huge scenes are too expensive and that the inventiveness of the artist is necessary to produce the effect of "immensity by the employment of only a part of immensity."

Butterfield Will Remodel Theatre in Fort Wayne

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Butterfield returned on March 29th from a two months' trip to California. They found theatrical conditions very good on the Coast. While in Chicago, Mr. Butterfield O. K'd the plans for the new million dollar theatre in Flint. He also announces the leasing of the Orpheum Theatre at Fort Wayne, Indiana, and will take possession of same for next season. This house will be remodelled, with new stage, seats, scenery, dressing rooms and equipment, at an expense of $40,000. It will be renamed The Capitol and placed in the Michigan Circuit of Theatres.

Oscar Brachman, Secretary and Treasurer of the Saxe Operating Corporation.

Service or Surface—Which?

IN the purchase of theatre chairs, the built-in qualities that make for long-time, satisfactory service are of real importance to the theatre manager. While the chairs' appearance today is important, its appearance and condition ten years from now will count for more.

Scientific construction, installation based on true architectural principles, rare beauty of design and color harmonies, skilled and careful workmanship—these are the four-square foundation of the long service value of our chairs. You cannot go wrong when you select "American" chairs for your theatre or playhouse.

Reseating can be accomplished without interrupting your business a single performance.

Does the Public Want Talking Pictures?

By W. E. Waddell

There has been much discussion recently as to whether or not there is a demand for other than pantomime motion pictures. In the opinion of many the silent drama fills every requirement.

The old-timer is wont to say, "O, yes, I've seen talking pictures and they are no good — the people don't want them." He is guessing when he says the people do not want them, for no one in the history of amusements has yet been able to successfully guess what the public wants, and when he refers to talking pictures he has seen in the past he is thinking of various combinations of phonograph and motion picture machines. By this method there has been no illusion, no perfect tone production.

In addition there are still more vital reasons why this method is doomed to failure. A phonograph record is limited to time of running, and no change of scene can take place. The motion picture of today consists of many quick changes of scene and settings. Many of the "shots" are not over ten feet (ten seconds) in length. Therefore a picture that talks cannot successfully compete with its silent brother if it be limited to a single set.

What happens when the film breaks with the phonograph-motion picture combination? There is only one answer to that. Burn it up, and get another print, for synchronism has been permanently destroyed.

But a new talking picture has arrived in the remarkable adaptation of radio to motion pictures, invented by Dr. Lee DeForest, who calls it the Phonofilm. There is no phonograph used in connection with the Phonofilm. The film itself literally talks and reproduces music. The actor performs exactly as he does upon the speaking stage. While the camera lens is catching every movement of his lips a tiny gas-filled tube by its side is faithfully catching every sound he utters.

By the Phonofilm method pictures may be made with all the latitude of the silent drama except that the director must discard his megaphone.

Long shots, close-ups, interior and exterior scenes may be made without regard to continuity. Then they are assembled in the usual way, with perfect synchronization.

What happens when the film breaks? Nothing. Simply patch it together and a fraction of a word with its accompanying action is missing as in a regular motion picture; but synchronization is not disturbed.

Many stage successes are useless for the reason that their charm lies in clever repartee. Therefore a world of splendid material is available for the talking picture that has been considered useless for the silent drama. In addition, musical comedies, light and grand operas, great orchestra concerts, may be reproduced.

Do the people want talking pictures? There is but one answer to that question now, and that a question: would the people of Kokomo like to see and hear Ziegfeld's Follies, the Metropolitan Grand Opera and the great dramas and comedies of Broadway at their local movie house?

Barker Hall Installs New Projection Equipment

New and thoroughly modern projection equipment has been installed by H. L. Lewis at the Barker Hall motion picture theatre, North Grafton, Mass.

Decatur House Features New Type Barton Organ as Drawing Attraction

INSTALLATION of the newest type Barton organ equipped with two consoles and embodying the "pitless console lifts," which is the latest invention of Dan Barton, has been completed at the Lincoln Square Theatre of Decatur, Ill. The management of the Lincoln Square will feature the new instrument as a drawing card in a vigorous advertising campaign.

A series of special numbers featuring the novelty and improved musical effects obtainable with the double console, which permits one organist to operate the instrument from either console or two organists to play simultaneously, has been prepared.

In the Lincoln Square Theatre the consoles have been installed in the orchestra pit at either side of the stage. By means of the electrically operated lifting devices both consoles may be elevated to a position which will permit a full view of the organist or organists from any part of the auditorium.

The new installation has attracted widespread interest among theatre men because of the lifting device, which the Bartola Musical Instrument Company declares is proving a very successful box office attraction

This new pitless electrically-operated console-lift, which by the pressing of a single button raises the console five feet during the organ numbers, then lowers it completely below the sight-lines again for the showing of the picture.

Mr. Dan Barton points out that this type of lift which is his own invention, and sold exclusively with the Barton Organ makes it possible for practically every theatre to own a "lifting console" organ. This is true because of the ease of installation. Instead of being located in a deep, specially-constructed pit, as heretofore required, these lifts, which he calls Pitless Console Lifts, occupy only 12 inches of vertical space and can be set directly on the floor of the orchestra pit.

Granada, New Santa Barbara Theatre, Opened

The Granada theatre, built and operated by the California Theatre Company, in Santa Barbara, Calif., was opened to the public on the night of April 9, with a program headed by Mae Murray in "Mlle. Midnight."

The new structure, which is a combination theatre and office building, was erected at a cost of $450,000. It is located at 20 West Canon Perdido Street.

The Granada will be operated as a combination picture and high class road show and vaudeville house. The opening attraction featured the Mae Murray starring vehicle on a program containing stage features, the leading number of which was a Theodore Kosloff ballet.

The officers of the California Theatre Company are Edward A. Johnson, president; Geo. D. Geib, vice-president, and J. F. Hansen, secretary and treasurer.

Hollywood to Have a New $500,000 Theatre

West Coast Theatres, Inc., operators of a big string of picture theatres in Southern California, have selected the site and completed plans for a new house with a seating capacity of 1,800 in Hollywood.

The plans call for a building costing $500,000 and it is expected the theatre will be ready by August or early in September.

The front of the Cameo Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. The photograph reveals the unusual facade which has won considerable praise for its color and design. The Cameo is owned by Herman Weingarten. Lobby displays and frames shown in the picture were supplied by Libman-Spanger Corporation.

PARABOLIC MIRROR

Lesson II — Part VIII

Its Physical Properties

THE parabolic mirror is essentially a light projecting device as distinguished from mirrors having a spherical curve which are intended, primarily, for image formation.

To be sure, separate images are formed by each individual point on any polished reflector in accordance with the Law of Regular Reflection, but the resultant, or composite image from the entire surface will vary considerably, depending upon the curvature of the mirror.

Parabolic mirrors are finding wide application today for projecting light to comparatively remote distances. Flashlights, automobile and locomotive headlights, searchlights and floodlights are but a few of the uses to which this form of reflector is being put.

Recently, serious efforts were made to extend its use to the projection of motion pictures. The result was that several forms of so called "reflecting arcs" were placed on the market which already give indication of being extensively used. More will be said on this subject later.

How It Works

It will be recalled, in the case of the concave spherical mirror, that all the rays of light approaching the mirror parallel to the axis were not reflected thru the focus of the mirror. Those rays striking the edges of the reflector were turned back so as to cross the axis between the mirror and its focal point. This was described as the "spherical abberation" of the concave mirror.

Naturally, since all the parallel axial rays were not reflected back through the focus, if a point source of light were placed at the focal point, the rays of light issuing from it would not be reflected parallel to each other along the axis.

Suppose, however, that a large number of very small flat (plane) mirrors were arranged around this point of light in such a manner that each mirror picked up one ray of light and reflected it parallel to a certain direction. The appearance of these mirrors would be as in Fig. 27, where F represents the point source of light. The mirrors are indicated by the letters, A, B, C, D, etc., and AX represents the axis of these mirrors.

In accordance with the Law of Regular Reflection, the light rays from point F strike each of the mirrors in such a manner that the angle of incidence is equal to the angle of reflection. Thus, angle FBD equals angle DBO; angle FCD equals DCN; FDB equals BIM, etc.

In this manner a true beam of parallel rays result from this special grouping of mirrors around point F. Now, point F is called the focal point of this combination and the shape of the curve formed by the mirrors when so placed is called a parabola. If this parabola is revolved about AX as an axis the result will be a parabolic reflector. This type of mirror really consists of thousands of pinpoint mirrors, each reflecting a ray of light from a point source at F, the focus, parallel to the axis.

The Parabolic Curve

It is possible to consider the parabolic curve in a number of ways. Mathematically, it is written as follows: $y^2 = 4fx$ where y equals the vertical distance (Fig. 28) measured from the axis to any point on the curve; f equals the focal distance measured the center of the reflector to the focal point, F; x equals the horizontal distance from the center of the reflector to the same point on the reflector from which the y distance is measured. All of these distances are shown in Fig. 28.

From this we see that distance AK (y_1) multiplied by itself is equal to distance MN (x_1) times 4f (four times OF).

The graphical way of constructing the parabola is to select a point, O, to represent the center, or origin, of the curve. On each side of this point, along the axis AC measure off a distance f equal to the focal distance selected. AD will then represent one f distance and OF the other. Draw perpendicular AH through A and OL through O. Now any point on the parabola will be equally distant from line AH and the focal point F.

Thus, KN will be equal to NF and HP equal to PF. In this manner any required section of the parabolic curve, for the particular focal distance, f, chosen may be drawn.

Another graphical method can be employed as follows. Select the center, O, of the curve, on the axis AC. Erect perpendicular ON at this point. Using F as a center and the focal distance f as a radius, describe a circle (fig. 28). Now all points on the parabola will be equally distant from perpendicular OL

(measured horizontally) and the circumference of the circle. For example, MN (x_1) will be equal to NR and LP (x_2) equal to PS. This is the same as saying that NF equals $f + x_1$ and PF equals $f + x_2$.

Effect of Focal Distance

In view of the fact that all parabolic curves have the same general formula, $y^2 = 4fx$, it may seem strange that a variety of shapes can exist. In Fig. 29 we see three different shapes of parabolas, all having the same diameter, D. Curve ABC has an angular opening of 60 degrees measured about the focus F, as a center. Curve DEG has an angular opening of 90 degrees and that of HKL is 120 degrees. The focal distances of the three parabolas are BF, EF and KF respectively.

It is obvious that the thing which causes this difference in shape is the change in focal distance since the diameter, D, is the same for all three shapes. Now, R, the radius of the reflector, is equal to y in the formula $y^2 = 4fx$.

Since R is constant for all three types, the only other elements which can change are f and x (the depth of the reflector, or the distance from K to line HL). These two elements vary inversely with respect to each other. Thus, if f is increased, x must be decreased, in order to keep y^2 at a constant value. From this we can see that as a focal distance of a parabolic reflector is increased the depth of the reflector is made smaller. Conversely, if the focus is made short, the depth is made greater. This explains the difference in shape between two reflectors having different focal distance.

This change in shape, however, is only relative since all the curves have the same formula. For instance, if the diameter of reflector ABC (Fig. 29) were increased sufficiently this reflector would have exactly the same shape as either reflector DEG or HKL. If, on the other hand, the diameter of reflector DEG were made small enough, it would have exactly the same shape as that of ABC. The only difference between the re-

Listing 529 films seen in advance of release and selected by the skilled, disinterested committees of the National Board from the product of all companies, as worth-while pictures. 322 of these are marked as suitable for boys and girls — the ideal "family films"; the balance for general and mature audiences.

INFORMATION GIVEN: Age group suitability, distributor, reels, featured players, short description and literary or dramatic source. This last is valuable in tying up with schools and libraries.

CONVENIENT ARRANGEMENT: Four groups — features, short comedies, miscellaneous short subjects, and scenics and educationals. Alphabetically arranged by titles within these groups. Distributor's name in bold type so that the pictures of any one exchange can be easily picked out.

The selections of the National Board quickly prove invaluable to the exhibitor in choosing satisfactory pictures for family performances, boys' and girls' matinees, and various special occasions, in providing regularly a high type of entertainment and in securing the cooperation of local organizations.

The catalog is kept up-to-date by means of the "Photoplay Guide to the Better Pictures" (monthly and weekly); "Exceptional Photoplays" — critical reviews of the finest, most significant productions, and "Film Progress" (monthly) — the national organ of the Better Films Movement, which contains lists of films for special occasions, reviews of the "better" feature pictures, accounts of citizen cooperation with exhibitors etc.

Architect's drawings of a suburban motion picture theatre, storerooms and apartments combined which is to be constructed in Kansas City, Mo. The theatre is shown in the extreme right of the building.

Combination Theatre, Stores and Apartments for Kansas City

THE combination suburban motion picture theatre and store room building in Kansas City has been shaded in the background by the plans of a new theatre to be erected at Seventy-fifth and Washington streets. W. C. Gunn, owner of the site upon which the structure is to be built, announced this week that in addition to a 900-seat modern motion picture theatre, the building would contain nine kitchenette apartments on the second floor and six ground floor store rooms.

"I am convinced that only in conjunction with such a building could a motion picture theatre 'break the ice' in a thinly settled neighborhood which heretofore has had no theatres," Mr. Gunn said. "It is the revenue to be derived from the building that will make possible the gradual development of theatre patronage. A theatre under such circumstances should be a community center in every respect. There will be some obstacles to overcome at first, to be sure, and that is why store room and apartment space is unusually valuable. I intend to give patrons of my district the best pictures possible for a small suburban house and I hope in this manner to build up a theatre that some day will compare with the best suburban houses."

The contract date for completion of the building is June 30, but an effort will be made to have the theatre ready for occupancy a month earlier, despite the fact that the work started only this week. The walls will be brick with terra cotta trim. S. B. Tarbet of Kansas City is the architect. The total cost of the building will be about $85,000. The structure will be 90 x 110 feet. Detailed arrangements for equipment of the theatre have not yet been made.

Fiesta Celebrates Opening of Crandall's Tivoli

The official opening of Harry M. Crandall's new Tivoli Theatre in Columbia Heights, Washington, D. C., fired the spirit of community pride to a fever pitch and the 100,000 souls reputed to be residents of that section of the National Capitol celebrated the event with a two-day fiesta in which the glories and achievements of Columbia Heights were fittingly extolled with yards and yards of bunting draperies and a parade of motor cars, floats and so forth.

The official opening took place Friday night, April 5. But the Tivoli could not accommodate anything like a part of the Columbia Heights residents on that night when scores of prominent members of the film industry journeyed from various parts of the country to be present at the celebration in honor of Mr. Crandall and his new cinema palace. So the festivities carried on and the next evening, Saturday, crowds sufficient to make a dense, impenetrable mass collected in front of the Tivoli.

The parade, which opened the community Tivoli celebration on Friday night, was composed of nearly three hundred floats representing as many civic and commercial organizations, and an uncharted number of private automobiles which joined in the line of march. Prizes were awarded the best decorated floats and window displays.

Entering the house on the opening night, the perspective of the lobby and mezzanine lounges was obscured by the huge banks of floral respects sent from exchanges, studios, New York Home Offices, First National franchise holders, officers, and theatres, and the officers and employes of the Crandall organization.

Introductory remarks were made by Manager Lohmeyer, Joshua P. Evans of the Riggs Bank, Father Gavin, whose Sacred Heart church stood on the property, and the Reverend Morgan of the Congregational Church of Mount Pleasant, Commissioner Rudolph, and others.

Stockholders of the Tivoli Theatre Company met in the Metropolitan Saturday and elected the following officers of the company and of the board: Harry M. Crandall, president; Joseph P. Morgan, vice-president, and Fritz Hoffman, secretary-treasurer. Members of the Board of Directors are: Joshua Evans, Jr., Frank V. Killian; Joseph P. Morgan, W. Wallace Chiswell, Fritz D. Hoffman, Wilton J. Lambert, A. M. Nevius, J. E. Mayfield, A. F. Jorss, Harry M. Crandall. Wilton J. Lambert was chosen counsel.

Liberty in Sumner One of Best Small Town Theatres in State of Washington

AMONG the newest and most modern small town theatres in the state of Washington is the Liberty theatre at Sumner, opened recently under the ownership and management of Dominick Constanti, operator of a string of motion picture houses in several of the small towns of the state.

The Liberty is housed in a strictly brick building, one story in height. At each side of the entrance there are small stores, rented to candy and tobacco firms. The ticket booth of the theatre projects out into the lobby, and is in the center of that space. It is equipped with automatic ticket machines.

One of the features of the house on the inside is the spacious foyer, which extends the entire width of the building. Entrance to the main auditorium is gained through three doors leading from the foyer. The rest of the space between the foyer and auditorium is separated by glass, with drapes on both sides.

The color scheme of the house is blue and old ivory. All drapes and curtains, including the main stage curtains, are blue, with a lighter shade of trimming. Carpets throughout the theatre are all a dark shade of gray. The auditorium has a seating capacity of slightly more than five hundred, including the special loge seats situated at the rear of the lower floor.

At each end of the foyer there are steps leading to the mezzanine floor. At one side on the mezzanine is situated the ladies rest room, lightly decorated in cretonnes with wicker furniture and light curtains. At the other side is the men's smoking room, opening onto the auditorium of the house, like a balcony, and inclosed in glass. It is furnished in keeping with the rest of the house, in dark shades.

The projection booth in the Liberty is situated at the rear of the mezzanine floor. It is completely equipped with two new Simplex projection machines, a Hertner transverter, and a board controlling all the house, stage and garden lights, and curtain controls. There are two circuits of lights in the theatre, both circuits controlled on dimmers.

The stage of the Liberty is equipped with a full stage set, and is covered with light blue velvet drapes. The main curtain is in darker blue, corresponding to the other drapes. At each side of the stage are two gardens, which, along with the stage, are lighted from the board in the projection room. An innovation in these gardens is the scenes that are painted on each of the rear walls, in place of a plain wall that calls for extra decorations in the gardens themselves.

All the lighting of the auditorium, foyer, rest room, smoking room, etc., is indirect, being done from the side walls in the auditorium and from the ceilings in the other parts of the house.

The Liberty represents a total cost of more than $40,000, including the cost of a type "B" Wurlitzer organ which furnishes the music for the house. Peter Constanti is at present acting manager of the theatre, which is operated under a first run policy for that city, with program changes twice or three times weekly. The house was entirely furnished, decorated, lighted and equipped by the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company of Seattle and was dedicated the last part of March with a showing of "Sporting Youth."

Sommers Plans New Picture Theatre for Green City

Plans to build a new motion picture theatre in Green City, Mo., have been started by George Sommers, who owns and manages the Opera House in that city.

The location of the new structure will be on the corner of a square. It is expected that the building will be started soon.

"Alhambra" to Be Erected in Commerce Building

A second motion picture theater known as "The Alhambra," is being promoted by James Fulks, manager of the Rockwood branch of the Jellico Grocery Co., and R. D. Fulks, Knoxville representative of the A. B. C. Bakery, of Chattanooga, Tenn. Work of equipping a section of the Commerce Building for the theater is now in progress.

flectors would be that one would be larger than the other. If the larger reflector were drawn to a reduced scale it could be made identically of the same shape and size as the smaller one.

Thus, holding the diameter constant and changing the focal distance provides a convenient means of altering the beam characteristics of a projector as far as spread of beam and intensity off the axis are concerned. The full effect of this will be shown later.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Three Miles Out"—Associated Ex., Alhambra, Ogden

Standard-Examiner:—"All you lovers of realism, thrills and the kind of story that makes you grip the seat tighter, hoping that the rescuers of the pretty heroine in great peril make haste, will receive more than you bargained for by seeing Madge Kennedy in 'Three Miles Out,' the feature attraction which held the Alhambra patrons spellbound last night. Not only is it jammed, crammed and chockful of exciting adventures, but it has Miss Kennedy in the most irrestible role she ever enacted before the camera."

"Poisoned Paradise"—Preferred Rialto, Los Angeles

Record:—"Here is a romantic kaleidoscope. Many characters—quaint, crafty, sympathetic—sliding and falling into new patterns like the colored glass of the children's optical toy. Interesting; at moments fascinating. That's 'Poisoned Paradise'.

Express:—"'Poisoned Paradise' is interesting. The cast is composed of well known players and they give a good account of themselves. Clara Bow is an excellent choice. Kenneth Harlan plays with a nice distinction of light and shade. Carmel Myers is again a siren. Her beauty and grace fit her admirably for these roles."

Herald:—"Filling all expectations 'Poisoned Paradise' is a picture only too true of the comedy, tragedy and drama that is to be found in any great gambling centre."

Times:—"'Poisoned Paradise' is a peach of a title and will probably lure people into Grauman's Rialto. Brilliant touches introduced by Waldemar Young and Louis Gasnier seem truely inspired. They have an ease and pertinence and naturalness to them that are a joyous revelation."

"Nellie The Beautiful Cloak Model"—Goldwyn Capitol, New York

Louella O. Parsons, New York American: "I got a terrible kick out of seeing Nellie tied on the elevated tracks with the 'L' train thundering down upon her. I also found Lew Cody the last word in villains. 'Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model' is a melodrama of the first water."

Aileen St. John Brenon, Telegraph: "The screen has certainly done right by our Nell! 'Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model' has all the laughs and thrills of the ten-twenty-thirty and, best of all, is played just that way. The producers have made a frank, unashamed melodrama and the result is that they are 'eating it up' at the Capitol theatre this week."

Harriette Underhill, Herald-Tribune: "There is a perfectly grand picture at the Capitol theatre called 'Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model' . . . If we were you, we should not miss it for anything."

F. W. Mordant Hall, Times: "When Owen Davis mapped out the thrills for his old melodrama, 'Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model,' some fifteen years ago, he undoubtedly had his tongue in his cheek, but little did he think then that people long afterward would shake their sides with laughter in a theatre like the Capitol at the sight of Nellie's hairbreadth escapes in film form."

Don Allen, Evening World: "An out-and-out melodrama. If you like frank melodrama go up and call on Nellie."

Evening Post: "A real movie. After all, the purpose of a movie is to entertain, isn't it? 'Nellie' gives you seventy-two minutes of fast action, thrills, human interest stuff and laughs—lots of laughs—and if that isn't a good movie there never was one made."

"King of Wild Horses"—Pathe Rialto, New York

Tribune: "One of the best—no, we can safely say the best—animal picture we ever saw. "Many men had tried to capture the black in the five years of his life, "but he only laughed and gayly eluded them by jumping a yawning chasm fourteen feet wide, which yawned over thousands of feet of nothingness. This black horse would do anything, and to prove it he did. He jumped fifty feet off a cliff into a raging torrent, galloped up the edge of a mountain till you got so dizzy you couldn't look any longer, and was extremely entertaining in many ways."

Telegraph: "Pathe came to the rescue of the Rialto audiences this week with one of the most interesting features that we have seen in many moonshines. It is the tale of a black stallion, produced by Hal Roach and expertly directed by Fred Jackman. This picture of the courageous leader of a herd of wild horses who was eventually tamed and made a pal of by his human captor, is a beautiful story for all lovers of horseflesh. It is thrilling and contains real drama that holds the interest to such a degree that one wishes that it were a part of a continued story."

Evening Post: "It is an interesting and frequently amazing story of the life of a wild horse on the Western plains, featuring a black equine wonder of the most unbelieveable intelligence. Pictorially beautiful, replete with thrills and holding attention every foot of the way, it is a picture which nobody should miss."

Morning World: "'The King of Wild Horses' is a picture in which a black stallion, proud, haughty, sensitive, brave and daring, makes a real hero. This is one of the finest pictures made with an animal in a leading role and is thrilling whenever he is on the screen."

"Virtuous Liars"—Vitagraph Rialto, New York

Morning World: "Maurice Costello seems to have retained much of the charm and personality which made him such a popular idol."

The Times: "The setting in this film was favorable as is the lighting and photography in most of the sequences. Edith Allen acquits herself very well as the attractive young 'widow.' David Powell has the part of the devoted surgeon who gets into a muddle and as usual he is sympathetic. Dagmar Godowsky is one of the ideal vampires."

Morning Telegraph: "Every effort has been made to give this story a luxurious setting. There are fine big sets and a choice of furnishings and a cast of old favorites."

Herald-Tribune: "Miss Allen is good looking, sincere and has a sense of humor."

Evening World: "It has Dagmar Godowsky as one of its features. She does excellent work with the material furnished her, as do Burr McIntosh and Naomi Childers."

Brooklyn Eagle: "There are two performances that are really better than average screen characterizations. They are those of Edith Allen and David Powell. Miss Allen is a comparative newcomer to the shadowed drama but she leaves no room for doubts about the future on the screen. As for Powell he can always be depended upon for a thoroughly satisfactory interpretation."

"Don't Doubt Your Husband"—Metro—Park—Mall, Cleveland

Plain Dealer—"Don't Doubt Your Husband," Viola Dana's latest out of the movie mill, is bad propaganda for interior decorators—especially if they chance to be young, pretty and blond."

Press—"The story itself has the merit of keeping one wondering what is going to happen next. The audience Sunday seemed to like it."

"The Humming Bird" Paramount Eastman, Rochester

Democrat and Chronicle—"Miss Swanson is less of a clothes model and more of an actress in "The Humming Bird" than she has been in any other picture in which she has been starred."

Herald—"In other words, it is a much overdone thing including a satiety of cheap emotionalism, the wolves of the Montmartre, the World War, and a fine close up of Gloria Swanson's upper teeth."

Journal—"Not only does Gloria Swanson eschew fine feathers, she acts—actually acts. She abandons all restraint and throws herself whole-heartedly into the role of Toinette, the Apache girl."

Times Union—"The Humming Bird,' is a picture of such technical excellence that one overlooks the improbability of its theme."

Pat O'Malley, signed to appear opposite Viola Dana for Metro.

"The Light That Failed"—Paramount—Alhambra, Milwaukee

Journal—"The picture is fairly interesting and has some outstanding moments but it has some dull ones as well. And somewhere—can't just put your finger on the spot!—it just misses the Kipling spirit, and a miss is as good as a mile."

Sentinel—"The staging throughout consistently carried out the atmosphere of the story and the balance of the support is capable."

"Women Who Give"—Metro Warfield, San Francisco

Bulletin—"There is all the thrill and go of the old-time melodrama with a modern finish in 'Women Who Give' at the Warfield this week."

Call and Post—"Those who like their drama of the human sort will find a great deal to applaud in 'Women Who Give."

Chronicle—"'Women Who Give' is a good picture and even better than that, and should fill the Warfield to its capacity during its run there."

Examiner—"'Women Who Give' will never go down into screen annals as one of the 'great' pictures of the year, but it provides interesting entertainment."

Herald—"With a story of surpassing interest, a cast that challenges comparison, genuine thrills, romance and pathos, and with excellent comedy relief, 'Women Who Give' is truly a remarkably fine production."

News—"If you like the sea, plenty of storm scenes, and fisher folk and old salts with your romance of true young love, here it is."

THE Cosmopolitan Trading Corp. with headquarters in Rangoon, Burma, has completed an important contract with the Lee-Bradford productions by which all Lee-Bradford productions will be distributed in Burma, Ceylon and India. The following productions are among those shipped for immediate release: "Determination," "The Unconquered Woman," "Flesh and Spirit," "Superstitution," "Orphan Sally," "Call of the Hills," "Insinuation," "A Man Worth While," "Is Money Everything," "The Broad Road," "Shattered Reputations," "The Image Maker," "A Pair of Hellions." "Who's Cheating," "In the Shadow of the Moon;" and 6 Squirrel comedies. The Cosmopolitan Trading Corp. also controls a chain of important first-run theatres in India, Burma and Ceylon.

An action scene from Bill Steiner's "Surging Seas," featuring Charles Hutchison.

JACK LONDON'S famous dog story, "The Call of the Wild," which has been translated to the screen in feature form by Hal Roach and is being distributed by Pathe, has lost none of its prestige, judging from the results of a questionnaire campaign recently conducted in Texas on the subject of the ten most popular works of fiction of the present day. The canvass, which involved replies from about 4,400 children, showed "The Call of the Wild" prominently listed among the most popular ten.

WARNER BROTHERS have prepared attractive lithographs for "Broadway After Dark." now ready for exhibitors. The collection presents a unique array of good paper possessing individuality. This organization steered from the temptation of merely presenting the Great White Way, and have managed to inject the drama of this adaptation of Owen Davis' melodrama in addition to suggesting the setting.

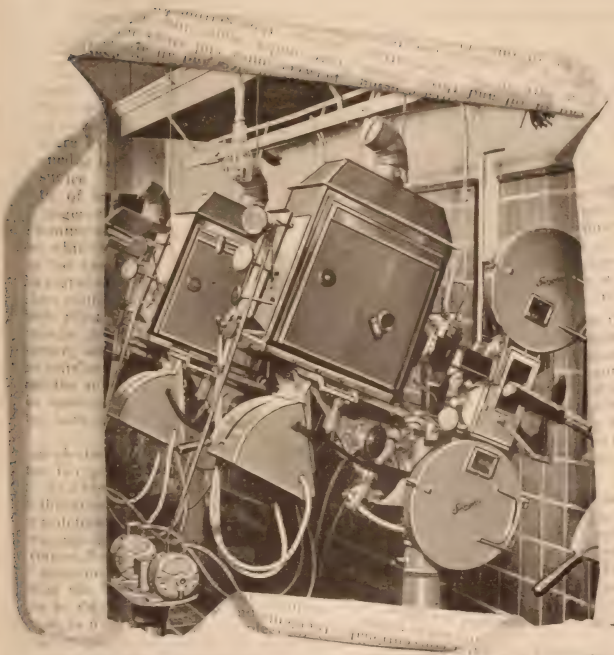
One twenty-four, one six, two three's and two one's complete the set. The twenty-four is a colored reproduction of Broadway seen from a high point of vantage and looking straight at Times Square. The upper and lower strata of society embodied in the picture and suggested by the contrasted figures right and left.

The six-sheet scintillates with half a dozen stars, against a typical New York skyline, the faces of the principal players inserted within the stars. The three-sheets, neatly colored, immediately attract the eye, as do the distinctive one-sheets, which in addition easily lend themselves for attractive cut-outs.

VITAGRAPH has issued a special campaign book on "Borrowed Husbands," the David Smith production in which Florence Vidor, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Earle Williams and Robert Gordon have the leading roles.

It tells concisely what the picture is, gives a synopis of the story, is profusely illustrated, with scenes from the action and presents a variety of art advertising illustrations to be used for newspaper copy. There are reproductions of the exceptional colored billing, twenty-four sheet, six sheet, three sheet, and three ones, as well as an attractive marquis banner. A special herald is illustrated in the booklet and there are press stories sufficient for all publicity needs.

THE Pathe special, "Birds of Passage," and the "Indian Frontier Series" were accorded an unusual tribute by John Farrar in the April issue of the Ladies Home Journal.



Mr. Farrar wrote: "More and more the explorer and the scientist play important roles in film production. Recently I saw a picture of this type which was most impressive. It was made by Bengt Berg, a Swedish ornithologist of note, who has charge of the Visual Instruction Department for the Swedish Bureau of Education. The film is called Birds of Passage and it shows the migration of European and Asiatic birds along the course of the Nile and into the heart of Africa. Even though you may not be so fond of birds as I am, you will find this drama of their life exceedingly beautiful, even exciting."

The "Indian Frontier Series" won the following encomium from Mr. Farrar:

"Of historical value, and blessed with many thrills, is the Indian Frontier Series. These are two-reel pictures made in the West, with actual Indians performing. They are said to be founded on actual happenings as told and vouched for by chiefs on the reservations where the filming is done. It is an interesting idea, and I must say that the one I saw, The Boy Who Turned Indian, gave me a very pleasant time as I remembered days when the chief ambition in life was to throw off the clothes and conventions of civilization and run away to play Indian in the woods."

A RECORD IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE

The "Covered Wagon" which is still packing them in at the Criterion Theatre in New York City after 52 weeks continuous showing has broken all records for a Film Production in one house. The "Birth of a Nation" which had previously held the record being beaten by a big margin. Even to day after a years solid running, it being almost impossible to secure a seat except by advance booking. However this is not the only record in question, for 52 weeks the time of projection for the entire performance has not varied 45 seconds for the [illegible] altho there are numerous changes [illegible] during the run of the picture.

There has not been a machine stop, a misframe during that time, not even a patch opening up, the machines being so well adjusted that only two prints have been used during that time. The sprocket holes in the first copy are in perfect condition, the only reason for a second print being, that the stock had warped somewhat owing to the heat of the light beam.

This is a record to be proud of and Mr. Harry Rubin who is supervisor of Projection for the Rialto, Rivoli-Criterion Circuit and Mr. Max Hollander and Mr. J. D. Basson, the Projectionists, who are responsible for the many beautiful color effects in the presentation, are to be congratulated on their record breaking and excellent performance.
